FROM the favourable reception accorded last year to the first issue of the FORFAR DIRECTORY, the Publisher has every confidence in issuing this, the second number.

It contains a full List of the Voters in the Burgh, with their addresses and occupations; a DIRECTORY of Trades and Professions; also, particulars of the Public Boards, Associations, Societies, Clubs, &c., in Town—information regarding which, having been received from Secretaries, &c., may be relied on as accurate. In addition to these, there is added a List of Farmers, &c., in the neighbouring Parishes.

The Almanac for 1886, which accompanies it, will be found useful for general information.

Altogether, it is the most complete and useful DIRECTORY for Forfar ever published, and will prove of very great convenience all the year round.

The Publisher takes this opportunity of thanking the Advertisers who have made use of it for their Announcements, and also Secretaries and all others who have so readily given information.

 Good Friday,.....April 23. | Christmas, .....Dec. 25.

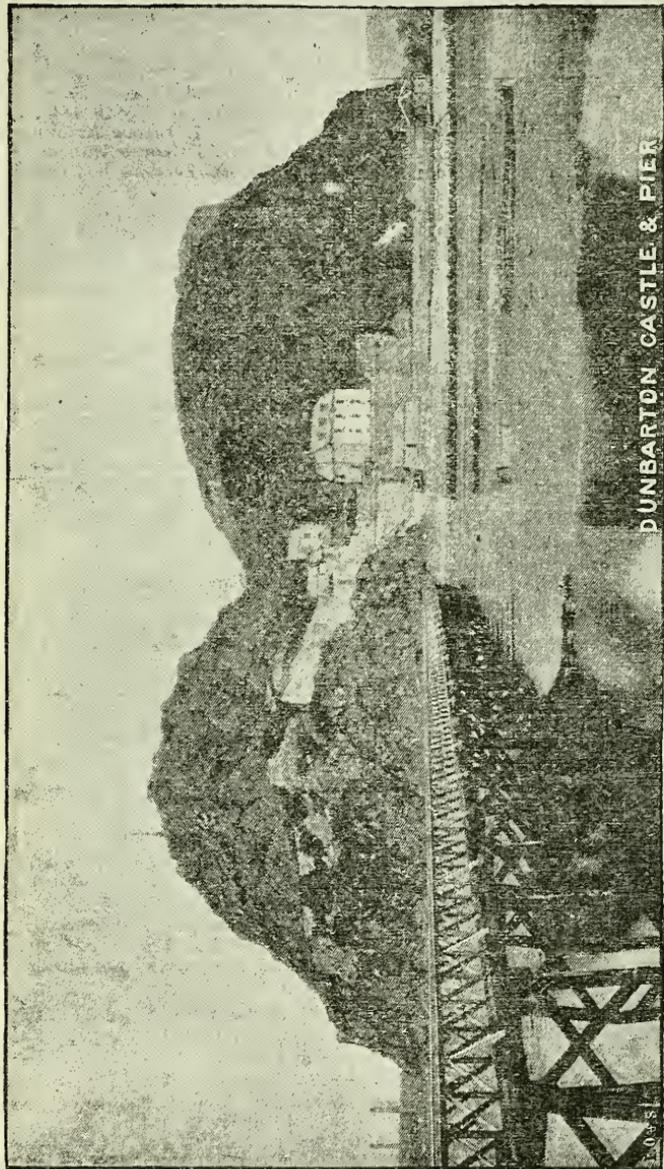

A wilfu' man maun hae his way. A wise lawyer ne'er gangs to law himsel. Better a sma' fish than an empty dish. He kens muckle wha kens when to speak, but far mair wha kens when to hand his tongue.

If the auld wife hadna been in the oven hersel, she ne'er wad hae thought o' looking for her doochter there. Bear and forbear is gude philosophy. Be slow in choosing a friend, but slower in changing him.

DUNROBIN CASTLE

DUNBARTON CASTLE & PIER

DUNBARTON CASTLE, or the Fort of the Britons, is a commanding eminence on the Clyde about half-way between Glasgow and Greenock. Sir William Thomson thinks that both this rock and Ailsa Craig are aerolites, along with other rocks of a similar nature, because they are of igneous formation. The rock is about a mile in circumference and rises in two peaks, the highest of which is named Wallace's Seat, while a part of the Castle is called Wallace's Tower. From the top there is a very fine view of the surrounding country, including the thriving town of Dunbarton and its busy shipyards.

If ae sheep loup the dyke, a' the rest will follow.
 His room's better than his company. His geese are a' swans.
 If a man's gaun down the brae ilka ane gies him a jundie.

Fools mak feasts and wise men eat them. He's a fool that marries at Yule; for when the bairn's to bear the corn's to shear. He puts his meat in an ill skin.

Corbies dinna pike out corbies' een. Drink little, that ye may drink lang. If I had you at Maggy Mill's house, I would get word about wi' ye. Hungry folk are soon angry. He's a bauld as a Lammernuir lion.

A CURIOUS rock, situated at the Quiraing in the north-east of Skye. It is of the same structure as the Old Man of Storr and the Stacks of Duncansbayhead, and stands amidst a lot of high rocks of all sizes and shapes, as if Nature had thrown all her "odd bits" into a corner. The Quiraing mountain is 1,774 feet in height, sloping by a steep declivity towards the west, but presenting north-eastwards a face of rugged precipices, varied by huge columns of basalt and many fragments of fluted rock. In other parts large concave sections, ribbed by fissures, form outlets in wet weather for numerous little streams. The Quiraing proper is a green platform, covered with turf, 1,500 feet high, 300 feet long, and 180 feet broad; the Needle itself being 120 feet high. The district round about is interesting in connection with the adventures of Charles the Pretender, and also of Flora Macdonald. Her monument is at Kilmuir, a few miles to the north-west. She died in 1790, and there were about 3,000 mourners at her funeral. On the east of the Quiraing is Loch Staffin, so called from the formation of the rocks being similar to the rocks at Staffa and at the Giant's Causeway, although they are not by any means so well defined. The salmon and lobster fishings all round this coast are very profitable, a large part of the "catch" being sent to the London markets via Strone Ferry and Inverness.

A rich man has mair cousins than his faither had kin.
 He's gane a' to pigs and whistles. He's better fed than bred.
 A penny hain'd's a penny gained. As sure's death.

KITCHEN GARDENER'S CALENDAR.

JANUARY.—This is the month for preparing early vegetables, whether by the hot-bed or in the natural ground. If you have any lettuce plants in frames, let them, whenever the weather is fine, enjoy the open air, and even in wet weather do not exclude the air altogether; but should the frost be rigorous, let them be closely covered up. If the weather be open, asparagus, radishes, carrots, spinach, parsley, &c., for early use may be put in preparation this month. The soil must be prepared for various crops, such as peas and beans; some kinds of the former may be sown in a favourable state of the weather.

*Holidays are marked thus*.*

SCIENTIFIC ITEMS.

The printed records of inventions, which may be consulted in the Patent Office Library and in the other chief libraries, begin with the year 1617. The first record of a patent being granted dates from Edward III., who gave to two aldermen and their assigns the patent privilege of the sole making of the philosopher's stone.

To the list of novel inventions, commencing with wooden nutmegs, must now be added paper cigars, large quantities of which have been imported into the Australian colonies. A correspondent describes these as being such an exact imitation of the tobacco leaf, and so well flavoured, that it takes a magnifying glass to detect the deception. He adds, too, that they burn well and hold their white ash firmly.

A New York firm has commenced putting up writing-ink in paper-pulp bottles.

This year we have seen the completion of one of the greatest submarine engineering feats ever attempted in Great Britain. The Severn tunnel was begun 16 years ago by the Great Western Railway, and has cost more than a million of money. The tunnel has been twice flooded by boring into springs of water. The river is 2½ miles broad at the tunnel, which, however, is about 4 miles in length, to allow for the gradient on both sides, the top of the tunnel being 50 feet below the deepest part of the tunnel.

The clever process by which original photographs are reproduced in this almanac is one of the most wonderful things in the history of printing—the photographs themselves being left intact and the effect being equal to copper-plate printing.

FEBRUARY.—Dig and trench vacant ground, and prepare especially such ground as may be required for early crops. Choose southwardly exposed or sheltered situations for peas, beans, &c., and continue to sow them in favourable weather. Cut early kidney potatoes for seed, and start their growth by placing them in hot-beds. Care must be taken properly to protect and train cucumbers and melons. Asparagus to be forced. Mushroom beds may be formed, and the old ones carefully defended. In the beginning, or at any time during this month, you may make a hot-bed for early kidney beans. Sow the different kinds of small salading, such as cresses, mustard, radish, and lettuce, once a week, if the weather be open. Cauliflower plants, in frames, should have the free air every mild day, by taking the glasses entirely off. Cauliflower seed may be sown. Early cabbage, if strong in growth, should now be transplanted. Late cabbage may be sown.

MUSIC AND PAINTING.

The Birmingham musical festival is always the occasion of introducing some new and first-class music. Since Mendelssohn's "Elijah" was produced there in 1846 under the baton of the great composer himself, every triennial festival has been looked forward to by the musical world with much interest. Three years ago the "Redemption," by Gounod, was produced, and in 1885 the chef d'oeuvre was "Mors et Vita," by the same composer.

A sad swindle has lately come to light. It seems that some smart artist painted a copy of Mrs. Butler's "Roll Call" with wonderful ingenuity and sold it to a gentleman. It was taken out to Australia, and our cousins went into ecstasies about it, some critics stating that they had seen it in London on its first appearance. The upshot was that it created quite a furore, and the government there offered to buy it for the National Gallery of New South Wales. All the time the real picture was hanging in Windsor Castle, where it is most probably at the present moment.

The total number of persons who were taught drawing, painting, and modelling through the agency of the Science and Art Department was in 1882 upwards of 900,000; in 1883, 843,000; in 1884, about 852,000. Drawing was taught in 1884 to between 700,000 to 800,000 children and pupil teachers in elementary schools, and above 500,000 children and 8,363 pupil teachers were examined.

The Glasgow Select Choir has lost a very popular leader by the death of Mr. James Allan. When the Choir went periodically to London they were well received, the houses being always crowded.

There are some statistics in connection with the publication of the Revised version of the Bible which possess interest. The new version is the joint property of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, and the work of printing and publication has proceeded at the respective establishments simultaneously. For that portion of the work done by the Oxford university it is officially stated that "at the Wolvercote Mill, near Oxford, 375 tons of rag have been consumed in making 250 tons of paper for this issue of the Revised version. This amount would cover 2½ square miles, and go round the world in a strip of six inches wide, or if the pages were laid open one after another, the sheets piled in reams would make a column ten times the height of St. Paul's, or folded into books before binding at least 100 times that height. The copies which are being prepared by the Oxford University Press alone would, if piled flat one upon another, make a column more than 14 miles high, and if piled end on end they would reach 74 miles high. It is hardly possible to give an idea of the number of skins required for binding, but it is calculated that 1,560 goat skins have been used in binding the copies presented to the American Committee of Revision. A special Act of Congress has been passed to admit these copies into the United States free of duty. Although, owing to the heavy expense incurred by the two universities in producing the Revised version, it is not likely to supersede the present Authorised version on account of cheapness, it is interesting to know that it is published at moderate prices. In 1274 a Bible in manuscript sold for £33 6s. 8d.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

One of the most successful books issued in 1885 is the Life of Frank Buckland, which has reached a fifth edition within three months of its first appearance.

A curious and unprecedented case has occurred involving the question whether lectures can be published without the consent of the lecturer. Mr. Wm. S. Sime, bookseller, Glasgow, published some lectures of Professor Edward Caird under the title "An Aid to the Study of Moral Philosophy." In the first division of the Court of Session 5 out of 9 were in favour of Caird; but the case had not been decided when we went to press.

Goethe received from his publishers between 1795 till his death in 1832 over £20,000, and from 1832 till 1865 about £23,000 have been paid to his heirs. These are small sums compared with what some English writers earn.

General Gordon's Diary will be considered one of the most interesting books of the year; also the Life of General Grant, which was nearly ready some months before he died.

One of the most notable recent events in the American publishing world was the issue of the Revised Bible on Thursday, May 21st. About midnight the agents of the University presses in New York, Thomas Nelson & Sons and J. B. Lippincott & Co., began the packing, so as to be ready to serve customers at five o'clock in the morning. Harper Brothers also received their four-volume edition at midnight, and were ready at daybreak to ship and deliver. The English edition was delivered two days in advance of the American, in order to secure copyright, the English law requiring the publication first in Great Britain.

APRIL.—Let the cucumber and melon hot-beds, which were made a month or two ago, be examined, in case they should not have attained the proper heat. Sow these plants early in the month; transplant lettuces; thin radishes; sow round radishes and spinach; plant out full crops of cabbages and savoy; still sow onions and leeks. Sow spinach for a succession crop in May and June; it will yet succeed. Where a constant supply of the plant is required, they ought to be sown once a fortnight, as they soon run into seed. Beet, if omitted previously, may still be sown. Plant slips and cuttings of kitchen herbs, but take care not to give too much water to thyme. Finish the grafting of all trees this month. Plant strawberries in edgings; add climbing plants of all kinds. Begin the hoe culture of killing weeds wherever practicable.

Miss Mary Anderson, whose representations of Shakespeare's characters is so much admired, has appeared in the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre. Stratford-on-Avon, in the character of Rosalind.

The copyright of the "Bohemian Girl," by Balfe, expired in the autumn of 1885, and this will have the effect of allowing it to be sung everywhere without payment of royalties. It is Balfe's masterpiece, and is full of striking airs and beautiful melody.

The death of an actor called Henry Jackson or Jacobson, a Jew, has been the cause of a good deal of talk on the subject of Jewish actors and acting, and theatres generally. It may be interesting to note that the first record of a theatre was the pagan one introduced by King Herod. Josephus tells of a "mimologos," or actor of plays—much beloved by Nero, but a Jew by birth. In the time of Marcus Aurelius there was a popular Jewish actress called Faustina. Jews figure as actors all through the middle ages, and in the present century some of the leading actors and actresses have been of Jewish origin. The elder Booth, Lucius Junius Brutus; Mesdames Rachel, Bernhardt, and Mrs. Keeley, the actress; Henry Russell, the composer; Braham, the singer; and David James, the well-known London manager, are all children of Israel.

MAY.—Plant out cucumbers under hand-glasses. Plant now a full crop of kidney beans to succeed those of last month; and in wet days put in the principal crop of runners. Asparagus ought to be fit this month to be cut for use. In moist weather transplant such lettuces as were sown the two former months. Keep clean the beds of turnips, carrots, parsnips, onions, &c., and thin such as require it. Transplant spring sown cabbage and savoy for autumn use, also red cabbage. Plant out towards the middle or end of this month the gourds and pumpkins sown in April. Plant out tomatoes or love apples. Carrot seed may still be sown in succession; such as are sown in this month will be very acceptable.

It is said that Mr. J. L. Toole received from a collector of autographs a book that he might enter his name on the actors' page; but Mr. Toole, with a desire for good company, entered it on the page for ministers, and wrote beneath it, in the words of Paul Pry—"I hope I don't intrude."

JUNE.—Supply well the cucumbers in frames with fresh air and water. Transplant celery into trenches, to remain to blanch. Sow a full crop of turnips for autumn use; transplant leeks; keep up the crops of peas and beans; plant cabbages for use in autumn and winter; gather mint and other aromatic herbs for drying towards the end of the month. Transplant leeks, which in general will be of a proper size for this purpose, towards the middle or end of this month. Let a quantity of the brocoli plants, which were raised in March or April, be planted, finally to remain in rows two feet asunder. Transplant endive. Thin young wall fruit when required. Plant out seedling flowers, and cuttings of wall flowers, carnations, &c. Top peas and beans to assist the filling of the pods.

SHIPS AND SHIPPING.

The fastest British cruiser is the Mercury. She is the swiftest full-size ship afloat—attaining an average speed of 18½ knots. She is 300 feet in length and 46 feet in breadth with a draught of 22 feet, and is one of the new type of unarmoured cruisers specially built for high speed. Built of steel, she carries 10 64 pounders, costs about £200,000, and is one of the most expensive vessels afloat in proportion to her tonnage.

The most powerful gun in the world is the 110 ton Elswick breechloader on board H.M.S. Benbow. This gun is more powerful than Krupp's 119 ton gun, the energy at the muzzle being 61,200 foot tons as against 46,061 foot tons. This gun is 43 feet 6 inches long, calibre 16.75 inches, and fires a charge of 900 lb., and a projectile weighing 1,800 lbs., with a muzzle velocity of 2,020 feet per second.

It seems probable that in a few years people will have less to fear from sea-sickness caused by the rolling of ships. Messrs. R. S. Froude & P. Walls conducted some experiments on board H.M.S. Inflexible, Edinburgh, to obviate its excessive rolling. These consisted in fitting in water tanks going all the way across filled with water, and by their shape when the vessel had recovered from a roll the water rolled more slowly than the vessel and thus equalized the motion. Mr. Walls read a paper lately before the Institute of Naval Architects who criticised it very favourably.

INTERNATIONAL YACHT RACE.—The question of superiority between British "racing wedges" and American "skimming dishes," as the two styles of yachts are called, has been settled meantime by the result of this race, the Puritan of Boston, U.S., having beat Sir Richard Sutton's Genesia twice running.

SPORTS ON LAND AND SEA.

YACHTING.—Is it allowable to enter here, under the term yachting and sports, an account of a voyage of the Cunard steamer Etruria? This vessel has proved herself to be the fastest ocean steamer. The passengers who ate their Sunday's luncheon at Queenstown on Sunday, the 16th August, dined in New York on the following Saturday night, the run being made from Queenstown to Sandy Hook in 6 days, 1 hour, and 9 minutes, or, taking it in corrected time, 6 days, 5 hours, and 31 minutes—a vessel going with the sun, that is to the west, having a longer day than the other way. The next best run on record is that of the Oregon, which was done in 6 days, 10 hours, 10 minutes, corrected time. The distance is about 2,800 sea miles, and the average rate was about 19 knots per hour.

The most successful yachts of the year are the Ilex, Marjorie, Tara, Marguerite, and Doris.

SCULLING.—The fastest 3 miles on record has been rowed by Gaudaur at Pittsburgh in 19 minutes, 32 seconds.

RUNNING.—The shortest time on record in which a mile has been run by a professional is 4 minutes 16 1-5th seconds, by Cummings of Paisley in 1881, and by an amateur 4 minutes 18 2-5th seconds, by W. G. George in 1884. These two champions met at Lilliebridge on 31st Aug., 1885, when George won in 4 minutes 20 1-5th seconds, the ground being wet. Cummings won the 4 mile race on 12th Sept. in 18 minutes 46 seconds.

Myers has run a ¼ of a mile in 49 2-5th seconds, the best on record over a grass course.

Monarch, the famous champion bull-dog, for which £400 has been refused, has just died. He was the best dog of the breed since Crib, and took many prizes.

JULY.—Prepare ground for the autumn and winter crops. Plant your principal crops of savoys and winter cabbages. Transplant brocoli, and sow seed for a late spring crop. Plant late crops of kidney beans. Sow onions to stand the winter, but this not before the end of the month. About the middle of the month you may sow some carrots, which will come into use at Michaelmas, and continue good till the spring; the same remarks apply to turnips. Thin, transplant, and sow lettuces, winter spinage, and several kinds of radishes, particularly the turnip rooted. As celery is a water plant, and requires to grow quick, it should be kept alive by wet. Lift all winter onions that are full grown, and prepare mushroom spawn.

On 1st July, 1885, a parcel postage to or from India was introduced, whereby parcels not exceeding 7 lbs. in weight could be forwarded to or from Gibraltar, Egypt, Aden, India, and British Burmah. The rate to Gibraltar is 8d. per 1 lb., and 6d. per lb. thereafter. To Egypt 1s. 3d. per 2 lb., and 7½d per lb. thereafter. To Aden, India, etc., 1s. per lb. This is a very great boon, and will no doubt be largely taken advantage of in sending out packages of samples, etc. The Japanese Post Office, which is ten years old, carried 95,000,000 letters and transmitted 3,000,000 telegrams last year.

Great Britain possesses colonies equal to 65 square miles in proportion to 1 mile of mother country. Holland is next with 54 miles, Portugal with 20, Denmark with 6, France with barely 2. The colonies held by Great Britain exceed the Russian Empire by 2,000,000 square miles, and extend over nearly one-sixth of the land area of the globe.

The Free Congo State, with Mr. H. M. Stanley as Governor, under the King of the Belgians, is another sign that Africa is being surely if slowly opened up. No one can say what good may come if humane nations take the responsibility of governing this vast region.

Among evidences of increasing prosperity in India may be noted the growth of the Excise returns from £3,609,000 in 1882-3 to £4,070,000 (estimated) in 1885-6, and of the Post-Office revenue during the same period from £978,000 to £1,102,000. The gross earnings of the State railways have increased from £2,646,000 to £3,842,000. The East Indian Railway during the same period has exhibited some remarkable fluctuations.

AUGUST.—Sow early and other cabbage seed to produce plants for the service of next summer; sow also red cabbage, and Dutch and cabbage lettuces on warm borders, for winter use; finish planting savoy; continue to sow onions, carrots, radishes, and cauliflowers; transplant celery into the trenches for blanching; continue to sow in succession several sorts of small salad seeds, such as mustard and cresses. If your cucumbers in the open ground stunt, curl, or canker, lay little bits of new tile under them. Gather herbs for distillation, such as the mints, penny-royal, &c. Plant lavender, rosemary, sage, hyssop, and other aromatic herbs. Take particular care now of ripening melons, and in dry weather give the advancing crops water.

SEPTEMBER.—This is the season for providing mushroom spawn, and dung for the mushroom beds. The spawn is found chiefly in dry old rotten dunghills; it is a white fibrous substance spreading in the dung. The spawn must be kept from wet. Plant lettuces in frames for winter use; transplant cauliflowers. The young cabbage plants which were sown the first or second week of August for an early crop next summer and autumn should be planted into nursery beds. Continue to plant celery in trenches, and earth up the plants as they advance. Continue to gather seeds. Cardoons, which will now have made considerable progress, must be earthed up for blanching, their leaves being previously tied up carefully and regularly. Cover asparagus with manure. Plant cuttings of gooseberries, currants, raspberries, and strawberries. Remove hardy evergreens, shrubs, &c.

HOME INDUSTRIES.

Some experiments have been made with seeds of wheat to see how long they lived. For example, out of 100 grains of wheat kept one year, 96 grew; out of 100 kept two years, 84 grew; three years, 60 grew; four years, 43 grew; six years, only 6 grew. Those kept seven, eight, and ten years, all died. The same results were obtained from rye. Oats and barley, however, kept eight years without any dying, but the plants produced were of feeble growth.

From the statistics issued by the Home Office in July, 1885, we find that the output of coal during 1884 is less than it has been since 1878. In 1883 it was 163 million tons, and in 1884, 160 millions. The output of iron during 1884 is less than it has been since 1879; in 1883 it was 17 million tons, and in 1884, 16 millions. The yield of tin is slightly greater in quantity, but of copper and lead very much less. It is satisfactory to know that there have been fewer accidents in coal-pits than in any former year since official reports were published.

In these days of foreign competition it is important that every farmer should experiment on his land with the view of finding out not only what kinds of seeds produce the best result, but also what particular variety of each seed is best. It has been found, for instance, that in the case of wheat sown on two fields similarly situated in all respects and conditions, one variety yielded at the rate of 60 bushels of 63 lbs., and the other variety 40 bushels of 64 lbs. In another case oats were sown in two fields under similar conditions. In the field one was bad or unsuitable seed, which yielded only 22 bushels worth about 1/6 each, and in the other was good seed, which yielded 23 bushels worth 3/ each.

OCTOBER.—The latter end of this month, you may plant beans for an early crop the succeeding summer. The Mazagan bean will stand the winter best. Transplant lettuces for the winter service. Towards the end of this month plant some of the strongest cabbages in the place where they are to remain for early use next summer. Plant out early in this month any aromatic plants wanted, such as thyme, hyssop, sage, &c. Earth up celery on dry days. Clean water spinage. Collect and preserve flower seeds, and transplant rooted cuttings and layers. Dress wall trees and standards; and remove green house plants to their winter shelter.

LAWS AND POLITICS.

Prince Bismarck, it may not be generally known, is a papermaker, producing principally grey and brown wrapping paper, and clears £10,000 a year out of extensive paper mills which he works himself. His entire income is about £18,000 a year, of which his official salary forms but a small portion. It consists only of £2,700 per annum with allowances; his stipend as Chancellor; and the pension of £450 from a former office. Paper mills are thus shown to be more profitable than politics.

—o—

The Gladstone Government was defeated on the Budget, and the Conservatives, under the Marquis of Salisbury, agreed to carry on the government of the country till the general election in November. Notwithstanding the wonderful statesmanlike qualities of the "Grand Old Man" it seems as if fate had been working against him for the last year or two. Nothing seemed to go right; everything that he touched seemed destined to failure. This is of course the ebb and flow of the tide. Every Government must give in to the succeeding one, or there would be no advancement made. Every true Liberal and Conservative must feel that it is only fair that the other side should have its innings, and then see if his side can't beat it.

Wars and rumours of wars have been filling the air for the last few months; first a threatened Anglo-Russian war, and now, while we write, a possible rupture between Spain and Germany, the casus belli being the seizure of the island of Yap in the Pacific Ocean by the Germans.

NOVEMBER.—Get everything out of the land this month which is not intended to stand during the winter. In the middle, or towards the end of this month, is a proper season to plant early beans, to succeed such as may have been planted in October. The same direction may be applied to peas. Brocoli may be laid down, and their heads pointed to the north, especially the high growing kinds. Where the asparagus beds were not cleaned and earthed during the last month, it must now be done. Artichokes should now receive their winter dressing. The beginning of this month you should take up carrots and other roots to be preserved in sand, &c., for the use of the kitchen during the winter months. After the middle, or towards the latter end of this month, according to the state of the weather, will be the time to put fires in the hot-houses, particularly in the evenings.

WIT AND WISDOM.

A paper pianoforte is the latest accomplishment. Everything is paper except the wires. But why not paper strings? We have in our possession specimens of Japanese tissue paper of gossamer-like substance, and so tough that when twisted up into string it is as strong as catgut. If not a pianoforte, a paper banjo, strings and all, is by no means an impossibility. The tone of the before-mentioned pianoforte is reported as being peculiarly fine and creamy. [Should read superfine and cream-laid.] It is further said that the patentee is engaged on a church organ, every part—with one exception—of which, pipes and all, is to be made of compressed paper. The exception is the stuff that fills the bellows, which is to be real wind. We strongly suspect that the bellows stuffing is the most tangible thing about this invention. "The church quire is, of course," says the inventor, "to be made of paper;" but the gratuitous statement of so obvious a fact will, we are afraid, cause what has preceded it to be received with a certain amount of distrust.

 There is nothing on earth so mysteriously funny as a newspaper advertisement. The first and last object of an advertisement is to draw custom. It is not, was not, and never will be designed for any other human purpose. So the merchant waits till the busy season comes, and his store is so full of customers he can't get his hat off, and then he rushes to the newspapers and puts in his advertisement. Give them your advertisement right between the eyes in the dull season, and you will wax rich and own a fast horse, and perhaps be able to smoke a good cigar once or twice a year.

DECEMBER.—Remove decayed leaves from the cauliflower plants, and let the plants have free air during the day. If the weather be dry and open, radishes and carrots, for an early crop, may be sown. Keep up the succession of peas; the kind called hotspur is one of the best for this season. Plant beans now, if you have not planted them earlier. Attend carefully to have the mushroom beds defended from frost and wet. Take advantage of the first day, if not frosty, to earth up such of the celery as may be in a fit state for it; and see that the plants are pretty dry before you begin earthing. Carefully examine fruit which has been laid up in the house.

EVENTS OF THE YEAR.

The International Inventions Exhibition, popularly called the Inventories, following in the wake of the Fisheries and Healtheries, has been a great success. The total number of visitors since the opening on 4th May till 25th July has been 1,718,419.

The death of the Mahdi on 21st June has closed the career of one who has caused us a great deal of trouble and expense, and lost to us the lives of some of our best officers and men. We cannot help wishing that Allah had made an exception in him, and that the proverb, "Whom the gods love die young," had come true when he was an innocent suckling.

The death of General Gordon is one of the results of this man's holy madness. "Chinese Gordon" was one of the best known names either at home or abroad; and his journals and diary, just published, will be read with great interest.

The marriage of Princess Beatrice has completed the list of Royal marriages. Everyone, we are sure, admires Her Royal Highness for her own amiable qualities and devotedness to her widowed mother; while the fact that she is an authoress and a painter proves that she has made good use of her leisure hours. Long life to her.

The death of ex-President Ulysses S. Grant removes from us one of the most popular and distinguished men that America ever produced. He was one of the most silent of men and a great smoker, his silence being proverbial. It is related that after a deputation had expended upon him all their oratory, he took his cigar out of his mouth, and throwing it away, exclaimed, "That's a very bad cigar, leave your case with me." That closed the interview.

Learn you an ill habit and ye'll ca't a custom.
 Dinna stretch your arm farther than your sleeve 'll let ye.
 Gude breeding and siller mak our sons gentlemen.

GENERAL TIDE TABLE

FOR ASCERTAINING THE TIME OF HIGH WATER AT THE FOLLOWING PLACES:—

DIRECTIONS.—From or to the time of High Water at Glasgow, subtract or add the time opposite to the name of the place where High Water is required, and the result will be the time required. Should the time to be subtracted be too great, add 12 to the time of High Water at Glasgow, and then subtract; the remainder will be the time of High Water required in the preceding forenoon, if the afternoon Tide at Glasgow is used; but if the forenoon Tide is used, the remainder will be the time of High Water at the given place in the preceding afternoon. If, after addition, the sum exceeds 12 hours, reject 12 and the remainder is the time of High Water in the afternoon, if the preceding forenoon Tide has been used; but if the afternoon Tide has been used, the remainder is the time of High Water in the forenoon of next day.

The Tides are produced by the attraction of the sun and moon, principally that of the latter object. The cohesion of fluids being much less than that of solid bodies, they more easily yield to the power of gravity; in consequence of which, the waters immediately below the moon are drawn up in a protuberance, producing a full tide, or High Water, at the spot where it happens.

The mean duration of the ebb and flow is about 12h. 25m., that is, half the lunar day of 24h. 50m., the period elapsing between successive returns of the moon to the same point of the meridian. Thus the sea, in every place, undergoes a flux and reflux as often as the moon passes the meridian, whether superior or inferior of the place; that is to say, twice in 24h. 50m.

GLASGOW UNIVERSITY.

THE University of Glasgow is situated on the bank of the Kelvin in the west end of the City. The foundation was laid by the Prince and Princess of Wales in October, 1868, and the last part built—the Bute Hall—has only recently been completed. The architect was Sir G. Gilbert Scott, and the general style is early English. The central tower will be over 300 feet in height when finished, and the entire structure, standing on a hill, has a most handsome and commanding appearance. The entrance doorway of the Old College in High Street, bought up by the North British Railway Company, has been presented to the Senate by a citizen, and is about to be erected at one of the entrances to the grounds.

DUNROBIN CASTLE.

DUNROBIN CASTLE, the residence of the Duke of Sutherland, is situated near Golspie, on the Dornoch Frith. The original Castle was built about A.D. 1097. By recent additions the building now presents a solid mass of masonry about 100 feet square by about 80 feet in height. There are three main storeys besides the basement and attics connected by a lower range of buildings with the old structure. The general style is that of a French chateau or German schloss, and is built of white freestone got on the Duke's property. The railway to Wick and Thurso passes the back of the Castle, where there is a private railway station.

ARCHITECTURE.

THE five great orders of Architecture are—the Doric, Ionic, and Corinthian (Greek);—the Tuscan, and Composite (Roman). Gothic began to prevail in the Ninth century.

GLASGOW CATHEDRAL.

THE Cathedral of Glasgow, founded in 1123, is situated in the north-east of the city. It is dedicated to St. Kentigern, or St. Mungo as he is usually called, the patron saint of Glasgow. Tradition relates that he came from Orkney in the year 539 to preach the Gospel to the heathen living along the banks of the Clyde. After preaching there some years he was expelled to Wales, where he founded the See of St. Asaph. A few years afterwards he returned, and built a church about the year 560 on the spot on which the Cathedral now stands. He died in 601, and his tomb is still to be seen in the crypt, which is unsurpassed by any similar building in Europe. David I. of Scotland endowed the Cathedral. The armorial bearings of Glasgow—being a tree, a bell, a bird, and a fish with a ring in its mouth—represent miracles said to have been wrought by St. Mungo. The bishops succeeding St. Mungo numbered about thirty, among whom the chief names are Joceline, who laid the foundation of the present church; Bondington, who finished it; Robert Wischard, who crowned King Robert the Bruce; William Rae, who built the old Stockwell Bridge; Cameron, the magnificent prelate; William Turnbull, the founder of the Unive sity of Glasgow; Blackader, who extended and beautified the Cathedral; and Beaton, nephew of the bishop of the same name. These were the names of some of the Roman Catholic prelates who had held stately rule in these hallowed courts since the days of St. Mungo. During Beaton's time the Reformation took place, and he retired to France, taking with him the whole treasures and costly ornaments, chalices, and images of gold and silver belonging to the Cathedral, and also the valuable archives of the See from the earliest period till his own time. These were deposited partly in the Scots' College of Paris, and partly in the monastery of the Carthusians there. The reformers destroyed all the holy vessels and whatever they could lay hands on. A line of fifteen Protestant Archbishops held the See at intervals during the alternate rule of Episcopacy and Presbyterianism. The last one was John Paterson, and the Revolution of 1688 took place a year after his appointment. Since then Presbyterianism has held sway; and in the present day any one wanting to hear a "high Presbyterian service" need only go to the Cathedral on a forenoon. To the late Sir Andrew Orr, when Lord Provost of Glasgow, the citizens are indebted for the first practical steps which led to the noble scheme for filling the windows with painted glass. Noblemen and gentlemen in the neighbourhood responded liberally, and the windows are now nearly all completed. The late Mr. Charles Heath Wilson selected the subjects, and the chevalier, M. Ainmiller, of the Royal Establishment of Glass Painting at Munich, was entrusted with the execution of them, only the best artists being employed. There is a most interesting book on the history of the Cathedral and See of Glasgow, and catalogue of the painted glass windows, published by Francis Orr & Sons, Glasgow.

GENERAL GORDON.

THE death of General Gordon was accompanied by every circumstance that could make the event most distressing and painful for his relations, his friends, and his countrymen. Only a few weeks before the details of his magnificent defence of Khartoum were summed up and recorded, and on the very same day, as it happened, Sir Herbert Stewart struck on the field of Abu Klea what seemed the first blow towards effecting his deliverance. At the very moment we were beginning to flatter ourselves that all anxiety might be laid aside, and that the doubts of many weary months of delay and uncertainty could be safely banished, General Gordon was placed by the treachery of some of his followers in the hands of the enemy whom he had so long and so valiantly defied. Even then the hope was cherished that although Khartoum had fallen, its heroic defender might have been spared; but a harsh fate decreed otherwise. Charles George Gordon was born on the 28th of January, 1833, at Woolwich, in the very cradle of that branch of the service in which he was destined to pass a life of more than usual distinction, even if his own proper career as an English officer be alone taken into consideration. He was the fourth son of an artillery officer, Henry William Gordon, who attained the rank of Lieutenant-General, and the associations of his youth, as well as the tradition of his family, proud, and rightly so, of its connection with the great Highland house of the same name, left him no choice save to adopt the profession of arms. When he was little more than fifteen he was entered at the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich. Whether his earlier training had been deficient, or that he did not take kindly to the course of cramming even then necessary to gain admission into the ranks of the senior arm of the service, the fact remains that he did not at first achieve any great distinction in his studies, and on one occasion he received the rebuke, "that he would never make an officer." Despite all unfavourable prognostications, he passed his examinations successfully, and obtained the much-coveted distinction of a commission in the Royal Engineers. At the end of 1854, when it was perceived that the Allied Forces would be detained before Sebastopol during the winter, he was ordered to proceed with some huts to the Crimea; but by a piece of good luck he obtained permission to travel overland to Marseilles, while the huts were sent round by sea in a collier. On his arrival in January, 1855, he was at once placed under the officer in command of a portion of the trenches, and during the remaining nine months of the siege he took a prominent part in the engineering operations in front of the Russian stronghold. The close of the Crimean war did not bring Gordon's connection with the Russians to an end. In 1858 he was sent as special commissioner to the Caucasus to arrange certain points in connection with the Armenian frontier from the Russian side. On this occasion he ascended one of the peaks of Mount Ararat; and it may be interesting to state that while the impression he formed of the Russians at a distance, from their defence of Sebastopol, was most favourable to them in their character of soldiers, his opinion was very much modified, if not completely altered, on closer contact. The most striking trait in Gordon's character at this time was the absence of the religious zeal which at a later period made it so pronounced and peculiarly marked. After his return from Armenia, Gordon was stationed at Chatham for a short period, but in the summer of 1860 he proceeded to China, where an Anglo-French expedition was carrying on operations to compel the Chinese to ratify the treaty concluded by Lord Elgin in the previous year, and also to exact reparation for the attack on Admiral Hope's squadron by the garrison of the Taku Forts. The siege and capture of Soochow was the greatest and most difficult of Gordon's exploits in China. As soon as he found himself firmly established on both the eastern and southern sides of the town, Major Gordon took steps to shut in the Taepings on the western side also. He accomplished this without much difficulty, and, after a desperate battle at Leeku, where an officer was killed at his side, he acquired a position to the north of the town as well. By the middle of October Major Gordon had, with a force of less than 15,000 men, succeeded in almost completely investing the Taeping army of 40,000 men which garrisoned Soochow. Gordon concentrated the whole of his force for attack, and, after a heavy cannonade, carried the Low Mun stockades at the head of his men. It is appropriate to state here that, although he had to organize the simplest details in person, Major Gordon was always the first man in these attacks. It was he who showed the way to victory as well as how to prepare for it; but he never carried any weapon save a small cane, which the Chinese soon regarded with almost superstitious reverence and named his "wand of victory." The decisive action of the campaign was the capture of Changchow, a town on the Grand Canal, half-way between Soochow and Nankin. It had been in possession of the Taepings for four years, and was held in the spring of 1864 by all the forces which they could muster outside of Nankin. Its capture brought the operations of the Ever Victorious Army to a conclusion, and three weeks later that force was formally disbanded.

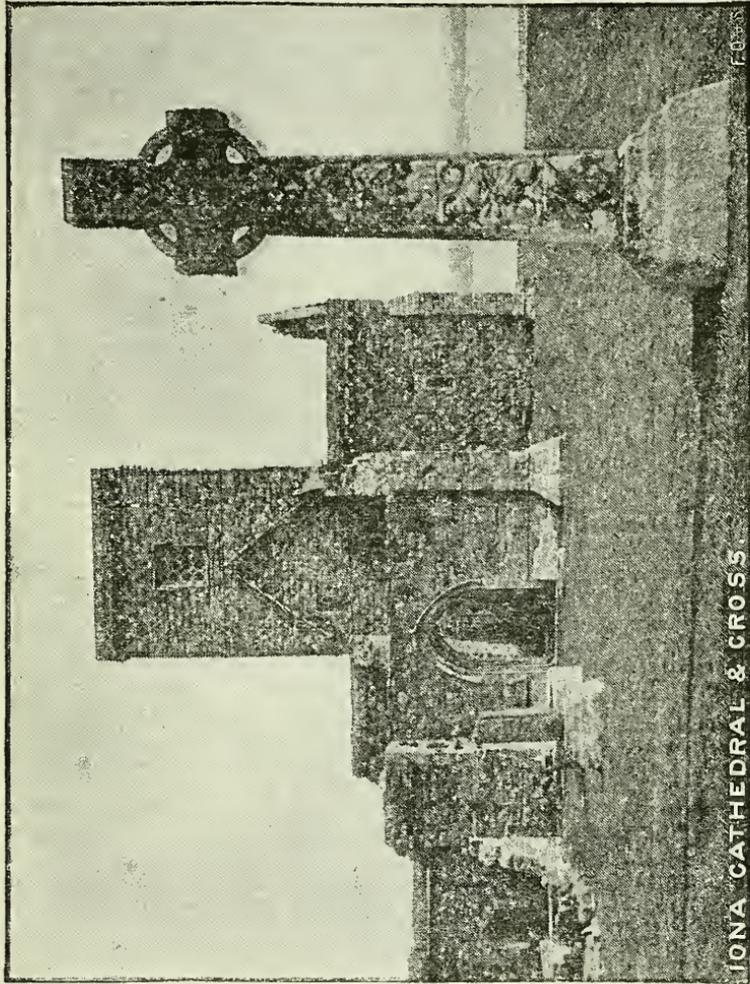

In this short page it is impossible to give more than a brief sketch of his later life. Suffice it to say that after having been Consul at Galatz, Governor of Upper Egypt, Private Secretary to Lord Ripon, again back to China, on Engineer's duty at Mauritius, then in Basutoland, again off to Palestine, and elsewhere, he was asked by the Government to go out to Khartoum. His marvellous defence of that place for twelve months and his heroic death are all fresh in our minds. While at home he was much attached to his boys' mission at Gravesend, where his name has become a household word.

THE island of Iona, Mull, and is about three miles long by one mile broad. It was here that St. Columba, a Christian missionary from Ireland, came to live in the year 563. St. Columba and his disciples were called Culdees. They were a species of religious recluses, who lived in retired places, and this may have been the reason why they came to Iona. At St. Andrews, Dunkeld, Dunblane, and Brechin there were convents of Culdees from remote antiquity. They remained longest at Brechin, but no trace of them can be found after the 13th century. St. Columba lived a most exemplary and sanctified life, and died at the age of 77 in his disciples' arms. His grave is pointed out, but his relics are said to have been removed to Dunkeld. The Cathedral of St. Mary is built in the usual form of a cross, the length being 160 feet, and the breadth 24 feet. The tower is supported by four arches, resting on thick pillars. The high altar has disappeared, the only portion in existence being in the Andersonian Museum, Glasgow. The Nunnery of St. Mary was erected at the close of the 12th century, and is in fairly good preservation. Within the church is the tomb of the Prioress Anna, dated 1511. The nuns were of the order of St. Augustine. The Straid-na-marbh, or, street of the dead, is close by, and is the burial place of Iona. Near this is Maclean's Cross, a beautiful example of the ornamental scrollwork of a bygone age. St. Martin's Cross is 14 feet high, made of one piece of red granite, and is considered to be a model of handsome proportions. It is said that previous to the Reformation there were about 360 crosses in the island, which have nearly all disappeared, having been thrown into the sea, by order of the Synod of Argyll, at the time of the Reformation. St. Oran's Chapel seems to be the most ancient building in Iona—having been erected about the end of the 11th century by the good Queen Margaret, wife of Malcolm Canmore, on the site of St. Columba's original cell. It is only 40 feet by 20, and is of Norman architecture. Both Staffa and Iona belong to his Grace the Duke of Argyll.

GENERAL GRANT.

IN the person of General Grant, who died on the 23rd July, 1885, after a period of most painful suffering borne with stoical fortitude and patience, the Republic of the United States loses the most conspicuous historical figure of the momentous era of the Civil War. He united the claims of the successful commander in the field to those of the chief magistrate twice chosen by the voice of the nation to sit in the seat of George Washington. His campaigns had not the fascination of General Sherman's famous march or of Stonewall Jackson's Cromwellian achievements, nor was his genius as a commander displayed with the dignified and noble serenity, undisturbed in defeat as in victory, which marked the career of his great antagonist, Lee. But in energy, in resolution, and in iron tenacity of purpose Grant was never surpassed, and those qualities he brought into exercise at more than one crisis when the Unionist cause was in danger of moral enfeeblement and political decomposition. Every step in Grant's rapid ascent to the supreme command of the armies of the Union was signalized by exploits which, apart from their military value, were of priceless importance in their influence on the spirit of the Northern people and on the temper of the soldiery. On the 27th of April, 1822, in the village of Point Pleasant, Ohio, Hiram Ulysses Grant was born, being the eldest of the six children of Jesse R. and Hannah Simpson Grant. His father was a tanner by trade, and, the year after his son's birth, he removed to Georgetown, in the next county, where the lad's boyhood was passed. At 17 Hiram received a cadetship in the Military Academy through the Congressman of his district, who erroneously registered him as Ulysses S. Grant, and so his name remains in history. Graduated from West Point in 1843 young Grant was attached as Brevet Second Lieutenant to the Fourth Infantry, which two years later joined General Zachary Taylor's army in Texas. War with Mexico broke out in the spring of 1846, and Grant took part in the battles of Palo Alto, Molino del Rey, Chapultepec, and others. For gallantry at Molino del Rey he was brevetted First Lieutenant, and then Captain later on. In 1848 he married Miss Julia T. Dent of St. Louis. In 1854 he resigned from the army. Seven years nearly of civil life ensued, in which he was successively a farmer at Gravois, near St. Louis; a real estate agent in St. Louis; and finally an assistant of his father and brother in the leather business at Galena, Illinois. The outbreak of the civil war found him at Galena. Fort Sumter fell on the 14th of April, 1861. Ten days later Captain Grant was in Springfield, the State capital, offering for service a company of his townsmen which he had drilled. Governor Yates, however found better employment for his military training as a mustering officer of volunteers, and a month later commissioned him Colonel of the Twenty-first Illinois Infantry, to date from June 17, 1861. Early in 1862 his capture of Fort Henry and Fort Donelson threw almost the first bright gleam across the darkened prospects of the Federal cause in the West. In 1863, after giving proof of his fighting quality in a succession of obstinate and sanguinary battles, he struck a deadly blow at the hopes of the Confederacy by the capture of Vicksburg. In 1864 he had become so incontestably the foremost soldier on the side of the Union that he was called as much by the voice of the nation as by the choice of the President to the office of Commander-in-chief. On the 9th of April, 1865, just thirteen months after his accession to the supreme command, Grant received the surrender of the remnant of Lee's army at Appomattox Court-house, and brought that war of giants to a triumphant close. The saviour of the Union and the victor of the Confederacy has passed away a few months after the twentieth anniversary of his crowning achievement. His fame has in the interval undergone some strange vicissitudes. If any military work had remained to be done, General Grant would probably have escaped the temptation of political life, for which he was not fitted either by nature or by habit. His election, however, to the Presidency in 1868 was mainly due to a spontaneous movement of popular gratitude, though it is to be remembered that some of the Southern States were still excluded from political rights, and that the white population of the South was for the most part disfranchised. General Grant's first administration was signalized by important diplomatic successes—the settlement of the Alabama dispute by the Washington Treaty and the Geneva Award, and of the San Juan boundary by the Berlin Arbitration. In 1872 he was elected President for a second term, defeating Mr. Greeley, whom the democrats had chosen as their champion. The honour of re-election had only been conferred, since President Jackson's time, on Lincoln during the crisis of the civil war. In 1876 he retired from the Presidency. During the eight years he had been in office many great events had occurred, and many important laws had been passed. Grant then took a trip round the world, during which he was received everywhere with enthusiasm. During his absence his friends again nominated him for President; but after a number of votes had been passed for him he retired in favour of Garfield. His later life was in strong contrast to his earlier years. Great as he was on the battlefield and in the White House, as a private citizen he had not the same success. Involved in financial schemes which broke down his health, he was placed on the retired list, by which he received 13,500 dollars annually during life. On Christmas Eve, 1883, he slipped on the ice and hurt his hip. Great pain followed, and he was confined to bed for some months. In June, 1884, the first sign of cancer in the tongue appeared, being the result of his habit of continually smoking, and after about 13 months' illness, in spite of the best skill of the country, he succumbed to it, amid the regrets of all who knew him.

THE Clamshell Cave of Staffa, although not so famous as Fingal's Cave, has yet some features which the other caves have not. These consist in the columns being all bent in the shape of the ribs of a ship on the one side of the cave, while on the other side they present the top surfaces only, like the oells in a honeycomb. The curious basaltic formations all along the coast of Staffa, and which appear also in the Giant's Causeway in Ireland, are traced along the east coast of Skye in Loch Staffin, and will always be considered one of the most wonderful sights of the world.

The island of Staffa lies about 3 miles off the Western Coast of Mull, and belongs, with Iona, to the Duke of Argyll. It is about 14 miles in circumference, and the highest part is about 144 feet high. The columns are composed chemically of about one half flinty earth, one quarter iron, and one quarter clay and lime—they are of igneous formation, that is, formed by the perfect fusion of these ingredients into one mass, which in cooling has crystallized into regular forms, as starch will do on drying. This seems easily explained, but with all explanations, the cause why Nature produces such beautiful curiosities is still unrevealed.

PRESIDENT GARFIELD.

THE news of President Garfield's death, on September 19, 1881, plunged two countries into mourning; for the feeling of sympathy with the victim and his family and of indignation at the crime was hardly less strong in England than in America. From that sad 2nd of July, the people of both countries watched in spirit, as it were, with the devoted wife by the bedside of the wounded man. The facts of the attack on the President and his illness are too fresh in the minds of our readers to need more than a brief recapitulation. It was on the 2nd of July, in the railway station at Washington, as he was about to start for the north, that the President, entering the waiting-room on the arm of his minister, Mr. Blaine, was shot twice by Charles Guiteau. He was at once conveyed back to the White House, where he lay during the greater part of his illness, attended by the highest medical and surgical skill that his country could furnish, and watched throughout by his wife, who was summoned from Longbranch to his bedside. At first it was thought that the patient could not survive many hours; but he rallied so wonderfully that shortly there grew up a belief that by care and skill he might ultimately recover, though the illness must be in any case most tedious. Towards the end of August his medical attendants felt that his last chance of recovery depended on his removal from the malarious climate of Washington; and on the 6th of that month he was carried by train to Longbranch, on the Atlantic coast, in New Jersey. The change, though it seemed to revive him at first, was of no avail, and he gradually sunk. The hour of death was half-past 10 on Monday night, by American time; which is equivalent to half-past 3 on Tuesday morning by English time. James Abram Garfield was born about 54 years ago, on November 19, 1831, in Orange Township, Cuyahoga County, Ohio, about 18 miles from the city of Cleveland. Like the two Adamses, Fillmore, Pierce, Lincoln, Grant, and Hayes, he came from the Puritan stock of New England, which has given so many great men to the United States. His mother, who has lived to see her son first installed in the White House and then struck down in his prime by an assassin's hand, is a native of New Hampshire. His father was of Massachusetts stock, and traced his family back to 1635, when his ancestor, Edward Garfield, was one of the proprietors of Watertown, and came with Governor Winthrop to find freedom of conscience in New England. The President's father, Abram Garfield, settled in the Ohio forest a year before the birth of his youngest child, James Abram, bought a tract of wooded land, built a log-hut, and in three years had cleared a portion of the forest and begun the cultivation of the soil. When his corn was in the ear the neighbouring woods caught fire, and threatened to destroy the ripening crop. Mr. Garfield, by great exertion, threw up a dyke of fresh earth between the corn and the fire. His crop was saved, but the farmer, overheated and wearied, became chilled while returning to his hut, and died of inflammation of the throat. The mother was left with two sons and two daughters, and passed through extraordinary struggles and privations. She tilled the land with the oxen which her husband had left her, made her children's clothing with her own hands, and clothed the children of a neighbouring shoemaker, who, in return, made boots for her little ones. In the winter, when they could not labour in the fields, the children went to school. President Garfield told one of his biographers that from three to ten years of age he attended school daily; but after ten he worked in the summer on the farm. He gained his first prize at the age of four. It was a copy of the New Testament given to the best reader in the primary class. He eagerly read all his mother's scanty stock of books, learnt to recite by heart almost the whole of the "English Reader," borrowed "Robinson Crusoe," "Josephus," "Goodrich's History of the United States," and Pollok's solemn poem on the "Course of Time." But his favourite part of "Josephus" was "The Wars of the Jews," and he was never tired of poring over accounts of battles and adventures by sea and land, tales of bold buccaneers, of Algiers and the Spanish Main. Much later in life, when he had become a distinguished member of Congress, he said: "I tell you I would rather now command a fleet in a great naval battle than be anything else on this earth. The sight of a ship still fills me with a strange fascination." He was strong in his boyhood and a great fighter, and was consumed by a burning passion to go to sea. At the age of 16 he could do a man's work, and contracted with his cousin to cut 100 cords of wood for 25 dols. The task was performed in a tract of high woodland which commanded a view of the blue waters of Lake Erie and the shipping in the port of Cleveland. With his boyish love of nautical adventure freshly stimulated, he walked to Cleveland, and went on board a schooner lying at the quay to ask for employment. Fortunately the schooner reeked with unsavoury smells, the skipper came up drunk, and dismissed young Garfield with a volley of oaths. An hour later he had accepted from another cousin an engagement to drive the mules which towed his canal-boat. After his first "all round" voyage between Cleveland and Pittsburg, he was promoted to the post of bowsman, and flattered himself that now at length he was beginning to learn something of navigation. General Garfield represented in Congress a district in the extreme north-east of Ohio, which forms part of the "Western Reserve," so-called because it was ceded in early days to the Connecticut Land Company, and settled by a chosen company from New England, whose descendants have there reproduced the sober, reading, thinking, praying life of the old Atlantic states. He succeeded at 28 years of age in the representation of this community Joshua Giddings, who had been for nearly a quarter of a century one of the leading statesmen of America.

ENGLISH PROVERBS.

Adversity tries friends.

What every one asks, what every one gives, but what very few take—advice.

Age before honesty. Two of a trade seldom agree.

Agree, for law is costly. All's well that ends well.

Almost was never hanged. Better be alone than in bad company.

Make the best of a bad bargain. A bargain is a bargain.

Bear and forbear. Beauty is but skin deep.

As you make your bed so you must lie on it.

Better be a beggar than a fool. Beggars must not be choosers.

A good beginning makes a good ending.

Good to begin well ; better to end well. Well begun is half done.

As the twig is bent the tree's inclined.

The better the day the better the deed. Birds of a feather flock together.

A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

The sharper the blast, the shorter 'twill last.

Who so blind as he that will not see ?

He that is born to be hanged can never be drowned. Boys will be boys.

Brevity is the soul of wit. A burnt child dreads the fire.

Better pay the butcher than the doctor.

You cannot eat your cake and have it. If the cap fit, wear it.

Be captain of your own ship. Care will kill a cat.

Take care of the pence, and the pounds will take care of themselves.

Like carrying coals to Newcastle. When the cat's away, the mice will play.

A cat may look at a king. Catch that catch may.

I'm too old a bird to be caught by chaff. Charity begins at home.

Count not your chickens before they are hatched.

Children and fools speak the truth. A chip of the old block.

Children should hear, see, and say nothing. As clear as mud.

Who goes worse shod than the cobbler's wife ? Much coin much care.

Two's company and three's none. Comparisons are odious.

Tell me what company you keep, and I will tell you who you are.

A contented mind is a continual feast. First creep and then go.

No cross, no crown. The crow thinks her own bird fairest.

Don't cry out before you're hurt. Great cry and little wool.

Custom is second nature. The danger's past, and God's forgotten.

As dead as a door-nail. Nothing is surer than death.

Out of debt, out of danger. Delays are dangerous.

THOMAS CARLYLE.

FIVE or six miles north of Annan is the village of Ecclefechan. Here it was on the 4th of December, 1795, that Thomas Carlyle was born. His father, James Carlyle, who was a stone-mason, was a steady and prosperous man, though he had only three months of regular education. His first wife dying a year after marriage, he took for his second wife Margaret Aitken. In 1806, when Thomas Carlyle was little more than ten, his father took him to Annan School. The schoolmaster was Adam Hope, who had also taught Edward Irving and Hugh Clapperton, the famous African explorer. At fourteen, being intended for the ministry, he was sent to Edinburgh University, but, however, he did not succeed in taking a degree, so, after spending seven years there, he left the university and obtained by competition at Dumfries the post of mathematical master in the Annan Academy. After leaving Annan, he was appointed mathematical master to a school in Kirkcaldy. He taught there for two years, but becoming weary of the work, and having saved a little money, he left for Edinburgh, determined to devote himself to literature. In 1823, he commenced his career by contributing to Brewster's Encyclopædia some able articles on "Montesquieu," "Montaigne," "Nelson," and the two "Pitts," and literary notices to the new Edinburgh Review. In the same year he completed a translation of Legendre's Geometry, to which he prefixed an essay on proportion; and published his translation of "Wilhelm Meister," a work which showed a direction of reading destined to influence materially his future career. After finishing this translation, he commenced "the Life of Schiller," which was published by instalments in the London Magazine. For Goethe and Schiller Carlyle had the greatest admiration. Having married in 1826 Jane Welsh, a former pupil of Edward Irving, he resided alternately at Comely Bank and Craigenputtoch, a small estate 15 miles to the N.W. of Dumfries. In this secluded spot he occasionally contributed to the foreign and other reviews of the day. In 1830 he wrote "Sartor Resartus," and felt that in it he had struck at last the true note of his life. In August, 1831, he came with this book to London to seek a publisher, but without success, as it had been written in a style unknown in the trade. In the year 1833 "Sartor Resartus" appeared in Frazer's Magazine. Next year Thomas Carlyle and his wife left Craigenputtoch for London, and established themselves in 5 Cheyne Row, Chelsea, the house that was Carlyle's home for the rest of his life. His next book was the "French Revolution," a history abounding in vivid and graphic descriptions. In 1840 he delivered a series of lectures on "Heroes, Hero-worship, and the Heroic in History." This work was full of the broadest sympathy for individual men who had known themselves and the purpose of their lives, had worked with a will, and had risen above the crowd of imitators who reproduce dead forms of life, and whom he called "apes of the dead sea." His "Life of John Sterling" has been described as the finest biography ever written. In 1845 he produced "Oliver Cromwell's Letters and Speeches, with Elucidations." This work gave him a distinguished place among the historians of the age. In 1838, 1862, and 1865 Carlyle published, by two volumes at a time, the six volumes of his "History of Frederic the Great," a work by which he again allied himself to German thought. He had been drawn towards Frederic by admiration of strong individual will. In 1865 Carlyle was elected Lord Rector of Edinburgh University, and delivered his inaugural address on April 2, 1866. A few days after this his wife died. She had been out for her usual drive in Hyde Park, and was found dead in the brougham, sitting with her hands on her lap. After her death Carlyle became more morose and sad than ever, and occupied himself partly in looking after new and popular editions of his books, the sale of which had increased very much since his rectorial speech. He also collected the letters and memorials of Mrs. Carlyle, and spent much time in this labour of love, while he at the same time kept up his "Journal." Gradually he found himself standing, as it were, a monument of the past—almost all his old friends had been called away. John Wilson, author of the "Noctes," Lord Cockburn, Lady Ashburton, Lord Ashburton, Mrs. Carlyle, John Stuart Mill, these and many more had gone from this earthly scene, leaving him a sad, solitary old man. Still, he came of a tough and vigorous stock, and although he in 1871 handed over to Froude his wife's letters, etc., for publication after his death, his time had not yet come. We may here say that although it is perhaps a pity when biographies are published that the public should become aware of all the private quarrels and petty grievances of those who are known to be our greatest men, still the very fact that Carlyle gave these letters to the public reflects credit upon him. In most cases the rule of saying nothing but good of the dead is held sacred, but in his case it showed what a grand character he had, and how great his regard for truthfulness and straightforwardness when he was not afraid of showing the world his worst points. The years rolled on slowly. In 1878 his brother John died, and this was about the last link that bound him to earth. His own health, though feeble, still continued moderately good. His mind was as strong as ever, and he was entirely occupied with his approaching change. He died on the 5th day of February, 1881, aged 86 years, and was buried in the old kirkyard at Ecclefechan. Dean Stanley offered his executors a grave for him in Westminster Abbey, but his own wish was that he should be buried by the side of his father and mother. Thus ended the life of one of the truest and noblest men that God ever made—a life that had been devoted to an effort to do right and to be true in word and deed.
