HISTORY OF SH. WILLIAM WALLACE.

THE history of Sir WILLIAM WALLACE, with the other of the valiant King ROBERT BRUCE, which followeth upon the end of it, and of which this is an abridgement, was written in Latin by Mr. John Blair, chaplain to Wallace, and turned into Scots metre by one called Blind Harry, in the days of King James IV. and the hiftory of Bruce was written by Mr. John Barbour, archdean of Aberdeen, a learned man, in the days of K David Bruce and Robert Stewart, and both together contain a relation of the most famous war that ever fell out in the ille of Britain, fought most valiantly for the space of 40 years, between the two realms of Scotland and Fingland; the one unjuffly purfuing; the other conftantly defending the liberties of their country. During which broils, there happened great alterations, both in the general flate of this kingdom, and in the overthrow and advancement of particular families, the one for betraving, the other for maintaining their country's freedom and welfare.

That the whole hiftory may be more clear, we have thought good, in a flort introduction, to fet down the caufes, occafions, and the molt memorable paffages of this war.

In the year 1285, Alexander the IIId. king of Scot-ke land, being fuddenly taken away by a fall from his horfe to at Kinghorn, without any iffue of his body, and in him at the whole posterity of his father Alexander the 11. and grandfather William the Lyon, being extinct, the right of the crown fell to the heirs of David earl of Huntingtonish and Garioch, youngest brother to William the Lyon, H had left three daughters, the eldeft Margaret, married t Allan Lord of Galloway; the fecond, Ifabel, to Roberton Bruce, (firnamed the noble,) Lord of Annandale and Cleveland : the youngeft, Ada, married Henry hafting the an Englishman; who having no just title to the crows the the contention refled betwixt the pofferity of the two elders daughters : for Allan, Lord of Galloway, leaving no for the by his wite Margaret ; his eldell daughter Dornagilla fille Galloway, married John Baliol, a man of great power and lands both in Scotland, England and France, and bare him John Baliol afterwards King. Robert Bruce, by Live wife Ifabel of Hunthigton, had Robert Bruce who car and to be carl of Carrick, by marrying Martha, heritrix there

THE HISTORY OF, &c , and who contended with John Baliol, and died in the me of Wallace's wars. His eldeft fon, Robert Bruce; acceeded King of Scotland.

Dornagilla of Galloway claimed the crown, as heir to largaret, eldeft daughter to prince David. Robert Bruce, rl of Carrick, albeit fon to Ifabel the fecond daughter, et, contended that, in feudal fucceffion, the first male ought fucceed before a woman standing in the fame degree, as fon excludeth his fifter from fucceffion, altho' the be eler; and therefore he and Dornagilla of Galloway, ftandg in the fecand degree from prince David, he ought be preferred to her : as for her fon, John Baliol, he puld claim no right but by her, and likewife was a deree further off from prince David. The like practice had llen out some 10 years before, in Hugh the fourth duke Burgundy, whole eldeft fon Hugh, (dying before his ther) left a daughter, Jola, counters of Nevers, who aimed to fucceed her grandfather Hugh IV. Notwithanding Robert, fecond fon to the fame Hugh IV. was referred to her, and fucceeded the duke of Burguady; if ten the fecond fon, in feudal inheritance, fuce I before he eldeft fon's daughter, far more ought the nephew to acceed before the niece. The right of fuccession being thus ade doubtful, the competitors were fo powerful, that they rew the greatest part of the kingdom into two equal facons; fo that it feemed impossible to fettle the controverv at home, without running into a pernicious civil war.

The flates of Scotland, to prevent this mifchief, thought : fittest to fumbit the arbitrament of the plea to Edward . firnamed Long Shanks, king of England, and that upn divers weighty reasons : for he and his father K. Henry II. being joined by many alliances, of bands and friendip to the two laft kings of Scotland, had lived in great mity and concord with them, receiving and interchangng many favours and kind duties. The two competitors Ifo, Bruce and Baliol, had as great lands in England as in cotland, fo that he, and he only, was able to make them tand to reafon. Finally, the flates of Scotland not being ble to determine the plea, there was no prince befides nore powerful, and, in appearance, more like to compose the controverfy, without-great blood-fh-d. This motion as in fecret very greedily embraced by K. Edward, hopng, in fo troublefome a water, to find a gainful fishing

THE HISTORY OF either by drawing the kingdom of Seotland under the c rect lubic Cion, or at least under his homage, as lord part mount and fuperior : Confidering the difficulty to deter. mine the queftion at home, and the interest he had in bound parties, being (for a great part of their eflates) his vaffal and fubjects: his great power alfo, having, befides Ireland a great part of France under his dominion, and the left countries his affured confederates, gave him great encoul agement ; neither wanted he great friendship in Scotlanhaving at that time, many of the greateft noblemen in Scoleland, vaffals and feudaries to himfelf for many lands which. they held in England, partly for great fervices done in himfelf and his father, partly lying within Northumber land, and the border fhires, then held by the Scots in fell of England : Partly alfo by interchange of marriage and ineceffions between the two nations, which for a long timhad lived in great amity, as if it had been one kingdon And to make the controverly more fearful, he flirred u other 8 competitors befides Bruce and Baliol, Florence earl of Holland (defeended of Ada) fifter to William th Lyon ; Patrick Dumbar earl of March ; Sir Walter Rofs Sir N'colas Soules; Sir Roger Mandeville; Sir Joh Cumming of Badenoch, (thefe five were defcended c younger daughters of Allan, lord of Galloway) Sir Wi Jiam Vifcie, begotten upon king Alexander IId's baftar daughter, but pretending to be ligitimate ; and John Haff ings lord Abergaveny, defeended of Ada, youngeft daugh ter to prince David Huntington.

Edward, having thus prepared matters, came to Berwick and met with the flates of Scotland, to whom he promit ed to decide the controverfy according to equity; and that it might feem more likely, he brought from France fundr of the most famous lawyers of that age; he chofe alfo on of the flates of Scotland affembled, twelve of the wifet and most honourable, to whom he joined the like numbe of Englifh, as affelfors to him in his arbitrament. At the meeting, by the doubtful anfwers of lawyers, and the num her of new precedents, he made the matter more difficult and appointed a new convention at Norham, on the bor der, in the year following.

Difficulties thus increating, and the earl of Holland having on foot a great army, to take the crown of Seotland i v force, (which their own flories affirm, to have landed

SIR WILLIAM WALLACE. in Scotland, and to have intercepted fome ftrenotlis) at the meeting of Norham, king Edward dealt fecretly, and by fit agents, with the flates of Scotland, for thanning imminent dangers, to become his fubjects ; he, being defcended of King David's fifter, and fo but two degrees forther from the crown of Scotland than Bruce or Baliol were. This being flatly refused by all, he betook him to his other defign. And first dealt fecretly with Robert Bruce, promifing to difcern in his favours, if he would takes the crown of Scotland holden of him, and do him homage for it. But he floutly refused to subject a free nation to any overt lord; whereupon king Edward called for John Baliol, who, knowing that he was not fo much favoured of the States of Scotland, eafily condefcended to king F.dward's defire, and was by him declared King of Scotland ; the States, defirous of peace, conveyed him to Scoon, where he was crowned, anno 1291, and all, except Bruce, fwore obedience to him. Thereafter Duncan Macduff, earl of Fife, was killed by lord Abernethy, (a man of great nower in those times, allied both with the Cummings and Baliol;) the earl's brother, finding the King partial in the administration of justice, summoned him to compear before the King of England in parliament; where being prefent, and fitting befide King Edward, (after he had done him homage) when he was called upon, thought to answer hy a procurator; but he was forced to rife, and fland at the bar. This indignity grieved him greatly, he refolved to free himfelf of this bondage. At the fame time war breaking out between England and France, king Edward fent ambaffadors to the parliament of Scotland to fend aid to him, as now being their over-lord. There came alfo other ambaffadors from France, defiring the ancient league to be renewed. The King and the States of Scotland renewed the league with France, which had renained, inviolably kept, for the fpace of 500 years before. The king of Eng-, land's fuit was rejected, becaufe the pretended furrander and homage, was made by John Baliol privately, without the confent of the parliament. A marriage was allo concluded betwixt prince Edward Baliol, and a daughter of Charles, earl of Valois, brother to the French king Philip. Edward having forefeen all these things, had drawn Robert Bruce, earl of Carrick, with his friends, (onemies to Baliol) and divers noblemen of Scotland, who held lands of him in England, to bring fuch forces as they could make. to affilt him in the French war; but withal taking truce with the French for fome months, he fuddenly turned his forces deflined against France, towards Scotland. His navy was vanguilhed at Berwick, and 18 of his thips taken. Yet his land hoft, by the means of the Brucian faction, and the Englished-Scots noblemen, took the town of Berwick with great flaughter, and fhortly thereafter, Dunbar, E, inburgh and Stirling. In, and about these caliles, he had killed and taken captives the greatest part of the Scots noblemen ; fo that croffing Forth, the blow being fo fudden, he found no preparation for refistance, Baliol furrendered himfelf to king Edward at Montrole, and was fent by him into England, where he remained captive till fuch time as by intercession of the Pope, he was fet at liberty, fwearing and giving hoflages never to return to Scotland, King Edward came to Scoon, and took upon him the crown of Scotland, as forfeited by the rebellion of his homager Baliol. He fent for the nobles of Scotland who remained, that they, with fuch as were his captives, might fwear homage to him as to their liege-Lord and King, those who refused, were detained prisoners.

King Edward, thinking that new all was fure for him in Scotland, left John Plantagenet, (fome call him Warren) earl of Surry, and Sir Hugh Creffingham treafurer, and returned to profecute the French war, taking fuch of the nobility of Scotland as he feared, along with him, with their followers. The great men of Scotland, being in this manner either imprifoned by king Edward, or fworn to his obedience, and tied thereto by reafon of the lards holden of the crown of England, the refl either fled into the ifles or highlands, or thought it fufficient to defend their own till better times.

But while men of power neglected the public caufe of the liberty of Scotland, William Wallace, a youth of honourable birth, being fon to Malcom Wallace of Elderflie, but of mean power, having first in private killed many Englishmen of the garrifons as he could overtake them, by thefe exploits, being so encouraged, (being a man of invincible hardinefs, incredible firength of body and withal very wife and circumspect) that he gathered his friends and neighborns, and by jeopardies and firatagems, divers times cut off great numbers of the enemy; the report thereof

SIR WILLIAM WALLACE. drew to him, fuch as affected the liberty and welfare of their country, and had courage to hazard themsclves for vindicating thereof. As namely the earl Malcom Lennox, the lord William Douglas, (who had been taken captive at the winning of Berwick, whereof he was captain, and fent home v. on affurance) Sir John Graham, Sir Neil Campbel, Sir Christopher Seaton, Sir John Ramfay, Sir Fergus. The English fearing the loss of all, subtilly took truce with Wallace for one year, beginning in February. In June following, they proclaimed a Juffice eyre to be held at Glafgow and Air the 18th of that month, thinking to entrap Wallace and all his friends, and under colour of law, to cut them off at the day appointed. All landed men according to the cuffom, affembling to this court, the English courdemned them for felony, and hanged them prefently; amongft the reft, Sir Ronald Crawford, theraff of Air, uncle to Wallace, Sir Bryce Blair, Sir Meil Montgomery, and many of the barons of Kyle, Cunningham, Carrick, and Clydefdale. Those who escaped by flight, advertifed Wallace, who chanced to come later than the reft. He affembling fuch of the country, as (detefting fo horrible a fact) extremely hated the authors thereof, in the beginning of the night, fecretly entered into Air, fet fire to the place

THE HISTORY OF where the Englishmen, after that fact, were fecurely fleeping, and fuffered none to escape. The garrison of the caitle iffued forth to quench the fire, an ambush, laid for the purpole, entered the houfe and made it fure. The next morning Wallace came to Glafgow, where the Lord Henry Piercy had retired from Air the day before ; him he expulsed thence with great flaughter. The victory he fo hotly purfued, that immediately thereafter he took the caffle of Stirling, recovered Argyll, and Lorn, with the town of St. Johnstoun, and country about ; thence he travelled thro' Angus and Mcarns, taking in all the firengths until he came to Aberdeen, which he found forfaken by the English, who had fled by fea, with the lord Henry Beaumount, an English lord, who had married the heretrix of the earldom of Buchau, named Cumming. Thus all the north country was reduced to the obedience of Wallace, except the caffle of Dundee; while he law at the fiege thereof, news came of the approach of the English army, led by John earl of Warren and Surry, and Sir Hugh Crefingham with a great number of Northumberland men and fuch of the Scots as held with England, to the number of 30,000. Wallace having with him 10,000 men hardened in arnis, met them belide Stirling, on the north fide of the Forth, which having no fords at that place, was paffible only by a wooden bridge. This he on purpose had caufed to be weakened, fo that the one half of the hoft being past, led by Creffingham, the bridge broke with the great weight of their baggage Thofe who were come over, Wallace charged fuddenly, before they were put in order, and cut the most part in pieces, with their leader Creffingham : the relt feeking to escape were drowned in the water. The carl of Warren, and those that escaped, were affailed by earl Malcom Lennox, captain of Stirling caffle, and being hotly purfued by Wallace, hardly efcaped, himfelf flying into Dumbar, a caffle then belonging to the earl of March. In this battle, fought the 13th of Scpteinber, 1297, there died uo Scotfman of remark, but Andrew Murray of Bothwell. The English garrilons hearing of this difcomfiture, fled from all places. fo that before the laft of September, all the flrengths of Scotland were recovered except Berwick and Roxburgh.

After those victories he held a parliament at St. Johnfloun, as warden of Scotland, and fettled the whole coun-

SIR WILLIAM WALLACE. try, caufing the nobility to fwear to be faitaful to the State, till fuch times as they might condefeend who fabuld be King: Earl Patrick Dunbar refuting to acknowledge the authority of this parliament, was chaled out of Scotland; and becaufe the year by-paft, the ground had not been manured, and great famine threatened the land, Wallace affembled a great hoft, and entered England, where he remained all the winter and the fpring following, living, upon the enemies' provisions, and enriching his foldiers by their fpoil ; during which time the English durft never encounter him in open field : Only at the first entry, King Edward, with a great army of raw foldiers, came againft him in the plain of Stanmure; but perceiving the difcipline and hardy refolution of Wallace's hoft, before they came nearer than half a mile, drew back his army and retired ; Wallace, for fear of ambuth, kept his foldiers in order, and purfued them not Thus King Edward left his country to the mercy of a provoked enemy; and notwithftanding that he promifed battle, yet he kept himfelf close till a peace was concluded for five years, Berwick and Roxburgh being rendered to the Scots.

Scotland thus enjoying perfect liberty, Wallace, being earnefily requeited by the French King, to the end that his special captains might be kept in military exercise during the peace, failed over to France, with 50 of them in: his company. He was encountered on the way by Thomas of Charters, (commonly called Thomas of Longueville,) who, with 16 fail, infelted the feas: but boarding Wallace's Ihip, he was taken by him, and thereafter fought most valiantly under him and king Robert Bruce, for the liberty, of Scotland. After Wallace landed in France, he was employed in war against the English, who at that time poffeffed the duchy of Guienne and Bourdeaux; them he defeated in fundry skirmishes. But in a few days he was called home by fome of his friends in Scotland ! for King Edward, understanding his absence, and pretending that he had broken the peace in Guienne, dealt with Robert Brace earl of Carrick, and his friends, and with fuch noblemen of Scotland as held lands in England, or envied Wallace's glory telling, that it was a fhame for them to foffer Wallace a mean gentleman, to rule Scotland, while any of the blood royal did remain ; fo promiting his affittance to Robert Bruce, he feat a great army into Scotland, and by the

THE HISTORY OF L lp of the Brucian faction, and Englished noblemen, he eafily obtained the greatest strengths of Scotland. Wallace returned the next fummer and, fecretly amaffing a number of his fpecial followers, who had lurked till his back-coming, on a fudden furprifed St. Johnstoun by a stratagem ; and purfuing his victory hotly, chafed the English out of Fife.. Upon the report hereof, all the reft of his followers came from their lurking noles, by whofe affiltance he recovered divers threngths. The lord William Douglas took the callle of Sanguhar by a ftratagem, and finding the Englift captains of the nearest garrifons coming to befiege him, he feat fearetly to Wallace, who coming with his power, not only raifed the fiege, but chafed all the English garrifons out of thele quarters : from whence he came to the north parts, which he recovered with fmall difficulty, except the ftrong calle of Dundee. to which he laid fiege.

The King of England, grieved at the fortunate fuccefs of Wallace, and understanding that he was highly envied by the earl of March, the Cummings, (the greateft furname then in Scotland) and divers ancient noblemen, (from whose honour Wallace's renown feemed to derogate') he firred up Robert Bruce elder, and his faction, perfuading them that Wallace was Bruce's only competitor for the crown. Having fo made a ftrong party for himfelf in the next fpring he came with an army of 40,000 men, Scots and English, to Falkirk, 6 miles from Stirling. The Sonts army was very great, being 30,000 flrong, if they had been all of one mind. For John Cumming lord of Combernauld, (who had an eve to the crown) had perfuaded the lord John Stewart of Bute, being tutor, and grandfather by the mother, to the lord James Stewart of Renfrew, lately deceafed, to contend with Wallace for the leading of the van-guard, alledging that the fame belonged to the lord Stewart's house by ancient privilege Wallace refusing this, they parted one from another in high chaff, there remaining with him no more than 10,000 of his gid foldiers. Cumming with 1000 of his followers, after a fmall fhew of refiftance, fled treafonably, leaving the valiant Stewart inclosed by two battalions of the English, by whom, after he had fought valiantly for a long time, he was cut off with all his followers. Wallace with his party defended themfelves valiantly, until they were fafely retired beyond the river Carron, lofing (belides fome others)

SIRWILLIAMWALLACE. I the noble Sir John Graham, the most valiant worthy of Scotland, next unto Wallace. Bruce, whom the king of England had brought with all his friends into the field, pretending to affilt him for recovery of his right from the usurper. Bruce, perceiving Wallace on the other side the Carron, defired to speak with him, and upbraiding him with fo foolish an usurpation of the kingdom of Scotland, against fo powerful a faction at home, affisted by fo mighty a king abroad. I, answered Wallace intend never to reign in Scotland, but finding my native country abandoned by, you and Baliol, who have the right to the crown, have let myfelf to defend my friends and neighbours, from the unjust tyranny and usurpation of the king of England, who Tetteth vou forth most unnaturally to tear the bowels of your mother with your own hands. After divers speeches to this purpofe, Bruce, perceiving the fraudful and tyranous dealing of king Edward, returned to the holt. The next morning Wallace, understanding that the English army was weakly entrenched and in great fecurity, amaffing with his own army fuch as had efcaped, fet upon them in the dawning before they could be acrayed, and killed many: fo that the English king returned at that time without any further exploit. Bruce, remembring what he heard of Wallace, defired king Edward, according to his former promifes, to put him in possession of fo much of the kingdom of Scotland as then was under his power; to whom he anfwered in the French tongue, ' Have we no more ado but conquer kingdoms for you.' By this freech the lord Bruce conceived fo great grief and anger, that within few days he departed this life without feeing his eldeft fon Robert Bruce, afterwards King, he being kept for affurance of his father's obedience in Calais caffle in France.

After this unhappy battle, Wallace, firiving to recover fuch caffles and firength as King Edward had intercepted, found fuch opposition and back ".rdnefs, by envious emulators, that he returned to St. Johnstoun, and, in the affembly of the States, refigned his charge of warden, and with 18 men paffed again into France, according to a promife at his return therefrom. This fell out at the end of the year 1300. The opposite faction having gained their define, chofe John Cumming governor; the rather becaufe king Edward had promifed to affilt him to the crown of Scotland. But he found him as great an enemy as he had

THE HISTORY OF been to Wallace. For, after 7 months truce, obtained by means of the French king, Edward fent Sir Ralph God-frey with a great army to fubdue the Scots, and to put an end to the war, which they expected would be eafy, Wallace being now out of the way. John Cumming, joining with the lord Simon Fraler, making 8000 or 0000 men, came to reful the English, who having walted the country as far as Roflin, about 5 miles from Edinburgh, expecting no refistance, divided themfelves into 3 parties, that they might fpoil farther into the country. The Scots embracing the occasion, fet upon the first division, and eafily difcomfited them; the fecond alfo, albeit ftronger by the joining of those who fied, was after a long conflict put to the rout. By this the third divison, coming to the revenge, put the Scots to a great ftrait, as being forely wounded, weuried, and weakened, in the two former battles, and having to withstand a fresh enemy, of far greater number : hereupon they were forced to kill all the captives, left they fhould affig the enemy, and with their weapons to arm the baggage men : and fetting forward both with courage and neceffity, feeing no efcape, after a long and hard fight, they put the enemy to flight. This was March 24th, 1302. King Edward, fore incenfed by this eyil fuccefs, fent for Robert Bruce younger out of Calais, whom he perfunded, that he had for a long time, against Wallace, defended his father's right to the crown of Scotland : that having put Wallace out of the way, he found the Cummings as great enemies : Notwithstanding, he intended yet once more to put that enemy out of the way, and to fettle him in his kingdom. The young prince believing him, caufed all his, friends and favonrers in Scotland, to join with him, and entering the border, fpoiled the country, and took divers caltles' as far as Donglas Some report that the Lady Donglas, named Ferras, an English woman, betrayed that caille to the Bruce, who took the lord William Douglas captive, with all his children and goods. The Lord himfelf was kept prifoner in Berwick, and thereafter in York, where he died. Mean time, king Edward had prepared a mighty atmy, both by land and fea, with which he entered Scotland, and fubdued all before him while he came to Stirling, keptthen by Sir William Oliphant, who after a long fiege, knowing of no relief, yielded the caffle upon condition, that himfelf and all that were with him, should pass with SIR WILLIAM WALLACE. 13 their fives fafe : Notwithflanding king Edward kept ft'll all the noblemen, together with the captain Sir William Oliphaat; and fuch as would not fwear homage to him, (pretending to be the protector of Robert Bruce's right) he fent prisoners to London. Having in this cafile intercepted divers of John Cumming's friends, he procured them to draw him to a parley with him ; in which he fo blinded him with the hopes of the kingdom, and with fear of utter undoing, that he joined himfelf and his friends to the English; who, by this accession, easily passed for ward with the course of victory, as far as the utmost bounds of Rofs : and in his back coming, carried away with him into England all books, registers, histories, laws and monuments of the kingdom : and among others, the fatal marble chair, whereupon the former Scots Kings used to be crowned at Scoon, on which was engraven a prophecy, bearing, That wherever this chair (bould be transported, the Scots (bould command there. He carried alfo with him all the learned men and profeffors of Scotland, among others. the famous Doctor John Duns, furnamed Scotus, thinking thereby to difcourage and effeminate the minds of the Scots, that they fhould caft off all care of recovering their liberty, the memory thereof being drowned in oblivion. At his return into England, he left his coufin, Sir Aymer Vallance, earl of Pembroke, viceroy, having fortified all the caffles with flrong garrifons.

The Scots who flood for the liberty of their country, being forfaken by John Cumming, fent earned letters to France to move Wallace to return. He was then making war upon the English in Grienne; but hearing the mifchiefs of his country, he obtained leave of the French king to return : and fecretly gathering fome of his old biends, recovered divers cafiles and towns in the north, and having greatly increafed his army, befieged St. Johnstond, till it furrendered. But as he proceeded in the court of his victories, he was betrayed by his familiar friend, Sir John Monteith, to Aymer de Vallance, who fent him into fingland, where, by king Edward's command, he was put to death, and his body quartered, and fent into the principal cities of Scotland, to be fet up for a terror to others.

Notwithstanding, this cruelty prevailed little for the affuring of king Edward's conquest; new enemies ariting whence he least expected : for as he returned from his last THE HISTORY OF journey into Scotland, John Cumming and Robert-Bruce meeting together, after a long conference on the flate of their country, perceived, that notwithstanding he had promiled to each of them apart his help to obtain the crown . of Scotland, yet his intention was only to use their affiftance to conquer and fecure it to himfelf, as he well declared, by fpoiling the country of all monuments, public and private. Hereupon they agreed, that Cumming fhould quit all his rights to the crown in favours of "Bruce, and that Bruce should give him all his lands for his affiltance, and this contract was written and fealed by both parties. Upon this Bruce, watching an opportunity to rife in arms, left his wife and children in Scotland, and went to the court of England. After his departure, Cumming (as it is reported) either repenting himfelf of this agreement, or elfe endeavouring fradulently to oppose his co-rival, and fo obtain an eafier way to the kingdom, revealed their fecret combination to Edward ; and in evidence of it, he fent him the covenant figned by them both. Upon that, Bruce was impleaded as guilty of high treafon : he was forbidden to depart the court, and a private guard fet over him to infpect his words and actions. The king's delay to punish him for a crime fo manifest, proceeded from a defire he had to take his brethren too, before they had heard any noife of his execution.

Bruce advertifed of his danger by the earl of Gloucefter (fome call him the earl of Montgomery) his old friend, who had fent him a pair of tharp fpurs, and foine crowns of gold, as if he had borrowed the fame, guefing the meaning of this propine, caufed by night, fhoe three horfes backward, and poffed away from court with two in his company, and on the fifth day (the way being deep in winter,) arrived.at his own caffle of Lochmabine, where he found his brother Edward, with Robert Fleming, James Lindfay, Robert Kilpatrick, and Thomas Charters, who told him how Wallace was betrayed by Sir John Monteith, and the Cumming faction a few days before. Immediately thereafter they intercepted a meffenger with letters from Cumming to king Edward, defiring that Bruce should be dispatched in hafte, left being a nobleman much favoured by the commons.) he thould raife greater ftirs. The treachery of John Cumming, before only fulpected, was hereby made manifest, which fo incenfed the Lord Bruce, that ridSIR WILLIAM WALLACE. 25 ing to Dumfries, and finding Cumming at the mafs of the Grey-Friers. after he had shown him his letters, in impatience, he stabed him with his dagger; and others who were about him doing the like, not only dispatched him, but also his cousin Sir Edward Cumming, and others who affisted him. This slaughter fell out on the 9th of February, in the year 1306, as we now account.

The Bruce, thas rid of one enemy, found a great number as it were willing out of his alhes, even the whole puiffant name of Cumming, with their allies, the earl of March, the lord of Lorn, the lord of Abernethy, the lord of Brechin, the lord Soules, the most part of the North, and all Galloway followed the Cummings : the earl of March, the lord William Soules commanded the Merfe, with Berwick and the border : all which they vielded to king Edward, and maintained against Robert Bruce. At the fame time his two brothers, Thomas and Alexander Bruce, with Ronald Crawford younger, fecretly landing in Galloway, were taken by Duncan Macdougal a great man in Galloway, and fent to King Edward, who canfed them all three to be hanged. On the other fide, affembled to him, befide these above named, the young lord James Douglas, (whohearing of his father's death. had returned from France, where he was at school, and staid a time with his kiniman, William Lamberton, bishop of St. Andrews,) earl Malcom Lennox, earl John of Athol, (altho' of the Cuntining blood, yet being father in-law to Edward Bruce,) Sir Neil Campbell, Sir Gilbert Hay, Sir Christopher Seaton, Sir Thomas Ronald, Sir Hugh Hay, John Somerville, David Barclay, Alexander and Simon Frazer, Sir Robert Boyd, Sir William Halyburton, with fundry who had floed with Wallace before. With this company he paft into Scoon, and took upon him the crown of Scotland, in Bprile 1309. After this he gathered an army, minding to beliege St. Johnstoun. But finding his power too weak, he retired to Methven, where he was unexpectedly affaulted and difcomfited by Sir Aymer de Vallance, but with fmall lofs of men, except fome who were taken, as Randal Barelay, Frazer, Inchmartine, Somerville, and Sir Hugh Flay, who were constrained to fwear homage to king Edward. The common's difcouraged with this hard fuccels, fearing the English, forfook the new king; who had a finall company of gentlemen about him, with whom he travelled to-

After this fecond discomfiture, he fent his Queen, (being daughter to Gratney earl of Mar,) with his brother Sir Neil Bruce, and John earl of Athol, to the caille of Kildrimmy, in Mar. The King of England fent his fon, prince Edward with a mighty hoft, to befiege this caffle. The Queen hearing this, fled to the frith of Tain in Rofs : but the earl of Rofs took her, and her daughter and fent them captives into England. The caffle of Kildrimmy was traitoroufly burnt by one of the gaurifon : all that were therein taken and hanged, at the command of the English king.

Robert, feeing winter approaching, and finding no retreat in the main land, retired with his most entire friends. to his old friend Angus, lord of the ifies; with whom he flayed a fhort time in Kintyre, and thereafter failed over into the ifle of Raughline, where he lurked all the winter ; every man fuppofing him to be dead. The next fpring he landed quietly in Carrick, and on a fudden intercepted his own caffle of Furnberry. The Lord Piercy flying home out of it to his own country. Sir James Douglas departing thence fecretly, came into Douglas dale, and by means of Thomas Dickfop, an old fervant of his father's, he recovered his own calle of Douglas, and caft it down once aud again'; thereafter he returned to king Robert to Cunnock, shewing him that Aymer de Vallance, and John of Lorn, with an army, were coming against him. The King with 500 valiant men kept themselves in a strong place, waiting while Sir Aymer would invade; but took no heed to John of Lorn, who fetching a compass, fet upon his back with 800 highlandmen, and had well nigh inclosed them about, The king perceiving the danger, divided his men in three : and appointing where they flould meet at night; fled three fundry ways. John of 1 orn having a floth-hound, purfued fill after the King, who putting away all that were in his company, fave one man, fled into the next wood, and with great difficulty efcaped the floth-bound. Sir Aymer, difappointed of this enterprize, mortly thereafter, with 1500 cholen men, very near furprifed the King in Glentole-wood : But the King with his men taking courage. refolutely defended the place, which was very strong, and

SIR WILLIAM WALLACE. killing divers of the first who affaulted them, the reft fled back. Therefore, with more courage, he went into the fields, reduced Kyle and Cunningham to his obedience, Sie James Douglas alfo, with 60 men lying in an ambush at a ftrait place in Cunningham, called the Netherford ; where Sir Philip Moubray was paffing, with 1000 men against the King, being then in Kyle, killed many of them and put the reft to flight. On May 10th following, Sir Aymer with 3000 men came against the King, then lying in Galfton in Kyle : King Robert hearing of his coming, albeit he exceeded not 600 men, came forth against him at a place under Loudon hill, which he fo fortified on every hand with dykes and fousies, that the enemy could not inclose him on both fides; and fo by the ftout and refolute valour of fo few, Sir Aymer was put to flight, which he took fo fore to heart that he retired into England, and gave over his office of warden, or viceroy, John of Britain earl of Richmond being fent into Scotland in his place.

King Robert after this past into the north, leaving Sir James Douglas on the borders, who, taking his own caffle of Douglas by a stratagem, razed it to the ground, and in i few days chafed all the English out of Douglas-dale Ettrick foreft, and Jedburgh foreft, and took Sir Thomas. Randal the King's Sifter's fon, (who had followed the English ever fince his captivity,) and Sir Alexander Stewart of Bunkle. Sir Alexander and Simon Frazer, meeting king Robert in the north, shewed him, how John Cumming earl of Buchan, David lord Brechin, Sir John Moubray, and the reft of the Cumming faction, were gathering an army against him. Mean while, by the affistance of his friends in thefe quarters, on a fudden he furpriz'd the caftle of Invernefs, the fame of which victory cauled many other ftrengths to yield : all which he overthrew and greatly increased the number of his friends. In his return, taking ficknefs at Inverury, Cumming fet upon him. The King, after his friends had for a time defended him, recovering fomewhat, went out to the field, and fo hardly afa faulted his enemy at Old Meldrum, that albeit their numaber was far greater, yet they took their flight. With the dike fuceefs, he fet upon the King, in Glenask in Angus, where, being fhamefully put to flight, he fled into Engand, with Sir John Monbray, and died there foortly after. Lord David Brechin fortified his own calle, but David

THE HISTORY OF . 18 earl of Athol, forced him to yield it and shimfelf to the King. Mean time, Philip Frazer took the caffle of Forfar : and the King, purfuing this victory, reduced all the north to his obedience ; and joining with the lord lames Douglas, returning from the South with his two captives. he took St. Johnstoun by furprizal: from thence he paffed into Lorn, the Lord whereof had ambushed two thoufand men, on the fide of a fteep hill, where the King behoved to enter through a narrow passage ; but Sir James Douglas, with Sir Alexander Frazer; and Sir Andrew Gray, climbing the hill, came fuddenly on their backs. and put them to flight. John of Lorn fled into England by fea : his father, Lord Alexander M'Dougal, yielded himfelf and the caffle of Dunftaffnage to the King.

... By these means, all on the north fide of Forth was reduced to obedience ; Sir Edward, his brother, in the mean time, who by long and hard fighting, had conquered Gal-Inway, James Douglas, by a ftratagem, furprifed the ftrong alle of Roxburgh on the Fasten's even, while all the garrifon (after the cuftom of the time) were fealting and playing the riot. The report whereof, fo whetted the valiant Thomas Randal newly reftored to his uncle's favour, and umade earl of Murray, that having belieged the caffle of Ediaburgh for fome months, he fet himfelf by all means to carry the fame, which he obtained by a narrow paffage up through the rock, difcovered by him; by which he and fundry ftout gentlemen fecretly paffed up, and fcaling the wall, after long and dangerous fighting, made themfelves matters of the place. The garrifons of Rutherglen, Lanesk, Dumfries, Air, Dundee, and Bute, hearing this, wielded up these castles, which were all razed. The isle of Man, alfo returned to the obedience of the crown of Scot-Iend. Sir Edward Bruce, having beneged Stirling caftle three months, agreed with the captain, Sir Philip Mouthay, that if the king of England did not refeue him within 12 months thereafter, the caffle fhould be vielded to king Robert. Albeit this feemed a rash provocation of fe mighty a King as Edward Longhanks ; (but far degenerate from his valour,) having not only England and Ireland and many Englished Scots, with the duchy of Guienne Bourdeaux, and other parts of France fubject to him, bur alfo the low countries firicity confederate with him : ye king Robert prepared himfelf to encounter him in the SIRWILLIAM WALLACE. 19 fields, and gathered 35.000 men, few, but valiant. The king of Eugland had above 100,000 foot, and 10,000 horfe: with which multitude, intending to deftroy the inhabitants of Scotland, and to divide the land to his followers, he came to Bannockburn, (two miles from Stirling,)) where on June 21ft, 1314, he was encountered by the Scots, and after long and hard fighting, his great army put to the rout; himfelf, with a fmall company, fleeing into Dumbar, was fent by the Earl of March into England in a fifther-boat, leaving 200 noblemen and gentlemen killed by the Scots, and as many taken : the number of the commons flain and taken was incredible. Of Scots were flain two gentlemen of note, Si: William Wepont, and Sir Walter Rofs, with 4000 common foldiers.

After this victory, Stirling being yielded, and Dumbarton gotten by composition, the Earl of March, the lord Soules, and Abernethy, and others of the Cummings' allies, were reconciled to the king, who pass into the Isles, and brought them to obedience, taking John of Lorn captive, who died in prison in Lochleven. Thus Scotland was freed of the bondage of England, except Berwick, which was recovered four years thereafter, 1318, and the Scots making divers incursions into England, under the leading of Earl Thomas Randal, and James lord Douglas, requited the harms received from them before, and enriched themfelves with their spoil.

As for the Authority of thefe two hiftories, altho' they poffibly err in fome circumflances of time, place, and number, or names of men, yet generally they write the truth of the flory of thofe times, both at greater length, and upon more certain information, than thofe who have written our Chronicles. So committing them to thy diligent perufal, (gentle and courtcous reader;) I with thee profit thereby, and all happinefs from God. Farewel.

A fhort Account of the BATTLE of BANNOCKBURN, " which was fought, June 24th, 1314.

THE TWO AND ADD

DWARD II kept up the fame claim in Scotland which his father had begun: and, after feveral infliccelsful attempts to eftablish it, he refored to make a great effort, and at ones reduce that turbulent nation, which had put fo many fignal affronts upon his father and himfelf. AN ACCOUNT OF THE

In the fpring, 1314, he affembled the molt numerous army that had ever croffed the borders, composed of different nations,' and amounting to above 100,000 effective men, belides, a huge multitude of attendants, who came along, in hopes of fharing in the plunder of a conquered enemy. At the head of thefe he marched northward with an uncommon parade, and in full confidence of victory. Robert Bruce, the fon of that Robert Bruce who held a conference with Wallace upon the banks of the Carron, and grandfon of him who had been competitor with Baliol, had, in 1306, been crowned king of Scotland, and being informed of Edward's formidable preparations, he railed an army of 30,000 of his fubjects to oppose him. This armament bore but a fmall proportion to that of Edward's; but it was composed of foldiers, who were hardened by long practice of war, and who now carried upon the point of the fword, liberty and honour, and every thing that was dear to them. With these Robert took up his flation in the neighbourhood of Stirling, and waited for Edward's arrival. The two armies came in fight of each other, in the month of June, and foon after, a bloody, battle was fought, in which the Scots obtained a victory, the moft celebrated of any in the annals of that kingdom, The procedure of that memorable event, was as follows.

The English, marched from Edinburgh to Falkirk in one day, and upon the morrow, fetting out from thence towards Stirling, encamped to the northward of the Torwood. About upper Bannockburn, and backward upon the muir of Plean, in the neighbourhood of the ancient Roman caufeway, pieces of broken pots, and other veffels have been found; and upon rocks near the furface, marks of fire have been diffeovered, where it is fuppofed the foldiers had made ready their provisions. Barbour, the author of king Robert Eruce's life, fpeaks as if their camp had thretched fo far northward, as to occupy a part of the Carfe ground; and fo vaft a multitude mult doubtle's have covered a large tract of country.

The Scottifh army was polled about a mile to the northword, upon feveral eminences, fouth from the prefent village of St. Ninians. Upon the fummit of one of these eminences, now called Brock's Bare, is a flone funk into the earth, with a round hole in it. near three inches im diameter, and much the fame in depth in which, accordBATTLEOFBANNOCKBURN. 21 ing to tradition, King Robert's flandard was fixed, the royal tent having been erected near it. This flone is well known in that neighbourhood by the name of the BORE-STANE. The fmall river of Bannockburn, remarkable for its fleep and rugged banks, ran in a narrow valley between the two camps.

The caffle of Stirling was still in the hands of the Englifh; Edward Brnce, the King's brother, had in the fpring of this year, laid fiege to it, but found himfelf obliged to abandon the enterprife; only by a treaty between that Prince and Moubray, the governor, it was agreed; that if the garrifon received no relief from England before a year expired, they found furrender to the Scots. The day preceding the battle, a firong body of cavalry, to the number of 800, was detached from the English camp, under the conduct of lord Clifford, to the relief of that garrifon. Thefe, having marched through fome hollow grounds upon the edge of the Carfe, had paffed the Scots army before they were obferved. The King himfelf was the first that perceived them, and defiring Thomas Randolph, earl of Murray, to look towards the place where they were, told him, that a role had fallen from his chaplet. Randolph, confidering this as a reproach, becaufe lic had the charge of that part, through which the English had marched, immediately fet out after them with a party of 500 horte, and coming up with them, in the plain where the fmall village of New-houfe now flands, a fharp action enfued, in fight of both armies, and of the garrifon of Stirling. It was fought with valour on both fides: and it was fome time doubtful where victory would turn. King Robert, attended by fome of his officers, beheld the encounter from a riling ground, inpposed to be the round hill immediately upon the weft of St. Niniaus, now called Cock fhot-hill, Sir James Douglas, perceiving the diffrefs of Randolph, who was greatly inferior to the enemy in numbers, afked leave to go to his fupport. This King Robert at first refused, but afterwards confenting, Douglas put his foldiers in motion ; obferving, however, as le was on the way, that the victory was upon the point of being won without his affiftance, he ftopped fhort, that his friend might have the unrivalled glory of it. The Epglith were entirely defeated, and many of them fain; and Randolph returned to the camp amidft acclamatiols of

A N A C C O U N T O F T H E universal joy. To perpetuate the memory of this victory, two flones were reared up in the field, and are full to be feen there. They fland in a spot which has lately been inclosed for a garden at the north end of the village of Newhouse, and about a quarter of a mile, from the Borough-port of Stirling.

This victory gave new fpirits to the whole army, and made them fo eager for the general engagement, that the night, tho' among the florteft of the year, fecned long to them. Edward too, exasperated at the defeat of his detachment, was determined to bring on the battle on the morrow. At length appeared the dawn of that important day, which was to decide, whether Scotland was henceforth to be an independent kingdom; or fubject to a foreign yoke. Early all was in motion in both armies : religious feutiments were mingled with the military ardour of the Scots; a iolemn mais, in the manner of thefe times, was faid by the Abbot of Inchaffery, a monastary in Strathearn, who also administred the facrament to the King and the great officers about him, while inferior priefts did the fame to the reft of the army. After this they formed in order of battle, in a track of ground called Nether-Touchadam, which lies along the declivity of a gently riting hill. This fituation had been previoufly chofen becanle of its advantages. Upon the right they had a " range of fleep rocks, now called Murray's Craig, and in their front, were steep banks of the rivulet of Bannockburn. Not far behind them was a wood; fome veftiges of which still remain. Upon the left was a morals, now called Milton-bog, from its vicinity to a fmall village of thats name : much of this bog is ftill undrained, and a part of. it is at prefent a mill dam. As it was then the middle of fummer, it was almost quite dry. But King Robert had recourse to a firatagem, in order to prevent any attack from that quarter. ,He had ordered many ditches and pits to be digged in the morals, and flakes, tharpened at both ends, to be driven into them, and the whole to be coveroc over again with green turf, fo that the ground had ftill the appearance of being firm. He alfo caufed crow-feet, or harp pointed irons to be feattered throughout the morafs; fome of them have been found there in the memory of pople flill living; the fame manœuvres were likewife carried on for a little way along the front of the left wing; ore flat than they are any where elfe, it was the onace where the enemy could pais the river in any fort of rder. By means of thefe artificial improvements, joina to the natural firength of the ground, the Scotch arny flood as within an entrenchment, and the invisible pits and ditches answered the concealed batteries of more moern times.

Amongft the other occurences of this memorable day, iftorians mention an accident of a fingular nature. As he two armies were about to engage. The Abbot of Inchffery polling himfelf before the Scots, with a crucifix in his hand, they all fell down upon their knees in the act of devotion. The enemy observing them in fo uncomnon a pofture, concluded that they were frighted into ubmiffion, and that, by kneeling, when they should be ready to fight, they meant to furrender at diferction, and only to beg their lives; but they were foon undeceived, when they faw them rife again, and fland to their arms with steady countenances.

The English began the action, by a brisk charge upon the left wing of the Scots commanded by Randolph, near the spot, where the bridge is now thrown over the river, at the small village of Charter's hall. Hereabout was the only place where the river could be crossed in any order. A large body of cavalry advanced to attack him in front, while another fetched a compass to fall upon his flank and rear, but before they could come to close engagement, they fell into the snare that had been laid for them. Mamy of their horses were foon disabled, by the sharp irons rushing into their feet, others tumbled into the conceald pits, and could not diffent thems for any other arsour, shill continue to be dug up in the bog.

In the beginning of the engagement, an incident happened, which; though in itfelf of fmall moment, was rendered important by its confequences. King Robert was rounted on horieback, carrying a battle-ax in his hand, and upon his heimet, he wore a high turban in the form of a crown, by way of diffinction. This, together with his activity, rendered him very confpicuous as he role before the lines. An English Knight, named Bohun, who was ranked among the bravelt in king Edward's army, act of chivalry, at once to put an end to the contest a act of chivalry, at once to put an end to the contest, and gain immortal renown to himfelf; but the enterprizio champion, having milled the fiff blow, was immediated firuck dead with the battle ax which the King carried i his hand. This was a fort ofta fignal for the charge. S bold an attack upon their King filled the Scots with fentiments of revenge; and the heroic atchievement perform ed by him before their eyes, raifed their fpirits to the high eff pitch. They rulbed furiously upon the chemy, who having by this time paffed the river in great numbers, gave them a warm reception.

A fingular occurence, which fome accounts repreferry as an accidental fally of patriotic enthusiafm, others as a pre-medituted ftratagem of King Robert, fuddenly alterid the face of affairs, and contributed greatly to the victor : All the fervance and minuted of the Scottilla away, and the faid to have amounted to 20,000, had been order a I fore the battle, to retire behind Marma's craig. But having, during the engragements awanged themfelves in a martial form, they matched to the top of the hill, and diplaying white fheets fixed upon poles, inflead of banners, moved towards the field of battle, with hideous fhouts, The English, perceiving this motely crowd, and taking them for a fresh relaforcement, advancing to support the Scots, were feized with a great pannic, that they began to give way in confusion. Buchanan fays, that the King of England was the first who fled ; but in this he contradicted all other hiltorians, who affirm, that he was among the laft in the field. The Scots purfued, and great was the flaughter among the enemy, especially in palling the river, where they could keep no order, becaute of the irregularity of the ground. King Edward himfelf elcaped with much difficulty, being closely purfued above forty miles by Sir James Douglas, with a party of light horfe; he was upon the point of being taken prioper, when he was received into the caffle of Dunbary by the Farl of March, who conveyed him to lengland by fea in a fifther's boat: this immenfe army being entirely difcomfited. The Scots only loft 1000 men, while the lofs of the English amounted to above 30,000.
