OF OVER CARNBEZ.

SIR,

TH E Trifle, to which I was anxious of having the honour of affixing your name, has been published, these three years past, with but indifferent success. This no doubt, in a great measure, has been owing to the difficulty of establishing any new undertaking, as well as to the jealousies many people are but too apt to entertain against them, perhaps for no better reason, than that the project is a new one.

These prejudices, however, I hope, are now pretty much subsided; and, consequently, I may with some reason expect, that, as the scheme becomes more generally known, the utility of it will be proportionally acknowledged.

I will readily allow, Sir, that, from the time the idea of publishing this work, first entered into my mind, I had the vanity to think it might not only be of service to the trading part of this kingdom in general, those in the metropolis and its environs more especially; but likewise to such as were engaged in no sort of trade whatever. It gives me pleasure to reflect, that this idea has also been entertained by gentlemen of almost every denomination, and that you, Sir; to whom this country lies under many obligations, are so thoroughly convinced of its usefulness, as not to think your name disgraced, by publicly patronizing it.

To enter into a detail of the services you have done your country, by the many public spirited measures you have proposed; and, in consequence of which, so great a number of our labourers and manufacturers of every kind, have happily found employment, would be a task for which I am by no means qualified. The grateful acknowledgment of the Manufacturer and Mechanic, however, affords ample testimony to the truth of this fact. Were I, indeed, capable of it, I should be deterred from entering on the subject, lest, while I was only doing justice to your distinguished merit, I might be accused of flattery.—Sir, I have still a stronger motive?—I am sensible it would be disagreeable to yourself.

It was not for private emolument, or public approbation, you stood forth the friend of your country. The regard you bore it was the principle which predominated, and pushed you forward in so good a cause. By the happy effects which your perseverance in it has already produced, I am certain you will think yourself amply rewarded.

But, I am afraid, I have trespassed too much upon your patience. I shall therefore only add, that I am proud of the good opinion you entertain of the present undertaking, as well as of the honour of having so respectable a Character to be its Patron.

I am,

SIR,

With the utmost regard,

Your much obliged,

and most humble servant.

PETER WILLIAMSON.

Stamps and liquid for marking linen, &c. at one shilling per bottle, and the types at two pence each letter. This liquid stands washing and boiling, and is more regular and beautiful than any needle-work.—

The instrument for holding the types, is so constructed, that any person may mark linen, books, &c. with all expedition; and mark any name or number they please as they have complete alphabets, with sets of figures, at a small expence.

Where may be had, in packs, or in two books, the Impenetrable secret, or proverb cards, price six-pence, which discovers ones thoughts in a surprising manner, and are extremely useful for enticing youth to read, as well as innocent amusement for old age, being a collection of moral sentiments.

Burial letters are printed and delivered for three half-pence each, within the bounds of the penny post.

This Day is Published by Peter Williamson, and sold at his shop in the Royal Exchange, and by all booksellers in town and country. Price 2 SHILLINGS.
