THE Publisher takes this opportunity of thanking the increasing number of Advertisers for their liberal patronage, and all who have so readily supplied information contained in the following pages. The DIRECTORY for 1888 is issued in the hope that it will be found useful, and prove as successful as those of former years.

Errors and omissions are inseparable from publications of this kind, and, as it is the desire of the Publisher to make the DIRECTORY as accurate and complete as possible, he would feel obliged if such were pointed out for correction in future issues.

FROSTS ON THE THAMES.—The Thames was frozen for 14 weeks in 1063, and below bridge to Gravesend from 24th November to 10th February in 1434. In 1515, carriages passed over the ice from Lambeth to Westminster; and fires and diversions were witnessed on the river in 1807. In 1634 the river was covered with ice 11in. thick, and nearly all the birds perished. In 1716 a fair was held, and oxen were roasted on the ice; this frost continued from 24th November to 9th February. A frost in 1740 lasted nine weeks, when coaches plied, and festivities of various kinds were celebrated, on the Thames. From November to January, in 1789, the river was passable on the ice opposite to the Custom House, and in 1814 booths were erected. An intense frost prevailed in that year throughout the month of January, after which the river was considered safe for foot-passengers. The watermen made rough paths, strewn with ashes, from bank to bank, for which they charged toll, making a considerable revenue.

WRITING AND SPEAKING.—Habits of literary conversation, and still more habits of extempore discussion in a popular assembly, are peculiarly useful in giving us a ready and practical command of our knowledge. There is much good sense in the following aphorism:—(Bacon)—
 "Reading makes a full man, writing a correct man, and speaking a ready man."—Dugald Stewart.

Sandgate.

Sandgate, in Kent, is a chapelry and hamlet two miles W.S.W. of Folkstone. The situation of the town, which lies along the sea shore, with hills rising immediately behind it, is in the highest degree salubrious and delightful. Sandgate possesses hot and cold baths, excellent accommodation for sea-bathing, a library, and reading-rooms. On a neighbouring hill is an ancient camp, comprising about two acres, said to have been the work of King Ethelbert. The castle, which was erected in the reign of Henry VIII., has been converted into a martello tower, on a very large scale, to combine with other martello towers erected on the neighbouring hills to defend this part of the coast. The walk on the cliffs to Folkstone is much frequented, and the surrounding scenery is of the most delightful and varied description. About half a mile from Sandgate commences the military canal, cut during the great French war, to impede the progress of the enemy, in the event of a landing being effected on this shore, it is about twenty-three miles long, ninety feet broad, and eighteen deep, with a raised bank to shelter the soldiery, and enable them to oppose the foe with better advantage. The canal terminates at cliff end, Sussex, and on the cliffs were several strong batteries.

Malvern Priory Church.

The Priory Church of Malvern forms one of the most complete of the old monastic churches of England. The first impression of the church is the likeness of the tower to the cathedral at Gloucester, and the likeness suggests that the architects and builders of the one had a hand in the other. Nor is this improbable. The whole of the external appearance of the church is that of the more florid of the pointed and perpendicular style of Gothic architecture. The nave and pillars are, however, of Norman construction. The church is 173 feet long, 63 feet broad, and the tower is 124 feet high. The tessellated pavement of the church must have been remarkable for its richness and beauty. Many of the tiles yet remain to bear witness to the fund of inventive design of the old potters. At least one hundred different designs are noted, amongst which armorial bearings of the various families connected with Malvern, or the neighbourhood are conspicuous. The fanciful carving on the monks' stalls, and the ancient monuments, deserve the attention of the visitor. The richly-coloured reredos, presented in 1834 by the Rev. E. Peek, of Malvern Wells, and designed by Mr. Arthur Bloomfield, is composed of Mosaic and marble. The font is of Norman date, and the organ is one of the finest instruments in the country.

Dunluce Castle.

The Castle of Dunluce, about two miles from the singular and interesting curiosity, the Giant's Causeway, is one of the most important as well as picturesque remains of the kind in Ireland. It is situated on an insulated rock, of a hundred feet in perpendicular height, which is separated from the mainland by a precipitous chasm of about twenty feet wide. The only way by which it can be entered is by a narrow wall, one of the supporters of the ancient drawbridge. It seems as if it were split off from the terra firma. Over the intermediate chasm lies the only approach to the castle, along a narrow wall, which has been built somewhat like a bridge, from the rock to the adjoining land; and this circumstance must have rendered it almost impregnable before the invention of artillery. It appears, however, that there was originally another narrow wall which ran across the chasm parallel to the former, and that, by laying boards over these, an easy passage might occasionally be made for the benefit of the garrison. The walls of the castle are built of columnar basalt, many joints of which are placed in such a manner as to show their polygonal sections. It was through mistaking the basaltic columns of the Giant's Causeway for the walls of Dunluce Castle, and exhausting their artillery upon them, that the Spanish Armada was caught in the destructive storm which completed its ruin.

Gareloch.

The pretty arm of the sea, known as Gareloch, has its opening in the Frith of Clyde. Its shores are of singular beauty; the little hamlet, sea-side mansions, and handsome villa-like erections, being richly wooded, the manse being specially beautiful. The sail up the Gareloch is very fine, and the head of the loch extremely so, and the houses which adorn its gently-rounded shores, the quoad sacra parish church and village inn improving the picture, which has the Alps of Arrochar, the mountain height of the Cobbler, and the Argyle bowling-green, "lucus a non lucendo," the least smooth spot in a most rough district. From the head of Gareloch to the shores of Loch-Long, is within two miles, the road to Arrochar for Loch-Lomond, or for Loch-Fine, leading up its shores while another route leads southward by the western banks of the Gareloch and the peninsula-like shaped point of Roseneath, as the district is named, which intervenes between the Gareloch and Loch-Long.

Bar Gate, Southampton.

The principal street of Southampton runs from the quay northwards; it is upwards of a mile in length, and is particularly handsome and spacious. This street, which is known as High Street, is divided about the middle by an old edifice called the Bar Gate, resembling Temple Bar in appearance, which once formed one of the principal entrances into the town within the town walls. It is a curious and ancient fortified gatehouse, with a large room in the upper part of the building that is used as a guildhall.

Elgin Cathedral.

Elgin is an ancient and royal city, and the capital of the county of Moray or Elginshire, in Scotland. It is situated on the Lossie, about five miles from its mouth. Its ancient cathedral is one of the most magnificent ruins in Scotland.

Pangbourne, Bucks.

As a residence for a time, Pangbourne has many attractions; the scenery in the neighbourhood is very beautiful, whilst lovers of the "gentle craft" may enjoy themselves here abundantly. Though Pangbourne is a very ancient place, being held, according to Doomsday Book, by Miles Grispin of William the Conqueror, no trace of its ancient features are now to be found. At one time Pangbourne was in the Abbey of Reading; at another owned by the unfortunate Duke of Somerset, who was executed in 1553.

Fulham Church.

In the parish of Fulham, Middlesex, is the palace of the Bishop of London, and in a quiet corner of the churchyard lies Theodore Hook, surrounded by bishops and abbots, and—

"A great many more of a lesser degree,
In sooth a goodly company."

The list of bishops interred here may be forty, beginning with Irkenwald, bishop under Sigibert, king of the West Saxons, and Conrad, king of Mercians. But be they forty, more or less, no cultured Englishman can survey the graves of Sherlock and South here, and many more "whose works live after them," without feeling that this place is indeed a sacred shrine.

Richmond Bridge.

One of the most interesting roads in England, from its historical associations, crosses the Thames over Richmond Bridge. The town of Richmond itself is full of interest, and the whole district is studded with attractions of the most picturesque kinds. Besides the Royal Family of England, for many generations, it has been the residence of Bolingbroke, Pope, Thomson, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Horace Walpole, Garrick, and Colman. Thomson's remains were interred in Richmond Church, as were also those of Edmund Kean. Perhaps in England there is no single view so beautiful as that obtained from Richmond Hill; nay, it is even claimed that there is no view more beautiful in the world. Such is the opinion expressed by many foreigners who have beheld the landscape attractions of many lands. No doubt there is much scenery more magnificent, broader, more extensive in every way, but none so lovely within similar limits.

Ilfracombe.

Ilfracombe is a parish, seaport, and market town in Devonshire, 48 miles N.W. by N. of Exeter. It is at the northern extremity of the county, bordering on Bristol Channel. The town is chiefly important as a resort for pleasure seekers and invalids, who use its warm baths; and as a haven for wind-bound vessels, which can put in here when it is dangerous for them to enter the mouth of the Taw. Nature and art seem to jointly combine in forming the harbour, which appears like a natural basin, and is almost surrounded by craggy heights, overspread with foliage. On three sides the rocks rise in a semi-circular sweep; on the fourth, a bold mass of rock stretches nearly half way across the mouth of the recess, affording protection to the little cove from the northern tempest. This rock, which is called the Lantern Hill, and is situated on the north side of the harbour, rises nearly to a point, and bears on its summit a lighthouse, somewhat in the style of an ecclesiastical structure. There is a pier here 850 feet in length, which was partly built by Sir Bourchier Wrey, the lord of the manor.

Dartmouth Castle.

Dartmouth Castle is not large, and but thinly mounted with cannon. It stands in a situation highly beautiful, and is surrounded by a number of rich oaks, from the midst of which, adding greatly to the picturesque scene, spring up the tower and spire of a small church. "The view towards the mouth of the harbour," observes Dr. Maton, "exhibits such a happy assemblage of objects for a picture, that it is, perhaps, scarcely to be exceeded. A rocky knoll, projecting from the shore, makes an admirable fore-ground. One of the side screens is formed by the picturesque castle with the adjoining church, just emerging from a fine wood, which enriches the right-hand side; the other, a high promontory, with a fort at its feet; whilst the main sea appears in front through a narrow opening, and leaves nothing for the imagination to wish for in the composition." The vestiges of another castle, of a circular form, more ancient, but not so strong, are visible at the south end of the town.

Hornsey Church.

Hornsey is a parish and village in Finsbury division of the hundred of Ossulstone, the former including the hamlets of Crouch End, Muswell Hill, Stroud Green, a considerable part of Highgate, and a part of Finchley Common. It is remarkable for its rural character. The circumjacent country is eminently attractive, by its soft ranges of hills: and the New River, which meanders through the parish, forms, at many points, a beautiful object. Hornsey Church is a plain structure of stone, erected about the year 1500. At the west end is a weighty square tower, with graduated buttresses, and an octagonal embattled turret at one angle. The interior comprises a chancel, nave, and south aisle. The aisle is divided from the nave by a range of pillars, supporting broad, but pointed arches. Here are numerous monuments, but none of a very striking character.

COOL.—A countryman took his seat at an hotel table opposite a gentleman who was indulging in a bottle of wine. Supposing the wine to be common property, our unsophisticated country friend helped himself to it with the gentleman's glass. "That's cool," exclaimed the owner of the wine, indignantly. "Yes," replied the other, "I should think there was ice in it."

The Protective Effect of Vaccination.

Dr. Henry Tomkins, medical superintendent of the fever hospital belonging to the Manchester Royal Infirmary at Monsall, in a paper which he read at Owen's College, said:—"The most striking of all evidence is, perhaps, that derived from the smallpox hospitals themselves. Here the protective influence of vaccination is seen and proved in a manner beyond all cavil. At Highgate, during an experience of 40 years, no nurse or servant having been re-vaccinated has ever contracted disease, and evidence of the same character I can myself bring forward, for during the whole time that I have had charge of the fever hospital more than a thousand cases of smallpox have passed under my care, yet no servant, nurse, porter, or other person engaged there, has, after re-vaccination, ever taken it, though exposed daily to infection in its most concentrated form. One woman, a laundress who escaped vaccination, took the disease and died; one nurse, who some years before had suffered from smallpox, and was then considered protected, had a very mild attack; and this summer a workman, who did not live on the premises, but came in to work as a painter, was not vaccinated, and had rather a severe attack; and still more recently a servant, who by an oversight was allowed to go about her work three days before being vaccinated, had, before the latter had run its course, a slight abortive attack. Again, among all the students who during the past two years have attended the hospital for clinical instructions, not one has suffered, all having been re-vaccinated before being permitted to enter the smallpox wards. And in their case the false argument which opponents of vaccination have brought forward to explain the immunity enjoyed by nurses and others in attendance on the sick, viz., that constant intercourse and exposure to infection renders them proof against it by the system becoming inured to the poison, cannot be applied, as these gentlemen attend the hospital only a few hours once a week. I defy the most enthusiastic or conscientious of anti-vaccinators to produce evidence like this on his side of the question, or to bring forward even half a dozen persons, choose them whence he may, who have not been protected against smallpox, and expose them as the students are exposed, without more or less of the number taking the disease. Facts such as these should convert the most ardent anti-vaccinator from his folly, and convince him that a weapon of defence so powerful as vaccination should not be left to the pleasure of the individual, but that the State has the right and duty to look after its most thorough performance."

The Wonders of Physics.

What mere assertion will make any man believe that in one second of time, in one beat of the pendulum of a clock, a ray of light travels over 192,000 miles, and would, therefore, perform the tour of the world in about the same time that it requires to wink with our eyelids, and in much less than a swift runner occupies in taking a single stride! What mortal can be made to believe, without demonstration, that the sun is almost a million times larger than the earth? and that, although so remote from us that a cannon ball shot directly towards it and maintaining its full speed would be twenty years in reaching it, it yet affects the earth by its attraction in an inappreciable instant of time? Who would not ask for demonstration when told that a gnat's wing, in its ordinary flight, beats many hundred times in a second? Or, that there exists animated and regularly organised beings, many thousands of whose bodies laid close together would not extend an inch? But what are these to the astonishing truths which modern optical inquiries have disclosed, which teach us that every point of a medium through which a ray of light passes is effected with a succession of periodical movements, regularly recurring at equal intervals, no less than 500 millions of times in a single second? That it is by such movements communicated to the nerves of our eyes that we see—nay, more, that it is the difference in the frequency of their recurrence which affects us with the sense of the diversity of colour—that, for instance, in acquiring the sensation of redness our eyes are affected 482 millions of millions of times, and of violet 707 millions of millions of times per second? Do not such things sound more like the ravings of a madman than the sober conclusions of people in their waking senses? They are, nevertheless, conclusions to which any one may most certainly arrive who will only be at the trouble of examining the chain of reasoning by which they have been obtained.

Superstitions of Sailors.

Sailors, as is well known, have a great antipathy to commencing a voyage on a Friday, and even although the weather and tide may be exceptionally in their favour, they prefer to postpone setting sail till the following day. Thus, as Southey justly remarks, many a good ship has lost that tide which might have led to fortune, because the captain and the crew thought it unlucky to begin their voyage on a Friday. In this respect, however, they are not different from other classes, their being in most countries a widespread aversion to this day. Indeed, in France this superstition is carried to such an extravagant height, that not only is the number of travellers by rail much smaller than on other days, but the difference is also materially felt in the receipts of the omnibuses. That this superstition retains its hold on the seafaring community was proved in the year 1871, when, in consequence of the loss of the ill-fated turret ship Captain, which had left port on a Friday, the Agincourt, in order to satisfy the clamour of the crew, did not leave Gibraltar on the presumed fatal day. The departure of the last-named warship on the Saturday did not prevent her striking on the Pearl Rock a short time afterwards. This fact might perhaps stagger Jack's faith for a moment; but superstition is tougher than actual experience in many of its phases, and Friday will still be a black-letter day in the sailor's calendar. Even at the present day, too, many a sailor shudders to commence his voyage if he should happen to sneeze on the left side at the moment of embarking; whereas to sneeze on the right side is thought to betoken a favourable voyage. It is considered, moreover, a very unlucky occurrence if anyone accidentally numbers the sailors on board—on the same principle, no doubt that many persons have a superstitious dread of counting their gains.—Leisure Hour.

T. WILLIAMS

DUNLUCE CASTLE

The Leaning Tower of Pisa.

Whether by accident or design—no one can now tell—the inclination of the structure makes it look and feel to the visitor as if it were about to fall. It is 180 feet high, and 13 feet out of the perpendicular. This is stated everywhere, and is no doubt true; but I suppose there are many persons who, like myself, expected to see a building standing erect, the centre of whose top was outside the centre of gravity. This is not the case by any means. It is true that a rope falling from the centre of the top would strike the wall at the bottom of the tower side; but the rope would not fall outside the tower wall. In a short time I satisfied myself and two other visitors of this fact. The apparent contradiction of the law of nature disappears then in a moment. Taking the building as a whole—letting a line fall from the centre of the top—if this line fell outside of the base, in that case the building would violate the law of gravity if it remained standing. I believe the architect planned this optical delusion. There are no signs of any giving way in the structure—no crack or crevice, gives evidence of rapid or slow settling of the walls. The architect knew very well how easily the eye can be deceived. The firmness of the masonry, the gradual ascent, the symmetry of the whole, prove beyond a doubt that it was built as it now stands. The walls below are very thick, and unless these should give way there is but one other method by which the building could be overthrown. If the stones were to slip from their places then little by little it would be dislodged; but the whole structure is keyed and bolted and cemented into a solid mass. If it leaned nine feet more than it does, then it would fall, because the sum of its weight would fall outside of the centre of gravity. The mystery disappears at once when we examine it: but the curious effect upon one's nerves in making the ascent and standing on the top is nevertheless real.—Correspondent of American paper.

The Holy City of Kairouan.

Kairouan was founded about twelve centuries ago by the immediate followers of the Prophet Mahomet, it having been at first a halting place for some scattered parties of his adherents whom his death had dispersed. Kairouan is the same word which we have corrupted into caravan—a body of travellers—and thus the derivation of the city's name is obvious. The bones of many of those who spoke and lived and fought with the Prophet have lain within the city undisturbed through all these twelve hundred years, in spite of the varying fortunes of cause and of country. It is easy to understand how the presence of these relics renders the city which contains them holy; and so jealously guarded is the sanctity of their precincts that very few Christians have ever been admitted within the walls. The few European travellers who have entered Kairouan have (with one solitary exception) been authorised to do so by the reigning sovereign of the country, have been the bearers of letters of recommendation to the Governor of the Holy City, and have been accompanied to its gates by a mounted escort, and in later times usually, as an additional security, by a dragoman of the consul of their own nation. Kairouan was formerly the capital of all the Barbary States. It is built entirely of brick, with the exception of the great mosque, of which I shall have to speak presently. The city walls which are thick and strong, are of the same material. As a defence against modern artillery, they are probably not worth speaking of at all: but without that, even a strong and well armed force would find it difficult to make Kairouan open its gates, if a handful of determined defenders had resolved to keep them closed. The population is about fifteen thousand souls, but there is this peculiarity about the place, that by day there is always nearly double that number within its walls. Kairouan is in the centre of a district containing the flower of the tribes—the busiest, the best mounted, the most prosperous—who throng its streets from dawn to dark, bringing their own products for sale, and buying largely of the goods manufactured in the city. It is, in fact not only a Holy City, but, for the Arabs, a great business centre. There is an important market there for sheep, cattle, and all beasts of draught or burthen, especially camels; and this is held daily in a great open square in the city, and not on one day in the week only, as is the case in most of the Tunisian towns or villages where such markets are held. The staple products of the town are articles in brass and copper, woollen goods, and hand-made carpets of fine quality. For these Kairouan has been celebrated almost from the time of its foundation twelve centuries back. Among the tombs of Kairouan, some of which are fine edifices externally, but which, of course, no Christian is allowed to approach, are those of the barber of the Prophet, and of the niece of Sidi Ameer, Mahomet's trusted minister and friend.—All the Year Round.

MISLEADING NAMES AND WORDS. — The Providence Journal calls attention to some curiosities of misnomer. Black lead is not lead at all, but a compound of carbon and a small quantity of iron. Brazilian grass never grew in Brazil, and is not grass; it is nothing but stripes of palm leaf. Burgundy pitch is not pitch, and does not come from Burgundy; the greater part of it is resin and palm oil. Catgut is made from the entrails of sheep. Cattle-bone is not bone, but a kind of chalk once enclosed in the fossil remains of extinct specimens of cuttle-fish. German-silver was not invented in Germany, and does not contain a particle of silver. Cleopatra's Needle was not erected by the Egyptian queen, nor in her honour. Pompey's Pillar had no historical connection with Pompey in any way. Sealing-wax does not contain a particle of wax, but is composed of Venice turpentine, shellac, and cinnabar. The tuberosity is no rose, but a species of polyanthus. Turkish baths did not originate in Turkey, and are not baths, but heated chambers. Whalebone is not bone, and is said not to possess a single property of bone.

A literary lady, expressing to Dr. Johnson her approbation of his Dictionary, and in particular, her satisfaction at his not admitting into it any improper words. "No, madam," replied he, "I hope I have not soiled my fingers; I find, however, that you have been looking for them."

Tornadoes in America.

The destructive effect of a recent tornado in Minnesota led the editor of the American Architect to invite information from various sources as to this class of phenomena. Among the contributions is a valuable collation of data by Gen. Hazen, of the Signal Service. It appears that in the passage of those cyclones or tornadoes, wind pressures of various amounts, from 18lb. to 112lb. per square foot, have been demonstrated by destruction of bridges, brick buildings, &c. The upward pressures are sometimes as great as the horizontal, and even greater. Downward pressures or movements of wind have not been clearly proved. Upward velocities of 135 miles per hour seem to be not unusual, and horizontal velocities of 80 miles have been recorded with the anemometer. The destructive wind velocities are confined to very small areas. A destruction of fences, trees, &c., is often visible over a path many miles long, and a few hundred yards wide; but the path of greatest violence is very much narrower. The excessive cases above referred to are observed only in small isolated spots, less than 100ft. square, unequally distributed along the middle of the track. Thus, in very large buildings, only a small part is subject to destructive winds. In different parts of this area of maximum severity the winds are simultaneously blowing in different, perhaps opposite, directions, the resultant tending not to overturn or carry off or crush in, but rather to twist round a vertical axis. Buildings are generally lifted and turned round before being torn to pieces. As the chances are very small that a building will be exposed to the violent twisting action, it is evidently the average velocity of rectilinear winds within the path of moderate destruction that it is most necessary to provide against in ordinary structures. These winds may attain a velocity of 80 miles an hour over an area, 1,000ft. broad, and generally blow from the south-west, the next in frequency blow from the north-west. The time during which an object is exposed to the same destructive winds varies from six to 60 seconds; the general average of a large number of cases is 16 seconds. An exposed building experiences but one stroke, like the blow of a hammer, and the destruction is done. Hence in a suspension bridge, chimney, or other structure liable to be set into destructive rhythmic vibrations, the maximum winds do not produce such vibrations. The duration of the heavy south-west or north-west winds over the area of moderate destruction is rarely over two minutes. The motion of translation of the central spout of a tornado, in which there is a strong vertical current, is, on an average, at the rate of 30 miles an hour. The relative frequency of tornadoes is, in order of decreasing frequency, July, May, June January, December. In the geographical distribution of 247 tornadoes from 1794 to 1878, the largest figures are obtained for New York (24), Indiana (20), Illinois, (20), Ohio and Georgia (16 each), &c., but the records are fragmentary. The largest number of tornadoes apparently occur between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m., the next between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m.

READING.—No entertainment is so cheap as reading, nor any pleasure so lasting.—Lady Mary Wortley Montague.

The Pall Mall Gazette tells the following story of Turner on the authority of a living artist. Turner happening one day to pass a print shop noticed in the window a copy of one of the engravings from his famous "Liber Studiorum." The print was in a very dirty, ragged state, and Turner naturally felt aggrieved at seeing the work of his hands in this dilapidated condition. Entering the shop, he asked to see the master, and when the man came forward Turner proceeded at once to blame him in no measured terms for having neglected so valuable a print, and for having allowed it to become so disfigured. The man protested that it was no fault of his, as he did but offer the engraving for sale in the same state in which he had bought it from some other dealer. This did not satisfy Turner, however, and he and the man continued arguing in this fashion for some time, each making the other more angry by contradiction. At last the printseller lost all patience. "Perhaps, sir," he said, "when you have quite finished what you have to say you will kindly tell me what you have to do with this engraving? and what business is it of yours whether the print is clean or dirty?" "This is what I have to do with it," answered the enraged artist: "It was I who drew the original of that print, my name is Turner, and I did every line of that engraving with my own hand. Now, do you wonder that I am angry at seeing my work in so disgraceful a state?" "Indeed, sir," replied the printseller, "so you are the great artist himself. All my life long it has been my wish that I might some day have the good fortune to see Mr. Turner. And now that I have seen him, I sincerely hope that I may never see him any more."

THE SALTNESS OF THE SEA is one of its most distinctive characteristics. Besides muriate of soda, it contains several other substances, as muriatic and sulphuric acid, soda, manganese, and sulphate of lime; these ingredients give to sea water that saltness and bitterness of taste which render it disagreeable and unfit for the use of man. The sea waters do not hold in solution equal amounts of saline matter, the water as tested in one locality being in excess of that in another. The degree of saltness in particular localities varies from temporary causes such as the violent tropical rains which are collected in the great streams, and returned again to the ocean free of saline particles. In several places it is found to be less salt at the surface than at considerable depths; and, owing to the melting of large masses of ice, it is said to be less salt near the poles. The amount of saline matter is greatest at a distance from the shores, where the ocean is not diluted by the volumes of fresh water brought down by rivers.

HINTS ON HEALTH. — Any kind of fluid largely taken at a meal, or soon after is positively injurious to health. A dish of fresh water should be kept in every room where the fire is a fire, especially an open fire. The water absorbs the gas arising from the coal and other impurities in the air. In clothing the great thing is to vary the character and amount according to the season, avoiding the extremes of always being swathed in flannel, no matter what the temperature, or of never wearing flannel at all.

Some Queer Dishes.

Amongst mammals and birds, it is difficult to say what species are not eaten in the countries where they abound. Probably the big cats and dogs would be exceptions, though one hears now and then of mighty hunters broiling a steak from the lion which has just fallen a victim to their powder and shot; but in China and other parts of the East the smaller domestic varieties are recognised luxuries of the table, and are exposed for sale as such in the markets. In a country so over-populated as China, every morsel of any substance that is edible is eagerly sought out and devoured, so that not only cats and dogs, but rats, mice, slugs, and almost every living thing in earth, air, or water, go to feed the half-starved masses. Rats are split open, dried, pressed, and powdered with a finely-ground white bark, which gives them the appearance of haddocks as they hang in long strings over the vendor's stall. The birds' nests, convertible into soup, so often quoted, must not be confounded with the industrial products of our own starlings and thrushes, which might be boiled a long time without yielding much nourishment, unless the bird happens to be inside; edible nests really consist of a kind of isinglass, and are constructed by a small sea bird out of the gelatinous bones of dead and decaying fish. Most of them are brought from some caverns on the seashore north of Shanghai; but they are not very plentiful, and there is no great demand for them. The soup is thick, slimy, and glutinous, and is neither so nasty as might be expected nor as nice as could be desired. I have been vividly reminded of it in Brittany by a decoction of "escargots edibles"—land snails. By-the-way, the dogs most in favour with the Chinese as "butcher-meat" are those curious hairless ones, of which a good idea may be formed by looking at the magnificent pair of Rampoor hounds presented by the Prince of Wales to the Zoological Gardens in Regent's Park on his return from India. How this hairless breed originated is a mystery, but they are found in many tropical countries, and are there usually highly prized by their owners; though extremely delicate and susceptible of cold, they appear to be free from disease—at any rate, the skin is healthy and the baldness not in any way dependent on existing morbid conditions. The tradition is that these naked creatures are the descendants of the sacred dogs worshipped by the ancient Egyptians; and that the peculiarity originated from their being kept perpetually in the temples, and bred in and in for centuries.—Chambers's Journal.

Lead Poisoning from Water and Beer Pipes.

During a meeting of the Manchester Literary and Philosophical Society, Mr. Wm. Thomson, F.R.S.E., submitted some notes on the subject of lead poisoning. He said that tin-lined lead pipes are used to a large extent, and principally in making communication between the beer in the cask and the pump on the counters of beer retailers. "Such pipes," he adds, "would give the idea of safety, but it is clear that many samples may be of such a nature as to contaminate beer with lead to a large extent, as the beer contains a certain amount of free acid which would in all probability be capable of dissolving the lead; and one would expect that the person who consumes the first glass of beer from the pump in the morning would get that which had remained overnight in the pipe, and would imbibe, therefore, a considerable quantity—depending on the quality of the tin-lining—of the poisonous metal." In order to test whether this was really the case, Mr. Thomson obtained some samples of beer drawn in the morning from pumps, and found "a considerable proportion of lead" to be present in each. He obtained a number of samples of tin-lined lead pipe from different manufacturers, and tested the purity of the tin lining, but failed to find one which was not contaminated with lead, and which did not contaminate water, when left in contact with it for two or three days, to a greater or less extent. "The majority contained a large percentage of lead, and polluted the water to a great extent." As regards another kind, called "tinned-lead pipe," the inside of which is covered with a thin coating of white metal to afford protection against the action of water, Mr. Thomson finds as a matter of fact this coating is a mixture of lead and tin. He expresses the opinion that tin-coated lead pipe is much better adapted for use in making communication with the water mains in large towns than the ordinary lead pipe. Testing their respective values with water containing a small proportion of nitrate of ammonia, he found, at the end of three hours, that the water from the tinned-lead pipe contained a large proportion of lead in solution. In some boroughs this tinned-lead pipe contained only a trace of lead, whilst that from the ordinary lead pipe contained a large proportion of lead in solution. In some boroughs this tinned-lead pipe is the only kind allowed to be used for making communications with the main. In other places, Manchester included, ordinary lead pipe is generally employed. Mr. Thomson has lately observed that the lead pipes which have been in use in Manchester for many years contaminate water left in them overnight to a considerable extent. In Salford, where the tinned pipes are employed, he finds the water slightly contaminated with lead, but much less so than in Manchester. His experience during the last few years serves to show "that aerated waters are contaminated with lead much more often, and in many cases to a much greater extent, than one would expect, considering the care which is bestowed by good firms on the manufacture of these articles." He advises that the ordinary carbonate of soda, made by Solvay's ammonia process, should be used in the preparation of aerated waters, and that the salts which it is impossible to obtain free from lead should be dissolved in water and filtered or boiled with animal charcoal.

The oldest pieces of wrought iron which are known are probably, according to Fortschr der Zeit, the sickles which were found by Belzoni under the pedestal of the Sphinx in Karnac, near Thebes, the blades which Wyse found imbedded in the wall of the Great Pyramid, and the piece of a saw which Layard dug up at Nimrod. These remains are now owned by the British Museum.

SANDGATE, KENT.

Eyesight, Good and Bad.

It is not a little remarkable that although eyesight is perhaps the most valuable of the senses, the majority of it, public, so far from taking especial care of it, run great risks of losing it. The eye is the most wonderful organ in the body; but ninety-nine persons out of a hundred are only aware of its value when it gives painful evidence of its presence, or, through failing powers, compels them to pay some little attention to a possession which should never be neglected.

Every eye-surgeon is day after day repeating to successive patients precepts and injunctions which should be not only universally known, but obeyed, for though there are many manuals on the care of the eyes, it is remarkable with what persistence old and erroneous ideas retain their hold on the minds of even intelligent persons. Likening the eye to the photographer's camera, the image produced on the retina is precisely analogous to that which is produced on the sensitive plate. By means of the optic nerve, the retina is in direct connection with the brain, which interprets the visual appearances and completes the act of seeing—how, we do not at present know. It is clear that if the image on the retina is blurred or imperfect, the brain cannot remedy the defect; accurate seeing is impossible, though as a matter of fact the brain does do a great deal to compensate for the imperfect optical condition of the eye which exists to a greater or a lesser extent in the majority of mankind.

The image of an object falls, as we have said, on the retina in the normal eye; but eyes differ, and it is only when the focal length and the axial length of the eye are precisely the same that the focus of the parallel rays proceeding from the object falls precisely upon the retina. Such an eye is said to be emmetropic, or in measure, while one in which the axial length does not correspond with the focal is ametropic, or "out of measure." The eye may be out of measure in two opposite directions; if the axial length is shorter than the focal the rays of light will be brought to a focus behind the retina, and we have what is called the flat-eye, or hypermetropia; if, on the contrary, the ball of the eye is too long from back to front, the rays are brought to a focus in front of the retina, and we have a case of myopia, or short-sight. Hypermetropia is corrected by the use of convex lenses, which converge the rays and bring them to a focus on the retina, while myopia is corrected by concave lenses, which diverge the rays and bring them to a focus on the more distant retina. It is clear that as the amount of hypermetropia and myopia must vary in degree, it is of the first importance that spectacles should be specially adapted to the eyes they are intended to assist.

The modern system of measuring the power of the sight is as accurate and as simple as need be, for it is based on a unit represented by the French metre, or say forty English inches. That is called one dioptric, and the eye which can distinguish clearly a certain-sized type at that distance is considered normal. No. 2 lens is of double the power of the dioptric and half its focal length; that is its focal length is half a metre, or twenty inches. Hence it is equal to the old 1-20th, and No. 4 is the old 1-10th, and so on, half and quarter dioptries being introduced in the lower part of the scale to meet the requirements of practice. The plus sign is used to signify convex lenses, and the minus sign for concave. Thus opticians have an easily-understood nomenclature and scale to which they can readily work. With the human eye we have what is termed a near-point and a far-point, the former being the closest distance at which vision is clear, and the latter the farthest. Between these two points the accommodation of the eye is brought about by the action of the ciliary muscle upon the crystalline lens, the curves of which it alters to adapt them to the distance of the object to be viewed. As we advance in life the crystalline lens loses its elasticity, and the power of accommodation diminishes, until at the age of seventy-five the eye become passive and the near point is removed to an infinite distance, and we have the phenomenon known as presbyopia or aged sight, which occurs in all eyes sooner or later.

The Greatest of Engineering Feats.

The Forth Bridge is regarded by some persons as likely to be the greatest engineering feat of either ancient or modern times. With reference to its gigantic dimensions, or rather its enormous height, attention has just been drawn to it in comparison with Tennant's chimney at St. Rollox Chemical Works, which is 430 ft. high from the level of the ground. If 100 ft. be added to that, then there will be obtained the height of one of the piers for the bridge, that on Inch Garvie, the small island in the centre of the Forth where the structure is to be reared. Then, placing another pillar or column of the same height at Sighthill Cemetery Gate, and one at the Asylum for the Blind—the former to the north of the chimney, and the other in a direct line to the south—some idea of the three piers may be formed which are intended to support the suspension bridge, these piers being 1,600 feet separate from each other. It is thus seen that there are to be two spans used in bridging the river. Again, it is said, imagine the bridge suspended at such an elevation (180ft. above high-water mark) so as to allow the largest ship afloat to sail underneath, and a scene is presented to the mind enough to make even the boldest hold his breath. The Tay Bridge is a grand affair, but it sinks into insignificance when compared with the Forth Bridge.—Engineering.

ORIGIN OF THE SWISS WATCHMAKING TRADE.—The history of the introduction of the first watch to Chaux-de-Fonds is interesting enough. It was brought thither, towards the end of the seventeenth century, by a cattle dealer, and excited much wonder among the herdsmen and charcoal burners. But, alas, it had not the gift of perpetual motion, and one day there was great distress for the wheels had stopped. Thereupon a young smith named Daniel Jean Richard, who was of an inquiring turn of mind, set himself to take the little machine to pieces. He succeeded perfectly, restored it to life, and thenceforward was possessed with the desire of making watches himself. After a thousand trials and difficulties success crowned his labours, and in the end he became the father and founder of what is now a most important manufacture.—London Society.

Star-Lore.

The Bushmen, almost the lowest tribe of South Africa, have the same star-lore and much the same myths as the Greeks, Australians, Egyptians, and Esquimaux.

According to Dr. Bleek, "stars, and even the sun and moon, were once mortals on earth, or even animals or inorganic substances, which happened to get translated to the skies. The sun was once a man, whose armpit radiated a limited amount of light round his house. Some children threw him into the sky, and there he shines." The Homeric hymn to Helios, in the same way, as Mr. Max Müller observes, "looks on the sun as a half god, almost a hero, who had once lived on earth." The pointers of the Southern Cross were "two men who were lions," just as Callisto, in Arcadia, was a woman who was a bear. It is not at all rare in those queer philosophies, as in that of the Scandinavians, to find that the sun or moon has been a man or woman. In Australian fable the moon was a man, the sun a woman of indifferent character, who appears at dawn in a coat of red kangaroo skins, the present of an admirer. In an old Mexican text the moon was a man, across whose face a god threw a rabbit, thus making the marks in the moon. Among the Esquimaux the moon is a girl who always flies from the cruel brother, the sun, because he disfigured her face. Among the New Zealanders and North American Indians the sun is a great beast, whom the hunters trapped and thrashed with cudgels. His blood is used in some New Zealand incantations. The Red Indians, as Schoolcraft says, "hold many of the planets to be transformed adventurers." The Iowas "believed stars to be a sort of living creatures." One of them came down and talked to a hunter, and showed him where to find game. The Gallineros of Central California, according to Mr. Bancroft, believe that the sun and moon were made and lighted up by the hawk and the coyote, who one day flew into each other's faces in the dark, and were determined to prevent such accidents in future. But the very oddest example of the survival of the notion that the stars are men or women is found in the "Pax" of Aristophanes. Trygæus in that comedy has just made an expedition to heaven. A slave meets him and asks him, "Is not the story true, then, that we become stars when we die?" The answer is "Certainly," and Trygæus points out the star into which Ios of Chios has just been metamorphosed. Aristophanes is making fun of some popular Greek superstition. But that very superstition meets us in New Zealand. "Heroes," says Mr. Taylor, "were thought to become stars of greater or less brightness, according to the number of their victims slain in fight."—Cornhill Magazine.

About Fleas.

The perfect insects, as is well known, feed upon the blood of warm-blooded animals, and, as a rule, each species of flea is allotted to some particular species or group of species of mammals or birds. The insects conceal themselves amongst the hairs or feathers of the animal on whose blood they are destined to feed, and generally stick to this comfortable and convenient dwelling place for the remainder of their joint lives; but it is curious to see how soon after the host is killed, the parasites escape from its body and show manifest signs of perturbation. The common flea is the best known species, from its habit of drawing its supplies of food from our own persons. The fleas of the dog and cat are distinct, and are chiefly confined to those animals, although they do not disdain to vary their diet occasionally with human blood. Other species are still more particularly limited to certain animals, such as the squirrel, the hedgehog, the mole, mice and rats, and bats. The common fowl also has its particular flea; another infests pigeons, whilst others are found in the nests of small birds and swallows. The largest British species lives on the badger, and measuring an eighth of an inch long; an American species is two lines in length, and a still larger species is described as infesting the Australian porcupine ant-eater. The common flea varies a good deal in size in different localities. Very large specimens are said to occur about the bathing accommodations of some watering places, and the flea of the old reading room of the British Museum used to be noted for its magnitude and bloodthirstiness. The muscular strength of the flea is exceedingly great. They perform the most astonishing leaps, covering at a single bound a space many times the length of their own bodies, a faculty which enables them to vanish in the most wonderful manner at the approach of the finger of an intending captor. This extraordinary muscular energy has been taken advantage of in a very curious manner. Fleas have been trained to drag small coaches and other objects to which they were harnessed, and to perform other tricks, when they were exhibited to an admiring public under the title of "industrious fleas."—Cassell's Natural History.

Sanguinary Character of Scottish History.

There is a character in Scottish history which renders it attractive to some persons and repulsive to others. The story of the kings and of the nation is gloomy, turbulent, sanguinary. The chronicle from Kenneth MacAlpine to Mary Stuart is one of crimes, sorrows, and misfortunes. Few of the Scottish kings died on their thrones or in their beds. Crownless monarchs yield their last breath in captivity, or are killed in battle, or they are thrust from greatness into a monastery. From the successor of Kenneth down to Donald Bane and Duncan II.—a period of nearly a century and a half—no one king of Scotland came to a peaceful end. Of the dozen and a half of succeeding monarchs, the roll of whose names closes with that of Mary Stuart, a few passed away in peace, and regretted by their people. But destiny seemed to pursue the latter of those sovereigns with insatiable severity. The name of James is of singularly ill omen on this roll. James I., after a captivity of a score years in England, was murdered in his own country. A cannon ball carried off James II. at the siege of Roxburgh; the third of the name was slain flying from battle, where his son was his adversary; the fourth fell at Flodden; the fifth died of grief at the failure of his attempt against England. This last was the prophet-king, who said so mournfully, when he heard of the birth of his sole child, Mary, "The kingdom cam' wi' a lass, an' it wull gae wi' a lass."—Athenæum.

Insec.s in Birds.

A simple and perfectly safe plan of ridding birds and their cages of insect pests, and which I have proved with invariable success, is as follows: Take a piece of soft white calico, large enough to cover the cage all round about two-thirds down the wires, cut a hole in the middle for the suspending ring to pass through. When the bird goes to roost place the calico over the cage, so that it hangs as close as possible all round. In the morning, as soon as any light is admitted into the room, carefully remove the cloth, upon which a number of small red or black insects will be seen; plunge this into boiling water; during the day take it out and dry it thoroughly; repeat this operation for several mornings until no insects appear. I have not tried it over a perforated zinc roof, which would prevent the cloth hanging, so close to the cage, and the insects might lodge on the roof instead of passing through to the cloth. With the wire tops I have never known it to fail in clearing both the cage and the bird.—“Perseverance,” in Gardening Illustrated.

St. Valentine's Day.

A stern moralist has considered that “the custom of choosing or sending a valentine is a relic of Paganism,” but this opinion is so harsh and ill-supported that we much prefer to believe that it is a mere relic of that nature religion which was undoubtedly the primitive form of worship in north-western Europe as elsewhere, and sprang from the recognition of the peculiarity of the season. “About this time,” to quote Bailey’s Dictionary, “the birds choose their mates, and probably thence came the custom of young men and maidens choosing valentines or special loving friends on that day.” Shakspeare also alludes, in his “Midsummer Night’s Dream,” to the old saying that birds begin to couple on St. Valentine’s Day—

St. Valentine is past;

Begin these wood-birds but to couple now.

The youths of Ancient Rome were wont, we know, during the Lupercalia, celebrated in February, amongst other things, to put the names of young women in a box, from which they were drawn as chance directed. Later on the Christian clergy, unable to extirpate what they considered a heathenish practice, compromised matters by giving it a religious aspect, substituting the names of particular saints for those of the women, a custom still common at the present time in the Roman Catholic Church. Whether or not the feast of Saint Valentine was known to our Saxon forefathers history does not relate, but it is sufficiently evident that the practice must have spread rapidly in the days of the Norman. Chaucer, who died in 1400, and Lydgate both wrote verses in connection with the day, while in 1415, Charles, Duke of Orleans, who was taken prisoner at Agincourt, and for several years confined in the Tower of London, wrote the first poetical love billets that have been handed down to us. Considering the time these were composed, some being in French, others in English they must be allowed to possess considerable merit That eccentric old diarist, Mr. Pepys, notices Saint Valentine’s Day, thus showing how common the practice of observing it then was, and in his diary for February 14, 1667, the following entry will be found: “I am also this year my wife’s valentine, and it will cost me £5.” “I find,” he adds, “that Mrs. Pierce’s little girl is my valentine, she having drawn me, which I was not sorry for, it easing me of something more which I must have given to others.” The same entry also shows that it was then the fashion, having just been introduced, to draw mottoes as well as names. In those days, indeed, the custom of valentine choosing appears to have been not only very general, but also very expensive, as may be judged from the following further entry from Mr. Pepy’s diary in reference to Miss Stuarts jewels: “The Duke of York, being once her valentine, did give her a jewel of about £800, and my Lord Mandeville, her valentine this year, a ring of about £500.” If the foregoing entry may be accepted as a fair sample of what was generally expected of valentines in those days, the post would certainly appear to have been no sinecure, as far at least as the pocket is concerned.

GARELOCH

Optical Delusions in Arctic Seas.

One can scarcely, without having experienced it, form any idea of the optical illusions which are produced by mist in regions where the size of the objects which are visible through the fog is not known beforehand, and thus does not give the spectator an idea of the distance. Our estimate of distance and size in such cases depends wholly on accident. The obscure contours of the fog, concealed objects themselves, besides, are often by the ignorance of the spectator converted into whimsical fantastic forms. During a boat journey in Hinloopen Strait I once intended to row among drift ice to an island at a distance of some few kilometres. When the boat started the air was clear; but while we were employed, as best we could, in shooting sea-fowl for dinner, all was wrapt in a thick mist, and that so unexpectedly that we had not time to take the bearings of the island. This led to a not altogether pleasant row, by guess, among the pieces of ice that were drifting about in rapid motion in the sound. All exerted themselves as much as possible to get sight of the island, whose beach would afford us a safe resting place. While thus occupied, a dark border was seen through the mist at the horizon. It was taken for the island which we were bound for, and it was not at first considered remarkable that the dark border rose rapidly, for we thought that the mist was dispersing, and in consequence of that more of the land was visible. Soon two white snow-fields, that we had not observed before, were seen on both sides of the land; and immediately after this was changed to a sea monster, resembling a walrus-head, as large as a mountain. This got life and motion, and finally sank, all at once, to the head of a common walrus, which lay on a piece of ice in the neighbourhood of the boat; the white tusks formed the snow-fields, and the dark-brown round head the mountain. Scarce was this illusion gone when one of the men cried out "Land right ahead—high land!" We now all saw before us a high Alpine region, with mountain peaks and glaciers; but this too sank a moment afterwards, all at once, to a common ice-border, blackened with earth. In the spring of 1873 Palander and I, with nine men, made a sledge journey round North-east Land. In the course of this journey a great many bears were seen and killed. When a bear was seen while we were dragging our sledges forward, the train commonly stood still; and, not to frighten the bear, all the men concealed themselves behind the sledges, with the exception of the marksman, who, squatting down in some convenient place, waited till his prey should come sufficiently within range to be killed with certainty. It happened once during foggy weather on the ice at Wahlenberg Bay that the bear that was expected, and had been clearly seen by all of us, instead of approaching with his usual supple zig-zag movements, and with his ordinary attempts to nose himself to a sure insight into the fitness of the foreigners for food, just as the marksman took aim, spread out gigantic wings and flew away in the form of a small ivory gull. Another time during the same sledge journey we heard from the tent in which we rested, the cook who was employed outside, cry out, "A bear, a great bear! No! a reindeer, a very little reindeer!" The same instant a well-directed shot was fired, and the bear-reindeer was found to be a very small fox, which thus paid with its life for the honour of having for some moments played the part of a big animal. From these accounts it may be seen how difficult navigation among drift-ice must be in unknown waters.—"The Voyage of the Vega," by A. E. Nordenskiöld.

A Lost Diamond.

A youth of Pawtucket, R.I., who wears a seven-hundred dollar diamond breast-pin, on retiring the other night threw his shirt on the floor without removing the valuable jewel. The next morning the pin was missing, and a vigilant search failed to reveal its locality. It happened that there was about the house a hen, — a setting hen, kept in the house on account of her occupation and because of the cold weather, and the thought occurred to the father that the pin had become detached from the garment when it was thrown down, and the hen, in her wanderings, might have been attracted by this shining valuable, and gobbled it down. For a couple of days Biddy was kept close, not allowed to go out of the house, and closely watched in the hope of finding the missing diamond. But no pin was found. Finally, on the third day, it was decided to kill the hen, when sure enough, in the gizzard was found the missing pin. The gold setting was bent and scratched in the efforts of the contents of the gizzard to digest it, and one of the smaller diamonds was missing, but four of the diamonds were all right, and what promised to be a heavy loss was averted.

Christmas Facts and Memoranda.

Many of the customs that have attended the celebration of Christmas in the early ages of Christianity have become obsolete. Among the Christmas dishes most in vogue were a boar's head stuck with rosemary, with an apple or an orange in the mouth, plum porridge and mince pies. Diocletian, who kept his court at Incomedia, hearing that multitudes had assembled to celebrate the nativity of Christ, ordered the church to be burned. His commands were obeyed and all the inmates perished. The Christmas of 1525 was called the "still Christmas," on account of the plague, which prevented the King from holding any festival at Court. The mortality was so great that half of the citizens of London are said to have died. The baptism of Jesus was celebrated by the Eastern Church as early as A.D. 220, and by the Western Church as early as A.D. 330. Some authorities fix the time earlier for the celebration by the Western Church, and put it in the reign of Constantine. Miracle plays and Scripture histories are synonymous with Christmas. The miracle play of "St. George and the Dragon," one of the first, is still preserved. There is a town in Germany where once in ten years all the inhabitants take part in the representation of the life of Christ. In the early courts of England, Christmas was celebrated by arrangements made by the master of the revels, who was appointed by the King and was called the lord of misrule. Leland, speaking of the Court of Henry VII., A.D., 1489, mentions an abbot of misrule, who was created for this purpose, who made much sport and did right well his office.—American Paper.

The Fatal Last Week.

Towards midnight on December 28, 1879, the writer of these notes happened to be in a Scotch newspaper office, and was thus addressed by one of the staff:—" Singular thing! we haven't had any disaster to wind up the year with. There is usually a great disaster at the finish—there or thereabouts. The old year rarely leaves without giving the world a parting kick somewhere," "Hullo!" he suddenly broke out; "here's something and no mistake!" Edinburgh train signalled off from Tayport not arrived. Terrible gale. Supposed accident on bridge."

The plunge of the train into the waters of the Firth, the flash of a light seen from the shore, the sudden extinction of 70 lives—all these particulars came out afterwards. But there was enough to produce on the writer's mind a superstitious apprehension which will never be effaced. The worst disasters at the close of 1886, unless we count the gale and snowstorm from the effects of which all Europe is still suffering, are that reported from Driffield, where 10 men were killed by the fall of a cage down the shaft of a coalpit, and the sad lifeboat occurrence on the Lancashire coast, which resulted in the drowning of the St. Anne's and the Southport lifeboat crews, during a gallant attempt to rescue the crew of a German vessel. At the close of '85, the country was shocked by the Mardy colliery accident, in the Rhondda Valley, by which 77 men were killed and the remainder of 900 had a narrow escape. The year 1884 closed amid the frightful ruin of the earthquakes in Spain, in which more than a thousand persons perished. On the 27th of December, 1882, 40 persons were killed and 50 injured by the fall of a chimney at Sir H. Ripley's mills at Bradford. The close of 1881 was signalled by the quadruplicate collision in Canonbury Tunnel. The Tay Bridge calamity sufficiently darkens the last days of 1879. Thus we may go back year after year upon the gruesome record. For at least three decades there is an almost unbroken series of disasters by sea or land in the last week of the year; we have space to note only a few of the more remarkable. It was on the last but one of 1876, that the Ash-tabula railway accident—very similar to the Tay Bridge catastrophe—destroyed, by shock, drowning, and burning, more than a hundred lives. A day or two before five persons had been killed and thirty injured at Arlesley siding on the Great Northern Railway; the station master at Arlesley went mad on the spot. London society was distressed on Christmas-day, 1875 by news of the drowning of three nieces of the late Mr. Russell Gurney, as well as the crew, by the upsetting of a dahabeah on the Nile; while only two days earlier the training ship Goliath was burned, twenty-one boys perishing out of 480. Yet more sad was the close of 1874, when the story of the emigrant ship Cospatrick reached these shores. Of 500 souls on board, only five were saved, and they were picked up only a few hours before they must have succumbed. At the same time—on the 24th of December—occurred the Shipton railway accident, with its terrible total of thirty-four dead and seventy injured. Many people will remember the harrowing story—we do not intend to repeat it—of the sinking of the steam-tug Gipsy Queen in the Tyne, and the drowning of eighteen of her crew on the 26th of December, 1873. We pass over the two preceding years with the bare mention of the wreck of the English steamship Germany and the loss of thirty lives at the entrance of the Garonne, and the traction engine accident in Glasgow with its havoc among a crowd of children. The end of 1870 is memorable in the history of railway disasters. It is not only that in the last week (on December 26) eight persons were killed at Hatfield, but there had been a series of great fatalities from the end of November; seven persons being killed at Harrow, five at Brockley Whins, and 14 near Barnsley, without counting the injured. There was also in the fatal last week of 1870 a gunpowder explosion at Birmingham, killing seventeen persons outright and maiming or blinding more than fifty others. On Christmas-day, 1860, a whole family of six, the wife and children of a policeman, were burned to death in a street near Burton Crescent. On Boxing-night fourteen persons were trampled upon or suffocated in a mad fight for entrance into the pit of the Bristol Theatre. That affair will perhaps be remembered for the act that those who had managed to get into the theatre knew nothing of what had happened; the performance went on to the end before anybody but the manager and the police knew that seventeen dead bodies were laid out in the refreshment room. A terrible colliery accident near St. Helens cost twenty-six poor fellows their lives on December 30, 1868. Still more fatal was the Merthyr Tydfil explosion at the close of 1865; while to the account of that time also must be put the foundering of the London, with 220 souls, in the Bay of Biscay. Then we come to the Moestig explosion in 1863, the loss of the Lifeguard off Flamborough Head (fifty-one lives) in 1862, the boiler explosion at Hetton Colliery (twenty-three lives) in 1860, the wreck of the Blervie Castle (fifty-six lives) in 1859, and the crushing of fifteen persons to death at the Victoria Theatre in 1853; all these disasters occurred in the last few days of the year. Research back to a period beyond the average memory reveals other examples of this strange coincidence. It was on the last day but one of 1808 that His Majesty's ship, Anson, with her crew of 60, perished in Mount's Bay. It was on the 22nd of December, 1810, that the Minotaur, 74 guns, was wrecked on the Haak Bank, with a loss of 360 hands. It was on the fatal last week of 1811 that the three English men-of-war, St. George, Defence, and Hero, stranded on the coast of Jutland, and all the crews, numbering about 2,000 men, with Admiral Reynolds, were drowned, save only 18 seamen who, more dead than alive, were washed ashore.

Those who like to philosophise upon the phenomena of events may make what use they please of this recital. It will be remembered that the end of the year, in these latitudes at all events, is a period when all the forces of nature are warring against man; a period of cold and storms and depression and fog—resulting in disasters by sea and land, on the railway, and in the mine. It may be said that such accidents as fires and panics in theatres are specially liable to follow upon the peculiar circumstances of the season. But then it happens that the opening of the new year has been singularly free from calamity; yet in January the natural conditions are not appreciably different from those of December. However, we purpose neither to explain nor moralise.

The most ancient Republic in the world is that of San Marino, a little old world spot about ten miles from the Adriatic Sea, and which is as completely forgotten by the rest of the world as is the name of the first shipbuilder. Of all the republics of the Italian middle ages this is the only one which is left. It has withstood assaults from all sides and in all forms, Moorish invaders, Italian condottieri, Papal aggressors, the great first Napoleon himself even, have failed one and all to pluck the astute Marinese from their lofty hill. The entire population of the Republic is 8,000, all told, and the army is 1,000 strong. The Government is vested in a Sovereign Grand Council of sixty inhabitants, forty being plebeian, and twenty aristocrats by birth. At the end of this magnificently-christened executive stands the captains regent—the supreme presidents of the San Marino. One of these gentlemen must also be plebeian and the other an aristocrat. Their term of power lasts only six months, at the end of which time they retire, and other two captains regent are duly elected into the vacant place. Nearly everybody, therefore, of note or unusual powers and intelligence in San Marino has a chance of receiving at the hands of his fellows the greatest honour in their power to bestow upon a Marinese citizen. The most laughable feature about this tiny toybox republic, however, is its legal machinery. No less than twelve members of the Sovereign Grand Council, it appears, are told off to assist the captains regent in any litigation which may arise—a number which would seem to point to an exceeding litigiousness on the part of the inhabitants

Surviving English Superstitions.

We find that old customs and habits of a domestic nature still exist to a great extent in the northern and western portions of England. In the north, especially amidst the great Black Country, they are almost universal, whilst in the Midlands and the south they seem to have disappeared. Many of these customs come within the category of superstitions, but they are none the less interesting, as tending to disprove the assertion that "the further north one goes, the less sentiment one finds." A few instances will suffice. In the north, no child's nails are ever cut on a Sunday; no infant's nails are cut until it has attained the age of one year, but are bitten; the inside of a child's hands are never washed until three weeks after birth; infants before they are carried downstairs are always taken upstairs, in order to ensure their course in the world upwards; no child is shown itself in the glass, or its teething process will be painful; cake is always given to the first person met on the road to the christening; marriages should never be performed on a Saturday but always if possible, on a Wednesday; the person who sleeps first on the wedding night will die first, as will the person who kneels first at the marriage ceremony. In Cornwall no miner whistles underground; a Cornish child born after midnight will see more of the world than ordinary folk, and Sunday is considered an especially lucky day for birth.—All the Year Round.

In the Arctic regions persons can converse at more than a mile distant when the thermometer is below zero. In air, sound travels from 1130 to 1142 feet per second. In water, sound passes at the rate of 4768 feet per second. Sound travels in air, about 900 feet for every pulsation of a healthy person at 75 in a minute. A bell sounded under water may be heard under water at 1200 feet distant. Sounds are distinct at twice the distance on water that they are on land. In a balloon, the barking of dogs on the ground may be heard at an elevation of three or four miles. On Table Mountain, a mile above Cape Town, every noise in it, and even words may be heard distinctly. The fire of the English on landing in Egypt was distinctly heard 130 miles on the sea. Dr. Jameson says, in calm weather he heard every word of a sermon at the distance of two miles! Water is a better conductor of sound than air. Wood is also a powerful conductor of sound, and so is flannel or riband. Sound affects particles of dust in a sunbeam, cobwebs, and water in musical glasses; it shakes small pieces of paper off a string in concord. Deaf persons may converse through deal rods held between the teeth, or held to the throat or breast. Echoes are formed by elliptical surfaces combined with surrounding surfaces, or by such of them as fall into the respective distances of the surface of an ellipse, and are, therefore, directed to the other focus of the ellipse; for all the distances from both foci to such surface are equal, and hence there is a concentration of sounds at those points direct from one focus, and reflected back again from the other focus. An echo returns a monosyllable at 70 feet distance, and another syllable at every 40 feet additional. The echo of artillery is increased or created by a cloud or clouds. Miners distinguish the substance bored by the sound; and physicians distinguish the action of the heart or lungs by a listening tube, Gamblers can distinguish, in tossing money, which side is undermost, though covered by the hand.

THE WORK OF THE HEART.—Dr. Benjamin W. Richardson in a recent Cantor lecture, speaking of the mechanism of the heart, described the number of the pulsation of the heart in different animals—in fish, frog, bird, rabbit, cat, dog, sheep, horse—and made a few comments on the remarkable slowness of the heart—forty strokes per minute—in the horse. This was followed by a computation of the average work performed by the heart in a healthy adult man. The work was traced out by the minute, the hour and the day, and was shown to equal the feat of raising 5 tons 4 cwt. one foot per hour, or 125 tons in twenty-four hours. The facts relating to the work of the heart by the weight of work accomplished was supplemented by a new calculation, in which the course of calculation was explained by mileage. Presuming that the blood was thrown out of the heart at each pulsation in the proportion of sixty-nine strokes per minute, and at the assumed force of nine feet, the mileage of the blood through the body might be taken at 207 yards per minute, seven miles per hour, 168 miles per day, 61,320 miles per year, or 5,150,880 miles in a lifetime of eighty-four years.

Boy Inventors.

Some of the most important inventions have been the work of mere boys. The invention of the valve motion to the steam engine was made by a boy. Watts left the engine in a very incomplete condition, from the fact that he had no way to open or close the valves except by means of levers operated by the hand. He set up a large engine at one of the mines, and a boy was hired to work these valve levers. Although this was not hard work, yet it required his constant attention. As he was working these levers he saw that parts of the engine moved in the right direction, and at the exact time that he had to open or close the valves. He procured a strong cord and made one end fast to the proper part of the engine, and the other end to the valve lever; the boy had the satisfaction of seeing the engine move off with perfect regularity of motion. A short time after the foreman came around and found the boy playing marbles at the door. Looking at the engine he soon saw the ingenuity of the boy, and also the advantages of so great an invention. Mr. Watts then carried out the boy's inventive genius in a practical form, and made the steam engine a perfect automatic-working machine.

Buffalo Hunting on the Plains.

Buffalo hunting is an occupation common to all the plain tribes. They are hunted by the tribesmen at all seasons, and the bullet, the long lance, and the arrow play an equal part in the work of destruction. They will even entice them into "pounds," V-shaped enclosures, or rather traps, where they will be slaughtered remorselessly. Sometimes a herd will be driven in the direction of a high precipice, and one after another, either unaware of the danger or unable to avoid it, will tumble over and be killed on the spot. If the animals attempt to turn back in time, their fate is equally certain, for few escape this running the gauntlet of the Indians. In the winter they are pursued by the Indians in snow-shoes, and numbers are killed while struggling almost helplessly through the snowdrifts. Sometimes the buffaloes will attempt to cross a lake on the smooth ice, when they become perfectly helpless, and fall an easy prey to their enemies. They will be even pursued on foot during the summer months, the Indians creeping within range by means of the disguise of a wolf-skin drawn over their naked bodies. The buffalo suspects nothing, for the cowardly prairie wolf will never attack the buffalo when in herds, but only singly; then the silent arrow soon does its work. So dependent are many of the tribes on the buffalo that if the herds do not approach for a length of time within a reasonable distance of the village the tribe is reduced to starvation, and there is nothing for it but to resort to the buffalo dance. So certain is this dance of bringing the game to the village that every adult must keep by him a mask, composed of the head and part of the hide of the buffalo, so that, when occasion arises, he may take part in this very necessary Terpsichorean rite. It never fails, because with a logic as incontestable as that of the rain-maker, it has to be continued till the buffaloes come. When one man is exhausted, another pretends to kill him, and so being supposed to be hors de combat, another takes his place; and thus the weird dance continues, day and night; until the buffaloes come in sight, when, of course, it is patent to every unprejudiced mind that this "medicine dance" has been of sovereign power. The rate at which buffaloes are butchered has rapidly thinned them, and though still existing in immense herds, their area is year by year narrowing; and eventually, with the settling up of the prairies, their intersection by railways, and the general use of fire-arms by the Indians, their extermination is only a question of time. Thousands are annually slaughtered through sheer wastefulness, and the hides of the cows being in greater request for robes than those of the bulls, the former are killed in greater number. In the Missouri region alone nearly 4,500,000 were massacred in three years, and the number of buffaloes shot annually cannot be much less than from a quarter to half a million. When Coronado went on his famous expedition he traversed, says Casteneda, the historian of his expedition, "immense plains, seeing nothing for miles together, but skies and herds of bison." To this day, in many places, thousands may be seen at one view. When Lewis and Clarke first crossed the prairies, they saw on one occasion as many as 20,000 in a herd. At another spot such a multitude of these animals were fording the Missouri that for a mile the stream was so filled up that they could not proceed until the herd had passed. Such sights, if not already among the things of the past, soon will be, and when the last buffalo becomes extinct, the last prairie Indian will disappear.—The Peoples of the World.

Snakes and Insects.

A very nice little snake story appeared some time ago in a paper which devotes a large portion of its space to popular natural history, and was headed, "Extraordinary Sagacity in Spiders." Three of those sapient insects it appears, came across a snake and resolved to eat him. But first—and this is where the sagacity comes in—they artfully spun threads round his mouth, and so tied it up to prevent his biting; and then, having him quite helpless and at their mercy; they sagaciously devoured his body at their leisure. Ants, however, have been known to cluster in myriads on a serpent which has incautiously strayed into their nest and to destroy it, the reptile being unable to shake them off; but it frequently happens that ants and other insects or parasites attack a snake's eyes and positively eat them, those organs being undefended by eyelids and therefore always open. The outer layer of the conjunctival membrane is continuous with the cuticle of the whole body, and is desquamated with it when the creature "sheds its skin;" ordinary impurities or particles of foreign matter are got rid of in this way, but if the transparent plate covering the cornea be perforated, as it is by the ravages of these insects, the snake's sight is permanently destroyed. This accident has frequently happened, in spite of every care, in the reptile house at the Zoological Gardens, where the cages are very old and the woodwork semi-rotten affording abundant harbour to these pests; in the reptilium, now in course of construction, Portland cement and zinc will replace the use of wood as far as possible.—All the Year Round.

Two Remarkable Needles

The International Exhibition of Needlework, which was held at Sydenham in July, 1884, included among other curiosities, two things which were not the least of the attractions of the exhibition. One was the famous needle presented to the Emperor of Germany some time since under circumstances worth recalling. The Emperor was visiting the great needle manufactory at Kreuznach, and was desirous of seeing for himself the relative power of machinery compared with skilled hand labour. A bundle of superfine needles was placed before him, 1,000 of which weighed less than half an ounce, and he expressed his astonishment that eyes could be bored in such minute objects. Thereupon the foreman of the boring department asked his Majesty to give him a hair from his beard, and receiving it, he bored an eye in it, threaded it, and handed back to the astonished Emperor this improvised and most peculiar needle. The other curious needle was manufactured at Redditch, and presented to the Queen. It is a sort of miniature Trajan's column. All around it are represented scenes from the Queen's life, executed so minutely that a magnifying glass is required to distinguish them. This needle can be opened, and within it are a number of very fine needles, on which also scenes have been engraved.

Growth of London.

One of the most interesting points in the annual report of the Chief Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police is the official record he supplies of the yearly growth of London. The year 1883 has not been a flourishing one for the London builders, and the Chief Commissioner speaks of their operations being "somewhat restricted." These somewhat restricted efforts have, however, succeeded in adding 21,110 houses to the vast aggregate of dwellings which is called the metropolis? thus forming 361 new streets and one new square, covering a distance of 56 miles and 84 yards. It is difficult to form any mental picture from these figures. It is easier to understand what they mean when we compare the number of houses with some existing town. Now Brighton in 1881 had 20,379 inhabited houses, so that London in 1883 added to itself a town a little bigger than Brighton. Bolton, in Lancashire, had 21,043 houses, so that more were built in London in one year than that busy town contains. It would require two Coventrys, or more than two Baths, or Cambridges, or Oxfords, or Ipswiches, to represent the additions made to London in a single year. Yet 1883 shows a steady falling off in the highest number of houses built. There was an immense bound in 1880, when 24,945 houses were added to London; in 1881, the highest point was reached, when the number was 26,170. It fell to 23,301 in 1882, and then to 21,110 in 1883. If we put these four years together we shall find that from the end of 1879 to the end of 1883, London added to itself a town larger than Liverpool, Manchester, or Birmingham. It must, however, be understood that the London to which this vast addition is made is not that of the Metropolitan Board of Works, but the Greater London of the Metropolitan Police.

The English Language.

A pretty deer is dear to me,
A hare with downy hair :
I love a hart with all my heart,
But barely bear a bear.
'Tis plain that no one takes a plane
To have a pair of pears ;
A rake, though, often takes a rake
To tare away the tares.
All rays raise thyme, time razes all ;
And through the whole, hole wears.
A writ, in writing " right," may write
It " wright " and still be wrong—
For " write " and " rite " are neither " right,"
And don't to wright belong.
Beer often brings a bier to man,
Coughing a coffin brings,
And too much ale will make us ail,
As well as other things.
The person lies who says he lies
When he is but reclining ;
And, when consumptive folks decline,
They all decline declining.
A quail don't quail before a storm—
A bough will bow before it ;
We cannot rein the rain at all—
No earthly powers reign o'er it.
The dyer dyes awhile, then dies ;
To dye he's always trying,
Until upon his dying-bed
He thinks no more of dyeing.
A son of Mars mars many a sun ;
All deys must have their days,
And every knight should pray each night
To Him who weighs his ways.
'Tis meet that man should mete out meat
To feed misfortune's son ;
The fair should fare on love alone,
Else one cannot be won.
A lass, alas ; is something false ;
Of faults a maid is made ;
Her waist is but a barren waste—
Though stayed, she is not staid.
The springs spring forth in Spring, and shoots
Shoot forward one and all ;
Though Summer kills the flowers, it leaves
The leaves to fall in Fall.
I would a story here commence,
But you might find it stale ?
So let's suppose that we have reached
The tail end of our tale.

WHEN TO EAT FRUIT.—Fruits, to do their best work, should be eaten either on an empty stomach or simply with bread — never with vegetables. In the morning, before the fast of the night has been broken, they are not only exceedingly refreshing, but they serve as a natural stimulus to the digestive organs. And to produce their fullest, finest effect, they should be ripe, and of good quality, and they should be eaten raw. What is better than a bunch of luscious grapes or a plate of berries or cherries on a summer morning, the first thing on sitting down to breakfast? Or a fine ripe apple, rich and juicy, eaten in the same way? In our climate apples should constitute not the finishing but the beginning of a meal, particularly the breakfast, for at least four months in the year; and fruits, raw or cooked, should make a part of the morning and evening meal (provided suppers are eaten) during the entire year.

The British Constitution.

The Constitution of Great Britain is composed of the Sovereign and the three estates of the realm, the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal and the Commons.

The SOVEREIGN has the power of summoning and proroguing or dissolving Parliament, or dismissing a ministry, and gives the Royal assent to measures which have passed both houses. The death of a sovereign does not dissolve Parliament, but renders necessary an immediate assembling of both houses; and if there be no Parliament in existence, the old Parliament must re-assemble, and may sit again six months. It is also in the power of the Crown to call Parliament together by proclamation for the despatch of business in six days from the date of such proclamation, if the house be adjourned for a period above fourteen days.

The LORDS SPIRITUAL and LORDS TEMPORAL sit together in the same legislative chamber, which is called the House of Lords. The Lords Spiritual consist of the Archbishop of Canterbury and York, and twenty-four Bishops of the Church of England; the number not being increased by the successive creation of new bishoprics. The Archbishops, and the Bishops of London, Durham, and Winchester are always entitled to sit; the other bishops only receive a writ of summons when the avoidance of a see decreases the total number of lords spiritual to less than twenty-six, and the writs are issued in order of seniority of appointment. A bishop on resigning his see ceases to be a Lord of Parliament. The Lords Temporal may be divided into peers whose right to sit is hereditary, representative peers of Scotland and Ireland, and Lords of Appeal. The Scottish peers send sixteen representatives to the House of Lords, which are elected immediately after a general election, and sit until Parliament is dissolved. The Irish peers elect twenty-eight representatives who sit in the House of Lords for life. The Lords of Appeal, of whom there may be no more than four appointed, enjoy the dignity of Baron for life, but lose the right to sit on resigning office. A Scotch or Irish peer other than a representative peer may sit under an inferior title to the one by which he is generally known, as a peer of the United Kingdom. Thus, the Duke of Argyll sits as Baron Sutherland and Hamilton, and the Duke of Buccleugh as Earl of Doncaster. Whatever be the rank of a peer, each is equally entitled to sit and vote, and, as in the House of Commons, each must be present to record his vote. The officials of the House of Lords are the Earl Marshal (hereditary office), the Lord Great Chamberlain, the Garter King at Arms and the usher of the Black Rod.

The HOUSE OF COMMONS is an elective body, chosen by a majority of the people from their own body, in which, with certain exceptions, any male of full age may be elected to sit as representative of any constituency in the United Kingdom. English and Scotch peers are entirely disqualified from holding a seat, but Irish peers may be returned for any constituency. The following are also disqualified:—All English, Scotch, and Irish Judges (except the Master of the Rolls in England); all clergymen of the Established Church of any of the three kingdoms; Roman Catholic priests; the holders of various offices specially excluded by statute (including revenue officers); persons who have been convicted of certain offences; aliens who have been naturalized (except in certain cases where exceptions are made); imbeciles; government contractors (except contractors for government loans); and sheriffs and returning officers within the constituencies for which they act. A seat in the house is vacated when the holder is created a peer, or succeeds to a peerage, or by the acceptance of any office of emolument under the Crown, but any member accepting is eligible for re-election, should a constituency approve of such acceptance; but this rule does not apply to such offices as that of Secretary to the Treasury or other similar appointments not held direct from the crown, and a change from one office to another does not involve going again to the constituency. A member cannot resign his seat without the consent of his constituents, but he may accept the office of honour or profit under the Crown, of the Stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds, or of the Manors of Northstead, which is granted to him by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and resigned immediately after its purpose is served.

A peer or peeress of Great Britain, or of Scotland or Ireland, whether representative or not, and a peeress, whether by birth, marriage or creation—but not a peeress by marriage who has become widowed and married a commoner—is free at all times from arrest or imprisonment on civil process. The same privilege extends to members of the House of Commons during the sitting of Parliament, and for forty days before the meeting of Parliament and forty days after its prorogation, and for an uncertain or "reasonable" time after its dissolution.

Peers who become bankrupt are disqualified from sitting and voting in the House of Lords until the bankruptcy be determined either by being annulled or by the satisfaction of the creditors; and the seat of a representative peer for Scotland or Ireland is vacated unless his bankruptcy be determined within one year after the date of his becoming a bankrupt. If a member of the House of Commons be adjudged a bankrupt, he is unable to sit and vote for one year unless the order of adjudication be annulled, or his creditors be satisfied; and if at the expiration of one year the bankruptcy be not determined in one or other of these ways, the seat becomes vacant.

Napoleon's Preparations for Battle.

Before engaging in battle, (says Bourriene in his pleasing work), Buonaparte made little provision for subsequent events, if successful; but occupied himself much with what ought to be done in the case of defeat. I here report a fact of which I have often been a witness, leaving to his brethren in arms the decision on the merits of this conduct. He was enabled to accomplish much, because he hazarded all, grasped at all, and was cautious in nothing. His excessive ambition urged him on to power, and power obtained only added to his ambition. None ever more firmly held the conviction that a nothing often decides the greatest events. This supplies the reason why he was more solicitous in watching, than in tempting events; he beheld them in their progress of preparation and maturity, when, suddenly seizing, he directed them at will.—The Olio.

PROVIDENT
PLATE GLASS INSURANCE CO.,
Ltd., BIRMINGHAM.

CAPITAL, - - £25,000.

This Company insures Plain Plate, Silvered Plate, Ornamental and other Glass, against malicious or accidental breakage.

Amongst the advantages secured to Insurers with this Company are the following:—

Ample Security guaranteed by a large Subscribed Capital.

Moderate Rates of Premium.

Policies cover breakages from every cause whatsoever. This is the only Company absolutely free from exceptions.

Immediate Re-placements. When a breakage requires immediate attention, the Insured may go direct to the Glass Warehouses, or otherwise communicate with the Agent or Manager.

No Re-Insurance charged. The usual practice of other Companies is to make a charge for Re-Insurance whenever a breakage occurs.

Bonus of 10 % allowed on total Premiums paid every 5 years if no claim has been made.

INSURANCE OF GLASS IN PRIVATE HOUSES.

No Measurement or Surveys required. Premium according to Rental.

The Owners and Occupiers of Private Dwelling Houses can now insure all the Glass in their ordinary Windows and Doors without Measurement of the Glass, the Premium being regulated by the Rental at the following rates:—

Rental not exceeding £20 Premium 4/.	Rental not exceeding £60 Premium 11/.

Victoria, R.I.: Her Life and Reign. By Dr. MACAULAY, Author of "Sea Pictures," "Luther Anecdotes," "Gordon Anecdotes," etc. With Five Portraits of the Queen, and Sixty Engravings by Edward Whymper and others. Small 4to, 10s. 6d. cloth, gilt edges.

"The author's endeavour has been to recall those qualities in the personal character of the Queen and the incidents in her life which have most endeared her to her people during the last fifty years; and he has also aimed at giving a brief but comprehensive summary of the great public movements of the time. In both efforts he seems to have succeeded to admiration. Dr. Macaulay writes en pleine connaissance de cause. He has witnessed the events which he narrates, and been brought face to face with the personages whom he portrays. He has the liveliest ocular remembrance of 'Fifty years since.'"—Illustrated London News.

THE Publisher has to thank the increasing number of Advertisers for their support, and all who have supplied the information for the DIRECTORY for 1889.

Though rather later than usual in being issued, he hopes it will merit the success which has attended former issues.

Every endeavour has been made to ensure correctness. Any suggestions which would tend to obviate inaccuracies, &c., in future issues, will be gladly received.

ANECDOTES OF BYGONE TIMES.

It was Count Charles de Morny's practice, whenever he dined at a table d'hôte, to instruct his valet to come in and sit down with the company, place himself at the bottom or top of the table, treat his master as a perfect stranger, and help him to the best of everything!

DR. KITCHEN, Bishop of Llandaff, from an idle abbot under Henry VIII. was made a busy bishop; Protestant under Edward, he returned to his old master under Mary; and at last took the oath of supremacy under Elizabeth, and finished as a parliament Protestant. A pun spread the odium of his name; for they said that he had always loved the Kitchen better than the Church.

THE most honourable kiss, both to the giver and receiver, ever recorded, was that which Queen Margaret of France, in the presence of the whole Court, impressed upon the lips of the ugliest man in the kingdom, Alain Chartier, whom she one day found asleep, exclaiming to her astonished attendants, "I do not kiss the man, but the mouth that has uttered so many charming things." It was worth while to be a poet in those days.

WHEN Junius Brutus and the sons of Tarquin asked the Delphic oracle who was to succeed Superbus on the throne of Rome, they received for answer: "He who shall first kiss his mother." While the two Princes hastened home to fulfil what they thought was indicated, Brutus fell to the earth, and exclaimed, "Thus kiss I thee, oh earth! the great mother of us all!"

JAMES THE SECOND, who so seldom said a good thing, one day said a very ill-bred one. He declared, in the midst of his courtiers, that "he had never known a modest man make his way at Court." To this observation one of the gentlemen present boldly replied, "And, please your majesty, whose fault is that?" The King was struck, and remained silent.

THE favourite studies and amusements of the learned La Mothe le Vayer consisted in accounts of the most distant countries. He gave a striking proof of the influence of this master-passion, when death hung upon his lips. Bernier, the celebrated traveller, entering and drawing the curtains of his bed to take his eternal farewell, the dying man turning to him, with a faint voice inquired, "Well, my friend, what news from the Great Mogul?"

CHARLES THE SECOND laid it down as a rule, that in his convivial parties the King was always absent. Being one night in a select party of this kind, one of his courtiers, who had contributed a good deal to his mirth, ventured to ask him for a place. Charles, though he liked the man as a companion, was yet unwilling to break through a fixed rule; and he therefore quickly replied, "You may depend on it, I will speak to the King to-morrow about it."

SOME soldiers once fell upon a watchman in a small town in Ireland, in a lonely street, and took away his money and coat. He immediately repaired to the captain of the regiment, to complain of his misfortune. The captain asked him whether he had on the waistcoat he then wore when he was robbed by the soldiers. "Yes, sir," replied the poor fellow. "Then, my friend," rejoined the captain, "I can assure you they do not belong to my company, otherwise they would have left you neither waistcoat nor shirt!"

FREDERIC THE GREAT had five libraries, all exactly alike, and containing the same books, ranged in the same order: one at Potsdam, a second at Sans Souci, a third at Berlin, a fourth at Charlottenburg, and a fifth at Breslau. On removing to any of these places, he had only to make a note of the page at which he had left off, to pursue his studies without interruption on his arrival. Accordingly, he always bought five copies of all books which he wished to possess.

A MUSICIAN complaining that the tyrant Dionysius gave him nothing, after promising him much, for the exercise of his art—"You fool, we are quits," said the tyrant; "you tickled my ears, and I did the very same by yours."

SYLVESTER, the translator of "Du Bartas," considered himself fortunate when he found in the name of his Sovereign the strongest bond of affection to his service. In the dedication he made loyal changes on the name of his liege, James Stuart; in which he finds a just master.

It appears by an Act dated in 1510, that in those days the Bible was called Bibliotheca, that is, per emphasim, "The Library." The word library was limited in its signification then to the Biblical writings; no other books, compared with the Holy Writings, appear to have been worthy to rank with them, or constitute what we call a library.

LOUIS XII. one day looking at himself in his mirror, was astonished to see a number of grey hairs on his head. "Ah!" said he, "these must be owing to the long speeches I have listened to; and it is those of M. le ——— in particular that have ruined my hair."

A PERSON, who had some small interest in the farming of the taxes, was one day pronouncing an eulogium upon the financiers, maintaining that they alone were the support of the State. "Yes," replied his antagonist, "as the rope supports the criminal — by hanging him."

THE Constable Anne de Montmorency had a singular species of devotion. He was accustomed to count his beads during the march of his army; and as he fingered them, he would give orders, sometimes to set a village on fire—sometimes to surprise a party, to massacre a garrison, or to hang a soldier.

THE Duke de Nivernois was intimately acquainted with the Countess de Rochfort, and never omitted going to see her a single evening. As she was a widow, and he a widower, one of his friends observed to him that it would be more convenient for him to marry the lady. "I have often thought so," replied the Duke, "but one thing prevents me: in that case, where could I pass my evenings?"

THE Spaniards, who disliked Sixtus V., circulated a report that he had sold himself to the devil, on condition of his enjoying the Popedom for six years. Afterwards, said they, it happened that a young man, aged nineteen, committed a murder in Rome, and his judges represented to the Pope that, though guilty, his execution could not take place, the law requiring twenty years of age before a capital punishment could be inflicted. The Pope, vexed at this disappointment of the ends of justice, answered, without thinking, "O, if that is all, I will lend him one of mine." At the end of five years, Sixtus fell sick; the devil appeared, and told him he came to carry him off. Sixtus told him his time was not come, as only five years out of the six allowed him had elapsed; but the devil reminded him of his promise on the execution of the young man, and immediately put an end to his life.

QUEEN ELIZABETH loved the Earl of Essex so well, that in a tender moment she gave him a ring, telling him that if he ever should be guilty of undertaking anything against the State worthy of death, he had only to send to her that ring in order to ensure his pardon. The Earl of Essex some time afterwards fell in love with another lady, and finally revolted, and was condemned to death. In this last extremity he intrusted the ring to this lady to be conveyed to Elizabeth. As the lady knew the secret connected with the ring, she preferred keeping it, and allowing her lover to be beheaded, to running the risk of seeing him unfaithful.

STATE LOTTERIES IN ENGLAND.

THE first lottery in England, so far as it is known, began to be drawn on the 11th of January, 1569, at the west door of St. Paul's Cathedral. The scheme, which had been announced in 1567, shows that the lottery consisted of forty thousand lots or shares at ten shillings each, and that it comprehended "a great number of good prizes, as well of ready money as of plate, and certain sorts of merchandise." Any profit that arose from the scheme was to be devoted to the reparation of harbours and other useful public works.

The last State lottery in England was drawn on the 18th of October, 1826, the ceremony taking place in Cooper's Hall, Basinghall Street, London. The abolition of lotteries deprived the Government of a revenue of £250,000 or £300,000 a year; but it was rightly thought that the inducement to gambling held out to the public was a great moral evil helping to impoverish many, and diverting attention from legitimate industrial modes of money-making.

Whilst lotteries lasted they gave rise to many curious anecdotes, and some of these we shall set down here.

Early in the reign of George II., the footman of a lady of quality, under the absurd infatuation of a dream, disposed of the savings of the last twenty years of his life in two lottery tickets, which proving blanks, after a few melancholy days he put an end to his life. In his box was found the following plan of the manner in which he would spend the five thousand pound prize, which his mistress preserved as a curiosity:—

"As soon as I have received the money I will marry Grace Towers; but as she has been cross and coy I will use her as a servant. Every morning she shall get me a mug of strong beer, with a toast, nutmeg and sugar in it; then I will sleep till ten, after which I will have a large sack posset. My dinner shall be on table at one, and never without a good pudding. I will have a stock of wine and brandy laid in. About five in the afternoon I will have tarts and jellies, and a gallon bowl of punch: at ten a hot supper. If I am in a good humour, and Grace behaves herself, she shall sit down with me. To bed about twelve.”

On the 31st of August, 1731, a scene was presented which strongly marks the infatuation and ignorance of lottery adventurers. The tickets for the State Lottery were delivered out to the subscribers at the Bank of England; when the crowd becoming so great as to obstruct the clerks, they told them, “We deliver blanks to-day, but to-morrow we shall deliver prizes;” upon which many, who were by no means for blanks, retired; and by this bold stratagem the clerks obtained room to proceed in their business.

A gentlewoman in Holborn, whose husband had presented her with a ticket, put up prayers in the church the day before drawing in the following manner: “The prayers of the congregation are desired for the success of a person engaged in a new undertaking.”

In the lottery of 1770 the holder of the ticket entitled to the first prize of £20,000 was Captain Towry of Isleworth. A very remarkable circumstance put it in his possession. Mr. Barnes, a grocer in Cheap-side, purchased four following numbers, one of which this was; but thinking the chance not so great in so many following ones, he carried this very ticket back to the office, and changed it for another.

On the 5th of January, 1774, at the conclusion of drawing the State Lottery at Guildhall, No. 11,053, as the last drawn ticket, was declared to be entitled to the £1,000, and was so printed in the paper of benefits by order of the Commissioners. It won besides a prize of £100. But after the wheels were carried back to Whitehall, and opened, the ticket No. 72,248 was found sticking in a crevice of the wheel. Being the next drawn ticket after all the prizes were drawn, it was advertised by the Commissioner's order as entitled to the £1,000 as the last drawn ticket, “which affair,” we are told, “made a great deal of noise.”

What were known as “Little Goes” were little lotteries on the same plan as the great State Lotteries, and drawn in the same manner. There were generally five or six “little goes” in the year, and they were actually set up and conducted by two or three of the licensed lottery-office keepers. The State Lottery was the parent of these “little goes.” Persons who had not patience to wait till another State Lottery gambled during the vacations in a “little go.”

A ROMANCE OF A BEDSTEAD.

RICHARD III. slept in Leicester at the Blue Boar Inn, opposite the Grammar School, the night before Bosworth Field, and the bedstead whereon he is supposed to have lain is still preserved, and its history has been handed down. In 1613, Mrs. Clarke, keeper of that inn, was robbed by her servant-maid and seven men, and the story is thus given by Sir Roger Twisden, who had it from persons of undoubted credit, who were not only inhabitants of Leicester, but saw the murderers executed:—

When King Richard III. marched into Leicestershire against Henry, Earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII., he lay at the Blue Boar Inn, in the town of Leicester, where was left a large wooden bedstead, gilded in some places, which after his defeat and death in the battle of Bosworth was left either through haste, or as a thing of little value—the bedding being all taken from it—to the people of the house; thenceforward this old bedstead, boarded at the bottom (as the manner was in those days), became a piece of standing furniture, and passed from tenant to tenant with the inn.

In the reign of Queen Elizabeth, this house was kept by one Mr. Clarke, who put a bed on this bedstead, which his wife was going to make hastily one day, and jumbling the bedstead, a piece of gold dropt out. This excited the woman's curiosity; she narrowly examined this antiquated piece of furniture, and finding it had a double bottom, took off the uppermost with a chisel, upon which she discovered the space between them filled with gold, part of it coined by Richard III., and the rest of it in earlier times. Mr. Clarke concealed this piece of good fortune, though by degrees the effects of it were made known, for he became rich from a low condition, and in the space of a few years mayor of the town; and then the story of the bedstead came to be rumoured by the servant.

At his death he left his estate to his wife, who still continued to keep the inn, though she was known to be very rich, which put some wicked persons upon engaging the maid-servant to assist in robbing her. These folks, to the number of seven, lodged in her house, plundered it, and carried off some horse-loads of valuable things, and yet left a considerable quantity of valuables scattered about the floor. As for Mrs. Clarke herself, who was very fat, she endeavoured to cry out for help, upon which her maid thrust her fingers down her throat, and choked her, for which she was burnt; the seven men who were her accomplices were hanged at Leicester some time in 1613.

CURIOUS ANCIENT STATUTES.

Ale.—If any ale-house keeper shall sell less than a full quart of ale for a penny, or of the small ale two quarts for one penny, he shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of twenty shillings.—1st James I., chap. 9.

Fairs.—The King commandeth that from henceforth neither fairs nor markets be kept in churchyards, for the honour of the Church.—13th Edward I. Stat. 2, chap. 6.

Woollen Caps.—All persons above the age of seven years shall wear upon Sabbath and Holydays, upon their heads, a cap of wool, knit, thicked, and dressed in England, upon pain to forfeit, for every day not wearing, three shillings and fourpence.—13th Elizabeth, chap. 19.

Fast Days.—Whosoever shall, by preaching, teaching, writing, or open speech, notify that eating fish, or forbearing of flesh, is of any necessity for saving the soul of man, shall be punished, as spreaders of false news are and ought to be.—5th Elizabeth, chap. 3, sect. 40.

Pins.—No person shall put to sale any pins, but only such as shall be double-headed, and have their heads soldered fast to the shank, and well-smoothed; the shank well-shaven; the point well and round filed, and sharpened.—34th and 35th Henry VIII., chap. 6.

TANTALLON CASTLE.

THE ruins of Tantallon Castle are situated about two miles and a half east of North Berwick. It is not known at what time this famous Castle was built. The great strength of the place gave rise to the saying, “Ding down Tantallon, and build a brig to the Bass,” as feats of equal difficulty.

A very accurate description of Tantallon is to be read in the fifth Canto of “Marmion”:—

“But scant three miles the band had rode,
When o'er a height they passed,
And, sudden, close before them showed
His towers, Tantallon vast:
Broad, massive, high, and stretching far
And held impregnable in war,
On a projecting rock they rose,
And round three sides the ocean faves
The fourth did battled walls enclose
And double mound and fosse.
By narrow drawbridge, outworks strong
Through studded gates, an entrance long
To the main court they cross.
It was a fair and stately square;
Around were lodgings, fit and fair,
And towers of various form,
Which on the court projected far
And broke its lines quadrangular.
Here was square keep, there turret high,
Or pinnacle that sought the sky,
Whence oft the warrior could descry
The gathering ocean-storm.

THE BRAVE DRUMMER.

SAD memories are attached to the bridge over the Neckar at Heidelberg. In the year 1799 the Austrians and the French fought a bloody battle here. The French, far superior in numbers, were driven back seven times by two hundred Hungarian infantry and eighty lancers, were forced to leave the place of action, and did not return to it till the next morning after the little band of heroes had left in the dead of night. Much blood was shed here, and an immense number of the French were either killed by the grape shot of the Austrians, or found their graves in the waters of the Neckar.

The brave act of a French drummer is worthy of being committed to posterity. Beating to the assault, the drummer, who was scarcely beyond the age of boyhood, advanced to meet the enemy. A ball shattered his leg. Leaning against the parapet of the bridge, however, he still continued beating his march, and strove to put fresh courage into his comrades by the music of his drum. On seeing this, one of the enemy's officers is said to have dismounted from his horse and, slinging a drum across his shoulders, constituted himself a rival drummer.

During the Baden revolution in 1849 this bridge over the Neckar was threatened to be destroyed, for the insurgents had already undermined it, in order to spring it up on the approach of the Prussians, and we have only to owe its preservation to the courageous resistance of several citizens of Heidelberg.

The bridge where these events took place is a beautiful structure: Goethe said it was not to be equalled by any bridge in the world. It was begun in 1786, and completed in 1788: it is 700 feet long, 80 feet broad, and built of strong red sandstone.

"If in February there be no rain,
It's neither good for hay nor grain."

CHRIST'S HOSPITAL.

CHRIST'S HOSPITAL in Newgate Street, London, of which a picturesque portion is shown in our engraving, was founded by Edward VI. on the 26th of June, 1553, ten days before his death. The object was to establish an hospital for poor fatherless children and foundlings.

It is commonly called "the Blue-coat School," from the dress worn by the boys, which is of the same age as the foundation of the hospital. "The dress," says Peter Cunningham, "is a blue coat or gown, a yellow petticoat, a red leather girdle round the waist, yellow stockings, a clergyman's band round the neck, and a flat black cap of woollen yarn, about the size of a saucer. Blue was a colour originally confined to servant men and boys, nor till its recognition as part of the uniform of the British navy was blue ever looked upon as a colour to be worn by gentlemen."

The following curious story is told by Pepys the diarist in connection with Christ's Hospital in 1695: "Two wealthy citizens are lately dead, and left their estates, one to a Blue-coat boy, and the other to a Blue-coat girl in Christ's Hospital, the extraordinariness of which has led some of the magistrates to carry it on to a match, which is ended in a public wedding—he in his habit of blue satin, led by two of the girls, and she in blue with an apron green, and petticoat yellow, all of sarsnet, led by two boys of the house, through Cheapside to Guildhall Chapel, where they were married by the Dean of St. Paul's."

SLAVERY IN SCOTLAND.

PERHAPS no passage in our older Scottish poets has been oftener quoted than the lines on Freedom in Barbour's Metrical History of the Bruce:

"Ah, Freedom is a noble thing:
Freedom makes men to have liking,
To man all solace Freedom gives;
He lives at ease who freely lives;
And he that aye has lived free,
May not well know the misery,
The wrath, the hate, the spite, and all
That's compass'd in the name of Thrall."

A CITY CORNER: CHRIST'S HOSPITAL.

The author of these lines was a slave-dealer! From deeds which are extant, it appears that the Chapter of which he was the arch-deacon trafficked in serfs, selling or letting them on lease, like the cattle or granges on their lands. In their own words, they "set and in tack let the whole barony of Murthil, with its hawkings, huntings, and fishings, with its serfs, bondages, natives, and their issue. The date of this lease is 1388; Barbour died in 1396.

Many provisions as to the condition of the born thralls, serfs, or bondmen, occur in ancient laws; though some Scottish legal writers, it is said, such as Craig, Stair, and Bankton, have denied that slavery ever existed in Scotland.

One of the statutes of Saint David, who reigned from 1124 to 1153, is "of a man found without a lord." It enacts that "if any man be found in the King's land who has no proper lord, after the King's writ is read in the King's court, he shall have the space of fifteen days to get himself a lord. And if within that term he finds no lord, the King's justice shall take from him eight cows for the King's use, and keep his body for the King's behoof until he finds a lord."

About the same period it appears to have been a moot point whether one might of his own will renounce his freedom; and it was determined by a statute that "any free man may if he choose abandon his freedom in the King's court, or in any other court; and if he do so he shall never recover it."

THE GIPSY'S PROPHECY.

THERE is a singular anecdote told of Charles the First in connection with Hampton Court Palace. The King was one day standing at a window there, surrounded by his children, when a gipsy came up and asked for charity. Her appearance excited the King's ridicule, and he appears also to have threatened her, which so enraged the gipsy that she took from her basket a looking-glass and presented it to the King. He saw in it his own head decollated.

Probably with a natural wish to propitiate so prophetic a beggar, or for some other reason, money was given her. She then foretold that the death of a dog in the room where the King was then would precede the restoration to his family of the kingdom which he was about to lose.

It is supposed that Oliver Cromwell afterwards slept in the room referred to. He was constantly attended by a faithful dog, who guarded his bed-chamber door. On awaking one morning he found the dog dead, on which he exclaimed in allusion to the gipsy's prophecy, which he had been told of, "The kingdom is departed from me." Shortly afterwards the Protector died.

OLD EDINBURGH.

WE have a glimpse of old Edinburgh in our illustration, which represents the Bow-head corner house, with which every visitor to the Scottish metropolis used to be familiar. It was one of the finest of the old timber-fronted burgher dwellings in the city, and was taken down in 1878. There were two elevations—one towards the Lawmarket, the other towards the West Bow. "The street wall only," say the Messrs. Dunlop, "had a stone wall, the chimneys being carried up in the gables of the houses on either side. A piazza was on the ground floor, towards the Bow, and the beams of the upper floors projected over it, and over each other with a boldness which made a stranger hold his breath.

"Perhaps this seeming over-weighting of the house is best described in the words of one of its own tenants—an old man who had been born and who had lived for more than seventy years literally under its roof, for to him belonged the small attic windows in the gable towards the Bow. 'Feared to bide up here on a windy night?' said he; 'no! me! The hoose was built afore Sir Isaac Newton invented the centre o' gravity, but depend upon it, the man that built it kent o' something just as guid!'

"The northern front was the more ornate. On its second floor there were Doric pilasters between the "King Charles, two days before his death, which took place two years after the massacre, having called for Mazzille, his chief physician and complaining of the pains he suffered, asked him if it was not possible that he and so many other celebrated physicians that were in his realm could give some alleviation to his disorder; 'for I am,' said he, 'cruelly and horribly tormented.' To which Mazzille replied, that whatever had depended on them had been tried, but that in truth God only could be the sovereign physician in such complaints. 'I believe,' said the king, 'that what you say is true, and that you know nothing else. Draw from me my custode (or large cap), that I may try to rest.'

"Mazzille withdrew, and left orders that all should leave the king except three, viz., La Tour, St. Pris, and his nurse, whom his majesty greatly loved, although she was a Huguenot. As she had just seated herself on a coffer, and began to doze, she heard the king groan bitterly, weeping and sighing; she then windows, which last were filled with panels of glazed lattice-work.

"The Bow-head house was specially a coign of vantage on the occasions of the state entry of the rulers of Scotland into their capital. The law of precedent, always powerful in court ceremonials, was to enter the Grassmarket by the West Port, thence up the steep zigzag of the Bow into High Street, then to pass slowly down between the then unbroken lines of its towering houses to the Nether-Bow Gate, thence by the burg of Canongate to the royal home at Holyrood. In some cases the Castle was visited. This was done by Queen Mary on her state entry on the 2nd of September, 1561."

SMITTEN WITH REMORSE.

In the massacre of St. Bartholomew, according to Sully, 70,000 Huguenots, or French Protestants, including women and children, were murdered throughout the kingdom, by secret orders from Charles IX., at the instigation of his mother, the queen dowager, Catherine de Medicis.

approached the bed softly, and drawing away his custode, the king said to her, giving vent to a heavy sigh, and shedding tears plentifully, inasmuch that they interrupted his discourse—

"Ah! my dear nurse! my beloved woman, what blood! what murders! Ah! I have followed wicked advice! O my God! pardon me, and be merciful. I know not where I am, they have made me so perplexed and agitated. How will all this end? What shall I do? I am lost for ever! I know it."

"Then the nurse thus addressed him:—Sire, be the murders on those who forced you to order them; your majesty could not help it, and since you never consented, and now regret them, believe God will never impute them to you, and will cover them with the mantle of justice of His Son, to whom alone you should look for aid. Ah! for the honour of God, let your majesty cease from this weeping."

"Having said this, she rose for a handkerchief, for his was drenched with tears; Charles having taken it from her, made a sign that she should retire and leave him to repose."

The dreadful narrative of the massacre of St. Bartholomew is detailed in the history of De Thou.

A TRIAL BY COMBAT.

AN extraordinary scene in the shape of a solemn jousting took place on London Bridge on St. George's Day, the 23rd of April, 1390.

John de Wells, the English ambassador in Scotland, having boasted at the Scottish court of the prowess of his countrymen, a famous knight of that country, David Lindsay, Earl of Crawford, offered to test the question and lower the pride of the Southerner by resorting to a trial by combat on London Bridge. A royal safe-conduct was granted, and Earl David travelled to London with a retinue of twenty-nine persons.

The day of battle came. Both parties, fully armed, were most honourably conducted to the bridge, which was splendidly decorated with rich hangings of tapestry and cloth of gold. There were crowds of noble spectators, the place of honour being occupied by Richard II.

The combatants approached. "The signal being given," says an old writer, "tearing their barbed steeds with their spurs, they rushed, with square-ground spears, and a mighty force, impetuously to the conflict. Neither party was moved by the vehement impulse or by the splintering of their spears; so that the common people affected to cry out that David was bound to the saddle of his horse contrary to the law of arms, because he sat unmoved amidst the splintering of lances on his helmet and visor."

"When Earl David heard this, he presently leaped off his charger, and then as quickly vaulted upon his back again without any assistance; and taking a second hasty course, their spears were a second time shivered by the shock through their burning desire to conquer. And now a third time were the valorous enemies stretched out and running together; but then the English knight was cast down breathless to the earth, with great sounds of mourning from his countrymen that he was killed!

"Earl David when victory appeared leapt suddenly to the ground—for he had fought without anger and but for glory, that he might show himself the stronger of the champions—and casting himself upon Lord Wells, tenderly embraced him till he revived and the surgeon came to attend him."

RICHMOND CASTLE.

To Alan Rufus, son of Hoel, Count of Bretagne, a kinsman of William the Conqueror, who accompanied him in his expedition to England, is generally attributed the foundation of both the Castle and town of Richmond, in the North Riding of Yorkshire; though by some authorities the town is said to have been in existence prior to the Conquest. William conferred upon Alan the title of Earl of Richmond, and the estates of the Saxon earl Edwin, embracing nearly two hundred manors and townships, and a jurisdiction over all Richmondshire, about a third of the North River.

In the situation of his castle, Earl Alan selected what was admirable for purposes of defence: its foundation was laid upon an almost perpendicular rock, on the left bank of the Swale, about a hundred feet above the bed of the river. To the original buildings of the fortress additional walls, towers, and outworks were erected by the successors of the founder.

The walks round the castle present a succession of varied and romantic scenery. Swaledale is in many parts skirted with bold rocks, almost covered with trees and shrubs. From the hills to the north-west of the town the castle and town appear to be situated in a valley.

"TOO MUCH!"

FABRO CHIGI, who was afterwards Pope, under the title of Alexander VII., while Nuncio in France, was present at the death of Mary de Medicis. He asked her if she pardoned all her enemies, and particularly Cardinal Richelieu. She said she did, from her heart. "Madame," said he, "as a mark of reconciliation, will you send him the bracelet you wear on your arm?" "Nay," replied she, laying her head on the pillow, "that is too much!"

THE SCOT IN ENGLAND.

IN the year 1596, William Armstrong, of Kinmont, a noted border trooper, was taken prisoner by the warden of the Western marches of England, and lodged in Carlisle Castle. This was in defiance of a truce which then existed between the wardens of the borders.

The Lord of Buccleugh, who had the charge of Liddesdale, after in vain demanding that Kinmont Willie should be set at liberty, gallantly took the castle of Carlisle by surprise one night with a body of two hundred men, and effected the prisoner's delivery. He crossed the Esk at nightfall, broke open the postern gate, seized the sentries, forced open Kinmont's cell, and was again on Scottish ground almost before the English garrison could draw breath.

The consequences of this enterprise are thus mentioned by Spottiswood:—"This fell out on the 12th of April, 1596. The queen of England, having notice sent her of what was done, stormed not a little. One of her chief castles surprised, a prisoner taken forth of the hands of the warden, and carried away so far within England she esteemed a great affront.

"The Iieger, Mr. Bowes, in a convention kept at Edinburgh the 22nd of May, did, as he was charged, in a long oration, aggravate the heinousness of the fact, concluding that peace could not longer continue betwixt the two realms unless Buccleugh were delivered up in England, to be punished at the queen's pleasure."

"Buccleugh comparing and charged with the fact, made answer:—"That he went not into England with intention to assault any of the queen's houses, or to do wrong to any of her subjects, but only to relieve a subject of Scotland, unlawfully taken, and more unlawfully detained; that in the time of a general assurance in a day of truce, he was taken prisoner against all order, neither did he attempt his relief till redress was refused; and that he had carried the business in such a moderate manner as no hostility was committed nor the least wrong offered to any within the castle; yet was he content, according to the ancient treaties observed betwixt the two realms, when as mutual injuries were alleged, to be tried by the commissioners that it should please their majesties to appoint, and submit himself to that which they should decree.

"The convention, esteeming the answer reasonable, did acquaint the ambassador therewith, and offered to send commissioners to the borders, with all diligence, to treat with such as the queen should be pleased to appoint for her part."

The end of the matter was that Buccleugh was not delivered up. He, however, was subsequently surrendered into English hands for making an inroad into England, for which no justification could be pleaded. On this occasion Buccleugh seems to have remained in England from October, 1597, till February, 1598.

According to ancient family tradition Buccleugh was presented to Elizabeth, who, with her usual rough and peremptory address, demanded of him "how he dared to undertake an enterprise so desperate and presumptuous."

"What is it," answered the undaunted chieftain, "what is it that a man dares not do?"

Elizabeth, struck with the reply, turned to a lord in waiting: "With ten thousand such men," said she, "our brother of Scotland might shake the firmest throne of Europe."

ROYALTY AND A WOODEN SOLDIER.

IN 1806, on the approach of the French, the Bourbon Court of Naples made so hasty a retreat into Sicily, that they forgot and left behind them a superannuated princess of the family, who was half-sister to old King Ferdinand. Though this venerable spinster was of illegitimate birth, she received the honours paid to the royal blood, and was allowed a sentinel of the household troops, who mounted guard at her door and presented arms at all her exits and her entrances.

At first it was feared that the French conquerors, who were not always liberal in these matters, would stop her allowance and leave the old woman in absolute want. The new King of Naples, Joseph Bonaparte, however, secured her in part of her pensions; but no sooner was she relieved from the fear of starvation, than she was made wretched by what appeared to be an equal calamity, and this was the refusal on the part of the French to allow her a soldier as a guard of honour. She petitioned over and over again; she supplicated that this distinction and delight of her life should not, towards its close, be withdrawn from her: but Napoleon, who had declared in his lordly manner that the Bourbons had everywhere ceased to reign, was not likely to pay royal honours to a neglected off-shoot of that race.

The old woman's heart was absolutely breaking under this privation, when, in a lucky moment, one of the few friends or attendants who remained about her person thought of substituting a wooden soldier for a soldier of real flesh and blood. Accordingly, a figure was made and dressed up, and, with a musket on its shoulder, was posted at the outer door of the princess's apartment, in an old house she occupied at Portici, not far from the royal villa of that name.

This simple contrivance had a happy effect on the old woman, who then thought that all royalty had not departed from her: but she soon began to complain that the statue did not present arms to her, which, by a very easy exercise of mechanical ingenuity, it might have been made to do. She therefore, after a time, confined herself to her apartments, enjoying at a distance, through unopened doors, the sight of her mute sentinel, but never exposing herself to the mortifying proofs that he was motionless as well as mute. The recluse died before the restoration of the Bourbons of Naples. In 1816 her wooden sentinel was still to be seen at the old house at Portici.

LAWFUL WITCHCRAFT.

LORD MANSFIELD had an old woman brought before him as a witch, and among other things she was charged with riding through the air. The great judge dismissed the case, observing: "My opinion is that this good woman should be suffered to return home, and whether she do so walking on the ground, or riding through the air, must be left to her own judgment; for there is nothing contrary to the laws of England in either."

The history of witchcraft in England is a conspicuous proof of the length to which superstition will sometimes go. The number of persons put to death in England on the charge of witchcraft, up to the year 1716, has been estimated at not fewer than thirty thousand!

A MODEST REQUEST.

A COMMON saying among certain of the Irish is that they are "the boys fit for anything." The hero of the following anecdote must have thought himself one of that gifted set.

When the Duke of Ormonde was appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland in the beginning of Queen Anne's reign, a certain Irish baronet, a man of some interest in his country, requested his grace would give him a bishopric, or a regiment of horse, or make him Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench—he was not particular which.

COUNTERFEIT KINGS.

JOHNES, in his translation of Froissart's Chronicle, Vol. I., p. 421, says that at the battle of Poitiers, "King John was armed in royal armour, and nineteen others like him."

This custom of arming several in like manner to the commander of an army seems to have been usual, and was probably carried down at least to Richard the Third's time. Shakespeare makes Richard say, in the Fourth Scene of the last Act:

*"I think there be six Richmonds in the field:
Five have I slain to-day, instead of him."*

Also, in the First Part of Henry the Fourth, Douglas says:

*"Another king! They grow like Hydra's heads
I am the Douglas, fatal to all those
That wear these colours on them. What art thou
That counterfeitst the person of a king?"*

THE WIG-RIOT.

IN the year 1764, owing to changes in the fashion, people gave over the use of that very artificial appendage, the wig, and wore their own hair when they had any. In consequence of this, the wig-makers, who had become very numerous in London, were suddenly thrown out of work, and reduced to great distress. For some time both town and country rang with their calamities, and their complaints that men should wear their own hair instead of perruques; and at last it struck them that some legislative enactment ought to be procured in order to oblige gentlefolks to wear wigs, for the benefit of the suffering wig-trade. Accordingly they drew up a petition for relief, which on the 11th of February, 1765, they carried to St. James's to present to his Majesty George the Third. As they went processionally through the town, it was observed that most of these wig-makers, who wanted to force other people to wear them, wore no wigs themselves; and this striking the London mob as something monstrously unfair and inconsistent, they seized the petitioners, and cut off all their hair par force.

Horace Walpole, who alludes to this ludicrous petition, says, "Should one wonder if carpenters were to remonstrate, that since the peace their trade decays, and that there is no demand for wooden legs?"

A HUNT BY TORCHLIGHT.

THE Marquess of Winchester of the time of James the Second had some singular habits. Amongst these was his custom of sitting at table for twelve hours at a time. He went to dinner at six or seven in the evening, and his meal lasted till six or seven the next morning, during which time he ate, drank, smoked, talked, or listened to music. The company that dined with him were at liberty to eat or amuse themselves, or take a nap whenever they were so disposed; but the dishes and bottles were all the while standing upon the table. When Bishop Cartwright went to see him dinner appears to have been made a little earlier than usual. "I was received by the noble marquess," says the bishop, "with all kindness imaginable at dinner from one at noon till one in the morning!"

A contemporary, Abraham de la Pryme, in his "Manuscript Ephemeris," tells us also that the marquess would make all his men rise at midnight, and go hunting by torchlight, as our artist has represented them in the above illustration.

It is said, however, that these eccentricities were adopted for a purpose, that purpose being that he might be thought unfit for public affairs at a time when things were going in a way of which he did not approve. The marquess put off his folly, and appeared in his true character of a man of spirit when there was a prospect of saving the country from the effects of James's policy.

PREACHING AND PRACTICE.

IT is related of Fagou, physician to Louis XIV., that in the middle of an oration on the pernicious effects of tobacco he paused, and taking his snuff-box from his pocket, refreshed himself with a pinch, to enable him to renew his argument.

BERWICK BRIDGE.

FROM an early period there appears to have been a bridge across the Tweed at Berwick, though not on the same site as the one here shown. A wooden bridge which stood about a hundred yards higher up the river was carried away by a flood in 1199. It was re-built by William, King of Scotland, who then held possession of Berwick, after some objections on the part of the Bishop of Durham, to whom the south shore belonged. The bridge of stone shown in the engraving took upwards of twenty-four years in building, and was finished in October, 1634. Its length from shore to shore is 924 feet, but it is only 17 feet wide. There are fifteen arches.

AN APPEAL TO CHANCE.

THE father of Francesco Sforza, Duke of Milan, when at work in the field was accosted by some soldiers, and asked if he would enlist. "Let me throw my mattock on that oak," he replied, "and if it remains there I will." It remained there; and the peasant regarding it as a sign, enlisted. He became soldier, general, prince; and his grandson, in the palace at Milan, said to Paulus Jovius, "You behold these guards and this grandeur. I owe everything to the branch of an oak, the branch that held my grandfather's mattock."

LIFE SAVED BY LAUGHTER.

"THE health of Erasmus," says Mr. Charles Butler, "was always very delicate, and he at last began to feel the infirmities of old age. He was afflicted by an imposthume, and the worst was feared, when he was cured of it in an extraordinary manner. . . . The perusal of the celebrated 'Litere Obscurorum Vivorum' threw him into a fit of immoderate laughter; the imposthume burst and the laughter was cured."

A like tale is told of Dr. Patrick Scougal, a Scottish bishop in the seventeenth century. An old woman earnestly besought him to visit her sick cow; the prelate after many remonstrances reluctantly consented, and walking round the beast, said gravely, "If she live, she live; and if she die, she die; and I can do nae mair for her." Not long afterwards he was dangerously afflicted with a quinsy in the throat: the old woman having got access to his chamber walked round his bed, repeating the charm which she believed had cured her cow; whereat the bishop was seized with a fit of laughter, which broke the quinsy and saved his life.

An old English dramatist alludes to a third instance:

*"I am come to tell you
Your brother hath intended you some sport:
A great physitian, when the pope was sicke
Of a deepe melancholly, presented him
With severall sorts of mad-men, which wilde object
(Being full of change and sport) forc'd him to laugh,
And so th' impost-hume broke; the self-same cure
The duke intends on you."*

A FINAL SKIRMISH.

THE first skirmish of the civil wars took place at Kingston-upon-Thames in January, 1642, and the last curiously enough happened at the same place in July six years later.

The first was when some Royalists attempted to assemble an armed force to seize upon "the magazine of arms" deposited in the town. The committee appointed by Parliament to inquire into the truth of the rumours relative to this assemblage reported "That there were about two hundred men there that are officers, and that the town is full of horses; that they have pistols and carry themselves in a disorderly manner, to the terror of the people; that my Lord Digby was there on horseback with pistols; that Colonel Lunsford and two others of that name were there also; and that there were two cart-loads of ammunition going to them."

Colonel Lunsford was apprehended, and committed to the Tower, and the attempt of the Royalists was defeated. Throughout the civil war, however, Kingston remained faithful to Charles I., and in consequence was repeatedly occupied by both parties.

The last outbreak of the civil war took place, as we have said, at Kingston, in July, 1648. The Earl of Holland, the Duke of Buckingham, and Lord Francis Villiers, had assembled six hundred horsemen at Reigate, but had to retreat upon Kingston, pursued by a considerable body of Roundheads.

On a hill near Kingston they made a final stand, but "after a gallant defence and as sharp a charge," says one of the Parliamentarians, "as ever I saw in these unhappy wars," were routed. They retreated to Kingston, but withdrew during the night, having lost Lord Francis Villiers and twenty others slain, and one hundred made prisoners.

"Lord Francis behaved," says Lysons, "with signal courage; and after his horse had been killed under him, he stood with his back against a tree, defending himself against several assailants, till at night he sank under his wounds." Upon the tree within whose deep shadow he died, the initials of his name were carved by some faithful adherent, and there they remained till the tree was felled in 1680.

AN OLD EPITAPH.

*"Stay, passenger, and lend a tear,
Youth and virtue both lie here.
Reading this, know thou hast seen
Virtue tomb'd at but fifteen.
And if after thou shalt see
Any young and good as he,
Think his virtues are reviving,
For examples of those living.
Practise these, and then thou may'st
Fearless die, where now thou stay'st."*

OWEN FELTHAM.

A NOVEL CAPTURE.

At the time of Pichegru's irruption into Holland (1795), the frost was unprecedentedly severe, and the Texel so completely ice-bound, that he ordered some squadrons of cavalry to charge across the frozen element, and capture the Dutch fleet locked up in it.

They accordingly clapped spurs to their horses' sides, surrounded the ships, and made a capture of them at the first summons, though their whole means of offence against a broadside were a few hundred sabres and horse pistols! We believe that the occurrence stands without a parallel in ancient or modern story.

DOUGLAS CASTLE.

DOUGLAS CASTLE is an ancient ruin in Lanarkshire, not far from Douglas Town. The Douglasses, the ancient owners of the castle, who so closely linked the district of Douglasdale to Scottish story, were, says John Hill Burton, the historian, "children of the soil, who could not be traced back to the race of the enemy or stranger, as, whatever may have been their actual origin, they were known as rooted in Scotland at the time when the Norman adventurers crowded in."

The castle, besides all its old-world memories, is specially interesting as the Castle Dangerous of Sir Walter Scott's last romance, and the last place to which he made a pilgrimage in Scotland.

A ROYAL CHESS PLAYER.

A SPANISH lord having frequently played at chess with Philip II., and won all the games, perceived when his majesty rose from play that he was much ruffled with chagrin. The lord, when he returned home, said to his family, "My children, we have nothing more to do at court: there we must expect no favour; for the king is offended at my having won of him every game of chess." As chess entirely depends on the genius of the players, and not on fortune, King Philip, the chess-player, conceived he ought to suffer no rival.

PUNISHMENT FOR BANKRUPTS.

IN an early and rude state of society, bankruptcy is always looked upon with harshness and punished cruelly; and perhaps it is really then less excusable than it becomes when commerce is more advanced, and the returns of transactions are less certainly to be depended on. Even Venice in old times had its stone of shame for bankrupts.

Edinburgh followed the example of that mercantile city, and set up one of her own in the beginning of the seventeenth century. In 1606, the Privy Council ordered the magistrates of the Scottish metropolis to erect "a pillory of hewn stone near the Market Cross; upon the head thereof a seat to be made, whereupon in time coming shall be set all dyvours (bankrupts), who shall sit there on one market-day, from ten hours in the morning till one hour after dinner.

The unfortunates were obliged to wear a yellow bonnet on these occasions and for ever after—the livery of slavery in the middle ages—unless they paid up their debts in full, a not uncommon event in old Edinburgh, when they could return to their own taste in the matter of apparel.

An act of the Lords of Session in 1688, quoted by Dr. Chambers in his interesting "Domestic Annals of Scotland," is more particular regarding the indignities to be visited upon dyvours. It "ordains the magistrates of the burgh (where the debtor is incarcerated), before his liberation out of prison, to cause him take on, and wear upon his head, a bonnet, partly of a brown and partly of a yellow colour, with uppermost hose or stockings on his legs, half brown and half yellow coloured, conform to a pattern delivered to the magistrates of Edinburgh to be kept in their Tolbooth; and that they cause take the debtor to the Market Cross between ten and eleven o'clock in the forenoon, with the foresaid habit, where he is to sit upon the debtor-stone the space of an hour, and then to be dismissed; and ordains the debtor to wear the said habit in all time thereafter; and in case he be found either wanting or disguising the same, he shall lose the benefit of his honourum."

AN EARLY NAVIGATOR.

Who first doubled the Cape of Good Hope? In this enlightened age the reply of every schoolboy to this query will be, "Why, Vasco de Gama, to be sure." In Portugal, however, a much more ancient navigator has been mentioned. Vieira, an old preacher of great renown at Lisbon, said in one of his sermons:—"One man only passed the Cape of Good Hope before the Portuguese. And who was he? and how?—it was Jonas in the whale's belly. The whale went out of the Mediterranean, because he had no other course; he kept the coast of Africa on the left, scooped along Ethiopia, passed by Arabia, took port in the Euphrates on the shores of Nineveh, and, making his tongue serve as a plank, landed the prophet there."

Dr. Southey says that the sermons of Vieira, perhaps more than any other compositions in any language, display the strength and the weakness of the human mind.

IN HENRY VIII'S REIGN.

A WRITER in the early part of the sixteenth century tells us that in his time, in the reign of Henry the Eighth, the luxury of the table had descended even to citizens, and that there were few whose tables were not daily provided with spoons, cups, and a saltcellar of silver. Those of a higher sphere affected a greater profusion of plate; and the quantity accumulated by Cardinal Wolsey, though the precious metals are now so copious, still continues to excite our surprise. At Hampton Court, where he feasted the French ambassadors and their splendid retinue in 1528, two cypboards, extending across the banquet chambers, were piled to the top with plate and illuminated; yet, without encroaching on these ostentatious repositories, a profuse service remained for the table. Two hundred and eighty beds were provided for the guests; every chamber had a bason and ewer of silver, beside other utensils.

PLAIN DEALING.

DURING Sir Robert Walpole's Administration, when bribery was common if not universal, there was one particular question which he wanted to carry in the House of Commons, to which he knew there would be violent opposition, and which was disliked by some of his own dependents. As he was passing through the Court of Requests, he met a member of the opposite party, whose avarice he imagined would not reject a large bribe. He took him aside, and said, "Such a question comes on this day; give me your vote, and here is a bank-bill of two thousand pounds," which he put into his hands. The member made this answer: "Sir Robert, you have lately served some of my particular friends; and when my wife was last at Court, the king was very gracious to her, which must have happened at your instance. I should therefore think myself very ungrateful (putting the bank-bill into his pocket) if I were to refuse the favour you are now pleased to ask me."

WHITFIELD IN PHILADELPHIA.

In his autobiography Franklin gives his recollections of the first visit of Whitfield to Philadelphia: "In 1739 arrived among us the Rev. G. Whitfield. He was at first permitted to preach in some of our churches, but the clergy, taking a dislike to him, soon refused him their pulpits, and he was obliged to preach in the fields. The multitudes of all sects and denominations that attended his sermons were enormous, and it was a matter of speculation to me, who was one of the number, to observe the extraordinary influence of his oratory on his hearers, and how much they admired and respected him, notwithstanding his common abuse of them by assuring them that they were naturally half beasts and half devils. It was wonderful to see the change soon made in the manners of our inhabitants. From being thoughtless or indifferent about religion, it seemed as if all the world were growing religious, so that one could not walk through the town of an evening without hearing psalms sung in different families of every street. And it being found inconvenient to assemble in the open air, subject to its inclemency, the building of a house to meet in was no sooner proposed, and persons appointed to receive contributions, but sufficient sums were received to procure the ground and erect the building, which was a hundred feet long and seventy feet broad; and the work was carried on with such spirit as to be finished in a much shorter time than could have been expected. Both house and ground were vested in trustees, expressly for the use of any preacher, of any religious persuasion, who might desire to say something to the people of Philadelphia."

NOTES ON BELLS.

THE oldest bells have often mottoes such as we might expect in the times before the Reformation. Dedications and invocations to patron Saints are frequent, or to the Blessed Virgin. There is one with the letters S. T. O. P. N., which is read "Sanctæ Thoma ora pro nobis," the Saint Thomas not being the primitive apostle, but Thomas a Becket. Sometimes the legend is in poetry, as in the hexameter line:—

"Virginis egregiæ dicor Campana Mariæ."

In less remote times the inscriptions were sometimes made to sound human merits as well as Divine praises. Prayers were asked for the donor of the bell; or the donors, when the peal was the result of combined benevolence, which led to the comical couplet:—

*"At proper time my voice I'll raise,
And sound to my subscribers' praise."*

This lively gratitude is frequent in the inscriptions of bells of the eighteenth century, as in those of Leominster:—

*"Kind Heaven, increase their bounteous store,
And bless their souls for evermore."*

Sometimes the praise is not graven on the bells but on adjacent tablets, as where a brass plate informs us that—

*"Here lies George Theobald, a lover of bells,
And of this church, as this epitaph tells;
He gave a bell freely to grace the new steeple,
Ring out his praises therefore ye good people."*

These trivial records are after all rare and exceptional in their bad taste, for the mottoes of most of the bells, old and new, are worthy of their uses and of the places which they occupy. Here are some of them:—

*"Te Deum Laudamus."
Eastbourne.*

*"Venite, Exultemus Domino."
Peterborough Cathedral.*

*"Christe, audi nos."
Westminster Abbey.*

*"Omnia fiant ad gloriam Dei."
St. Neots.*

*"Fear God, honour the King."
St. Nicholas, Brighton.*

Wordsworth tells of his favourite church—

*"When the bells of Rylston played
Their Sabbath music 'God us ayde'
(That was the sound they seemed to speak),
Inscriptive legend which, I ween,
May on those holy bells be seen."*

A TRAITOR'S END.

THE central figure in our illustration is Lord Wenlock, a nobleman of the reign of Henry VI., who played a prominent but not quite consistent part in the affairs of those troublous times. Rewarded for his services to the Crown, and wounded in defence of the king at the battle of St. Albans, he went over to the Duke of York, whom he afterwards deserted in order to plot with the Earl of Warwick for the restoration of Henry. Having been appointed to high authority by the Earl of Somerset, he was to have supported that nobleman at the battle of Tewkesbury, but failed to do so. Enraged at his treachery, the Earl on finding him with his troops, cleft his head in twain with a blow of his battle-axe.

THE LIFE OF MAN.

IN St. Saviour's, Southwark, there is an alabaster tomb of an alderman and his two wives, and on it is this inscription, supposed to have been written by Francis Quarles. The style is certainly his, but that quaint poet has been credited with many productions with which he had nothing to do.

Like to the damask rose you see,
 Or like the blossom on the tree,
 Or like the dainty flower of May,
 Or like the morning of the day,
 Or like the sun, or like the shade,
 Or like the gourd which Jonas had,
 E'en so is man, whose thread is spun,
 Drawn out, and cut, and so is done.
 The rose withers, the blossom blasteth,
 The flower fades, the morning hasteth,
 The sun sets, the shadow flies,
 The gourd consumes, and man he dies.

WINDSOR CASTLE.

WINDSOR as a royal castle and domain has existed from the Saxon era of our history. The name, according to Camden, is from Windesofra, or Windeshora, from the winding course of the Thames in this part. Stow, however, gives two other etymologies—from Wind us over, from the ferry-boat, rope, and pole, and from the Wynd is sore, because it lies high and open to the weather.

One of the most romantic incidents connected with Windsor Castle is the imprisonment of James I., the poet king of Scotland. His captivity here lasted eleven years, and it was at Windsor Castle too that he first saw the lady whom he afterwards made his wife.

He had been taken prisoner by the English when on his way to France to complete his education. In justice to his captors, one must allow that they treated him well: they by no means stunted him in learning. He was taught, and taught thoroughly, says an old chronicler, "to fight with the sword, to tourney, to wrestle, to sing and dance; he was an expert mediciner, right crafty in playing both of lute and harp, and sundry other instruments of music, and was expert in grammar, oratory, and poetry."

After he had been long at Windsor, romance found for him a bride, and strange to say it was the very match that policy would have dictated.

He was at the time lodged in what is known as the Maiden's Tower, or the Maid of Honour's Tower, on the south side of Windsor Castle, and south-east of the Round Tower, or Keep. He had risen at day-break, he tells us in his poem of "The King's Quhair," and oppressed with thoughts of his captivity, had strayed to the window, to look out on the active world in which he had no share. The window overlooked a little garden, a sweet spot, laid out with arbours and green alleys, and so thickly encompassed with trees and hedges that passers-by could hardly see into it.

Perched on the green twigs, the nightingale was singing, and inspired by her song, the royal poet thought of love, a passion to which he had hitherto been a stranger. When indulging in tender reflections, he cast his eyes downwards, and beheld "the fairest and the freshest young flower" that he had ever seen. It was a handsome young lady. Her name, her station, he knew not. She was accompanied by two female attendants, and about her sported a little hound jingling with bells, "probably," says Washington Irving, "the small Italian greyhound, of exquisite symmetry, which was a parlour favourite and pet among the fashionable dames of ancient times."

The lady was no other than Jane, or Joanna, Beaufort, a damsel of royal descent by both parents. She was cousin-german to the king. Without knowing anything of her station, James fell violently in love.

History is silent as to how they met, and how he declared his passion, but we know this much, that Joanna Beaufort gave her heart to her royal lover, and that they lived long in mutual love and sincere affection.

The wedding was celebrated with great splendour. James then moved northwards with a stately train, enlarged from his own country as he crossed the border, and was crowned at Scone on the 21st of May in the year 1424. The only thing giving a mercenary touch to the arrangements was a demand made by England for forty thousand pounds for the expense of his maintenance; but the French wars made money a strong object with the English Court, and the fourth part—ten thousand pounds—was remitted as a marriage-portion for the young queen. James's fortune was one little known among kings—to fall in love with a fair damsel casually seen, and just the right one too.

THE WOUNDED WARRIORS.

ONE of the illustrious monarchs of Ireland was Brien Boromhe, who was killed at the battle of Clontarf in the beginning of the eleventh century, after having defeated the Danes in no fewer than twenty-five engagements. It was he of whom Moore wrote the well-known song:—

"Remember the glories of Brien the brave."

There is an interesting circumstance related of the Dalgais, the favourite troops of Brien, when they were interrupted in their return from the battle of Clontarf by Fitzpatrick, Prince of Ossory. The wounded men entreated that they might be allowed to fight with the rest.

"Let stakes," they said, "be stuck in the ground, and suffer each of us, tied to and supported by one of these stakes, to be placed in his rank by the side of a sound man."

Between seven and eight hundred wounded warriors, pale, emaciated, and supported in this manner, appeared, mixed with the foremost of the troops! Never was such another sight exhibited.

To this incident Moore has alluded in the song just mentioned:—

"Forget not our wounded companions, who stood

In the day of distress by our side:

While the moss of the valley grew red with their blood, [died!

*They stirred not, but conquered and
The sun, that now blesses our arms with its light,*

*Saw them fall upon Ossory's plain:—
Oh! let him not blush, when he leaves us to-night,*

To find that they fell there in vain!"

VALIANT BEHAVIOUR.

WHEN General O'Kelly was introduced to Louis XIV., soon after the battle of Fontenoy, his majesty observed, that Clare's regiment behaved well in that engagement. "Sire," said the general, "they behaved well, it is true; many of them were wounded; but my regiment behaved better, for we were all killed!"

AT THE PLAY.

EMERIC GOBIER DE BANAULT, while ambassador in Spain, was present at the performance of a piece representing the battle of Pavia, and, seeing a Spanish actor beat down the person who played Francis I., set his foot upon his neck, and compel him to ask quarter in the most ignominious terms, was so transported with rage, that he leaped upon the stage, and in the presence of the whole audience ran his sword through his body.

THE CITY WATCH IN 1714.

"ALL the streets," says Defoe, writing of the Metropolis in 1714, "are extremely well guarded by watches, or guards, who carry no other arms about them than clubs, or great staves; for, as this is a country of drinking, which often makes mankind fool-hardy, fire-arms would be of dangerous consequence, if used here, as they are in the more southern countries. The watchmen are generally so civil as to lead a strayed stranger to his lodgings with a lantern; and if he prove mutinous, but not outrageous, they only carry him to their round-house, where he passes the night at a small expense, till the fumes of his wine are evaporated: but for vagrant rogues they are very useful in carrying them immediately to prison: and thus they keep the peace of the city."

THE KING'S THREE DAUGHTERS.

FOULQUES DE NEULLY, a celebrated preacher of his day, addressing himself in a prophetic style to Richard I., King of England, told him he had three daughters to marry, and that, if he did not dispose of them soon, God would punish him severely. "You are a false prophet," said the king; "I have no daughter." "Pardon me, sir," replied the priest, "your Majesty has three, Ambition, Avarice, and Luxury: get rid of them as fast as possible, else assuredly some great misfortune will be the consequence." "If it must be so then," said the King, with a sneer, "I give my Ambition to the Templars, my Avarice to the Monks, and my Luxury to the Prelates."

A TALE OF VOLTAIRE.

ONE day Voltaire, when a young man of about twenty-four, read to La Motte, who had a prodigious memory, a tragedy which he had written. La Motte listened with the greatest possible attention to the end. "Your tragedy is excellent," said he, "and I dare answer beforehand for its success. Only one thing vexes me; you have allowed yourself to borrow, as I can prove to you, from the second scene of the fourth act." Voltaire defended himself as well as he could against the charge. "I say nothing," answered La Motte, "which I cannot support, and to prove it I shall recite this same scene, which pleased me so much when I first read it that I got it by heart, and not a word of it has escaped me." Accordingly he repeated the whole without hesitation, and with as much animation as if he had composed it himself. All present, at the reading of the piece, looked at each other and did not know what to think. The author was utterly confounded. After enjoying his embarrassment for a short time—"Make yourself easy, sir," said La Motte, "the scene is entirely your own, as much your own as all the rest; but it struck me as so beautiful and touching, that I could not resist the pleasure of committing it to memory."

REVENGE ON A BANKER.

IN the Irish rebellion of 1798, J. C. Beresford, Esq., a banker, and member for Dublin, rendered himself so very obnoxious to the rebels, in consequence of his vigilance in bringing them to punishment, that whenever they found any of his bank notes in plundering a house, the general cry was, "By thunder! we'll ruin the rascal! we'll destroy every note of his we can find!" and they actually destroyed, it is supposed, upwards of £20,000 of his notes during the rebellion.

OUT ON BAIL.

THERE were at Rome four different ways of detaining the accused in custody, viz., the common jail; commitment to a military guard; commitment to the care of the consuls, or other magistrates, in their own houses; and lastly, security for the person's appearance, which is what we call being out upon bail.

OLD PLAYING CARDS.

CARDS, which were invented at the close of the fourteenth century, as they were drawn and painted by the hand, were proportionably dear, and were not in general use until the reign of Edward the Fourth. The price of a single pack was 18s. 8d., a very considerable sum in those days. They were originally very different from those in use at present. In shape they were square; and instead of suits of spades, clubs, hearts, and diamonds, their marks were rabbits, pinks, roses, and flowers of columbine. The figured cards were very prettily devised; a queen riding on horseback with a rabbit beside her, marked the queen of rabbits, or of clubs. A rustic-looking man, grotesquely dressed, and standing in a strange attitude, with a pink beside him, signified the knave of pinks, or diamonds.

"ONE OF THE RIGHT SORT."

M. FLEURY was in 1848 private secretary to the Duchess of Orleans. When the Revolution of February broke out, a rabble invaded the Palais Royal, where the princess resided, and began smashing works of art, pictures, statues, and knick-knacks. All the household was seized with panic except M. Fleury, who, throwing off his coat, suared his face and hands with coal, caught up a poker, and rushed among the mob, shouting, "Here—I'll show you where the best pictures are!" So saying, he plied his poker upon furniture of no value, and, thus winning the confidence of the roughs, was able to lead them out of the royal apartments into the kitchen regions, where they spent their patriotic fury upon the contents of larder and cellar. A few days after he had saved the Palais Royal, M. Fleury was recognised in the streets as the Duchess of Orleans' secretary, and mobbed. He was being somewhat roughly hustled when a hulking water-carrier elbowed his way through the throng, and roared, "Let that man be! He is one of the right sort. He led us to the pillage of the Palais Royal the other day."

A LACONIC INSCRIPTION.

THE following lines were found, in 1813, engraven on a stone, among the ruins of the Friary, at Guildford:—

"*Si sapiens fore vis, sex serva quæ tibi mando
Quid, dicas, et ubi, de quo, cui, quomodo, quando.
Nunc lege, nunc ora, nunc cum fervore labora,
Tunc erit hora brevis, et labor ipse leviss.*"

Translation.

"If you are willing to be wise,
These six plain maxims don't despise:
Both what you speak, and how take care,
Of, and to whom, and when, and where.
At proper hours, read, work, and pray,
Time then will fly, and work be play."

AN INVASION OF ENGLAND.

WHEN Prince Charlie invaded England in November, 1745, two thousand Highlanders of his army crossed the Esk at Longtown. The tide was swollen, and nothing was seen of them during the passage but their heads and shoulders. When they reached the opposite shore the pipers struck up, and they danced reels till they were dry again.

The Prince entered England on the 8th of November, and took up his quarters at a place called Reddings, in Cumberland. On the succeeding day he was joined by the western column, who brought with them the unpleasant news that they had lost thirty carts of the baggage in consequence of a surprise by the country people at Lockerby.

Even thus early on their progress southwards, the Highland army lost a great portion of its number by desertion. The eastern column, led by Charles himself, suffered most by this cause, the disinclination to a southward march prevailing chiefly among the Camerons and Macdonalds. The Lanarkshire and Stirlingshire roads are described as having for some days absolutely swarmed with the men who thus abandoned the standard; and great quantities of arms were found lying in the fields adjacent to the line of march, which the deserters had flung away to facilitate their progress towards the north.

A CERTAINTY.

"Honest Harry's alive!"—"How do you know it?" says Ned.
 "Oh, I'm perfectly sure—for Dick said he was dead."

TINTERN ABBEY.

THE picturesque ruins of Tintern Abbey are situated in Monmouthshire, eight miles above Chepstow, on the river Wye. The style is a transition from Early English to Decorated, and in beauty of composition and delicacy of execution the abbey yields to few edifices in the kingdom. Tintern was built on the spot where Theodoric, King of Glamorgan, was killed whilst fighting under the banner of the cross against the pagan Saxons in the year 600. The abbey was founded in 1131. Tintern has always been a favoured locality for poets and visitors of a poetic turn of mind.

SUMMARY JUSTICE.

THE laws made by Richard I. for the preservation of good order in his fleet when sailing to Palestine, are worthy of notice. They were as follows:—“He that kills a man on ship-board, shall be tied to the body, and thrown with it into the sea. If he kills one on land he shall be buried with the same. If it be proved that any one has drawn a knife to strike another, or has drawn blood, he shall lose his hand. If he strikes with his fist without effusion of blood, he shall be thrice plunged into the sea. If a man insult another with opprobrious language, so often as he does it, to give so many ounces of silver. A man convicted of theft to have his head shaved, tarred, and feathered, and to be left on the first land the ship shall come to.” Richard appointed officers to see these laws executed with rigour, two of which were bishops.

A CHILD'S TOY.

FOR the amusement of Louis the Fourteenth, when a child, a piece of mechanism was constructed by a M. Camus, that probably was never exceeded by the ingenuity of man. It consisted of a small coach, drawn by two horses, in which was the figure of a lady, with a footman and page behind. This coach being placed at the extremity of a table of a determinate size, the coachman smacked his whip, and the horses immediately set out, moving their legs in exact imitation of the natural action of those animals. When the carriage reached the edge of the table, it turned at a right angle, and proceeded along that edge. When it arrived opposite the place where the king was seated, it stopped, and the page getting down opened the door; upon which the lady alighted, having in her hand a petition, which she presented with a curtsy. After walking some time she again curtsied, and re-entered the carriage; the page then resumed his place, the coachman whipped his horses, which began to move, and the footman, running after the carriage, jumped up behind it.

POPULAR PASTIMES.

THE popular pastimes of the time of James the First are enumerated in the following lines, in a little work entitled “The Letting of Humour’s Blood in the Head-vaine; with a new Morisco daunced by seven Satyres upon the bottome of Diogenes’ tubbe.” 8vo. Lond, 1611.

“Man, I dare challenge thee to throw the sledge,
 To jump or leape over ditch or hedge,
 To wrestle, play at stoolball, or to runne:
 To pitch the barre, or to shoote off a gunne:
 To play at loggets, nine holes, or ten pinnes:
 To try it out at foot-ball by the shinnes:
 At ticktack, Irish noddie, maw, and ruffe,
 At hot-cockles, leap-frog, or blindman-buffe;
 To drink halfe-pois, or deale at the whole can:
 To play at base, or pea-and-yukhorne Sir Jhan;
 To daunce the morris, play at barley-breake,
 At all exploytes a man can thinke or speake;
 At shove-groate, venter-poynt, or crosse and pile,
 At beshrow him that’s last at yonder style;
 At leaping o’er a Midsommer-bou-fier,
 Or at the drawing dun out of the myer;
 At any of those, or all these presently,
 Wagge but your finger, I am for you, I!”

THE BANK IN DANGER.

DURING the formidable riots of 1780, the Bank of England was in considerable danger. In one night there had arisen the flames of six-and-thirty fires. The Catholic chapels and the tallow-chandlers' shops had been universally destroyed; Newgate had been sacked and burned. The mob, half thieves, at last decided to march upon the Bank, but precautions had fortunately been taken there. The courts and roof of the building were defended by armed clerks and volunteers, and there were soldiers ready outside. The old pewter inkstands had been melted down into bullets. The rioters made two rushes; the first was checked by a volley from the soldiers; at the second, which was less violent, Wilkes rushed out, and with his own hand dragged in some of the ringleaders. Leaving several killed and many wounded, the discomfited mob at last retired.

These were the celebrated "No Popery Riots." Blue ribbons were generally mounted to give assurance of sound Protestantism, and it was a prevalent movement to chalk up "No Popery" in large letters on doors. A foreign Jew in Houndsditch, we read, inscribed on his door, "This house is a sound Protestant." Grimaldi, an Italian actor newly come to England, with exquisite satire, put up on his door "No religion!"

The leader in this strange outburst was Lord George Gordon, who was thrown into the Tower and tried for high treason, but a jury decided that the case did not warrant such a charge, and he was acquitted. The best condemnation that could be administered to the zealots he had led was the admission generally made of his insanity.

A PROOF OF LEARNING.

IN the old romance of the Seven Sages of Rome it is related that these masters ascertained if their pupil was sufficiently learned by placing four leaves of ivy under each post of his bed. Unaware of what had been done, the pupil betook himself to rest, but in the morning when he awoke—

*"The child looked here and there,
Up and down and everywhere.
His masters asked, 'What him was?'
'Parfai!' he said, 'a ferly case!
Either I am of wine drunk,
Either the firmament is sunk,
Either waxen is the ground,
The thickness of four leaves round:
So much, tonight, higher I lay,
Certes, than I lay yesterday.'"*

The sages were now fully satisfied.

*"The masters then well understood
He knew enough of all good."*

A PHILOSOPHER'S EPITAPH.

PAUL PATER, professor of mathematics at Dantzic, died on the 7th of December, 1724, in his 68th year, leaving this epitaph for his tomb; "Hic situs est Paulus Pater, mathematicum professor, qui nescivit in vita quid sit cum morbis confictari, ire moveri, cupiditate aduri. Decessit vita celestis." In English it may run, "Here lies Paul Pater, professor of mathematics, who knew not in this life what it was to be afflicted with disease, to be moved by anger, or inflamed by avarice. He lived and died a bachelor."

L'epitaphe est celle d'un véritable philosophe, says his biographer; and perhaps truly, if the French academy be the true school of philosophy. I think that he was a better and a wiser man, who, concealing his name, caused his grave to be inscribed, "Vixi, Peccavi, Poenitui, Naturæ Cessi." "I lived, sinned, repented, and died."

This epitaph was, in Camden's time, to be seen in the cloister on the north side of Saint Paul's, now ruined."

CURIOSITIES OF PARISH REGISTERS.

THROUGH scarcity of paper or the waywardness of the keepers, many strange notices have found their way into parochial registers, those barren abstracts of the annals of mortality,

*"—where to be born and die
Of rich and poor makes all the history."*

An old record of funerals at Aberdeen gives a recipe for averting the pains to which weak brains are exposed by a debauch overnight, or as it is phrased, "Against the heid aiking by to muckil' drinking." Another legal record at the same place is enlivened by two fashionable songs of the year 1507. A private note-book is elsewhere preserved, where Scripture texts, memoranda of Puritan sermons, and the last words of dying Covenanters, are huddled up with such profane tunes as "If the Kirk would let me be," "The Rantin' Laddie," and "Green grow the rushes." More useful, but scarcely less impertinent, entries occur in English registers. At Richmond, in Yorkshire it is written, "Buried, Mr. Matthew Hutchinson, Vicar of Gilling,—worth £50 a-year;" and, "Buried, Mrs. Ursula Allen,—worth £600." This superfluity is perhaps more to be commended than the slovenly style of the clerk of Lincoln's Inn Chapel: "1722. This day were married by Mr. Holloway, I think, a couple whose names I could never learn, for lie allowed them to carry away the licence."

France furnishes still more amusing examples. The curate of Saint André-des-Arts subjoins to the entry of a marriage on the 31st July, 1589, the following amiable reflections: "On the first day of August, 1589, Henry de Valois, some time King of France, was in arms at Saint Cloud, with his heretics and the King of Navarre and his abettors, laying siege to Paris, of which he had given the pillage to the robbers of all sects who accompanied him, having sworn the death of every person of condition within its walls, except heretics and their adherents, so that he might overthrow the Church of our Lord, and establish heresy in the heart of France. But by the just judgment of God, who would not suffer such a perverse tyrant and hypocrite to reign any longer, he was slain by a religious of the order of the Jacobins, called Friar Jacques Clément, which religious (may his soul rest in peace) was instantly murdered by the attendants of the said Henry."

"On the 30th of June, 1644," writes the priest of La Villette, "I said mass for the repose of the soul of François Caignet, who was my good friend, and made several gifts to my church." Another curate of the same place expresses himself thus: "Buried on the 21st of December, 1675, Jean Tessier, labourer, . . . a mild and peaceable man, who on all occasions showed great deference and respect to his pastors."

AN OLD COLLECTION OF JESTS.

A CURIOUS book was left in manuscript by the poet William Drummond of Hawthornden. On the title-page of it was inscribed, "DEMOCRITUS, a Labyrinth of Delight, or Worke preparative for the Apologie of Democritus; containing the Pasquills, Epitaphes, Impresas, Anagrames, Epitaphes, Epigrammes, in French, Italiane, Spanische, Latine, of this and the late age before." Specimens of this collection have been printed in the Archæologia Scotica. The following extracts from it will, we hope, be found not uninteresting. Some of them, it will be observed, carry the genealogy of certain familiar jests a hundred years beyond the work of Mr. Joseph Miller.

A Frenchman said, above all the pies in England, he loved occupy.

A physician wondered how his horse could be sick, and not change his colour.

One exchanging a milkmaid, asked her if she did keep the ten commandments? "No," says she, "I keep sheep."

One who had fired a pipe of tobacco with a ballad, swore he heard the singing of it in his head thereafter for the space of two days.

A gentleman of Bedlam being asked if ever he was married, "You know all," says he, "I am mad, yet was I never so mad as to marry."

At Oxford, a professor having got a new gown, someone saying it was too short, answered, "Let it alone, it will be long enough ere I get another."

A painter being challenged for having painted a unicorn without a horn, replied, "It was not yet a year old, and that with time the horn would come."

When they told George Buchanan that the Earl of Mar had gotten the government of the young king, he asked presently, "Who then shall have the government of the Earl of Mar?"

An honest man falling unawares in a ditch, desired his servant to help him out of it. "Stay a little," replied his servant, "till I see if this be in my covenant, otherwise I will call some other to help you."

George Buchanan said to one who complained, as they were riding, of the weakness of his memory, "that his horse was a great deal more forgetful for, being but even now stricken with his spurs, he forgot it presently."

Queen Elizabeth entering Bristol, a speech was to be delivered to her. The honest man begun, "May it please your sacred majesty, I am the mouth of the town;" and then, all amazed, forgot the rest. She, sporting, said once or twice, "Speak, good mouth!"

One asking alms, being inquired what calling he was of, answered, "He was a poor scholar;" but when he was set to read, and could do nothing, he replied, "He told them truly that he was but a poor scholar, for he could not read so much as a single letter."

Two Low Country men being in Scotland, the one asked the other how it was possible the men were so tall and big, and the horses so little? "Do you not know that," said the other, "the men here eat all the horses' bread?" meaning, of our oat bread which the commons use.

The Marquis of Hamilton came to visit Sir Francis Bacon after the time of his great disaster, but found few to open his doors; and asking him how he did, "Well," replied he, "your lordship is come to see a ruinous building, for the rats and vermin are all fled away from me."

WHAT'S IN A SURNAME?

THERE is a great deal in surnames. What glimpses of old life they sometimes give us: they are little bits of history; revelations of human interest; scraps of poetry and humour; notes of affection, ridicule, sarcasm, and impertinence; often stories condensed into a single word. It is not surprising that they go to form a subject possessing a peculiar fascination, and that some people on their way through the world keep their eyes on signboards and their fingers turning over directories.

It is a common error to suppose that surname is a corruption of sirename, and only another way of saying father's name. The word either means overname—a name given over and above the Christian name—or had its origin in the fact that at first the family name was written over (sur) the other name, as

"de Cobbeham John."

Names certainly go back to Adam, but the origin of surnames is nothing like so remote. They cannot be traced much farther back than the latter part of the tenth century. They were first employed in France, and particularly in Normandy, and at the Conquest were brought into England.

According to Mr. Lower, the practice of making the second name stationary and transmitting it to descendants came gradually into common use during the eleventh and three following centuries. It was not, however, established on anything like its present footing till the time of the Reformation. The introduction of parish registers may have materially contributed to encourage the practice.

Partnerships sometimes bring about peculiar conjunctions of names. There are well-authenticated instances of Sparrow and Nightingale, Birch and Schooling, Able and Willing, and several others equally appropriate. Catchem and Ceecham for a legal firm is, however, probably an invention, and so with Pen, Quill, and Driver. The best that can be said of these is that they are quite possible; so are Coy and Shy, Quarrel and Millchap, Bagwell and Sackit, Rushforth and Hastaway, Blinks and Winks, Bacon and Mutton, Child and Littleboy, Trip and Golithly, Found and Pickup, Gabble and Chataway, Gaze and Stare, Breeze and Blow, Churity and Scattergood, Stroungfellow and Slenderman, Angler and Fish, Mouser and Cat, Day and Knight.

In Scotland the locality of some names is particularly well defined. We have MacDonald, MacKenzie, Robertson, and Stewart, in the north; Scott, Kerr, Elliot, Johnston, and Marvell, in the south; Gordon, Forbes, Grant, and Ogilvie, in the east; and Campbell, Cameron, MacLean, and Kennedy, in the west. "This arises from the clansmen having made a practice of taking the name of their chiefs and considering themselves members of their family by adoption if not otherwise."

There are some names met with in England which appear never to have crossed the Border. Amongst those of which England may thus claim to have a monopoly, we find Churchyard, Deadman, Scamp, Swindler, Gotobed, Slaughter, Startup, Trentyniant, Albiones, Littleproud, Fudge, Puddie, and Wildblood.

The most prevalent surnames in Scotland, according to Mr. George Seton, are Smith, the name of one person in every sixty-nine; MacDonald, one in seventy-eight; Brown, one in eighty-nine; Robertson, one in ninety-one; Campbell, one in ninety-two; Thompson, one in ninety-five; and Stewart, one in ninety-eight. "One person in every twelve in Scotland," says Mr. Seton, "will answer to one or other of these seven names."

The Smiths in England and Wales are calculated to be about one in every seventy-three of the population. If we take the three common names of Smith, Jones, and Williams, one person in every twenty-eight will answer to one or other of them.

Life with a good number is a struggle at the best, and the success that attends us is influenced more than people sometimes think by the names we bear. Even the sound of a name is of consequence. "Harsh names," says Isaac Disraeli, "will have, in spite of all our philosophy, a painful and ludicrous effect on our ears and our associations. It is vexatious that the softness of delicious vowels or the ruggedness of inexorable consonants should at all be connected with a man's happiness, or even have an influence on his fortune."

Some names, indeed, are almost fatal to success; they simply suggest jokes and encourage familiarity. A man has no hesitation in proving "by thumps upon your back how he esteems your merit" if you are called Trigger, or Tapp, or Trundle, or Littleboy, but he would hardly venture on it were you a more aristocratic Montgomery, or a Gascoigne.

For a man to inherit an absurd or insignificant name is to have a stone tied round his neck in childhood to keep him all his life in the depths of obscurity. It would be difficult to find a famous character in literature, art, or anything else, with a surname the least approaching in character to, say, Toothaches, or Bang, or Baby. Who could fancy a Squib, or a Gabble, visited at any time by the inspirations of genius?

John Wilkes expressed this idea once in conversation with Dr. Johnson. They were speaking of Elkanah Settle, the last of the City Poets. "There is something in names," said Wilkes, "which one cannot help feeling. Now Elkanah Settle sounds so queer; who can expect much from that name? We should have no hesitation to give it for John Dryden in preference to Elkanah Settle from the names only, without knowing their different merits."

Considerations such as these—not to speak of testamentary injunctions and conditions attached to deeds of entail—have induced people from time to time to change their names. The world being as it is, and man's instinct leading him to fasten on and worry the ridiculous, it is often a sensible proceeding. Cuthbert is made to take the place of Cuddy, McAlpine of Halfpenny, Belcombe of Bullock, De Winton of Wilkins, and Ephraim Bay is transformed into the aristocratic Norfolk Howard.

It seems to be the established law both of England and Scotland that one can take a surname or change it at pleasure without any royal, parliamentary, or judicial authority whatever. No permission is needed; the only difficulty is to get other people to recognise the change. The ordinary method, however, is to obtain a royal licence, the chief use of which appears to be in proving identity, should that ever be necessary.

In connection with short names, a pleasant anecdote is quoted by Disraeli from Fuller: "An opulent citizen of the name of John Cuts (what name can be more unluckily short?) was ordered by Elizabeth to receive the Spanish ambassador, but the latter complained grievously, and thought he was disparaged by the shortness of the name. He imagined that a man bearing a monosyllabic name could never, in the great alphabet of civil life, have performed anything great or honourable; but when he found that honest John Cuts displayed a hospitality which had nothing monosyllabic in it, he groaned only at the utterance of the name of his host."

The various spellings of the name Shakespeare have been collected by Mr. J. O. Halliwell-Phillips, and the following list, which gives the result of his researches, "is very instructive," says Mr. A. J. Ellis, "as to the capabilities of the English language to indulge the tastes of those who hold that variety is charming."

In Scotland the most remarkable instances of the various spelling of surnames are found in Lindsay, Stirling, and Montgomery, which appear to have been written respectively in no fewer than eighty-eight, sixty-four, and forty-four different forms.

INCOME TAX.

Incomes amounting to £150 a year and under £400 are rated at 6d. in the pound, but £120 of the total income is not taxed. Annual incomes of £400 and upwards are rated at 6d. in the pound without any deduction.

GOVERNMENT INSURANCE AND ANNUITIES.

The lives of the persons of either sex between the ages of 14 and 65 may be insured for not less than £5 nor more than £100; or if the amount does not exceed £5, not under the age of 8 years. The Postmaster-General is also empowered to grant Immediate or Deferred Annuities for any amount not less than £1 or more than £100 to any person not under the age of 5 years.

The following examples show various ways in which Insurances may be effected:—The life of a Male or Female between 21 and 22 years of age may be insured for £10, by an annual payment throughout life of 4s. 4d. (1d. a week); or by an annual payment to the age of 60 of 4s. 8d.; or by a single payment of £4 4s.; or a person between 21 and 22 years of age having, say, £9 deposited in the Post Office Savings Bank, the interest on which is 4s. 6d. a year, can direct that 4s. 4d. of this amount of interest be applied to the payment of premiums on a Life Policy for £10; he can thus maintain his Life Insurance without decreasing his capital of £9.

A sum of money may be insured on the attainment of the age of 60 years, or sooner in the event of death, by the payment of a single or annual premium, and a sum of money may be insured at the expiration of 10, 15, 20, 25, 30, 35, or 40 years, or sooner in the event of death, by the payment of a single premium according to the age of the insured person.

ECLIPSES IN 1889.

In the year 1889 there will be three Eclipses of the Sun, and two of the Moon:—

Jan. 1.—A Total Eclipse of the Sun, invisible at Greenwich.
Jan. 17.—A Partial Eclipse of the Moon, partly visible at Greenwich.
June 28.—An Annular Eclipse of the Sun, invisible at Greenwich.
July 12.—A Partial Eclipse of the Moon, partly visible at Greenwich.
Dec. 22.—A Total Eclipse of the Sun, invisible at Greenwich.

REGISTRATION OF BIRTHS, &c.

In England an infant should be registered within six weeks after its Birth. No fee is payable; but after 42 days, a fee of 7s. 6d. is chargeable.

Notice must be given of Deaths to the District Registrar. Let this be done early, as a certificate must be obtained to give to the minister who performs the funeral service.

In Scotland a Birth must be registered within 21 days. A Marriage must be registered within three days. A Death must be registered within eight days.

INTEREST TABLE.

Without giving an elaborate series of tabulated figures to ascertain the interest due on any given sum, at 2½, 3, or any other rate per cent., any person may calculate for himself the amount of interest by a very simple process.

The amount of interest upon one pound for every month at 5 per cent. is one penny. Having ascertained what any given sum amounts to at 5 per cent., other rates may be calculated by adding to, or dividing it, thus: 6 months.

5 per cent. for £80 would be £2 0 0
2½ 1 0 0

3 per cent. is six-tenths .. 1 4 0
3½ per cent. is seven-tenths 1 8 0
4 per cent. is four-fifths .. 1 12 0

If the interest should be more than 5 per cent., then the extra rate of interest must be added. Thus for 6½ per cent. add one-fourth; for 7½ per cent. add one-half.

and so on at the rate of ¼d. for every additional two ounces. A letter posted unpaid will be charged on delivery with double postage, and a letter posted insufficiently prepaid will be charged with double the deficiency.—An Inland Letter must not exceed 1 foot 6 inches in length, 9 inches in width, or 6 inches in depth, unless it be sent to or from a Government Office.

REGISTRATION.

By the prepayment of a fee of twopenny, any letter, newspaper, or book-packet may be registered to any place in the United Kingdom or British Colonies. The Post-Office will not undertake the safe transmission of valuable enclosures in unregistered letters; and unregistered letters found to contain coin will, on delivery, be charged with a registration fee of 8d. If a registered article be lost the Post-Office is liable to the extent of £5.

REGISTERED LETTER ENVELOPES

Are sold at all Post-Offices, and by rural messengers, according to size, from 2½d. to 3d. each.

POSTAGE ON INLAND REGISTERED NEWSPAPERS.

Prepaid Rates.—For each Registered Newspaper, whether posted singly or in a packet—One Halfpenny; but a packet containing two or more Registered Newspapers is not chargeable with a higher rate of postage than would be chargeable on a Book-Packet of the same weight, viz., One Halfpenny for every 2 oz., or fraction of 2 oz.

Unpaid Rates.—A Newspaper posted unpaid, or a packet of Newspapers posted either unpaid or insufficiently paid, will be treated as an unpaid, or insufficiently paid, Book-Packet of the same weight.

The postage must be prepaid either by an adhesive stamp, or by the use of a stamped wrapper. Every Newspaper or packet of Newspapers must be posted either without a cover or in a cover open at both ends. If this rule be infringed, the Newspaper or packet will be treated as a letter.

No Newspaper, whether posted singly or in a packet, may contain any enclosure except the supplement or supplements belonging to it. If it contain any other, it will be charged as a letter.

No packet of Newspapers may exceed 14 lbs. in weight, or two feet in length by one foot in width or depth.

INLAND PARCEL POST.

For an Inland Postal Parcel, the rate of postage, to be prepaid in ordinary postage stamps, will be—Not exceeding in weight 1 lb. 3d.; and for every additional lb. up to the maximum of 11 lbs. 1½d. Maximum length 3 feet 6 inches; maximum length and girth combined, 6 feet.

A Parcel Post Service has been established between the United Kingdom and the countries of the Continent of Europe and the British Colonies and Foreign Possessions generally. For rates and other conditions, see the Post Office Guide, published quarterly.

INSURANCE AND COMPENSATION.

The Postmaster-General will, subject to rules, give compensation for loss and damage of inland parcels as follows:—

(I.) Where no fee except postage is paid, the Postmaster-General will give compensation to an amount not exceeding £1. (II.) Where, in addition to the postage, an insurance fee of 1d. is paid, the Postmaster-General will give compensation to an amount not exceeding £5. (III.) Where, in addition to the postage, an insurance fee of 2d. is paid, the Postmaster-General will give compensation to an amount not exceeding £10. In no case will a larger amount of compensation than £10 be paid.

INLAND BOOK POST.

The Book Post rate is One Halfpenny for every 2 oz., or fraction of 2 oz. A Book-Packet may contain not only books, paper, or other substance in ordinary use for writing or printing, whether plain or written or printed upon (to the exclusion of any written letter or communication of the nature of a letter), photographs, when not on glass, and anything usually appertaining to such articles in the way of binding and mounting, or necessary for their safe transmission by post, but also Circulars when these are wholly or in great part printed, engraved, or lithographed.

Every Book-Packet must be posted either without a cover or in a cover open at both ends; it may, however, be tied with string.

No Book-Packet may exceed 5 lbs. in weight, or one foot six inches in length, nine inches in width, and six in depth.

A Book Packet, if the rules are infringed, is chargeable if under 8 oz. in weight as a letter packet, and if over 8 oz. it is transferred to the Parcel Post, and charged a fine of 1d., in addition to any deficient Parcel Postage.

POST CARDS.

Post Cards, bearing a halfpenny impressed stamp, are available for transmission between places in the United Kingdom only. They are sold at 7d., or of finer quality at 8d. per doz. They can also be had in smaller numbers or singly. Reply Cards are now sold. Foreign Postal Cards, 1d., 1½d., and 2d. each.

MONEY ORDERS.

Money Orders are granted in the United Kingdom, as follows:—

For sums not exceeding £1, 2d.
 " " " exc. £1 & not exc. £2, 3d.
 " " " £2 " " £4, 4d.
 " " " £4 " " £7, 5d.
 " " " £7 " " £10, 6d.

POSTAL ORDERS.

Postal Orders are now issued at any Money Order Office in the United Kingdom, and at Malta, Gibraltar, and Constantinople. Terms:—

1s. ... ½d.	3s. 6d. 1d.	10s. ... 1d.
1s. 6d. ½d.	4s. ... 1d.	10s. 6d. 1d.

2s. 6d. 1d.	5s. ... 1d.	20s. ... 1½d.
3s. ... 1d.	7s. 6d. 1d.

Postal Orders are not payable outside the United Kingdom, except at Malta, Gibraltar, and Constantinople.

MONEY ORDERS PAYABLE ABROAD.

Foreign Orders are issued at the following rates:—

If payable in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Danish West Indies, Dutch East India Possessions, Egypt, France, German Empire, Austria-Hungary, Holland, Italy, Japan, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland and United States, &c., or the British Possessions and Colonies:—On sums not exceeding
 £2 ... 0s. 6d., £7 ... 1s. 6d.
 £10 ... 1s. 0d., £10 ... 2s. 0d.

POST-OFFICE SAVINGS BANK.

Deposits of one shilling upwards will be received from any depositor at the Post-Office Savings Banks, provided the deposits made in any year ending the 31st December do not exceed 30s., and provided the total amount does not exceed 150l. exclusive of interest. When principal and interest amount together to £200, all interest will cease.

"TAKE CARE OF THE PENGE."

At every Post-Office in the United Kingdom forms can be obtained, free of charge, on which twelve penny postage stamps can be fixed, and when the form has been thus filled up with twelve penny stamps it will be received at any Post-Office Savings Bank as a Savings Bank deposit for one shilling.

STOCKS CAN BE BOUGHT

At any Post-Office Savings Bank. Any depositor who wishes can invest £10, or any larger sum up to £100, in Government Stock at the current price of the day. Not more than £300 stock in all can be credited to any one account. The same facilities are afforded for selling out stock. The commission for purchase or sale of Stocks is for any amount not exceeding £25, 9d.; and 6d. for each £25 after.

POSTAL TELEGRAMS.

Charge throughout the United Kingdom, 6d. for twelve words; names and addresses of sender and receiver included. Usually, however, there is no necessity to telegraph sender's address. Each additional word, ¾d. Numbers in addresses counted as one word.
