I Cor 11. 26, 27, 28.

For as oft as yeeat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come.

Wherefore who soever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord unworthily, is guilty of the body and bloud of the Lord. But let a man examine himself and la let him

But let a man examine himself, and so let bim eat of that bread, and drink of that sup.

> 17 defign in this Argument, is, from the confideration of the Nature of this Sacrament of the Land's Supper, and of the perpetual Life of it to the end of the world, to awaken men to a fenie of their Duty, and the great obligation which lyes upon them to the more frequent receiving of the And there is the greater need to make men sensible of their duty luthis particular, because

in this Idf Age by the unwarry difcourfes of fome, concerning the nature of this Sexrament, and the danger of receiving it unworthilly; fuch doubts and fears have been raifed in the minds of men as unterly to deterf many, and Jan a great measure to difcourage almost the generality of Christians from the ufe of it; to the great prejudice and danger of mens fouls, and the visible abstement of piery by the groß neglect of fo excellents means of our grouth, and improvement in it; and to the mighty feendal of our Religion, by the general difuse and contempt of fo plain and follenn an Infiltuation of our bielfed Lord and Saviour.

Therefore I shal take occasion as briefly and clearly as I can tourcat of these Four points.

First, Of the Perpetuity of this Institution; this the Apollic fignifies when he faith, that I Cor. 11. 26.

The esting this bread, and drinking this cap, the do fluty the Lord's death till Steandly, of the Obligation that lyes upon all Christians to a frequent observance of this Institution; this is fightfied in that expression of the Apolite; as girn as ye at this bread, and arise his steay. Which expression considered and compared together with the practice of the Perintitive Church, does imply an obligation upon Christians to the frequent receiving of this Sacrament.

Thirdin, I shal endeavour to satisfie the Opin last and Scroples, which have been raised in the inhads of men, and particularly of many devote and sincer Christians, to their great discouragemant from their receiving this Sacrament, at least so frequency as they cught: Which Objections are chiesly grounded upon what the Anolise say, Whresign wobjector least this breat, and airsis bits cap of the Lard answerbilly, is guilty of the bady and bload of the Lard; and data at this is the Lard; and data at the saint of the sai

Fourthly, What Preparation of our felves is necessary in order to our worthy receiving of this Sacrament; which will give me occasion to explain the Aposite's meaning in these words, Ver. 22, East let a man examine bimfelf, and

fo let bim eat of that bread, and dring of that cup. w

I. For the Perpetuky of this Inflitution, implyed in those words, For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do fhew forth the Lord's death till be come; or the Words may be read imperatively, and by way of precept, Shew ye forth the Lord's death till he come. In the three verses immediatly before, the Apostle particularly declares the Institution of this Sacrament, with the manner and circumflances of it, as he had received it, not only by the hands of the Apostles, but, as the Words feem rather to intimate, by immediate Revelation from our Lord himfelf, Ver. 23. For I have received of the Lord that which I alfo delivered unto you; that the Lord Fefus in the fame night that he was betraged took bread, and when he had given thanks he brake it, and faid, eake, eat, this is my body which is broken for you; this do in remembrance of me, After the fame manner, also be took the cup when he had supped, saving, this eup is the new Testament in my bloud: this do as often as ye shal drink it in remembrance of me. So that the Inflitution is in thefe Words. This do in remembrance of me. In which words our Lord commands his Disciples after his Death, to repeat these occasions, of taking and breaking and eating the Bread, and of drinking of the cup, by way of folemn Commemoration of Him. Now whether this was to be done by them once only, or oftner; and whether by the Disciples only, during their lives, or by all Christians afterwards in all successive Ages of the Church, is not so certain, merely from the force of these words. Do this in remembrance of me : But what the Apostle adds, Duts the matter out of all doubt, that the Institution of this Sacrament was intended, not only for the Apollles, and for that Age, but for all Christians, and for all Ages of the Christian Church ; For as often as yeeat this bread, and drink this cup . ye do the w the Lord's death till he come ; that is, until the time of his fecond coming, which will be at the end of the World. So that this Sacrament was deligned to be a flanding Commemoration of the Death and and Pailion of our Lord till he should come to ludgement; and confequently the Ooligation that lyes upon A 3'

Christians to the observation of it is perpetual, and shall never cease to the end of the World.

So that it is a vain concelt and meer dream of the Enthusiasts, concerning the feculum (piritus fantti, the Age and dispensation of the holy Chost, when, as they suppole, all humane teaching that cease, and all external Ordinances and Infiltutions in Religion thal vanish, and there that be no further use of them: Whereas it is very plain from the New Testament, that Prayer, and outward Teaching, and the use of the two Sacraments, were intended to continue among Christians in all Ages, As for Praver-(besides our natural obligation to this duty, if there were no revealed Religion ) we are by our Saviour particularly exhorted to Watch and Pray, with regard to the day of Judgment, and in confideration of the uncertainty of the time when it shal be: And therefore this will always be a Duty incumbent upon Christians till the day of Judgment, because it is prescribed as one of the best ways of preparation for it. That Outward Teaching likewife and Baptism were intended to be perpetual, is no less plain, because Christ hath expresly promised to be with the Teachers of his Church in the use of these Ordinances to the end of the World. (Matth. 28. 19, 20. Go and Difciple all Nations, baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the holy Ghoft: and lo. I am with you always to the end of the World.) Not only to the end of that particular Age, but to the end of the Gofpel-Age, and the confummation of all Ages, as the phrase clearly imports. And it is as plain from this Text, that the Sacrament of the Lora's Supper was intended for a perpetual Institution in the Christian Church, till the second coming of Christ, viz. his coming to judgment : Because Sr. Paul tells us, that by these Sacramental Signs the Death of Christ is to be represented, and commemorated till he come. Do this in remembrance of me, for as oft as ye eat this Bread, and drink this Cup, je do fhew the Lord's Death till he come.

And if this be the End and Use of this Sacrament, to be a solemn remembrance of the Death and Sufferings of our Lotd, during his absence from us; that is, till his coming to Judgement, then this Sacrament will never be out of date till the second coming of our Lord. The confideration whereof should mightily strengthen and encourage our Faith, in the hope of Eternal Life, to often as we pertake of this Sacrament; fince our Lord hath left it to us as a memorial of himself till he come, to translase his Church into Beaven, and as a fure pledge that he will come again at the end of the World, and inveft us in that Glory, which he is now gone before to prepare for us. So that as often as we approach the Table of the Lord, we should comfort our selves with the thoughts of that bleffed time, when we shall eat and drink with him in his Kingdom, and shall be admitted to the great Feast of the Lamb, and to eternal Communion with God, the Judge of all, and with our bleffed and glorified Redeemer, and the holy Angels, and the Spirits of Just men made perfect.

And the same consideration should likewise make us afraid to receive this Sacrament unworthily, without due Preparation for it, and without worthy effects of it upon our Hearts and Lives. Because of that dreadfull sentence of condemnation, which at the second coming of our Lord shall be past upon those, who by the profanation of and contemn the bloud of the Covenant : that Covenant of Grace and Mercy, which God hath ratified with Mankind by the Bloud of his Son. The Apostle tells us, that he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, is guilty of the body and bloud of the Lord, and eateth and drinketh damnation to himself. This indeed is spoken of temporal Judgment ( as I shall shew in the latter part of this Discourse.) but the Apostle likewise supposeth, that if these temporal Judgments had not their effect, to bring men to repentance, but they still persisted in the profanation of this holy Sacrament, they flould at laft be condemned with the World. For as he that partaketh worthily of this Sacrament, confirms his interest in the promises of the Gospel, and his Title to eternal life; fo he that receives this Sacrament unworthily, that is, without due reverence, and without fruits meet for it; bay, on the contrary, continues to live in fin whilft he commemorats the death of Christ, who gave him, felf for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, this man appravats and feals his own damnation, because he is guilty of the body and bloud of Christ, not only by the contempt of it, but by renewing in some fort the cause of. his fufferings, and as it were crucifieing to himfelf afresh the Lord of life and glory, and putting him to an open shame. And when the great Judge of the World shall appear, and pass final fentence upon men, such obstinate and impenitent Wretches as could not be wrought upon, by the remembrance of the dearest love of their dying Lord, nor be engaged to leave their fins by all the tyes and obligations of this holy Sacrament, shall have their portion with Pilate and Judgs, with the chief Priests and Souldiers, who were the betravers and murthefers of the Lord of life and glory; and shall be dealt withall as those who are in some fort, guilty of the body and bloud of the Lord. Which severe threatning ought not to discourage men from the Sacrament, but to deterr all those from their fins, who think of engaging themselves to God by so solemn and holy a Covenant. It is by no means a sufficient reason to make men to fly from the Sagrament, but certainly one of the most powerfull arguments in the world, to make men for fake their fins; as I shall show more fully in the third head of this Difcourfe.

11. The Obligation that lyes upon all Christians to the frequent observance and practice of this Inflitution. For though it be not necessarily implyed in these words, as oft as we eat this bread and drink this cup; jet if we compare these words of the ApoRle with the mage and practice of Christians at that time, which was to communicate in this holy Sacramenr, fo often as they folemnly met together to worship God, they plainly suppose and recommend to us the frequent wie of this Sacrament, or rather imply an obligation upon Christians to embrace all opportunities of receiving it. For the sense and meaning of any Law or Institution is best understood by the general practice, which follows immediatly upon it-

And to convince men of their obligation hereunto, and to engage them to a fnitable practice, I shall now endeayour with all plainness and force of perswasion I can: And fo much the more, because the neglect of it among Christians is grown to general, and a great many persons from a Superflitious awe and reverence of this Sacrament, are by degrees fallen into a profane neglect and contempt

I shall briefly mention a threefold Obligation lying upon all Christians to frequent Communion in this holy Sacrament, each of them fufficient of It felf, but all of them together of the greatest force imaginable, to engage us hereunto-1. We are obliged in point of indispensable duty, and in obedience to a plain precept, and most solemn institution of our bleffed Saviour, that great Lawgiver, who is able to fave and to destroy, as St. James calls him : He hath bid us, Do this. And Saint Paul who declares nothing in this matter, but what he tells us he received from the Lord, admonished us to do it often. : Now for any man that profelleth himself a Christian, to live in the open and continued contempt or peglect of a plain Law and Institution of Christ is utterly inconfiftent with fuch a profession. To such our Lord may fay as he did to the Jews, why call ge me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I fay. How far the ignorance of this inflitution, or the miffakes which men have been led into about it, may extenuate this neglect is another confideration. But after we knew our Lord's will in this particular, and have the Law plainly laid before us, there is no cloak for our fin. For nothing can excuse the wilfull neglect of a plain Inflitution from a downright contempt of our Saviour's Authority,

2. We are likewise obliged hereunto in point of Interest. The benefits which we expect to be derived and affured to us by this Sacrament are all the bleffings of the new Covenant, the forgiveness of our fins, the grace and affistance of God's holy Spirit, to enable us to perform the conditions of this Covenant required on our part; and the comforts of God's holy Spirit to encourage us in well-doing, and to support us under sufferings; and the glordols reward of eternal life. So that In neglecting this Sacrament we neglect our own interest and happiness, we for sake our own mercles, and Judge our selves unworthy of all the bleftings of the Gospie; and deprive our selves of one of the best means and advantages of constraints and conveying these bleftings to us. So that if we had not a due sense of our days, the consideration of our own suttriss floud oblige us, not to neglect to excellent and to effectual a means of promoting our own comfort and happinels.

3. We are likewise particulary obliged in point of Gratitude to the carefullobservance of this Institution. This was the particular thing our Lord gave in charge, when he was going to lay down his life for us, Do this in remembrance of me. Men use religiously to observe the charge of a dying freind, and unless it be very difficult and unreasonable, to do what he defires : But this is the charge of our best freind f nay of the greatest friend and benefactor of all mankind ) when he was preparing himself to die in our flead, and to offer up himfelf a facrifice for us; to undergo the most grievous pains and sufferings for our lakes, and to yield up himself to the worst of temporal Deaths. That he might deliver us from the bitter pains of eternal Death. And can we derly him any thing he asks of us who was going to do all this for us? Can we deny him this? to little grievous and burthenfome in it felf a fooinfinitly heneficial to us? Had fuch a friend, and in fuch circumstances bid us do some great thing, would we not have done it? How much more when he hath only faid. Do this in remembrance of me? when he hath only commanded to us one of the most natural and delighte full Actions, as a fit representation and memorial of his svonderfull Love to us, and of his cruel fufferings for our sakes; when he hath only enjoyned us, in a thankfull commemoration of his goodness, to meet at his table, and to remember what he hath done for us; to look on him whom we have pierced, and to refolve to grieve, and wound him no more? Can we without the most horzible ingratitude neglect this dying charge of our Soveraign and our Saviour, the great friend and Jover of fouls? A command to reasonable, to easie, to full of bleffings and benefits to the faithfull observers of it!

One would think it were no difficult matter, to convince men of their duty in this particular, and of the necessity of oblerving to plah an Int Itution of our Lord, that is were no hard thing to perswader nen to their interest, to be willing too partake of those great the mainfold bleffings, which all Christians believe to be promited and made good to the frequent and worthy Receivers of this Sacrament, Where then lyes the difficulty? What should be the cause of all this backwardnets, which we feet in men to so plain, so necessary, and so beneficial a duty? The truth is, men have been greatly discouraged from this Sacrament, by the danger of the answerby receiving of this boly Sacrament, and the necessity of a date preparation for it. Which brings and the necessity of a date preparation for it. Which brings me to the

III. Third Particular I proposed, which was to endeayour to fatisfie the Objections and Scruples, which have been raifed in the minds of men, and paricularly of many devous and fincere Christians, to their great discouragement from the receiving of this Sacrament, at least so frequently as they ought. And these Objections, I told you, are chiefly grounded upon what the Apostle fayes v. 27. Wherefore who soever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord unworthily, is emilty of the body and bloud of the Lord, And an gain v, 29. He that eateth and drinkerb unmarthily, eateth and drinbeth damnation to himfelf. Upon the mittzke & milapplication of thefe Texts have been grounded Two Objections, of great force to discourage n en from this Sacrament, which .I shall endeavour with all the tenderness and clearness I can to remove. Firft, That the danger of unworthy recelving being to very great, it feems the fafeft way not to receive at all. Secondly, That fo much Preparation and worthiness being required in order to ourworthy receiving. he more timorous fort of devout Christians can never think hemselves duly enough qualified for so sacred an Acti-

1. That the danger of unworthy receiving being so very great, it feems the fafeft way wholly to refrain from this Sacrament, and not to receive it at all. But this Objection is evidently of no force, if there be (as most certainly there is ) as great or a greater danger on the other hand, viz. in the neglect of this Duty : And so though the danger of unworthy receiving be avoided by not receiving. yet the danger of neglecting and contemning a plain Inftiturion of Christ is not thereby avoided. Surely they in the Parable that refused to come to the Marriage-feast of the. King's Son, and made light of that gracious invitation were at least as faulty as he who came without a weddinggarment. And we find in the conclusion of the Parable, that as he was feverely punished for his difrefiect, so they were destroyed for their disobedience. Nav of the two, it is the greater fign of contempt wholly to neglect the Sacrament, than to partake of it without some due qualification. The greatest indisposition that can be for this holy Sacrament is ones being a bad man, and he may be as bad, and is more like to continue fo, who wilfully negled's this Sacrament, than he that comes to it with any degree of reverence and preparation, though much less than he ought: And furely it is very hard for men to come to fo folemn an ordinance without fome kind of religious awe upon their fpirits, and wishout some good. thoughts and resolutions, at least for the present. If a man that Ilves in any known wickedness of life, do before he receive the Sacrament fet himfelf ferioully to be humbled for his fins, and to repent of them, and to beg God's grace and affiftance against them; and after the receiving of it, does continue for some time in these good refolutions, though after a while he may possibly relapic into the same fins again; this is some kind of restraint to a wicked life, and these good moods and fits of repentance and reformation are much better than a conftant and uninterrupted course of fin : Even this rightcopineis, which is but as the morning cloud and the early dew, which fo foon passeth away, is better than none,

And indeed scarce any man can think of coming to the Sacrament.

Sacrament, but he will by this confideration be excited to flome good purpofes, and put upon some force of endeavour to amend and reform his hife; and though he be very much under the bondage and power of evil habits, if he do with any competent degree of fineerly (and tie his own fault if he do not) make use of this excellent means and instrument, for the mortifying and fudding of his lusts, and for the obtaining of God's grace and affifunce, it may teafe God by the use of the means, so to abate the force and power of his fulfs, and to imprint such confiderations upon his midd, in the receiving of this holy Sacterament, and preparing himselffor it, that he may at laft break off his wheked courle, and become a good man. But, on the other land, as to those who needed the Sacrianent, there is hardly any thing left to reflram them from the greated enormhies of life, and to give a check to them in their evil courie; nothing but the penalty of humane laws, which men may avoid, and yet be wicked enough. Herectofore men ucide to be reflrained from great and feandalous vices by fiame and lear of diffrace, and would abfain from many fine, out of regard to their honour and reputation among men: Bat men have hardned their faces in this degenerate Age, and those gentle reflraints of modelly which governed and kept men in order herectofore, figuific nothing now a-days. Blufting jour of faibloin, and thrase is cealed from amongo the child dren of men.

But the Sacrament did always whe to by loome kind of reftraintupon the worst of men; and if it did not wholly reform them, it would at least have loome good effect upon them for a time: If it did not make men good, yet it would make them refolve to be 69, and leave force good thoughts and impressions upon their minds.

So that I doubt not but it hath been a thing of very bad, confequence, to difcourage men formsch from the Sacrament, as the way hath been of size years; and that many men who were under founc kind of check before, fince they have been driven away from the Sacrament, have quite let loofe the reigna, and praffictured them.

selves to all manner of impiety and vice. And among the the many ill effects of our past confusions, this is none of the leaft; That in many congregations of this Kingdom, Chriftians were generally disused and deterred from the Sacrament, upon a pretence that they were unfir for it; and being to, they must necessarily locur the danger of unworthy receiving ; and therefore they had better wholly to abstant from it. By which it came to pass, that in very many places this great and Solemn Inflitution of the Christian Religion was almost quite forpotten, as if it had been no pate of lt, and the remembrance of Christ's death even lost among Christians : So that many Congregations in England might juffly have taken up the complaint of the Woman at our Saviour's sepulchre, They have taken away our Lord, and we know not where they have laid bim.

But surely men did not well confider what they did, nor what the confequence of it would be, when they did fo earneftly diffwade men from the Sacrament, 'Tis true indeed the danger of unworthy receiving is great; but the proper inference and conclusion from hence is not. that men should upon this consideration be deterred from the Sacrament, but that they should be affrighted from their fins, and from that wicked course of life, which is an habitual indisposition and unworthiness. St. Paul. indeed ( as I observed before ) truly represents, and very much agg avats the danger of the unworthy receiving of this Sacrament; but he did not deterr the Corinthians from it, because they had sometimes come to it without due reverence, but exhorts them to amend what had been amifs, and to come better prepared and disposed for the former. And therefore after that terrible declaration in the Text. 19hofoguer (hal eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord unworthily, is guilty of the body and bloud of the Laid, he does not add, therefore let Christians take heed of coming to the Sacrament, but let them come prepared and with due reverence, not as to a common meal, but to a folema participation of the body and bloud of Christian ut let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

For, if this be a good reason to abstaln from the Sacrament, for fear of performing to facred an action in an indue marrier, it were best for a bad man to lay aside Il Religion, and to give over the exercise of all the duties of piety, of prayer, of reading and hearing the Word God; because there is a proportionable danger in the inworthy and unprofitable use of any of these. The prayer of the wicked ( that is, of one that refolves to continue (o) is an abomination to the Lord. And our Saviour vives as the same caution concerning hearing the Word of God ; take beed how ge bear. And St. Paul. tells us, that thois who are not reformed by the doctrine of the Golpel, it is the favour of death, that is, deadly and damnable to fuch perfors. But now will any man from hence argue, that it is beff for a wicked mannot to pray, not to hear or read the Word of God, left by fo doing he should endanger and aggravat his condemnation? And yet there is as much reason from this consideration to perswade men to give over praying, and attending to God's Word, as to lay asside the use of the Sacrament, And It is every whit as erue, that he that prays unworthily, and hears the word of God unworthily, that is, without fruit and benefit, is guilty of a great contempt of God, and of our bleffed Savlour; and by his undevout prayers, and unfruitful hearing of God's Word, does further and aggravat his own damnation: I say, this is every whit as true, as he that eats and drinks the Sacrament unworthily is guilty of a high contempt of Christ, and eats and drinks his own judgment lo that the danger of the unworthy performing this fo facred an action is no otherwise a reason to any man, to abstain from the Sacrament, than it is an Argument to him to caffi off all Religion. He that unworthily ufeth or performs any part of Religion is in an evil and dangerous condition; but he that casts off all Religion plungeth himself into a most desperat state, and does certainly damn himself to avoid the danger of damnation : Because he that casts off all

Religion, throws off all the means whereby he should be reclaimed and brought into a better flace. I cannot more fifty illustrathis matter than by this plain Similitade. He that cars and drinks intemperately endangers his health and his life, but he that to avoid this danger will not eat at all, I need not tell you what will certainly become of him in a very short space. There are some conscientious persons who abstain from the Sactament, upon an apprehension that the fins which they shall commit afterwards are unpardonable. this is a great miffake; our Saviour having to plainly declared, that all manner of fin shal be forgiven men. except the blasphemy against the holy Ghost; such as was that of the Pharifets, who as our Saviour tells us blafphemed the Holy Ghoft, in ascribing those great miracles which they faw him worke, and which he really wrought by the Spirit of God, to the power of the Devil. Indeed to fin deliberately after so solemn an engagement to the contrary is a great aggravation of fin, but not fuch as to make it unpardonable. But the neglect of the Sacrament is not the way to prevent thefe fins; but, on the contrary, the constant receiving of it, with the best preparation we can, is one of the most effectual means to prevent fin for the future, and to obtain the affiftance of God's grace to that end. And if we fall into fin afterwards we may be repewed by repentance; for me have an adve. cate with the Father, Jefus Christ the rightcous, who is the propitiation for ear fins; and as fuch, is in a very lively and affecting manner exhibited to us, in this bleffed Sacrament of his body broken, and his bloud fleed for the remission of our fins. Can we think that the primitive Christians, who so frequently received this holy $1crament, did never after the receiving of it fall into any deliberate fin? undoubtedly many of them did; but far be it from us to think, that fuch fins were unpardonable, and that to many good men faould because of their careful and conscientious observance of our Lord's Institution unavoldably fall into condemnation.

To draw to a conclusion of this matter; such groundless fears and jealoufies as these may be a fign of a good meaning, but they are certainly a fign of an injudicious mind. For if we fland upon these Scruples, no man perhaps was ever fo worthily prepared to draw near to God in any duty of Religion, but there was still some defect or other in the disposition of his mind, and the degree of his preparation, But if we prepare our felves as we can, this is all that God expects. And for our fears of falling into fin afterwards. there is this plain answer to be given to it; that the danger of falling into fin is not prevented by neglecting the Sacrament, but encreased; because a powerfull and probable means of preferving men from fin is neglected. And why Chould not every fincere Christian, by the receiving of this Sacrament, and renewing his Covenant with God, rather hope to be confirmed in goodness, and to receive further affiftances of God's grace and holy Spirit to Arengthen him against sin, and to enable him to subdue it; than trouble himself with fears, which are either without ground, or if they are not are no infficient reason to keep any man from the Sacrament ? We cannot furely entertain fo unworthy a thought of God, and our bleffed Saviour, as to imagine that he did inflitute the Sacrament, not for the furtherance of our Salvation, but as a snare, and an occasion of our ruine and damnation. This were to pervert the gracious defign of God, and to turn the cup of Salvation into a cup of deadly polion to the fouls of men.

All then that can reasonably be inferred from the danger of unworthy receiving is, that upon this confideration men should be quickned to come to she Sacrament with a due preparation of mind, and for much the more to fortide their resolutions of living subject to that holy Covenant, which they solemnly renew every time they receive this holy Sacrament. This confideration ought to convince us bit the absolute necessity of a good life, but not to deter us from the use of a ny means which may contribute to make us good. Therefore (as a learned Driving lays very well) it with Sacrament can be negleted by none but those that do not understand it, but those who are unwilling to be eved to their duty, and are afraid to being engaged to the their best diligence to keep the confinandments of Christ And such persons have no reason to fear being in a worse condition, fince they are already in 6 bad a state. And thus much may suffice for answer to the first Objection concerning the great danger of unworthy receiving this holy Secrament. I shall proceed to the

Obj. 2. 25ccond Objection, which was this; That fo much preparation and worthiness being required to our worthy receiving, the more times for soft christians can never think themselves duly expensions.

nough qualified for fo facred an Adlon.

For full, answer to this Objection, I shall endeavour briefly to clear their Inter thing. First, That every degree of Imperfection in our preparation for this Sacrament is not a sufficient reason for men to refrain from it. Secondly, That a total want of a due preparation, not only in the degree but in the main and twisfrance of it, shough it render us unfit as prefect to receive this Sacrament, yet it does by no means excel our negled of it. Thirdly, That the proper interence and conclusion from the total want of a due preparation, is not to cast off all thoughts of receiving the Sacrament, yet have been conceived in America of preparation, that for we may be fit to receive it. And if I can clearly make out these street things, I hope this Objection is fully answered.

I That every degree of Imperfection in our preparation for this Sacrament is not a fufficient reason for men to abstain from it; for then no man should ever receive. It: For who is every way worthy, and in all degrees and respects duly qualified, rosuproach the presence of God in any of the duries of his Worship and Service? Who can wall his heads is rianeren; that she he perfectly fit to approach God's Aliat? There is not a man on earth that lives and sins not. The Graeces of the best meaner imperfect, and every imperfection in grace and goodness is an theperfection in the disposition for preparation of our minds.

for this holy Sacrament: But if we do heartily repent of our fins, and fincerely resolve to obey and perform the terms of the Golpel, and of that Covenant which we entered into by Baptim, and are going folerably to renew and confirm by our receiving of this Sacrament, we are at least in some degree, and in the main qualified to 1 a take of this holy Sacrament; And the way for us to be more fit is to receive this Sacrament frequently, that by this spiritual food of God's appointing by this living bread which comes down from beaven our fouls may be nourished in goodness, & new strength and vertue may be continually derived to us, for the purifying of our hearts, and enabling us to run the ways of Gods commandments with more conflancy and delight. For the way to grow in grace, and to be firengthned with all riight in the inner man, and to abound in all the fruits of righteoufness, which by Christ Jesus are to the praise and glory of God, is with care and conscience to use those means which God hath appointed for this end: And if we will neglect the use of these means, it is to no purpose for us to pray to God for his grace and affiftance. We may tire our felves with our devotions, and fill heaven with value complaints, and yet by all this importunity obtain nothing at God's hand: Likelazy beggers that are always complaining and always asking, but will not work, will do nothing to help themselves, and better their condition, and therefore are never like to move the plty and compassion of others. If we expect God's grace and affiftance, we must work out our own (alvation in the carefull use of all these means which God hath appointed to that end. That excellent degree of goodness, which men would have to fit them for the Sacrament, is not to be had but by the use of And therefore it is a prepoflerous thing for men to inall upon having the end before they will use the means that may further them in the obtaining of it.

2. The total want of a due preparation, not only in the legree, but in the main and fubfiance of it, though it realier us unfit at prefent to receive this Sacrament, yet does by no means excite our needect of it. One fault may draw on another, but can never excuse it. It is our great fault that we are wholly unprepared, and no man can claim any benefit by his fault, or plead it in excuse or extenuation of this neglect. A total want of preparation and an absolute unworthiness is impenitency in an evil course, a resolution to continue a bad man, not to quit his lufts, and to break off that wicked course he hath lived in : But is this any excuse for the neglect of our duty. that we will not fit our felves for the doing of it with benefit and advantage to our felves? A father commands his fon to ask him bleffing every day, and is ready to give it him; but to long as he is undutiful to him in his other actions, and lives in open disobedience, forbids him to' come in his fight. He exculeth himself from asking his sathers bleffing, because he is undutiful in other things, and refolves to continue fo. This is just the cause of negle-Ging the duy God requires, and the bloffings he offers to us in the Sacrament, because we have made our selves incapable of fo performing the one as to receive the other, and are resolved to continue so. We will not do our duty in other things, and then plead that we are unfit and unworthy to do it in this particular of the Sacrament.

. 2. The proper inference and conclusion from a total want of due preparation for the Sacrament, is not to cast off all thoughts of receiving of it, but immediately ro fet about the work of preparation, that to we may be fit to receive it. For if this be true, that they who are abfolutely us prepared ought not to receive the Sacrament, nor can do it with any benefit; nay by doing it in such a manner render their condition much worse, this is a most forcible argument to repentance and amendment of life. There is nothing reasonable in this case, but immediately to refolve upon a better course, that so we may be meet partakers of those holy Mysteries, and may no longer provoke God's wath against us by the wilfull neglect of fo great and necessary a duty of the Christian Religion. And we do willfully neglect it, folong as we do willfully refuse to fit and qualific our selves for the due and worthy performance of it. Let us view the thing in a like case; A pardon is gracloufly offered to a rebel, he declines to accept it, and modefuly excuseth himself, because he is not worthy of it. And why is he not worthy? Because he resolves to be a rebel, and then his pardon will do him no good, but be an/aggravation of his Crime. Very true; and it will be no less an aggravation that he sesufeth it for fuch a reason, and under a pretence of modesty does the most imprudent thing in the world. This is just the cases and in this case there is but one thing reasonable to be done, and that is, for a man to make himself capable of the benefit as foon as he can, and thankfully to accept of it: But to excule himself from accepting of the benefit offered, because he is not worthy of it, nor fit for it, nor ever intends to be fo. is as it a man should defire to be excufed from being happy, because he is resolved to play she fool and to be milerable. So that whether our want of preparation be total, or only to some degree, it is every way unreasonable. If it be in the degree only, it ought not to hinder us from receiving the Sacrament; If it be total, it ought to put us immediatly upon removing the impediment, by making such 'preparation as is necesfary to the due and worthy receiving of it. And this brings me to the

IV. Fourth and laft thing I proposed, vie. What preparation of our selves is necessary in order to the worthy receiving of this Sacrament. Which took you would give me occasion to explain the Apsilit's meaning in the last part of the Text. But let a man transite birns lift, and so that the property of the took part of the total and drink of that cap. I think it were clear from the occasion and circumstances of the Appilit's discourse concerning the Sacramenr, that he does not intend the examination of our state, whether webe Christians or not, and sincerely resolved to continue so, and consequently that he does not here speak of our habitual preparation by the resolution of a good life. This he takes for granted, that they were Christians and resolved to constitue and perferere in their

Christian profession : But'he speaks of their actual fitness and worthiness at that time when they came to receive the Lord's Supper. And for the clearing of this matter, we must consider what it was that gave occasion to this discourse. At the 20th verse of this Chapter he sharply reprovestheir irreverent and unsuitable carriage at the Lord's Supper. They came to it very disorderly, one before andther. It was the custom of Christians to meet at their Feast of Charity, in which they did communicate with great tobriety and temperance; and when that was ended, they celebrated the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Now among the Corinthians this order was broken; the rich met and excluded the poor from this common feaft : And after an irregular feaft ( one before another 'eating his own supper as he came ) they went to the Sacrament in great diforder; One was hungry, having eaten nothing at all; Others were drunk, having eaten intemperately; and the poor were despited and neglected. This the Apostle condemns as a great profanation of that folemn Infiltution of the Sacrament, at the participation whereof they behaved themselves with as little reverence, as if they had been met at a common Supper or Feaft. And this he calls, not difcerning the Lord's body, making no difference in their behaviour between the Sacrament and a common meal; which irreverent and contempraous carriage of theirs he calls, eating and drinking unworthily; for which he pronounceth them guilty of the body and bloo dof the Lord, which were represented and commemorated in their tating of that bread and drinking of that cup. By which irreverent and contemptuous usage of the body and bloud of our Lord, he tells them that they did incurr the judgment of God; which he calls, eating and drinking their own judgment. For that the word xplots which our Tranflatours render damnation, does not here fignifie eternal condemnation, but a temporal Judgment and chaftifement in order to the prevention of evernal condemnation, is evident from what fellows; He that eateth and drink. etb unwortbily, eateth and dringeth Judgment to bimfeif:

And then he fays, For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and wany fleep : That is, for this irreverence of theirs, God had fent among them feveral difeases, of which many had died. And then he adds, For if we would Judge our felves, we (bould not be judged. For if we would Judge our selves; whether this be meant of the publick Centures of the Church, or our privat centuring of our selves, in order to our future amendment and reformation is not certain. If of the latter, which I think noft probable, then Judging here is much the fame with examining our selves ver. 28 And then the Apostle's meaning is, that if we would centure and examine our felves, fo as to be more careful for the future, we fhou'd escape the Judgment of God in these temporal punishments: But when we are judged; we are haftned of the Lord, that we (hould not be condemned with the world. But when we are Judged; that is, when by neglecting thus to judge our felves, we provoke God to judge us; we are chasined of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world; that is, he is flids these temporal judgments upon us to prevent our evernal condemnation. Which plainly fhews that the judgment here spoken of is not eternal condemnagion. And then he concludes, wherefore, my Brethren, a ben Je come together to eat, tarry for one another. And if any man hunger, let him eat at home, that ye come not together unto judgment: Where the Apostle plainly shows both what was . the crime of unworthy receiving, and the punishment of it. Their crime was, their irreverent and diforderly parriciparion of the Sacrament; and their punishment was, those temporal judgements which God inflicted upon them for this their contempt of the Sacrament.

Now this being. I think, very plain; we are proportionably to understand the precept of examination of our felves, before uset of that breat, and drask all that cap. But let a must examine himself; that is, confider well with himself what a facer'd Action he is going about, and what behaviour becomes thin, when he is celebratine this Sacrament influted by our Lord In memorial of this body and bloud, that is of his death and pafforn. And if heretofore he hath been gully of any dlforder and irreverence (fuch as the Applie here taxen them withall) let him confure and Judge bimplif for it, be fentils for and forry for his fault, and be carcivilit to avoid it for the future; and having thus Examinta bimplif, her him cat of that bread, and drink of that cup. This, it his his, it he plain fente of the Applife, difficurity is and that if we arrend to the foope and circumsflances of it. It cannow well have any other meaning.

But some will say, is this all the preparation that is require ed to our worthy receiving of the Sacrament, that we take care not to come drunk to it, nor to be guilty of any irreverence and disorder in the celebration of it? I answer in fhort, this was the particular unworthings with which the Apolite taxeth the Corinthians, and which he warns them to amend, as they defire to elcape the Judgments of God, fuch as they had already felt for this breverent carriage of theirs, fo unsuitable to the holy Sacrament : He finds no other fault with them at present in this matter, though any other fort of irreverence will proportionably expole men to the like punishment. He lays nothing here of their habitual preparation, by the fincere purpole and reloiu. tion of a good life, answerable so the rules of the Christian Rellelon; this we may suppose he took for granted. However, It concerns the Sacrament no more than it does Prayer or any other religious Dury. Not but that it is very true, that none but those who do heartily embrace the Childlan Religion, and are fincerely resolved to frame their lives according to the holy tules and precepts of it, are fit to communicat in this folemn acknowledgment and profession of at. So that it is a practice very much to be countenanced and encouraged, because it is ef great use, for Christians by way of preparation foe the Sacrament to examine themfelves in a larger fense than in all probability the Apolle here intended ; I mean, to examine our paft lives and the actions of them, in order to a fincere repensance of all our errours and miscarriages, and to fix us in the steady purpole and refolution of a better life ; particularly, when we expect to have the forgivencisof our fini feeled to us, we hould lay aftice all empiry and thoughts of revenge, and hearily torgive thole that have off-inded us, and put in practice that univerfal love and charity which is represented to us by this holy Commandan. And to othis purpose we are essentily exhorted in the publick office of the commantor by way of due preparation and dipofic in office to troppest as trusty of our first paff, to amend one lives, and to be in prefix family with all laws, that is one may be must partakers of thole holy mysteries. And because this work of examining our selves concerning our stare and condition, and of exercising repentance towards God, and charity towards men is incumbent upon us as we are Chriftlans, and can never be pur in practice more feafonably, and with greater advantage, than when we are meditating of this Sacrament, therefore befides our habitual preparation by repentance, and the conflant endeavours of a holy life, it is a very pious and commendable cuftom in Christians before their coming to the Sacrament, to fee a part fome particular time for this work of examination. But how much time every person should allor rothis purpole, is matter of prudence; and as it need nor, so neither indeed can it be precisely determined. Some have greater realon to (pend more time upon this work than others, I mean thefe, whose accounts are heavier, because they have long run upon the score, and neglected themselves; and some also have more leisure and freedom for it, by reason of their easie condition and circumstances in the world; and therefore are obliged to allow a greater portion of time for the exercises of piery and devotion. In general, no man ought to do a work of lo great moment & concernment flighty and perfunctorily. And in this, as In all other actions, the end is principally to be regarded. Now the end of examining our felves is to understand our ftare and condition, and to reform whatever we find amils in our selves. And provided this end be obtained, the circumftances of the means are less considerable; whether more or less time be allowed to this work, it matters not fo much, as to make fure that the work be through done.

And I do on purpose speak thus causlously in this ma ter, because some plous persons do perhaps err on the firider hand & are a little superfiltious on that fide in much that unless they gain to much time to fet a part for folemn preparation, they will refrain from the Sacrament at that time, though otherwise they be habitually prepared This I doubt not proceeds from a plous mind ; but as the Apolite favs in another cafe about the Sacrament, Shall praife them in this? I praife them not. For provided there be no wilfull neglect of due preparation, it is much better to come fo prepared as we can, pay I think! Is our duty to to do, rather than to abstain upon this punctilio. For when all is done, the best preparation for the Sacrament, is the general care and endeavour of a good life; and he that is thus prepared may receive at any time when opportunity is offered, though he had no particular forefight of that opportunity, And I think in that cale such a one shall do much better to receive than to refrain, be. cause he is habitually prepared for the Sacrament, though he had no time to make such actual preparation as he defired : And if this were not allowable, how could Minifters communicar with fick persons at all times, or perfwade others to do it many times upon very fhort and fud . den warning?

And indeed we cannot imagine that the primitive Chrifilans, who received the Sacramen to frequently, that for ought appears to the contrary they Judged it as effendal and neceffary a part of their publick worship as any other part of it whatfoever, even as their Byons & Prayers, and reading and interpreting of the Word of Gaget I fay we cannot well concelve how they who celebrated It fo constantly, could allor any more time for a folerun preparation for it, than they did for any other part of divine worship: And consequently that the Apolite, when he blds the Cariathians extensine themselves, could mean no more than that considering the nature Kends of this Influenon they should come to it with great reverence; and the should be carefull upon this admonistion to swid them pritte luture, and to amend what had been amile; which a do requires rather resolution and care than any long me of preparation.

It fpeak this, that devout perfous may not be intangled a an apprehension of a greater necessity than really-here is of a long & toleran preparation every time they seed the Sacrament. The great necessity that lyes upon aims is tolly eas becomes Christians, and then they can never be absolutely unprepared. Nay I think this to be a very good preparation; and I fee not why men should not be very well fathsied with st, unless they lutend to make the same use of the Sacrament that many of the Papilis do be to the control of the Sacrament that many of the Papilis do be control or wice a year, that so they may begin to sin again upon a new (core.

Do a new torse.

But because the Examination of our felves is a thing so very useful, and the time which men are wont to see appart for their preparation for the Sactament is so advantageous an opportunity for the practice of 11; therefore I cannot but very much commend those who take this occasion, to search and try their ways, and to call themselves to a more foleman account of their actions. Because livius to guidant to be done foreetime, and I know no fitter this ought to be done foreetime, and I know no fitter witten for it than this. And perhaps some would never find vitue to recollect themselves, and to take the condition of which fould in situe of this coolderation, were I not upon

The fum of what I have fald is this, that supposing a person to be habitually prepared by a religious disposition of mind, and the general course of a good life, this more folemn actual preparation is not always necessary; And it is better when there is no obportunity to receive without it, than no to receive at all a But the greater our actual preparation is, the better. For no man can examine hanful too often, and understand the state of his

this felemp occasion

foul too well, and exercife repentance, and renew the refolutions of a good life too frequently. And there perhaps no fatter opportunity for the doing of all the than when we approach the Lord's table, there to con memorate his death, and to renew our Covenant with him to live as becomes the Gofoel.

All the Reflection I first now make upon this Difcourth final be from the confideration of what hat been fall earnetily to excite all that profess and call themselve Christiaus to a due preparation of themselves for this hogy Secrement, and a frequent principation of it, according to the internation of our Lord and Saviour in the institution of it, and the undoubted practice of Christian June principles and the undoubted practice of Christian June principles and the internation of the control of votion, and fewer feruples about their duty.

If we do in good earnest believe, that this Sacramen was inflicated by our Lord in remembrance of his dvings love, we cannot but have a very high value and effeem for It upon that account. Me thinks to often as we read they inftitution of it, thefe words of our dear Lord, Do this in remembrance of me, and confider what he who faid them did for us, this dying charge of our best friend should flick with us, and make a strong impression upon out minds : Efpecially if we add to thele, those other words of his, not long before his death, Greater love than this hath no man, that a man lay down his life for bis friends ; ge are my friends, if ye do whatfoever I command jou. It is a wonderful love which he hath expressed to us, and worthy to be had in perperual remembrance. And all that he expeds from us, by way of thankful acknowledgment, is to celebrate the remembrance of it by the frequent participation of this bleffed Sacrament. And shal this charge, laid upon us by him, who laid down his life for us, lay no obligation upon us to the folema remembrance of that unparallel'd kindness, which is the fountain of so many blesfings and benefits to us ? It is a great fign we have no great tenfe of the benefit, when we are fo unmindfull of our Benelactour, as to forget film days without number.

the obligation he hath laid upon us, is fo vaftly great stonly beyond all regultal, but beyond all expressions ar if he had commanded us fome very grievous thing. e ought with all the readiness and cheersulness in the orld to have done it; how much more when he hadi mpofed upon us fo catie a commandment, a thing of no birthen, but of immente benefit? When he hath only fald ous; Eat, O friends; and Drink, O beloved? When e only invites us to his table, to the beft and moft declous feaft that we can partake of on this fide heaven? If we ferfoufly believe the great bleffings which are there whibited to us, & ready to be conferred upon us, we flouid he fo far from neglecting them, that we should heartily hank God for every opportunity he offers to us of being inade partakers of fuch benefits. When fuch a price is but into our hands that we wanthearts to make use of it? wie thinks we should long with David ( who saw but the whadow of these bleffings ) to be sathfied with the good things of God's house, and to draw near his alter; and Thould cry out with him, O when fhal I come and appear before thee! my foul longerb, yea even fainteth for the bourts of the Lord, and my fles crieth out for the living God. And we had a just esteem of things, we should account it the greatest infelicity and judgment in the world to be debarwed of this priviledge, which yet we do deliberately and frequently deprive our felves of.

We exclaim against the Church of Rome with great inpartence, and with a very just indignation, for robbing the People of half of this biefiled Sacrament, and zaking from them the cay of bissing, the cay of falusting, and yet we can patiently endure for frome moneths, may years, to exclude our felves wholly from it. If no luch great benefits and bleflings belong to it, why do we complain of them for hindring us of any part of it? But if there do, why do we by our own neglect deprive our felthere do, why do we by our own neglect deprive our fel-eves of the whole?

In vain do we bemoan the decay of our graces, and our slow progress and improvement in Christianity, whilst we wilfully despite the best means of our growth in goodness. Well do we deterve that God should fend leanness into our fouls, and make them to consume and pine away in perpetual doubting and trooble, if, when God himself doth pread a Table for us, and site before us the bread of life; we will not come and feed upon it with joy and thankfulness.

willi
