Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. [60 & 61 VICT. CH. 37.]

An Act to amend the Law with respect to Compensation to Workmen for accidental Injuries suffered in the course of their Employment [6th August, 1897.]

DE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and cousent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same as follows :--

1.—(1.) If in any employment to which this Act applies personal injury by accident arising out of and in the course of the employment is caused to a workman, his employer shall, subject as herein-after mentioned, be liable to pay compensation in accordance with the first Schedule to this Act.

- (2.) Provided that :--
- (a.) The employer shall not be liable under the Act in respect of any injury which does not disable the workman for a period of at least two weeks from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed;
- (b.) When the injury was caused by the personal negligence or wilful act of the employer, or of some person for whose act or default the employer is responsible, nothing in this Act shall affect any civil liability of the employer, but in that case the workman may, at his option, either claim compensation under this Act, or take the same proceedings as were open to him before the commencement of this Act; but the employer shall not be liable to pay compensation for injury to a workman by accident arising out of and in the course of the employment both inderendently of and also under this Act, and shall not be liable to any proceedings independently of this Act, except in case of such personal negligence or wilful act as aforesaid; (c.) It it is proved that the injury to a workman is attributable to the serious and wilful misconduct of that workman, any compensation claimed in respect of that injury shall be disallowed.

(3.) If any question arises in any proceedings under this Act as to the liability to pay compensation under this Act (including any question as to whether the employment is one to which this Act applies), or as to the amount or duration of compensation under this Act, the question, if not settled by agreement. shall subject to the provisions of the First Schedule to this Act, be settled by arbitration, in accordance with the Second Schedule to this Act.

(4.) If, within the time herein-after in this Act limited for taking proceedings, an action is brought to recover damages independently of this Act for injury caused by any accident, and it is determined in such action that the injury is one for which the employer is not liable in such action, but that he would have been liable to pay compensation under the provisions of this Act, the action shall be dismissed; but the court in which the action is tried shall, if the plaintiff shall so choose, proceed to assess such compensation, and shall be at liberty to deduct from such compensation all the costs which, in its judgment, have been caused by the plaintiff bringing the action instead of proceeding under this Act.

In any proceedings under this subsection, when the court assesses the compensation it shall give a certificate of the compensation it has awarded and the directions it has given as to the deduction for costs, and such certificate shall have the force and effect of an award under this Act.

(5.) Nothing in this Act shall affect any proceeding for a fine under the enactments relating to mines or factories, or the application of any such fine, but if any such fine or any part thereof, has been applied for the benefit of the person injured, the amount so applied shall be taken into account in estimating the compensation under this Act

2.—(1.) Proceedings for the recovery under this Act of compensation for an injury shall not be maintainable unless notice of the accident has been given as soon as practicable after the happening thereof and before the workman has voluntarily left the employment in which he was injured, and unless the claim for compensation with respect to such accident has been made within six months from the occurrence of the accident causing the injury, or, in case of death within six Provided always that the months from the time of death. want of or any defect or inaccuracy in such notice shall not be a bar to the maintenance of such proceedings, if it is found in the proceedings for settling the claim that the employer is not prejudiced in his defence by the want, defect, or inaccuracy or that such want, defect, or inaccuracy was occasioned by mistake or other reasonable cause.

(2.) Notice in respect of an injury under this Act shall give the name and address of the person injured, and shall state in ordinary language the cause of the injury and the date at which it was sustained, and shall be served on the employer, or, if there is more than one employer, upon one of such employers.

(3.) The notice may be served by delivering the same to or at the residence or place of business of the person on whom it is to be served.

(4.) The notice may also be served 1 y post by a registered letter addressed to the person on whom it is to be served at his last known place of residence or place of business, and if served by post shall be deemed to have been served at the time when the letter containing the same would have been delivered in the ordinary course of post, and in proving the service of such notice it shall be sufficient to prove that the notice was properly addressed and registered.

(5.) Where the employer is a body of persons corporate or unincorporate, the notice may also be served by delivering the same at, or by sending it by post in a registered letter addressed to the employer at, the office, or, if there be more than one office, any one of the offices of such body.

3.—(1.) If the Registrar of Friendly Societies, after taking steps to ascertain the views of the employer and workmen, certifies that any scheme of compensation, benefit, or insurance for the wordmen of an employer in any employment, whether or not such scheme includes other employers and their workmen, is on the whole not less favourable to the general body of workmen and their dependents than the provisions of this Act, the employer may, until the certificate is revoked, contract with any of those workmen that the provisions of the scheme shall be substituted for the provisions of this Act, and thereupon the employer shall be liable only in accordance with the scheme, but save as aforesaid, this Act shall apply notwithstanding any contract to the contrary made after the commencement of this Act.

(2.) The registrar may give a certificate to expire at the end of a limited period not less than five years.

(3.) No scheme shall be so certified which contains an obligation upon the workmen to join the scheme as a condition of their hing.

(4.) If complaint is made to the Registrar of Friendly Societies by or on behalf of the workmen of any employer that the provisions of any scheme are no longer on the whole so favourable to the general body of workmen of such employer and their dependents as the provisions of this Act or that the provisions of such scheme are being violated, or that the scheme is not being fairly administered, or that satisfactory reasons exist for revoking the certificate, the registrar shall examine into the complaint, and, if satisfied that good cause exist for such complaint, shall, unless the cause of complaint is removed, revoke the certificate.

(5.) When a certificate is revoked or expires any moneys or securities held for the purpose of the scheme shall be distributed as may be arranged between the employer and workmen, or as may be determined by the Registrar of Friendly Societies in the event of a difference of opinion.

(6.) Whenever a scheme has been certified as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of the employer to answer all such inquiries and to furnish all such accounts in regard to the scheme as may be made or required by the Registrar of Friendly Societies.

(7.) The Chief Registrar of Friendly Societies shall include in his annual report the particulars of the proceedings of the Registrar under this Act.

4. Where, in an employment to which this Act applies, the undertakers as herein-after defined contract with any person for the execution by or under such contractor of any work and the undertakers would, if such work were executed by workmen immediately employed by them, be liable to pay compensation under this Act to those workmen in respect of any accident arising out of and in the course of their employment, the undertakers shall be liable to pay to any workmen employed in the execution of the work any compensation, which is payable to the workman (whether under this Act or in respect of personal negligence or wilful act independently of this Act) by such contractor, or would be so payable if such contractor were an employer to whom this Act applies.

Provided that the undertakers shall be entitled to be indemnified by any other person who would have been liable independently of this section.

This section shall not apply to any contract with any person for the execution by or under such contractor of any work which is merely ancillary or incidental to, and is no part of, or process in, the trade or business carried on by such undertakers respectively.

5.-(1.) Where any employer becomes liable under this Act to pay compensation in respect of any accident, and is entitled to any sum from insurers in respect of the amount due to a workman under such liability, then in the event of the employer becoming bankrupt, or making a composition or arrangement with his creditors, or if the employer is a company of the company having commenced to be wound up, such workman shall have a first charge upon the sum aforesaid for the amount so due, and the judge of the county court may direct the insurers to pay such sum into the Post Office Savings Bank in the name of the registrar of such court, and order the same to be invested or applied in accordance with the provisions of the First Schedule hereto with reference to the investment in the Post Office Savings Bank of any sum allotted as compensation, and those provisions shall apply accordingly.

(2.) In the application of this section to Scotland, the words "have a first charge upon" shall mean "be preferentially entitled to."

6. Where the injury for which compensation is payable under this Act was caused under circumstances creating a legal liability in some person other than the employer to pay damages in respect thereof, the workman may, at his option, proceed, either at law against that person to recover damages, or against his employer for compensation under this Act, but not against both, and if compensation be paid under this Act the employer shall be entitled to be indemnified by the said other person.

7.—(1.) This Act shall apply only to employment by the undertakers as herein-after defined, on or in or about a railway, factory, mine, quarry, or engineering work, and to employment by the undertakers as herein-after defined on in or about any building which exceeds thirty feet in height, and is either being constructed or repaired by means of a scaffolding, or being demolished, or on which machinery driven by steam, water, or other mechanical power, is being used for the purpose of the construction, repair, or demolition thereof.

(2.) In this Act-

"Railway" means the railway of any railway company to which the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, applies, and includes a light railway made under the Light Railways Act, 1896; and "railway" and "railway company" have the same meaning as in the said Acts of 1873 and 1896:

- "Factory" has the same meaning as in the Factory and Workshop Acts, 1878 to 1891, and also includes any dock, wharf, quay, warehouse, machinery, or plant, to which any provision of the Factory Acts is applied by the Factory and Workshop Act. 1895 and every laundry worked by steam, water or other mechanical power:
- "Mine" means a mine to which the Coal Mines Regulation Act 1887, or the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act 1872, applies:
- "Quarry" means a quarry under the Quarries Act, 1894: "Engineering work" means any work of construction or alteration or repair of a railroad, harbour, dock, canal, or sewer, and includes any other work for the construction, alteration, or repair of which machinery driven by steam, water, or other mechanical power is used:
- "Undertakers" in the case of a railway means the railway company; in the case of a factory, quarry or laundry means the occupier thereof within the meaning of the Factory and Workshop Acts, 1878 to 1895; in the case of a mine means the owner thereof within the meaning of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, or the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872, as the case may be, and in the case of an engineering work means the person undertaking the construction, alteration, or repair; and in the case of a building means the persons undertaking the construction, repair, or demolition: "Employer" includes any body of persons corporate, or unincorporate and the legal personal representative of a deceased employer:

"Workman" includes every person who is engaged in an employment to which this Act applies, whether by way of manual labour or otherwise, and whether his agreement is one of service or apprenticeship or otherwise, and is expressed or implied, is oral or in writing. Any reference to a workman who has been mjured shall, where the workman is dead, include a reference to his legal personal representative or to his dependants, or other person to whom compensation is payable:

"Dependants " means-

- (a) in England and Ireland, such members of the workman's family specified in the Fatal Accidents Act, 1846, as were wholly or in part dependent on the earnings of the workman at the time of his death; and
- (b) in Scotland such of the persons entitled, according to the law of Scotland to sue the employer for damages or solatium in respect of the death of the workman, as were wholly or in part dependent on the earnings of the workman at the time of his death.

(3.) A workman employed in a factory which is a shipbuilding yard shall not be excluded from this Act by reason only that the accident arose outside the yard in the course of his work upon a vessel in an f dock, river, or tidal water near the yard.

8.—(1.) This Act shall not apply to persons in the naval or military service of the Crown, but otherwise shall apply to any employment by or under the Crown to which this Act would apply if the employer were a private person.

(2.) The Treasury may, by warrant laid before Parliament, modify for the purposes of this Act their warrant made under section one of the Superannuation Act, 1887, and notwithstanding anything in that Act, or any such warrant, may frame a scheme with a view to its being certified by the Registrar of Friendly Societies under this Act.

9. Any contract existing at the commencement of this Act, whereby a workman relinquishes any right to compensation from the employer for personal injury arising out of and in the course of his employment, shall not for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to continue after the time at which the workman's contract of service would determine if notice of the determination thereof were given at the commencement of this Act.

10.-(1.) This Act shall come into operation on the first day of July one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight.

(2.) This Act may be cited as the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

SCHEDULES.

FIRST SCHEDULE.

SCALE AND CONDITIONS OF EMPLOYMENT.

Scale.

- (1.) The amount of compensation under this Act shall be-
 - (a) where death results from the injury-
 - (i.) if the workman leaves any dependants wholly dependent upon his earnings at the time of his death, a sum equal to his earnings in the employment of the same employer during the three years next preceding the injury, or the sum of one hundred and fifty pounds, whichever of those sums is the larger, but not exceeding in any case three hundred pounds, provided that the amount of any weekly payments made under this Act shall be deducted from such sum, and if the period of the workman's employment by the said employer has been less than the said three years, then the amount of his earnings during the said three years shall be deemed to be 156 times his average weekly earnings during the period of his actual employment under the said employer;
 - (ii.) if the workman does not leave any such dependants, but leaves any dependants in part dependent upon his earnings at the time of his death, such sum, not exceeding in any case the amount payable under the foregoing provisions, as may be agreed upor, or, in default of agreement, may be determined, on arbitration under this Act, to be reasonable and proportio ate to the injury to the said dependants; and
 - (iii.) if he leaves no dependants, the reasonable expenses of his medical a tendance and burial, not exceeding ten pounds;
 - (b.) where total or partial incapacity for work results from the injury, a weekly payment ouring the incapacity after the second week not exceeding fifty per cent. of his average weekly earnings during the previovs twelve months, if he has been so long employed, but if not, then for any less period during which he has been in the employment of the same employer, such weekly payment not to exceed one pound.

(2.) In fixing the amount of the weekly payment, regard shall be had to the difference between the amount of the average weekly earnings of the work man before the accident and the average amount which he is able to earn after the accident, and to any payment not being wages which he may receive from the employer in respect of his injury during the period of his incapacity.

(3.) Where a workman has given notice of an accident, he shall, if so required by the employer submit himself for examination by a duly qualified medical practitioner provided and paid by the employer, and if he refuses to submit himself to such examination, or in any way obstructs the same, his right to compensation, and any proceeding under this Act in relation to compensation, shall be suspended until such examination takes place.

(4.) The payment shall, in case of death, be made to the legal personal representative of the workman, or if he has no legal personal representative, to or for the benefit of his dependants, or, if he leaves no dependants to the person to whom the expenses are due, and if made to the legal personal representative shall be paid by him to or for the benefit of the dependants or other person entitled thereto under this Act.

(5.) Any question as to who is a dependant, or as to the amount payable to each dependant, shall, in default of agreement, be settled by arbitration under this Act.

(6.) The sum allotted as compensation to a dependant may be invested or otherwise applied for the benefit of the person entitled thereto, as agreed, or as ordered by the committee or other arbitrator.

(7.) Any sum which is agreed or is ordered by the committee or arbitrator to be invested may be invested in whele or in part in the Post Office Savings Bank by the registrar of the county court in his name as registrar.

(8.) Any sum to be so invested may be invested in the purchase of an annuity from the National Debt Commissioners through the Post Office Savings Bank, or be accepted by the Postmaster-General as a deposit in the name of the registrar as such, and the provisions of any statute or regulations respecting the limits of deposits in savings bank, and the declaration to be made by a depositor, shall not apply to such sums.

(9.) No part of any money invested in the name of the registrar of any county court under the Post Office Savings Bank under this Act shall be paid out, except upon authority addressed to the Postmaster-General by the Treasury or by the judge of the county court.

(10.) Any person deriving any benefit from any moneys invested in a Po-t Office Savings Bank under the provisions of this Act may, nevertheless, open an account in a Post Office Savings Bank or in any other savings bank in his own name without being liable to any penalties imposed by any statute or regulations in respect of the opening of accounts in two savings banks, or of two accounts in the same savings bank.

(11.) Any workmen receiving weekly payments under this Act shall, if so required by the employer, or by any person by whom the employer is entitled under this Act to be indemnified, from time to time submit himself for examination by a duly qualified medical practitioner provided and paid by the employer, or such other person; but if the workman objects to an examination by that medical practitioner or is dissatisfied by the certificate of such practitioner upon his condition when communicated to him, he may submithimself for examination to one of the medical practitioners appointed for the purposes of this Act, as mentioned in the Lecond Schedule to this Act, and the certificate of that medical practitioner as to the condition of the workman at the time of the examination shall be given to the employer and workman, and shall be conclusive evidence of that condition. If the workman refuses to submit himself to such examination, or in any way obstructs the same. his right to such weekly payments shall be suspended until such examination has taken place.

(12.) Any weekly payment may be reviewed at the request either of the employer or of the workman, and on such review may be ended, diminished or increased, subject to the maximum above provided, and the amount of payment shall, in default of agreement, be settled by arbitration under this Act.

(13.) Where any weekly payment has been continued for not less than six months, the liability therefore may, on the application by or on behalf of the employer, be redeemed by the payment of a lump sum, to be settled, in default of agreement, by arbitration under this Act, and such lump sum may be ordered by the committee or arbitrator to be invested or otherwise applied as above mentioned.

(14.) A weekly payment, or a sum paid by way of redemption thereof, shall not be capable of being assigned, charged, or attached, and shall not pass to any other person by operation of law, nor shall any claim be set off against the same.

(15.) Where a scheme certified under this Act provides for payment of compensation by a friendly society, the provisions of the proviso to the first subsection of section eight, section sixteen, and section forty-one of the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, shall not apply to such society in respect of such scheme.

(16.) In the application of this schedule to Scotland, the expression "registrar of the county court" means "sheriff clerk of the county," and "judge of the county court" means "sheriff."

(17.) In the application of this Act to Ireland the provisions of the County Officers and Courts (Ireland) Act, 1877, with respect to money deposited in the Post Office Savings Bank under that Act shall apply to money invested in the Post Office Savings Bank under this Act.

SECOND SCHEDULE. ARBITRATION.

The following provisions shall apply for settling any matter which under this Act is to be settled by arbitration—

(1.) If any committee, representative of an employer and his workmen exists with power to settle matters under this Act in the case of the employer and workmen, the matter shall, unless either party objects, by notice in writing sent to the other party before the committee meet to consider the matter, be settled by the arbitration of such committee, or be referred by them in their discretion to arbitration as hereinafter provided.

(2.) If either party so objects, or there is no such committee, or the committee so refers the matter or fails to settle the matter within three months from the date of the claim, the matter shall be settled by a single arbitrator agreed on by the parties, or in the absence of agreement by the county court judge, according to the procedure prescribed by rules of court, or if in England the Lord Chancellor so authorises, according to the like procedure, by a single arbitrator appointed by such county court judge.

(3.) Any arbitrator appointed by the county court judge shall for the purposes of this Act, have all the powers of a county court judge, shall be paid out of moneys to be provided by Parliament in accordance with regulations to be made by the Treasury.

(4.) The Arbitration Act, 1889, shall not apply to any arbitration under this Act; but an arbitrator may, if he thinks fit, sumbit any question of law for the decision of the county court judge, and the decision of the judge on any question of law either on such submission, or in any case where he himself settles the matter under this Act, shall be final, unless within the time and in accordance with the conditions prescribed by rules of the Supreme Court either party appeals to the Court of Appeal, and the county court judge or the arbitrator appointed by him, shall, for the purpose of an arbitration under this Act, have the same powers of procuring the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents as if the claim for compensation had been made by plaint in the county court

(5.) Rules of court may make provision for the appearance in any arbitration under this Act of any party by some other person.

(6.) The costs of and incident to the arbitration and proceedings connected therewith shall be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The costs, whether before an arbitrator or in the county court, shall not exceed the limit prescribed by rules of court, and shall be taxed in manner prescribed by those rules.

(7.) In the case of the death or refusal or inability to act of an arbitrator, a Judge of the High Court at Chambers may, on the application of any party, appoint a new arbitrator.

(8.) Where the amount of compensation under this Act shall have been ascertained, or any weekly payment varied, or any other matter decided, under this Act, either by a committee or by an arbitrator or by agreement, a memorandum thereof shall be sent, in manner prescribed by rules of court, by the said committee or arbitrator or by any party interested to the registrar of the county court for the district in which any person entitled to such compensation resides, who shall, subject to such rules, on being satisfied as to its genuineness, record such memorandum in a special register without fee, and thereup in the said memorandum shall for all purposes be enforceable as a county court judgment. Provided that the county court judge may at any time rectify such register.

(9.) Where any matter under this Act is to be done in a county court, or by to or before a judge or registrar of a county court, then, unless the contrary intention appear, the same shall, subject to rules of court, be done in, or by to or before the judge or registrar of, the county court of the district in which all the parties concerned reside, or if they reside in different districts the district in which the accident out of which the said matter arose occurred, without prejudice to any transfer in manner provided by rules of court.

(10.) The duty of a county court judge under this Act, or of an arbitrator appointed by him, shall, subject to rules of court, be part of the duties of the county court, and the officers of the court shall act accordingly, and rules of court may be made both for any purpose for which this Act authorises rules of court to be made, and also generally for carrying into effect this Act so far as it affects the county court, or an arbitrator appointed by the judge of the county court, and procee lings in the county court or before any such arbitrator, and such rules may, in England, be made by the five judges of the county courts appointed for the making of rules under section one hundred and sixty-four of the County Courts Act, 1888, and when allowed by the Lord Chancellor, as provided by that section, shall have full effect without any further consent.

(11.) No court fee shall be payable by any party in respect of any proceeding under this Act in the county court prior to the award.

(12.) Any sum awarded as compensation shall be paid on the receipt of the person to whom it is payable under any agreement or award, and his solicitor or agent shall not be entitled to recover from him, or to claim a hen on, or deduct any amount for costs from, the said sam awarded except such sum as may be awarded by the arbitrator or county court judge, on an application made by either party to determine the amount of costs to be paid to the said solicitor or agent, such sum to be awarded subject to taxation and to the scale of costs prescribed by rules of court.

(13.) The Secretary of State may appoint legally qualified medical practitioners for the purpose of this Act, and any committee, arbitrator, or judge may, subject to regulations made by the Secretary of State and the Treasury, appoint any such practitioner to report on any matter which seems material to any question arising in the arbitration; and the expense of any such medical practitioner shall, subject to Treasury regulations, be paid out of moneys to be provided by Parliament.

(14.) In the application of this schedule to Scotland-

- (a.) "Sheriff" shall be substituted for "county court judge," "sheriff court" for "county court" "action" for "plaint," "sheriff clerk" for "registrar of the county court," and "act of sederunt" for "rules of court:"
- (b.) Any award or agreement as to compensation under this Act may be competently recorded for execution in the books of council and session or sheriff court books, and shall be enforceable in like manner as a recorded decree arbitral:
- (c.) Any application to the sheriff as arbitrator shall be heard, tried, and determined summarily in the manner provided by the fifty-second section of the Sherift Courts (Scotland) Act, 1876, save only that parties may be represented by any person authorised in writing to appear for them, and subject to the declaration that it shall be competent to either party within the time and in accordance with the conditions prescribed by act of sederunt to acquire the sheriff to state a case on any question of law determined by him, and his decision thereon in such case may be submitted to either division of the Court of Session, who may hear and determine the same finally, and remit to the Sheriff with instruction as to the judgment to be proneunced.

(15.) Paragraphs four and seven of this schedule shall not apply to Scotland.

(16.) In the application of this schedule to Ireland the expression "county court judge" shall include the recorder of any city or town.

ON A GOOD WOMAN.

THE epitaphs of Pope are generally considered to possess great literary merit. The following is one of them :--

Here lies a woman, good without pretence,

Blest with plain reason and with sober sense; No conquests she, but o'er herself, desired.

No arts essayed, but not to be admired.

Passion and pride were to her soul unknown, Convinced that virtue only is her own. No unaffected, so composed a mind; So firm, yet soft; so strong, yet so refined;

Heaven, as its purest gold, by tor-tures tried; The saint sustained it, but the woman died.

A HAPPY description of Wag-ner's music from the adversary's point of view was supplied by the man who said of it:--'It is all noise, but it is beautiful noise."

THE tavern sign of the "Cat and Fiddle" (familiar from the nursery rhyme) was originally Caton Fi'lele-in memory of Caton, the faithful governor of Calais.

WORDS OF THE WISE.

ADVERSITY is the trial of principle. Without it a man hardly knows whether he is honest or not.

TRUE wealth does not consist in the possession of gold and silver, but in the judicions use made of them.

IT isn't so much what a man has that makes him happy, as it is what he doesn't want. PEOPLE who will carry a heavy load with cut complaint for a short time will soon yeary of a lighter buydom that iters of a lighter burden that is always with them.

NOTES TO THE CALENDAR.

He who gains time gains everything.

10 .- Postal rates before the in-10.-Postal rates before the in-troduction of penny postage were regulated by the distance a letter travelled from the post-office at which it was posted, by the number of sheets of paper nsed for the pur-poses of the letter, and by weight, the latter consideration entering but slightly into the question.

but slightly into the question. The great roads were all carefully surveyed by officers of the Post Office-the title of surveyor has come down to the present day, though the officer now surveys post-offices, not roads-and tables of distances were kept for the calculation of rates.

Over and above the normal dis-tance-rates, there were exceptional tance-rates, there were exceptional charges, such as pacter-rates, a penny for crossing the Monai-bridge and a haltpenny for con-veyance in Sectiand on a mail earriage of more than two wheels. Indeed, one wonders how letters ever reached their cestination at all, the time and labour involved in justly charging them with post-age must, one would think, have been so great. The public, however, were con-cerned with the practical results of the system, and a few examples will show what these were. The of the system, and a rew examples will show what these were. The lowest rate for a letter sent from London to Birmingham was 9d.; if it teontaine i a second sheet of paper, or, as it was called in days when one sheet served for both letter and envelope, an enclosure, the charge was immediately doubled doubled.

From London to Edinburgh the lowest rate was 1s. 14d., and from London to Dublin, where two toll-bridges and the sea had to be bridges and the sea had to be crossed, 1s, 4d. It may well be imagined that with such charges no one hesitated to send his letters by other agencies than the Post Office, or that, in spite of stringent penal-ties. infringements of the State monopoly were innumerable.

Envirther who was equally warm as you, site."

Frederick, who liked better to joke than to be joked with, turned his back upon him, and never saw him from that moment.

26.—Ot the eccentricities of Lady Caroline Lamb many takes are told. On one occasion she was returning a visit at Danesbury, and, having no one to keep her company, she chose to sit outside with the coachman instead of taking her usual place inside the carriage. On arriving at the door of the mansion, the footman waited to hand her down, when, to his horror, she said, "I am going to jump of, and you must at the doer was done. She paid her visit decorously, but, of courso, there was much tak in the servants' hall.

At another time, Lady Carollne happened to come into the room just before a great dinner party when the servants were laying the table. She found fault with the decorations, they were too level and too low; there ought to be something picturesque or elevated, a group of figures or a tier of flowers. The butler listened, but went on spreading out the contents of his plate chest.

Lady Caroline, however, would bree her ideas set at nought. She order her ideas set at nought. and, without the sense pile and set stepped into the vacant place, and stood in a graceful attitude to illustrate her meaning.

stood in a graceful attitude to illustrate her meaning. The butler flew for his master, who, when he came in, cried in his gentlest tone, "Caroline, Caroline!" and, taking her in his arms, carried her out into the sunshine, taking all the time of ordinary matters, so as to draw off her attention. That evening she received her friends with her usual grace of manner.

27.—An anusing arecdote infantet: 27.—An anusing anecdote told about the present German Emperor is the following. During his stay at Kiel, in 1896, the Emperor wished to pay a visit to the aunt of the Empress, Frau Prof. von Esmarch, wife of the famous surgeon, who is hy birth Princess Henrietta of Schleswig-Rolstein. A GREAT PUBLIC PERFORMER.

MHE name of no public performer is better known than that of Mr. Blondin who died on the 22nd of February, 1897. He had filled, throughout nearly the whole of his prolonged career, a rôle as public entertainer which secured for him the reputation of being the most accomplished performer on record in his particular profession.

Blondin-or, to give him his real name, Jean François Gravelet-was born in 1824 at St. Omer, Pas de Calais, France, and began his training at the early age of five years, when, struck by the performances of a travelling company of acrobats near his parents' house, he began to imitate them on his own account. An old sailor, whose sympathies he enlisted, provided him with a rope and an old spar as a balancing pole, and with these the child speedily acquired a dexterity which astonished his parents, who, seeing in him the making of a good acrobat, eventually sent him to the Ecole de Gymnase at Lyons.

There his progress was so rapid that six months afterwards he was able to make his first public appearance as "The Little Wonder," and his fame quickly spread through France. Left an orphan at the age of nine, he determined to follow up with what was an indomitable perseverance the prospects that seemed to open out to him, and, thanks to this perseverance and to natural aptitude, he speedily secured for himself a position in which he was without a rival.

In 1851 he joined the Ravel troupe of acrobats in a prolonged tour through the United States, and achieved an enormous success there. But he aspired to do something more striking than had ever been done before, and in 1859 he announced his intention of walking across the Falls of Niagara on a rope. He was regarded as insane, but when, on June 30 in that year, he had a rope, 1,100ft. long stretched across the rapids below the falls at an elevation of 160ft. there was a crowd of some 25,000 persons assembled to see him cross, which he did in the course of five minutes, and to watch him afterwards go through a variety of tricks, while they themselves held their breath with feelings of suspense and horror. The name of Blondin has become a household word since

The name of Blondin has become a household word since then, but in those days his crossing of Niagara was a sensation indeed. His performances there were continued up to the following September, but were varied by the constant introduction of new feats. Thus on one occasion he crossed the falls blindfold, on another in a heavy sack, and on another trundling a wheelbarrow. There was fresh excitement when he carried a man on his back the whole length of the rope, and it was either on this or on some subsequent occasion that Blondin found it necessary to remark to the man he carried, when they were midway across, "If you don't sit quiet I shall have to put you down." He also appeared in the character of a Siberian slave heavily burdened with shackles from head to foot, and on September 2 he concluded his public appearances for that year by standing on his head midway across the rope, surrounded by lineworks. In 1860 the performances were renewed, and in September

In 1860 the performances were renewed, and in September Blondin crossed Niagara in the presence of the Prince of Wales, introducing still another new feature by using a pair of stilts. His invitation to the Prince to allow himself to be carried across was declined. At some of his other appearances in the States Blondin walked along a rope a quarter of a mile in length with his feet in baskets of wicker-work.

In June, 1861, he made his first appearance at the Crystal Palace, receiving, it is said, £1,200 for twelve performances, a fresh contract being afterwards entered into for a longer period. On this occasion he turned somersaults, in stills, on a rope stretched from end to end of the centre transept, 170ft. from the ground, climbed over the back of a chair, cooked an omelette on a stove, and did a variety of other, at that time, astounding things, which suggested that, with 2nd Month, 1899.

WORDS OF THE WISE.

To regulate household affairs and attend to her children is the highest recommendation of woman.

OLD men view best at a dis-tance with the eyes of their understanding as well as with those of nature.

IF thou continuest to take delight in idle argumentation, thou mayst be qualified to combat with the sophists, but wilt never know how to live with men.

DEFERENCE is the most complicate, the most indirect, and the most elegant of all compliments.

"EVERY fortune," says Bal-zac, "rapidly made, is either due to luck, a discovery, or the result of a legal robbery,"

WHEREVER there is flattery. there is always a fool in the case: if the parasite be de-tected, it falls to his share; if he be not, to his whom he deludes.

NOTES TO THE CALENDAR.

"Do you enjoy novel-reading, Miss Belinda?" "Oh, very much; one can associate with people in fiction that one wouldn't dare to speak to in real life."

4.—Mr. Harrison Ainsworth, the novelist, was once asked whether a story told as to the rapid writing of the fourth book of "Rookwood" was true."

The beauty and extreme white-ness of that hand discovered her at once, and she was carried back to her chamber in tears and bitterness of heart.

15.—On the recovery of Louis XV. from the illness with which he had been attacked at Metz, his arhad been attacked at breas, no ar-rival in Paris led to great rejoie-ings. On making his entry, amidst the plaudits of the public and the illuminations of the houses, the

Upon the same occasion, while the citizens of Paris view with each other in testifying their joy at the happy event, a shoe-hack, wishing to join in the public rejolcings, purchased a candle, which he cut into four pieces, and stuck them on the four corners of his shoe-hox; thus illuminating, as he said to the world that he could call his own."

23. - The personal appearance and mental characteristics of John Keats, the poet, are singularly inter-esting to every lover of literature and student of human nature. They are thus described by one of his biographers :-- "Chestnut curls cluster around a brow which rises up like a very temple of mind. The blue eyes are changedul, now soft, now fiery. The nose is well shaped. The lower part of the face does not correspond to the beanty of the upper; it is narrow, and the lips are too full, Still, in spiteof this defect, it is a face that attracts and interests us, a face that has uncommon characters enshoulders suggest not the faintest idea of pulmonary disease. "He has a hatred of injustice and tyranny that prompts him, as he walks along, to stop and take the part of every little nisused street loy. He has a passionate love for hoy. He has a passionate nove to beauty, which makes his face as he passes through the country on a bright day seem a mirror of the fair world around him; which draws from him the words; Never fair world aroand him; which draws from him the words. 'Never lave I known such trae delight as in watching the growth of flowers.' He has an animal enjoyment of life which makes every hour of health and sunshine a festival for him. He has a soul in which dwells a warm longing for love and fame."

With folging for love and some. 25,-Prince Ferdinand was born in Vienna, and is the yonngest sou of Prince Augustus of Save-Coburg and Princess Clementine of Bour-ion-Orleans, a daugitter of Louis Philippe. He was offered the vacant throne of Bulgaria in 1837. He married the daughter of the Dube of Lagra. Duke of Parma.

23.-On this day in 1834 died, at the age of ninety, Mrs. Susan Crom-well, youngest danghter of Thomas Cronwell, Esq., the great-grandson of the Protector. She was the last of the Protector's descendants who have his normal bore his name.

Thou shalt not rob me, thievish Time. Of all my blessings, all my joy : I have some jewels in my heart Which thou are powerless to destroy."

his perfect ease and self-possession, the keen sense of touch possessed by his feet-by which, it is understood, he was solely guided-and his absolutely perfect balance, he was would be on a street pavement. It is on record that when his agent was negotiating for his first appearance at the Crystal Palace he was asked, "But suppose he should fall?" "Fall?" replied the agent, "he can't !"

After a tour of the provinces -including a visit to Liverpool, where he wheeled a lion in a wheelbarrow across the rope-Blondin appeared at the Crystal Palace in the character of an ape in a piece by Henry Coleman, entitled The Child of the Wreek, and he resumed his ordinary tight-rope performances there in the Exhibition year of 1862. Subsequently he made many other appearances in London, in the Provinces, and on the Continent. After several years' retirement he reappeared in 1880, and he made his last appearance in public in August, 1896, when he performed in Belfast.

He was playful as a kitten to the last, and, old and whiteheaded as he was, he would sometimes suddenly throw himself on his hands in his garden and walk for some seconds with his head down and his heels in the air. His "Niagara House" was on the high road between Brentford and Hanwell. It had a pretty garden and extensive workshops, in which he amused himself at the forge, bench, and lathe. He had achieved everything proper to his career, except a mastery of our tongue, and that, of course, was not essential. He spoke broken English to the last. He could not read a word of English.

When he came off the rope after a performance he was generally bathed in perspiration. Attendants were waiting for him, and the first thing was a rub down. Then he had something to eat, prepared by his own cook. If he had to give another performance later in the day, he had a two-hours' sleep.

He would never hear of the approach of old age. "So long I can perform, I perform," he said, "that my health." Yet he had to admit some infirmities. "I don't carry anyone across now," he reunarked near the close of his carreer, "and I don't ride the bicycle. I can't see at all in the upwhile I was found to the provided that more bodde the sunshine. I performed every week last year, besides getting married. I was on the rope again after a honeymoon of twenty-four hours | I am now going to rest for a month or two, as my blind eye is to be operated upon for cataract.'

When he began to be subjected to fits of giddiness, he remarked that he should be obliged to have his house fitted up with tight ropes, or he might one day dash his brains out in trying to walk across the floor. In crossing the rope with the sack on, he said the rope really steadied him by showing him by the way it hung, that he was, or was not, standing perpendicularly.

Once he was nearly killed at the Crystal Palace at the close of a firework ascent. He slipped and fell. Down went the pole to the ground, and he was about to follow when he managed to catch the rope with his knee joint, and to hold it until he could swing himself backwards and forwards into touch of it with his hands. He courted danger. Once, at the Zoological Gardens, Liverpool, he wheeled a lion across-securely strapped to the barrow-and here again he played one of his favourite tricks on the nerves of the spectators by pretending that he had lost control of the barrow and that it was all up with him.

It may appear singular that the rope Blondin used in his later performances was only half the thickness of former ropes-viz., one inch and a half instead of three incles in diameter. That was due to the fact that a wire was run through the rope, and the necessary strength obtained at a less outlay of hemp and also money; of course, it only required half the space when packed for travelling. It was packed in drums—each drum, when full, weighing a ton there were thirteen such drums for conveying the main and subsidiary ropes.

THE INVENTOR OF PHONOGRAPHY.

SIR ISAAC PITMAN, the inventor of phonography-a system of shorthand which is now most extensively D employed in journalistic work and general corre-spondence—was born on the 4th January, 1813, at Trowbridge, Wiltshire, where his father long filled the position of clerk and overseer in a factory.

On leaving school the boy entered the same service as his father in the capacity of junior clerk. He was of studious disposition, and occupied much of his leisure in reading. In 1829, he took up the study of Harding's edition of Taylor's system of shorthand. Two years later he left the factory clerkship and became a teacher, landing at last at Bath, where he carried on a school till 1843.

Long before this, however, he had been working away at the development of his system of shorthand. His object in taking it up was to cheapen and popularise an art which he foresaw would convert what was then, to a large extent, looked upon as a pleasant pastime, into a profitable pro-fession. Before the days of phonography text-books on shorthand were scarce and expensive, while there were few of the opportunities which now everywhere exist for acquiring a knowledge of stenography.

To Isaac Pitman belongs the credit of inaugurating a new era in shorthand writing. His books on the subject were published at a price which made them accessible to all, and his system of phonography was so comparatively easy of mastery that in course of time it found popular favour.

In 1837, the year of the Queen's accession, Mr. Pitman's first book on the subject-"Stenographic Soundhand"appeared, and paved the way for a series of handbooks which have brought about a development in shorthand writing as amazing as it has been continuous. Other causes, of course, assisted in bringing about this result. The abolition of the advertisement and paper duties led to a great increase in the number of daily newspapers, and a consequent demand for skilled reporters.

For years Mr. Pitman was ever and anon effecting what he considered improvements on his system of shorthand, though they were not always so regarded by phonographic experts. Indeed, in course of half a century it underwent changes which rendered the earlier editions of phonography somewhat puzzling to later disciples of the art and vice versâ. As to its popularity there can be no question.

But it required arduous and persistent efforts on the part of the founder to have the value of phonography recognised in the way in which it is now everywhere acknowledged. At the outset Mr. Pitman had a hard struggle to convince the public of the utility of such a system of writing. In and out of season, however, he wrote and lectured on the subject, and in due time he reaped his reward.

Yet the beginning of Isaac Pitman's literary enterprise was quite unambitious. He set up the types for his own books, read the proofs, kept his accounts, and attended to the correspondence, being at his desk every morning by six o'clock. When the business began to prosper, Mr. Pitman opened a warehouse in London for the sale of his works, and afterwards erected the Phonetic Institute in Bath, which is one of the most attractive buildings in the town so celebrated for its thermal springs.

The library of phonography is now an extensive one, and includes some of the finest works in literature. That of books in phonetic type is less extensive, for this system of spelling, notwithstanding Mr. Pitman's persistent advocacy of it, has not obtained anything approaching the popularity possessed by phonography. In 1887, the jubilee of phonography was celebrated in London, Lord Rosebery acting as president. Mr. Pitman was knighted in 1894, and died in 1897.

WORDS OF THE WISE.

ONE great reason why virtue is so little practised, is its being so ill understood.

IT is swect to feel by what fine spun threads our affections are drawn together.

To act upon a determination made in anger, is like embark-ing in a vessel during a storm.

THERE are men who never help the world much until they get out of it. Thy scoret is thy servant till thou reveal it, and then thou art its servant.

15.-There is an old rhyme which tells ns that

The cuckoo is a bonny bird, She sings as she flies ; She brings as good tidings, She tells us no hes.

She sucks little birds' eggs To make her voice clear, And she sings " Cuckoo ! "

Three months in the year.

The cuckoo is the subject of one of the oldest English songs now renaming, which is to be found in the Harleian MS., No. 978. It dates from the thirteenth century, and is ac-companied with musical noise-the oldest example of secular music extant. It is in old English, but may be easily translated:-

Summer is icumen in,

Lhude sing cuccu ;

Groweth sed and bloweth med, And springeth the wde nu.

Sing Cuccu I

A we bletch after unne, Lhouth after culve cu; Builue stericth, buck verleth [goes to Builue stericth, buck verleth [goes to [fer];

Wel sings the, cuccu : Ne swik [never cease] thu naver nu.

Of all poets who have sung the praises of this spring bird, the gratest and best, perhaps, is Wil-liam Wordsworth. Here are two of the verses he wrote about the enckoo:-

O blithe new-comer! I have heard. I hear thee and rejoice; O cuckoo / shall I call thee bird.

Or but a wandering voice

Thrice welcome, darling of the spring Even yet thou art to me No bird, but an invisible thing,

A voice, a mystery !

Chaucer links the enckoo with the nightingale, and John Logan -or is it Michael Bruce?--has made the bird the subject of a famous poem, He says:--

Sweet bird ! thy bower is ever green, Thy sky is ever clear ; Thou hast no sorrow in thy song,

No winter in thy year.

"GOOD DEEDS REMAIN: ALL THINGS ELSE PERISH."

16. In point of numbers the Battle of Culloden was not impos-ing, only about eight thousand men being engaged on each side but it was of lasting importance as soluting the chains of the expairiated house of Stuart to the British throne.

19. — The Earl of Beaconsfield used to characterise as his best mot his retort on the Taunton elector his retort on the Taunton elector when he was standing for that borough. On the day of nomination the opposing candidate uttered a string of platitudes upon which he deckard himselt determined to "stand." He was passionately fond of music, and took delight in surrounding himself with musicans and In listening to their perform-ances. His Court became, under the direction of his daughters, numerous and cay numerous and gay.

Cronwell, however, was not very digailed in his habits. He was, in truth, a man of a coarse humour, fond of playing tricks of a rough and childish character. It is well authenticated that at the marringe of his daughter Frances to Mr. Rich in 1657, not a year before his death, he amused himself by throwing about sack possett among the ladics to spoil their clothes. He also flung wet sweetments about and with the same article daubed the stools on which the ladies were to sit.

SCHOLAR, TRAVELLER, AND AUTHOR.

r MONGST authors there have been few with a more A unique and interesting personality than George Bor-row, the author of "The Bible in Spain," and many other well-known books.

He was born at East Dereham, Norfolk, in 1803, his father being a Cornish man and captain of a regiment of inilitia, his mother being descended from a Huguenot family. He had only one brother, a beautiful, clever, and amiable lad, who died when he had just reached manhood.

Borrow himself seems to have been a dull child, and of unprepossessing appearance. He dates the growth of his faculty for learning from that never-to-be-forgotten day when "Robinson Crusse" fell into his hands. He read it, and re-read it, and gazed with wonder and delight on its pictures. From that moment he studied with avidity, and was seized with the longing, which never left him, to become a scholar and a traveller.

He was naturally active and strong, and fond of outdoor pursuits. Shooting and riding he delighted in; but he fell asleep over the fishing-rod-it was too slow. Borrow was born to be a wanderer.

In his boyhood he accompanied his father's regiment in all its changes of residence, and thus became early accustomed to variety of scene. When he first visited Scotland, he tells us that at the sight of the noble river Tweed he was so affected that he wept with admiration. He remained for a year or two in Edinburgh, where his home was with the garrison in the Castle.

At that time the Nor' Loch filled the valley now occupied by the beautiful Princes Street Gardens, and "bickers" were still common between "New Town" and "Old Town," in which Borrow took a frequent and willing part. He became a pupil, too, of Edinburgh's famous High School, where he was soon taught, what was then held to be, the inferiority of the English, although a wee thocht behind the Scotch, are no to be sneezed at. I respect England, for I have an auntie married there!"

To the grief of his parents, Borrow took to the Scotch residing in Clonnel, to find that their boy actually gloried in learning the "wild Irish." Borrow had been born with a passion for languages : before he was eighteen years of age he understood English, Welsh, Irish, Latin, Greek, Hebrew, German, Danish, French, Italian, Spanish, and Portuguese. In mature life it is said that he knew at least thirty different tongues. The gipsies called him "Lavengro," or "word-master," just as they had called him on one occasion "Sapengro," or "snake-master," when they found him carrying about a tame viper for a pet !

Borrow's father at last settled permanently at Norwich, where his son attended the Grammar School till he was fifteen. For the next five years he passed through the drudgery of a legal apprenticeship. But while Blackstone lay "law " (as George Meredith says) "being thus brought into direct contact with his brain-pan"-"Ab. Gwilym," the Welsh Bard, lay inside the desk, and absorbed the whole attention of this youth with the passion for languages. So he became proficient in Welsh, but remained a novice in law. "I have ever loved to be as explicit as possible; on which account I have never attained to any proficiency in the law, the essence of which is said to be ambiguity," he canstically says.

Borrow went to a law office, simply to please his parents; so, when in 1823 his father died, he abandoned the profession and went to London to seek his fortune, carrying under his

6,-One October afternoon, as Humboldt, the great naturalist, was Humboldt, the great naturalist, was passing through a market, his gee fell on a pair of horse pistols inlaid with pearl, which attracted his attention by reason of their anti-quated design and artistic work-manship. He purchased them, and on his way home made the inter-esting discovery that the paper in which they were wrapped consisted of heas, "or or secue from destruc-tion present from destruc-of Herbs." In order to rescue from destruc-tion the remainder of this ancient specimen of the art of printing, Humboldt at once retraced his steps to the market. But he was unable to find the vendor of the pistols, for all the brokers imagined that he had come to cancel the bargain. However, on his assur-ance that he wanted to return some chance he do received in excess chauge he had received in excess, all the brokers rushed out of their shops to report themselves.

Thus beleaguered on all sides, the great savant lireatened them with his pistols, which had the effect of scattering the crowd and causing the real vendor to declare himself by requesting the gentleman to put up his pistols, as they were not loaded, adding he was now prepared loaded, auding he was now prepared to receive the money. Humboldt followed the broker into his dings tore, asked to see the old book in guestion, which, with its vectum binding, he found, with the exception of a few leaves torn out at the end, to be in a good state of preservation, and an ex-ceedingly are specimen of its kind.

ceedingly rare specimen of its kind. On being asked the price of the volume, the broker took down an old pair of trousers that had been reseated, and replied: "Give me tweive shillings and you shall have these nice trousers into the bargain, Theorill acoust for you to onthe data They'll serve for you to cut a dash in on Sundays!"

The bargain was concluded, but Humboldt declined the nether appendages.

In after years, when showing friends the treasures of his library, he never failed to recount the story of the purchase of the old "Book of Herbs."

25 .- Some years ago a friend 25.—Some years ago a filend thus wrote from his own knowledge of the late R. W. Emerson, the American philosopher:—"To get a clear and adequate conception of Emerson, one must see him at home, in undress, so to speak, if he may be considered as ever in uniform, who is the soul of simplicity and sincerity. He is the kindest of husbands, the most considerate of fathers.

"It is related of him that, when any thought strikes him, when any suggestion occurs, or any pat quotation is recalled, he invariably stops the thing he is doing and jots down the thought or suggestion for future use or reference. Even in the middle of the night he observes the middle of the night he observes this habit, knowing that a good thing may be lost for ever unless recorded. "Before his second wife got used to his ways, she would ask him, when he arose to strike a light, 'Are you 11, husbaud?' 'No, my dear,' he would reply, 'only an idea.'. idea

"Nobody has ever seen him out of temper, or even ruffled. He is the embodiment of calm courtesy, of placid refinement – the very reverse of the supremely nervous, irritable being an author is believed to be, and often is, in truth."

27.-It must be said of Calvin that in all he did he was firmly convinced of the righteousness of his cause. He never sinned against his conscience; never even parleyed his conscience; never even parleyed with his conscience. He spared not himself. Never strong, his untiring zeal, energy, and activity were extraordinary. If he made mistakes, they were few and far between. The good he did to the Protestant cause was incalculable. He had to fight against tremendous foes, the bitterest opposition, and he triumphed over all.

he triumphed over all. He was a man more to be feared than to be loved, but, from his intellectual greatness, he no doubt felt himself separated from most of his companions, and, from his boyhood, had always shown himself lufflerents to fried dovotion by in his cause; for which, indeed, he shortened bisdays. shortened his days

29. Till 1859 a religions service was observed in every church and chapel in England to celebrate the Restoration of Charles II.-in the words of the Act of Parliament, "to render thanks to God for the King's peaceable restoration to actual possession and exercise of his legal authority over his people' people, arm his translations of certain Welsh, German, and Danish letters.

In London he found that the drudgery of a literary apprenticeship was at least as bad as a legal one. He became a hack writer to Sir Richard Philips of the Monthly Magazine, and assisted him to compile the "Newgate Calendar," but could find no publisher for his ballads. His remuneration barely allowed him to live; and his master was harsh and tyrannical. But all the time Borrow was still studying in the great world-school, and learning all he could of men and languages. Getting tired of servitude, his gipsy nature answerted isself once more, and he left London and wandered through England with a bundle and a stick, and met with nany wonderful adventures, which are recounted in his marvellously fascinating manner in "Lavengro" and "Romany Rye," Then came his fortunate appointment as agent of the Bible Then came his fortunate appointment as agent of the Bible Society, in which capacity he visited France, Spain, Germany, Russia, and Morocco. On his return in 1840 he married Russia, and Morocco. On his return in 1840 he maried Mary Clarke, the widow of a naval officer whom he had met in Spain, and settled down at Oulton, near Lowestoft, in Suffolk, where his wife possessed a small estate. Here he wrote in 1841 "The Gipsies in Spain," and in 1842 his famous " Bible in Spain."

In 1844 he visited Hungary and Turkey with the object of still further improving his acquaintance with the gipsies, collecting and writing down their songs, and bringing back with him also a beautiful Arab horse, on which he loved to ride about and create a sensation. And a sensation indeed he seems to have created wherever he went, for he had a splendid figure, was 6 feet 2 inches in height, had splendid brown eyes, an oval, beardless face, a loud, rich voice, and a great mass of silvery hair.

In 1850 Borrow published "Lavengro," that romantic auto-biography, which he continued in 1857 under the name of "Romany Rye." A tour in Wales gave birth to his "Wild Wales"; and in 1874 he published "Romany Lavo-Lil," an account of the English gipsy language. His later years were spent in great retirement; and he died at Oulton in the beginning of August, 1881.

The "Bible in Spain," perhaps the best known of his works, was published in December, 1842, and was at once received with enthusiastic praise. And no wonder ! for it was a record of stirring adventure in a country little known, and written by a man who knew how to make the most of his story.

Theodore Watts speaks of Borrow as "a splendid literary amateur"; but he was by no means an amateur when he wrote the "Bible in Spain." He may not have arrived at his literary power through the usual channels; but he had already served a good apprenticeship to literature, and studied the best models. And in this book he mingles life-like description with romantic adventure and brisk dialogue in such a way that the interest of the reader never flags.

One secret of his success is that the author is himself enthnsiastically interested in his subject. Spain, as he tells us, had been to him always a country of romance, and had He was thoroughly filled the day-dreams of his youth. versed in its history, language, and traditions; and he enjoyed his sojourn there ; he tells us that the five years he spent in Spain were the happiest in his existence.

It must be remembered also that he was himself a man of In this to retrientible at a so that he was minisfit a half of unique and interesting personality—a personality which prominently pervades the whole book. He was a man of great strength and fearlessness; a splendid rider; as ac-complished a puglist as he was a scholar; and a man above all who loved humanity, who mixed by preference with the odd, the outcast, the degraded classes of society; a man who kept his eyes open and took an interest in everything.

We see from his book, too, that although a lover of Spain, he was none the less a patriot. England to him was first of all countries, and East Anglia the best part of England.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR.

A GOOD DOSE OF RHUBARB.

WHE following bit of autobiography appears in a sketch of the late Ven. Archdeacon Denison, who was born in 1805, and who died in 1891.

When he was a young man, his mother gave him a medicine chest. "I had a gardener then," he says, "an old soldier, William Finlay. He came to me and said-

"' I'm bad all over, inside and out, wants you to give me some physic. They tells me you're got a medicine-chest, and a book as belongs to it.' 'Well,' said I,'I have; what will you take?' 'Some rhubarb,' said he. 'I'll look in the book,' I said, 'and see how much.'

"Now the book has - I have it still with the chestthe book has at the beginning a table of doses, quite an inexcusable snare. I think, to simple people. It is con-structed on a hypothetical principle—'If to an adult a dram, so much to other ages.' The hypothetical part escaped me; an adult one dram—a dram, that's 60 grains – magnesia to be added upon experience; how much? I suppose half-30 grains-90 grains in all.

"It looked a great deal ; but I said to myself, 'Must be all "It looked a great dear; buu I sau to mysel, and so that right, here's the book; Finlay's an adult." He was over seventy. So I rang the bell. 'Here's your physic; I hope it will put you all right.' I be to take all that?' 'Yes, that's and the sevent is the sevent sevent sevent sevent sevent sevent. just what the book says : small doses foolish things. 'All right, says he. Then I began to encourage him, 'Now Finlay, you're not very well; don't try and do any work to-day; go home, keep yourself warm, and tell your wife to mix it up in some warm water-not too much water. You'll be much better in the morning. I should, if I were you, take it at once.' 'All right,' he said.

" Poor man ! his confidence in me had no limits. I thought no more about it till next morning. My conscience was quite easy. I had done a wise and kind thing.

"When I was dressing in the morning I looked out of the window. There was Finlay standing between me and the garden wall, the looked, so to speak, shadowy-almost ghostly. The wall, as it were, was visible through him. But, as it was daylight, I wasn't afraid. 'Hope you're better this morning adylight, i wash carrad. "Hope you re octor this morning ; glad to think you must be, or you would not have come up." 'Well, he said, 'I be a trifle better.' 'Ah,'I said, 'I thought so. You took your physic, of course?' 'Why, didn't you tell me to take it? I'll tell you all about it. I goes home to my wife and says, "There, you mix that up; mind, not much water." 'Lord's saike, 'she said, 'you not be going to take all that? Why, it would kill a horse and a cow!" 'You foolish 'wou of do you there are a cow do ge Lide you." woman, hold your tongue; go and do as I bids you. Master's got a book and knows a sight more than you." So she goes and mixes it up in a slop-basin, and brings it back with a and mixes it up in a stop-cosin, and orings to tack with a spoon standing up in the middle.' At this part of his report I began to have misgivings. He went on: 'I got him down, but it was a tough job, and goes to bed.' I draw a veil over what followed. I struggled to look sympathetic, but my misgivings increased. 'Well,' I said, as soon as I could steady my voice, 'go into the kitchen and have some nice warm breakfast, and then we'll see what is to be done next.'

"Half an hour after I was on my way to Oxford as fast as I could go, and went to my dcar friend Dr. Wootton. In the course of conversation I asked him in a kind of careless way about rhubarb, as a guide for my parochial practice. 'Well, about rhubarb, as a gnude ior my parconnai practice. 'Well, 'Yes; what is a good dose?' 'Eighteen grains is quite enough for anybody.' 'Eighteen grains,' I said. 'Why, I gave a man sixty yesterday and thirty magnesia.' He opened his great eyes, and said, 'Is he very old?' 'Yes; over seventy. Then perhaps he won't die! Go home as fast as you can and pour in porter and port wine." And Finlay didn't die. He survived for many years his experience of the Archdeacon's medicine-chest.

He meant to convert his 2600,000 in course of time into something like twenty-three millions. millions.

The result of these trusts being upheld by the Courts was to create a mania for accumulations. One man gave instructions for a will which should postpone all enjoyment of his property until the death of the last survivor of all the members of the peerage living at his death.

To prevent the repetition of these absurdities, Thellusson's Act was passed, which in effect forbids the accumulation of income for a longer accumulation of income for a longer period than the settler's life or twenty-one years from his death, or the ninority of any person living at his death, or of any person who would under the settlement be otherwise entitled to the income, etc. etc

Even so, however, the beneficial enjoyment of property may be postponed for a very long time.

Almost all the great men of his day who had personal acquaintance with Coleridge speak of him in a strain of admiration. "I think," says Dr. Arnold, "that, with all his faults, old Sam was more of a great this opinion that, since Shakespeare, Milton, and Bacon, "we have had nothing comparable with him." Wordsworth said that he had "seen men who had done wonderful things, but only one wonderful anamely. Coleridge." Longfellow possessed Coleridge's wen copy of the first edition of the "Stepline Leaves," with notes in the auth Mariner," with the sanza. FIRST STEP TO FAME AND THE FORTUNE.

REMARKABLE violin virtuoso was Ole Bull, the Norwegian, whose death in 1880 was deplored as a national loss. In the main he was a self-taught player. His individuality was so strangely marked as to leave but little room for the direct influence of a teacher. He was himself a true son of the North, of athletic build and independent character; and the ruling passion of his life was the love he bore to his native land. "The glorious seenery," says one writer, "of the mountains and fjords of his home, the weird poetry of the Sagas of the North, took hold of his sensitive mind from early childhood and filled his imagination. They were reflected in his style of playing and gave it that originality and poetic charm by which he never failed to captivate his audience.

An ever-to-be-remembered incident in the life of this "flaxen-haired Paganini," as he was often called, is the following. We give it as it is described by the famous Danish writer, Hans Christian Andersen, of fairy-tale fame. Behind the Alps is the land of miracles, the world of adventure. We do not believe in miracles; adventure, on the contrary, is very dear to us-we listen to it with willingness, and such a one as only happens to genius took place in Bologna in the year 1834.

The poor Norseman, Ole Bull, whom at that time no one knew, had wandered thus far southward. In his fatherland some persons certainly thought that there was something in him ; but most people, as is generally the case, predicted that Ole Bull would amount to nothing. He himself felt that he must go out into the world in order to cherish the spark into a flame, or else to quench it entirely. Everything seemed at first to indicate that the latter would be the case. He had arrived at Bologna, but his money was spent, and there was no place where there was any prospect of getting more-no friend, not a countryman, held forth a helping hand towards him;

he sat alone in a poor attic in one of the small streets. It was already the second day that he had been here, and he had scarcely tasted food. The water-jug and the violin were the only two things that cheered the young and suffering artist. He began to doubt whether he really were in possession of that talent with which God had endowed him, and in his despondency breathed into the violin those tones which have seized our hearts in so wonderful a manner-those tones which have told us how deeply he had suffered and felt.

The same evening a great concert was to be given in the principal theatre. The house was filled to overflowing; the Grand Duke of Tuscany was in the royal box; Madame Mailbran and Monsieur de Beriot were to lend their able assistance in the performance of several pieces. The concert was to commence, but matters looked inauspicious--the manager's star was not in the ascendant-Monsieur de Beriot had taken umbrage and refused to play.

All was trouble and confusion on the stage, when, in this dilemma, the wife of Rossini, the composer, entered, and in the midst of the manager's distress related that on the previous evening, as she passed through one of the narrow streets, she had suddenly stopped on hearing the strange articles, and instrument, which certainly resembled those of a violin, but yet seemed to be different. She had asked the landlord of the house who it was who lived in the attic whence the sounds proceeded, and he had replied that it was a young man from the north of Europe, and that the instrument he played was certainly a lyre, but she felt sure that it could not be so; it must either be a new sort of an instrument or an artist who knew how to treat his instrument in an unusual manner. At the same time she said they ought to send

It was customary in his chapel for notes to be sent to the pulpit, re-questing prayers for varions ob-jects, and one Sabbath Mr. Hill was proceeding with the reading of these requests as usual, when he found himself in the midst of one of the following purport .-- Prayers are requested for the Rev. Among other things a certain rocky crag meeded to be planted with trees, to relieve the grim barrenness of its appearance. The question was how to duit, as it was impossible for any man to climb the crag in order to set seeds or plants in the clefts of the rock.

A happy idea occurred to Nasmyth. Having observed in front of the castle a pair of small cannon, it occurred to him to turn them to account. A number of tin canisters we will do with oll sorts of suitable were lifted with all sorts of suitable tree seeds. The cannon were loaded, and the canisters were fired against the high face of the rock. They the high face of the rock. They burst, and scattered the seed in all directions.

Some years after Nasmyth was delighted to find that this scheme of planting by artillery had proved successful; the trees were flourishing in all the recesses of the cliff.

31. John Bunyan, the famous author of the "Pilgrim's Progress." was a prisoner in the gaol of Bed-ford, with intervals of precarious liberty, for twelve years. He refused to be set at large on the condition of preaching no more. "No," was his brave answer, "if you let me out to-day I'll preach again tomorrow."

A few months before the Revo-lution of 1683 he caught a fever in consequence of a long ride from Reading to London in the rain. He died at the house of his friend Mr. died at the noise of his Friend Mr. Strudwick, a groerer, at the sign of the Star, on Snow Hill, London. He was buried in Bunhill Fields, called by the poet Southey the "Campo Santo of Disseuters."

for him, and he might, perhaps, supply the place of Monsieur de Beriot by playing the pieces that must otherwise be wanting in the evening's entertainment.

This advice was acted upon, and a messenger was despatched to the street where Ole Bull sat in his attic. To him it was a message from heaven. Now or never, thought he, and, though ill and exhansted, he took his violin under his arm and accompanied the messenger to the theatre.

Two minutes after his arrival the manager informed the assembled audience that a young Norwegian, consequently a "young savage," would give a specimen of his skill on the violin instead of Monsieur de Beriot.

Ole Bull appeared. The theatre was brilliantly illuminated. He perceived the scrutinising looks of the ladies nearest to him; one of them, who watched him very closely through her opera-glass, smilingly whispered to her neighbour, with a mocking mien, about the diffident manners of the artist. He looked at his clothes, and in the strong blaze of light they looked rather the worse for wear. The lady made her remarks about them, and her smile pierced his very heart.

He had taken no notes with him which he could give to the orchestra; he was consequently obliged to play without any accompaniment. But what should he play? "I will give them the fantasies which at this moment cross my mind!" And he played improvisatorily remembrances of his own life -melodies from his soul. It was as if every thought, every feeling, passed through the violin and revealed itself to the audience.

The most astounding acclamations resounded through the house. Ole Bull was called forth again and again. They still desired a new improvisation. He then addressed himself to that lady whose mocking shill had ant him on his appearance, and asked for a theme to vary. She gave him one from "Norma." He then asked two other ladies, who chose one from "Othello" and one from "Moses." Now, thought he, if I take all three, unite them with each other, and form one piece, I shall then flatter each of the ladies, and perhaps the composition will produce an effect. He did so. Powerfully as the rod of the magician the bow glided across the strings, while cold drops of perspiration trickled down his forehead. There was fever in his blood; it was as if the mind would free itself from the body; fire shot from his eyes; he felt himself almost swooning; yet a few bold strokes-they were his last bodily powers.

Flowers and wreaths from the charmed multitude fluttered about him, who, exhausted by mental conflict and hunger, was nearly fainting. He went to his home accompanied by music. Before the house sounded the serenade for the hero of the evening, who meanwhile crept up the dark and narrow staircase, higher and higher, into his poor garret, where he clutched the water-jug to refresh himself. When all was silent the landlord came to him, brought him food and drink, and gave him a better room. The next day he was informed that the theatre was at his service, and that a concert was to be arranged for him. An invitation from the Duke of Tuscany next followed, and from that moment name and fame were founded for Ole Bull.

NOTES TO THE CALENDAR.

The man who always does his best, will find a steady demand for the things that he can do.

-Notwithstanding the fact that

L-Notwithstanding the ract that September is the harvest month, we find six evil days set down in one old calculate and two in another. Both calculates are agreed that the sixth and seventh are dangerous the sixth and seventh are dangerous thing. The other unlucky days are the birth fourth twonty first and the third, fourth, twenty-first and twenty-second.

Yet, despite these nnpropitious days spread over two-thirds of the month, an ancient poet was found ready to sing-

"In tyme of harvest mery it is ynough.

Peres and apples hangen on bough; The hayward bloweth mery horne, The hajvara blowern mery horn In every felde ripe is corn; The grapes hangen on the vyne; Swete is treue love of fyne."

September boasts very little weather lore, though one would have expected to find plenty placed to its credit. It, however, "dries up ditches or breaks down hedges," and it is thus invoked-

"September blow soft, Till the corn's in the loft."

5 .- A nobleman of the Court of France, taking leave of Louis XIV., who was sending him as ambassador to another sovereign, the monarch said to him, "The chief direction I have to give to you is to pursue a course of conduct entirely different

"Sire," replied the new ambas-sador, "I trust that I shall act so that your majesty will not have to give similar instructions to my successor.

11.-Sir Walter Scott, walking one day along the bauks of the Yarrow, where Mungo Park was born, saw the traveller throwing stones into the water, and anxiously watching the bubbles that succeeded.

Scott inquired the object of his occupation. "I was thinking," answered Park, "how often I had thus tried to sound the rivers in Africa by calculating how long a time had elaused before the bubbles rose to the surface.

It was a slight circumstance, but the traveller's safety frequently depended upon it.

18.—A lady desired Dr. Johnson to give his opinion of a work she had just written; adding that, if if would not do, she begged him to tell her, for she had other irons in the fire; and in case of it not being likely to succeed, she could bring likely to succeed.

"Then," said the doctor, after turning over a few leaves, "I advise you, madam, to put it where your other irons are."

20.-The famous battle of the ima was fought between the Alma Anna was longht between the English, French, and Turkish army on the one side, and the Russians on the other. The allies numbered about 57,000 men, the Russians about 46,000

This is rather an exaggeration, but it is certainly a fact that Huenture have read a great part of Huditras though they may never have onened its pages.

As examples of lines, some wise, some witty, and some absurd, that have passed into general circulation, let us take the following :-

29. Michaehmas Day, or, to give it ats full title, the day of St., Michael and All Angels, is a great fastival of the Church of Rome and a feast observed by the Church of England. There is a widely prevalent custom of marking the day with a goose at dinner. It was a superstitle that to eat goose at Michaehmas was to make certain of easy circumstances for the ensuing year.

In men we various ruling passions find,

In women two almost divide the kind: Those only fixd, they first or last obey. The love of pleasure and the love of sway. A CASE OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

The early part of this century the green of a rich bleacher in the north of Ireland had been frequently robbed at night to a very considerable amount, notwithstanding the utmost vigilance of the proprietor and his servants to protect it, and without the slightest clue being furnished for the detection of the robber.

Effectually and repeatedly baffled by the ingenuity of the thief or thieves, the proprietor at length offered a reward of £100 for the apprehension of any person or persons detected robbing the green.

A few days after this proclamation, the master was at midnight raised from his bed by the alarm of a faithful servant, "there was somebody with a lantern crossing the green." The master started from his bed and flew to the window—it was so the hurried on his clothes, and armed hinself with a pixtol ; the servant flew for his loaded musket, and they cautionsly followed the light. The person with the lantern (a man) was, as they approached, on tip-toe, distinctly seen stooping and groping on the ground ; he was seen lifting and tumbling the linen. The servant fired ; the robber fell.

The man and master now proceeded to examine the spot. The robber was dead ; he was recognised to be a youth about nineteen, who resided a few fields off. The linen was cut across; bundles of it were tied up; and upon searching and examining farther, the servant, in the presence of his master, picked up a penknife, with the name of the unhappy youth engraved upon the handle.

The evidence was conclusive, for in the morning the lantern was acknowledged by the afflicted and implicated father of the boy to be his lantern. Defence was dumb.

The faithful servant received the hundred pounds reward, and was besides promoted to be the confidential overseer of the establishment.

This faithful servant, this confidential overseer, was shortly after proved to have been himself the thief, and was hanged at Dundalk for the murder of the youth whom he had cruelly betrayed.

It appeared, upon the clearest evidence, and by the dying confession and description of the wretch himself, that all this circumstantial evidence was preconcerted by him, not only to screen himself from the imputation of former robberies, but to get the hundred pounds reward.

The dupe, the victim he chose for this diabolical purpose, was artless, affectionate, and obliging. The boy had a favourite knife, a penknife with his name engraved upon the handle, and the first act of the real robber was to coax the boy to give him that knife as a keepsake.

On the evening of the fatal day he prepared the bleaching green to give evidence against the boy. He tore the linen from the pegs in some places, he cut it across in others; he turned it up in heaps; he tied it up in bundles as if ready to be removed, and placed the knife he had received in one of the cuts he had himself made.

Matters being thus arranged, he invited the devoted youth to supper, and as the night was dark, he told him to bring the lantern to light him home. At supper, or after, he artfully turned the conversation upon the favourite knife, which he affected with great concern to miss, and pretending that the last recollection he had of it was using it on a particular spot of the bleaching green, described the spot to the obliging boy and begged him to see if it was there. He lit the lantern he had been desired to bring with him to light him home, and with alacrity proceeded upon his fatal errand.

As soon as the man saw his victim was completely in the snare, he gave the alarm, and the melancholy crime already described was the result.

Could there have been possible a stronger case of circumstantial evidence than this?

POPE.

WORDS OF THE WISE.

A MAN will never change his mind, if he has no mind to change.

MEN of great genius should not forget that their failings or vices are more apt to be noticed and even admired than their virtues. THERE is no doctrine so false as not to contain in it some truth.

An active and faithful memory doubles life; for it brings a man again upon its stage with all those who have made their exits.

Numa reduced them to twenty-nine; but Julius and Augustus Casar each added one day, so that the original number was restored, and has not since been altered.

"THE LITTLE WIZARD OF WALL STREET."

 $\begin{array}{c} \textbf{T} \text{ may, without exaggeration, be said that Mr. Jay Gould} \\ \textbf{-the Little Wizard of Wall Street as he was generally \\ called-who died in the close of 1892, was one of the most remarkable Americans of the last half century. For no other citizen of the United States has, unaided by family connection, unassisted by friends, or what is commonly called "Inck," written binnself so deeply into the day by day financial history of the Republic; no other man, perhaps, exercised such a baneful influence on the moral character of the community. \end{array}$

Judged as a money-getter alone, he was undoubtedly one of the most successful men of the age. About forty years ago his entire fortune amounted to £1,000, and he was practically an unknown man, a director in a small bank in the slowgoing town of Strondsburg, Pennsylvania. When he died he owned or controlled one-tenth of the railway mileage of the United States, one-twentieth of the unitedge of the world, owned or controlled 180,000 miles of telegraph wires, over which one-quarter of the telegraph business of the world is handled, and was the possessor of a fortune estimated at from fifteen to twenty millions sterling.

And what makes this result all the incre astounding is that Mr. Gould enjoyed no special monopoly, was protected and fostered by no special tariff, was the owner of no great patent right producing a certain revenue. His fortune was made in a way open to any of his countrymen, and made largely out of his countrymen, who tried to play, but failed in playing, his peculiar rôle of railway wrecker.

¹ Jay Gould was born on a small farm near Roxbury, a small town in Delaware County, New York, on May 27, 1836, and was, therefore, at the time of his death, in his 57th year. Until he reached the age of fourteen he assisted his father with the farm work. At that age he entered the Hobart Academy. His father being unable to support him while he was obtaining an education, the boy kept the village blacksmith's books, and received in return for this service hoard and lodging. The expenses of his schooling were defrayed by the local shopkeeptr, for whom he did odd jobs.

He early developed a taste for mathematics, and, upon leaving school, decided to become a surveyor. His first work, a map of Ulster County, New York, gave such satisfaction that he was encouraged to extend the scope of his labour, and when only a lad of seventeen he had organised and put into the field five surveying parties. As a result of this enterprise he found himself, at the age of nineteen, with a credit balance at the bank of $4,000. But before long overwork and exposure to the malarial air of the swamps brought on a serious attack of typhoid fever, and this led him to abandon his chosen profession.

About this time he made the acquaintance of Mr. Zadock Pratt, a timber merchant, who despatched him to the timber district of New York State to select a site for and to open up a saw mill. This work he accomplished to the satisfaction of Mr. Pratt, who took him into partnership, and later cn withdrew in his favour. But Mr. Gould, even at this early age, seems to have possessed a wonderful talent for r ading the signs of the times, and noting the growth of 'Wild Cat' banks, as they were called at the time, all over gue country, and seeing trouble in the near future, as a concounce of inflated currency, and extended credits, he sold vut his timber mill and went to live in Strondsburg, Pennsylvania, converting, meanwhile, all his little fortune into gold.

The panie of 1857 swept over the United States, and all railway securities dropped as far below their natural value as they had ranged above it heretofore. This was Gould's 11th Month. 1899.

WORDS OF THE WISE.

THERE is so immediate a relation between our thoughts and gestures that a woman must think well to look well.

THERE are few people who are more often in the wrong than those who cannot endure to be so.

COMMEND a fool for his wit, or a knave for his honesty, and they will receive you into their bosom.

No action will be considered as blameless, unless the will was so, for by the will the act was dictated.

NOTES TO THE CALENDAR.

The secret of success is concentra-tion; wherever there has been a great life or a great work, that has gone before. Taste everything a little, look at everything a little, but live for one thing. Anything is possible to a man who knows his end, and makes straight for it, and for it alone.

13.-Rossini was, we believe the hero of the "record" price for a few lessons. When he was in London in 1823-4, the composer, as the story goes, was worried by a nobleman who wanted singing lessons, and in who wanted singing resons, and in order to put a stop to the annoyance he asked the prohibitive price of a hundred guineas a lesson. To his amazement the offer was accepted.

20.-In the annals of literature there is no example recorded of pre-cocious talent which can vie with that of Thomas Chatterton.

that of Thomas Chatterton. When he was about sixteen years of age the new bridge at Bristol was completed, and in connection with that event he gave to the world the first article of the series of literary first article of the series of literary him. It was sent he primov failsed Journal, and was called "a descrip-tion of the Friars first passing over the old bridge: taken from an ancient manuscript."

The language, however, was not that of any one period; nor was the style, nor in many instances the form of com-nory, that of the fifteenth cen-bury, the age to which the assigned liem. them.

He pretended that they were written by Thomas Rowler, a priest, and Thomas Cauynge, and that they were copied from parchments, which his father had found in a large box in a room over the chapel on the north side of Redcliffe church. While he was engaged in com-posing these poems he was also a liberal contributor of prose and verse to the magazines. Having, in his moody moments. He pretended that they were 25.-Lockhart's strong, complex character, and his reserve, have caused hin to be often misjudged.

"He had a very warm heart, often concealed by a cold, reserved manner," "There never lived a man more high-minded and truthful; more willing to make sacrifices for the comfort of others; more faithful to old ties of friendship and affection."

In appearance he was tall, slight, and handsome, with dark hair and a broad, black brow, indicating force and penetration.

29. - Donizetti was one of the four men who haveled the nusical and dramatic movement in ltaji during the present century. The rival of Bellini, he walked in the footsteps of Rossini, and prepared the way for Verdi. He was, par excellence, the musician of list time and of his race. He saw, as the hira and of his race. He saw, as the hira and of his race, and the saw sinplay of uscless science, always sinerro alike in his sad and in his gay moments.

30.—St. Andrew, the patron saint of Scotland, for some unaccountable reason, would seem to have been the patron saint of lovers; as the poet has said—

"To Andrew all the lovers and the lusty wooers come."

In a "History of Kent," written by Hasted, an account is given of a curious custom which used to be observed on this day at Easling, before the Game Laws were as strict as they are now :-- as they are now :-"On St. Andrew's Day, November 30, there is yearly a diversion called squirrel hunting in this and the neighbouring parishes, when the laborners and lower kinds of people, assembling together, form a lawless rabble, and being accourted with guns, poles, clubs, and other such weapons, spond the greatest part of the day in parading through the woods and grounds, with loud shouting the second state of the such woods and grounds, with loud shouting the second state of the second state woods and state of the second state ridges, and, in short, whatever comes in their way, breaking down the hedges, and doing much other mischief, and in the evening betaking themelves to the alchouses, finish their career there, as is usual with such sort of gentry."

opportunity, and he put every dollar he had in the world into the securities of the Rutland and Washington Railway-a railway with whose physical condition and natural traffic possibilities he was perfectly familiar. These securities he had the good fortune to secure at about 10 per cent. of their face value.

With the return of confidence and the recovery of trade, Mr. Gould launched out still further, and, after two successful speculations, moved to New York City, in 1859, and established himself as a broker in Wall Street, his fortune at this time being estimated at £20,000, all in cash. Every dollar of this money he now invested in the securities of the Erie Railway Company, becoming a director and afterwards its president, an office he retained until the reorganisation of the company in 1872.

It was during this period that the great struggle for control took place between Commodore Vanderbit and Gould. Jay Gould had "gone short" of—that is, sold—his own shares; Vanderbilt, who had been watching for just this opportunity, bought the shares as fast as Gould sold them. But just when he thought to crush Gould and wrest the control of the railway from him, Gould issued an immense batch of new shares, and so got safely out of the difficulty. This issue was declared illegal, and Gould was ultimately forced to restore £1,200,000, but this came too late to serve Vanderbilt, and the attack only resulted in adding some millions to Jay Gould's fortune.

After leaving the Eric Company, Mr. Gould bought his way into the Union Pacific, Wabash, Texas Pacific, St. Louis and Northern, Missouri Facific, and Missouri, Kansas, and Texas, taking the latter out of the hands of the receiver. He then turned his attention to the field of telegraphy. He organised the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company, and when this company was absorbed by the Western Union, the graph Company, which a few years later was absorbed in the same way. After this he bought the control of the Western Union. In 1881 he became largely interested in the elevated railway system of New York City.

From time to time combinations were formed to ruin him, but in some way the "Little Wizard of Wall Street," managed to defeat them all. Upon one occasion, it was reported in Wall Street that "Gould was bankrupt." Two hours later —it was on March 13, 1882—Mr. Gould invited a committee of bankers to meet at his private office. When they had all arrived he handed over for their inspection certificates of stock, in his own name, having a face value of £10,600,600, at the same time offering to produce certificates for £4,000,000 more if the committee had not seen enough to convince them of his solvency.

For several years previous to his death he gradually withdrew from active participation in the management of his railway properties, leaving the greater portion of this work in the hands of two of his sons. Such is the history of Jay Gould as the world at large knew him—a man who had perhaps, more enemies, and of whom more abuse was written than of any other citizen of the United States. And yet the side which he kept hidden from the world, in which he played such an important part, was in many ways a striking contrast.

Probably no man in America worked harder during his life than Jay Gould. It was his habit to rise at 6 a.m. in summer, and 7 in winter, and from that hour until midnight his busy brain was at work with but few intermissions. Every detail of each system of railway line was at his fingers' ends, the accounts and returns were closely studied, and every official was known and watched.

He never smoked, seldom took wine, and never drank spirits. An hour in the orchid-house, a few moments with his books in the library, a quiet drive with his wife, who idolised him—these were his pleasures.

WORDS OF THE WISE.

WORDS THE WISE.

To be deprived of the person we love, is a happiness in com-parison of living with one we hate.

IF you wish to appear agree-able in society, you must con-sent to be taught many things which you know already.

"I HAVE seldom," says Paley, "known any one who deserted truth in trifies, that could be trusted in matters of importance." A MAN cannot possess any thing that is better than a good worsen, nor any thing that is worse; than a bad one.

NOTES TO THE CALENDAR.

A wealthy man displaying one day his jewels to a philosopher, the lutter said, "Thank you, sir, for being willing to share such magnif-carl jewels with me?" "Share them with you, sir! What do you mean?" "Why you allow we to look at them, and what more can you do with them yoursel?"

5.-Alexandre Dumas the elder was apt to be boastful at times. Thus, he once observed at an even-ing puty-"1 always keep a hun-dred Jouis d'or at the disposal of my friends." The very next morning a "good friend " called to borrow these hun-dred nees of good hut humas

Very sorry !"

8.-Dr. Arbuthnot in early life went down into Devonshire to practise as a physician, but the neighbourhood was so healthy he could

Det little or nothing to do. One morning a gentleman met the doctor riding furiously towards Exeter. "Halloal Doctor !"ex-claimed the former, "where are you riding in such a hurry ?"

"Out of this vile country," cried Arbuthnot in a rage, "in which a man can neither live nor die!"

15.-Benhow was no scientific seaman. He was a sailor of the oid school, who preferred to grapple with his foe and fight till either binself or his antigonist was de-shosed, rather than induces for choice of hestion and the like choice of position and the like, which in later years were to mark the efforts of our Admirals. He was a man who helped to make the Navy popular, and though a strict disciplinariau he never lost the confidence and admiration of his crews.

His death was a sacrifice. Had he lived another ten years his name might have been linked with some of the greatest naval victorics of the eighteenth century. As it was, he was called away when England most needed him, and before she had established her supremacy on the sea.

18 .- Here is a pleasing instance of fraternal generosity related by Sir Matthew Hale in connection with the celebrated lawyer, Sir John Glanvil, "Glanvil's father had a fair estate, which he intended to settle on his elder brother; but he being a vicious young man, and there appearing no hopes of his recovery, he settled it on him that was his second son.

"THE HIGHEST BRANCH IS NOT THE SAFEST BOOST."

"Upon his death his eldest son, inding that what he had before looked upon as the kircaterings of as many fable with the had before that by degree wroughed by and that by degree wroughed by and that by degree wrough to great a change on him, that what his father could not prevail in while he lived was now effected by the severity of his last will, so that it was now too late for him to change in bores of an estate that was some from him.

The plum-pudding is a worthy companion of its unguildent assocat es, it is a ginat among plumpuddings-blont Blanc and the Queen's Christians pudding may be gathered from the fact that when an Alp of it has been set aside for despitch to Osborne, there still remains a whole range to be divided up into small hills, which are sent in the Queen's name to the various members of her postrify scattered about the world.

23.-This day-known as Innocents' day, the Holy Innocents' hav, Childernas Day, or Childermarilest days of the Church in commemoration of the massacre of the children in Bethlehem, ordered by King Herod.

It used to be held unlucky to marry on this day, or to begin any work or enter on any undertakingin fact, it was reckned as about the most unlucky day of the whole year. In some parts of England it was even held unlucky to sweep the house.

In ancient times the massacre of the innocents might be said to be annually re-enacted in the form of a smart whipping, which it was customary to administer to the children on this day, to impress upon their memories this leading ovent in sacred history.

Grateful is the noise of noble deeds To noble hearts.

TENNYSON.

A GIFT TO A PRIMA DONNA.

S EVERAL years ago, when Vienna was the centre-point of every sort of amusement and galety, a certain young Prince paid his first visit to the Imperial town. He was very much smitten by the charms of a popular prima donna, who was at that time singing in Vienna. He gave a reception, at which he invited the lady to sing as his guest.

The Prince desired to give her a lasting and costly remembrance of the occasion, and, after consulting with his aide-decamp on the subject, decided that his own portrait set in a frame of diamonds would be the most appropriate gift. The Prince designed the frame himself, and scut to Paris to have it manufactured. It was oval in shape, made of filigree gold; at the base the initials of the singer and the emblems of music were set in diamonds of enormous value.

Two days after the frame had been left at the house of the singer the Prince's aide-de-camp received a letter of thanks from her; in which she said that she would always value the frame as a remembrance of his Highness; and that the work was so tasteful and the stones so brilliant that they might easily be mistaken for real.

The Prince was very much excited by this letter, and immediately sent his aide-de-camp to the singer in order to assure her that the stones were real by having them tested at a jeweller's. The lady at first refused, saying that she valued the frame as a remembrance of the Prince, and not for its worth, but the aide-de-camp insisted upon her accompanying him to a well-known jeweller's. The stones were tested, and the jeweller stated, much to the aide-de-camp's anazement, that they were undoubtedly false, being merely good paste diamonds.

The question now arose—How and when had they been changed? The jeweller who had manufactured the frame in Paris was above suspicion, and it had only passed through the hands of the Prince and his aide-de-camp before it was delivered to the prima donna. The strictest inquiries were instituted, but it was in vain; the mystery could not be cleared up. It ended in the Prince taking back the frame and substituting an equally valuable present.

Two years later the Prince again visited Vienna. In the meantime the matter had passed away from the memory of all but himself, and with him it was still a sore subject.

One day, when walking along one of the principal streets of Vienna, his eye was attracted by a diamond frame in a jeweller's window. Upon examining it he found it to be a counterpart of the frame he had designed himself two years before.

He entered the shop and asked the man when and where he had procured it. The owner answered that it was his own work. About two years ago a lady had brought him a similar frame set in real diamonds. She had employed him to break out the real stones and replace them with paste, saying they were too good to be wasted in the frame, and that she wished to wear them. The jeweller stated that he was so struck with the elegance and the originality of the design that he had taken a drawing of it, from which he had made the frame in the window.

The Prince, after that, when he wished to give singers a memento, confined himself to less costly souvenirs.

SHADOWS.

A zephyr moves the maple trees, And straightway o'er the grass The shadows of their branches shift— Shift, love, but do not pass.

So though with time a change may come Within my steadfast heart, The shadow of thy form may stir, But cannot, love, depart.

INTEREST TABLE.

Without giving an elaborate series of tabulated figures to ascertain the interest due on any given sum at 21, 3, 5, or any other rate per cent., any person may cal-culate for himself the amount of interest by a very simple process.

pound for every month at 5 per cent, is one penny. Having as-certained what any given sum amounts to at 5 per cent, other rates may be calculated by adding to, or dividing it, thus: 6 months.

5 percent.for £80 would be£2 0 21 per cent., which is one-0 0

3 per cent. is six-tenths .. 1 3 per cent. is seven-tenths 1 0 31 per cent. is seven-tenths 1 8 0 4 per cent. is four-fifths .. 1 12 0 If the interest should be more than 5 per cent to be more than 5 per cent., then the extra added. Thus for $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. add one-fourth; for $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. add onehalf.

THE NEW ACT RECARDING ESTATE DUTY.

As alteration of considerable importance in our system of facation—in the shape of a revision of i e existing death duties—was proposel by Sir William Europurt in introducing his Budget on the 16th of April, 1894, and became law on the 31st of July. It occupied the principal portion of the Finance Act, 1894 [57 & 58 Vict. et. 30].

In consequence of this alteration the existing probate, account, estate, and succession duties cease to exist, and in their place a new duty, known as Estate Duty, is leviel upon the principai value on all property which passes on the death of the owner, whether that property is real or personal, set led or unsettled.

The chief provisions relating to Estate Duty are as follows :--

Property not of the United Kingdom.— Property passing on the death of the deceased when situate ont of the United Kingdom is included only, if, under the law in force before the passing of this Act, legacy or succession duty was payable in respect thereof, or would have been payable but for the relationship of the person to whom it passed.

Settled Property — Where property in respect of which Estate Duty is leviable, is settled by the will of the deceased, or having been settled by some other disposition passes under that disposition on the death of the deceased to some person not competent to dispose of the property, a for ther Estate Duty (called Settlement Estate Duty) on the principal value of the settled property is levied at the rate hereinafter specified, except where the only life interest in the project where the death of the deceased is that of a wife or husband of the settlement the Settlement Estate Duty is not to be payable more dum once,

Vollection and Recovery of Estate Duty .--- Where the executor of the deceased does not know the amount or value of any property which has passed on the death, he may state in the Inland Revenue affidavit that such property exists but he does not know the amount or value thereof. and that he undertakes, as soon as the amount and value are ascertained, to bring in an account thereof, and to pay both the duty for which he is or may be liable, and any further duty payable by reason hereof for which he is or may be hable in respect of the other property mentioned in the allidavit. Estate Duty, so far as not paid by the executor, is to be collected upon an account setting forth the particulars of the property, and delivered to the Commissioners that is to say, the Commissioners of Inland

đ

Revenue) within six months after the death by the person accountable for the duty, or within such further time as the Commissioners may allow.

Reasonable Allowances. — In determining the value of an estate for the purpose of Estate Duty, allowance is to be made for reasonable funeral expenses, and for debts and encombrances, etc.

Estimated Value.—The principal value of any property is to be estimated to be the price which, in the opinion of the Commissioners, such property would fetch if sold in the open market at the time of the detah of the deceasel. Costs of Valuation.—Where the Commissioners

Costs of Valuation.—Where the Commissioners require a valuation to be made by a person named by them, the reasonable costs of such valuation are defrayed by the Commissioners.

Postponed Payment. — Where the Commissioners are satisfied that the Extate Durt heviable in respect of any property cannot without excessive sacrifice be raised at once, they may allow payment to be postponed for such period, to such extent, and on payment of such interest not exceeding four per cent. or any higher interest yielded by the property, and on such terms, as the Commissioners think fit.

In the Case of Over-payment.—Where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Commissioners that too much Estate Duty has been paid, the excess is to be repaid by them, and in cases where the over-payment was due to over valuation by the Commissioners, with interest at three per cent, per annum.

Payment by Stamps or Otherwise.—The Estate Duty may be collected by means of stamps or such other means as the Commissioners prescribe.

For any who are not Satisfied.—Any person aggrieved by the decision of the Commissioners with respect to the repayment of any excess of daty paid, or by the anount of duty chined by the Commissioners, whether on the ground of the value of any property or the rate charged or otherwise, may, on payment of, or giving security for, the duty claimed by the Commissioners or such portion of it as is then payable by him, appeal to the High Court within the time and in the manner and on the conditions?directed by rules of Court, and the amount of duty is to be determined by the High Court, and if the duty as determined is less than that paid to the Commissioners the excess is to be repaid to the person combalning.

Scale of Rates of Estate Duty.—The rates of Estate Duty are according to the following scale:—

Where the Principal Value of the Estate	Estate Duty shall be Payable at the Rate per cent. of

THE LIVE AND DEAD WEIGHT OF SHEEP.

In the following table we have a convenient means or ascertaining the dead weight of sheep. When using it, from the gross Live Weight or the Sheep deduct the estimated weight of the jecce and any extraneous matter adhering thereto, and seek in the table for the remainder only. When weighed without being jasted, deduct either from the Live or Dead Weight, if half fat, 7 per cent.; if moderately fat, 0 er cent.; if extra fat, 5 per cent.

TO TELL THE WEIGHT OF CATTLE.

By means of the following table we may with considerable accuracy estimate the weight of cattle without the trouble of putting them upon the steelyard. It is to be observed, however, that in very fat cattle the four quarters will be about one-twentieth more, while in those in a very lean state they will be one-twent it hess than the weights shown.

Mutual Assurance. Moderate Premiums.

THE PREMIUMS are so moderate that an Assurance o \pounds_{1200} or \pounds_{1250} may generally be secured from the first for the same yearly payment which usually would be charged (widprofits) for \pounds_{1000} only—equivalent to an immediate and certain P' tus of 20 to 25 per cent.

THE WHOLE SURPLUS goes to the Policyholders on a stem at once safe and equitable—no share being given to those by whose early death there is a loss to the Common Fund.

EXAMPLES OF PREMIUMS FOR £100 AT DEATH (WITH PROFITS.)

c A parson of 30 may secure £1000 at death by a yearly payment, during life, of £20 15s., with most Offices secure (with profits) £800 only. Or he may secure £1000 by 25 pa not 0.55, being thus free of payments before age 55.

RPLUS at last Investigation, (1894) amounted to £1,423,000.

More than one half of the members who died during the last Septennial period were entitled to Bonuses which, notwithstanding that the Premiums do not as a rule exceed the non-profit rates of other Offices were on the average equal to an Addition of about 50 per cent. to the policies which participated.

ACCUMULATED FUNDS, £10,500,000.
