

A proper new Ballad, breiefly declaring the Death and Execution of 14. most wicked Traitors, who suffered death in Lincolnes Inne seelde neere London: the 20 and 21. of September, 1586. To the tune of Weep weep.

Rioyce in hart god people all,
sing praise to God on hie:
Which hath preferred vs by his power,
from traitors tyranny.
Which now haue had their due deserts,
in London lately seen:
And Ballard was the first that died,
for Treason to our Quene.
O praise the Lord with hart and minde,
sing praise with voices cleere:
Sith traitorous crue, haue had their due,
to quaille their parteners cheere.

Perit, Babington that Caitife vilde,
was hanged for his hier:
His Carcasse likewise quartered,
and hart cast in the fier.
Was euer seene such wicked troopes,
of Traytors in this Land?
Against the pretious word of truthe,
and their god Quene to stand?
O praise, &c.

Put her beholde the rage of Rome,
the fruits of Popish plants,
Beholde and see their wicked works,
which all good meaning wants.
For Saueage also did receaue,
like death for his desert:
Which in that wicked enterpryse,
should then haue don his part.
O praise, &c.

Curst catifes void of grace,
will nothing serue your turne,
But to beholde your Cuntries wack,
in malice while you burne.
And Barnwell thou which went to view,
her grace in each degre:
And how her life might be dispatcht,
thy death we all did see.
O praise, &c.

Confounding shame fall to their share,
and hellish tormentes sting:
That to the Lords annointed shall,
denise so vile a thing.
Techburne what bewitched thee?
to haue such hate in store:
Against our god and gracious Quene,
that thou must dye therfore.
O praise, &c.

What gaine for Traitors can returne?
if they their wish did win:
O what preferment should they get,
by this their trecherous sinne.
Though foraine power loue Treason well,
the Traitors they dispise:
And they the first that should sustaine,
the smart of their deuise.
O praise, &c.

What cause had Tilney Traitor stout,
or Abbington likewise:
Against the Lords annointed thus,
such mischief to deuise.
But that the Deuill inticed them,
such wicked works to render:
For which these seuen did suffer death,
the twentieth of September.
O praise, &c.

Seauen moze the next day following,
were drawen from the Tower:
Which were of their confederates,
to dye that instant hower.
The first of them was Salsburie,
and next to him was Dun:
Who did complaine most earnestly,
of proud yong Babington.
O praise, &c.

Both Lords and knights of hie renoune,
he ment for to displace:
And likewise all our Towers and Townes,
and Cities for to race.
So likewise Iones did much complaine,
of his detested pride:
And shewed how lewdly he did liue,
before the time he died.
O Praise, &c.

Then Charnock was the next in place,
to taste of bitter death:
And praying vnto holy Saints,
he left his vitall breath.
And in like manner Trauers then,
did suffer in that place:
And fearfully he left his life,
with Crossing bzeath and face.
O praise, &c.

Then Gage was tripped in his shirt,
who by the Lather went:
And sought for to excuse him selfe,
of Treasons false intent.

And Bellamie the last of all,
did suffer death that daye:
Vnto which end God bring all such,
as wish our Quenes decay.
O praise, &c.

O faulce and foule disloyall men,
what person would suppose:
That Clothes of Veluet and of Silke,
should hide such moztall foes.
O who would think such hidden hate,
in men so faire in sight:
But that the Deuill can turne him selfe,
into an Angell bright.
O praise, &c.

But Soueraigne Quene haue thou no care,
for God which knoweth all:
Will still maintaine thy royall state,
and giue thy foes a fall.
And for thy Grace thy Subiects all,
will make their prayers still:
That neuer Traitor in this Land,
may haue his wicked will.
O praise, &c.

Whose glozious dates in England here,
the mighty God maintaine:
That long vnto thy Subiects Joye,
thy Grace may rule and raigne.
And Lord we pray for Christs sake,
that all thy secret foes:
May come to naught which sake thy life,
and Englands lasting wees.
O praise the Lord with hart and minde, &c.
