INTRODUCTION

SIR WILLIAM FRASER, K.C.B., LL.D., was born at Arduthie, near Stonehaven, on 18th February 1816. When still a young man, after some successful inquiries for other people, he turned his attention to the history of his own family. He failed, however, to trace it very far. In the year 1740 a certain John Fraser, said to be 'of the Frasers of Lovat' and to have come from Kirkmichael in the heights of Banffshire, had a small farm in the parish of Aberlour. His wife was Jean Carmichael, and they had a son William, born in 1746, and two daughters Anne and Clementina, a name in those days suggesting loyalty to the exiled Royal House. About 1770 William Fraser the son found his way to Aberdeen and thence into the Mearns, where he was employed in building a new steading at Cowie, near Stonehaven. On the completion of the work he settled down there as a mason and married Christian Young, daughter of James Young, tenant of the Mill of Cowie, by whom he had a large family, including William who carried on business as a mason and builder in Stonehaven; James, the father of Sir William; and Jean, married to John Dickson, tenant of Alpity, a farm on Arbuthnott. In 1845 this John Dickson, then a man of eighty-seven, told Sir William that though his grandfather said he came from the Awin Water side, he was not in the way of talking about his connections in the North Country—that he had 'a kilt in which he dressed occasionally with long flowing hair on his back,' and that his wife, when they returned from their marriage jaunt, reported that she had met some relative, a Fraser of good position. All the elements of a romance seemed ready to hand. But there the curtain fell, and nothing more could be ascertained—not even from a son of Clementina Fraser, William Garden by name, who died in 1885 at the age of ninety-nine.

James Fraser, like his father and elder brother William, became a mason. In 1815 he married Ann Walker, daughter of James Walker, tenant of the farm of Elhill of Fetteresso, and Jean Aitershanks his wife, and took up house at Links of Arduthie, near Stonehaven. They had three children : William, born 18th February 1816 ; John, born 31st July 1818 ; and Ann, born 29th August 1820.

Sir William was educated at a private school in Stonehaven kept by the Rev. Charles Michie. On 23rd August 1830 he entered on a five-years' apprenticeship with Messrs. Brand and Burnett, Solicitors, Stonehaven. During these years he made many friends among the other lads of his own age, with whom, after he left Stonehaven, he kept up a correspondence dignified and precocious on both sides. He also seems to have been caught by the prevailing excitement about the Reform Bill of 1832, for one of his most cherished possessions was a banner with an appropriate inscription, apparently home-made, which he had carried in a procession to celebrate the passing of that measure and welcome the new heaven and new earth which, it was understood, this alteration of electoral machinery would soon produce.

In 1834 James Fraser died at the age of forty-seven. His wife had died in 1821, and their child John a few months after that. So the brother and sister were left orphans at the ages of eighteen and thirteen respectively. That the boy had commended himself to his employers, and that the family circumstances were somewhat narrow, is evidenced by the terms of a letter of sympathy from Mr. Brand with a gift of £5, and by the lad's reply. Even in those early days it is plain that Sir William carefully prepared his letters and preserved the drafts.

On the completion of his apprenticeship he went to Edinburgh in December 1835, and had the good fortune to obtain employment with Messrs. Hill and Tod, W.S., with whom he stayed some four years. While in this situation he attended the University of Edinburgh, and in particular the classes of Scots Law and Conveyancing, of which George Joseph Bell and MacVey Napier were then the professors. In January 1840 he entered the office of Mr. Warren Hastings Sands, W.S., with whom he remained till nearly the end of 1848.

Mr. Sands was a man of some importance, being Solicitor of Teinds. Fraser's position in his office must have been rather an unusual one. Not merely did he carry on business on his own account, chiefly though not solely in connection with peerage claims and cases where historical and antiquarian knowledge was of importance, but in 1842 he became clerk to Mr. Charles Baillie, afterwards Lord Jerviswoode, and in 1847 to Mr. Cosmo Innes, then Sheriff of Elgin and Nairn.

From Mr. Sands he passed to Mr. John Gibson, a prominent Writer to the Signet who had acted for Sir Walter Scott in his troubles, and was a clerk with him till 1st January 1851, when along with Mr. Gibson's son he became a partner of the firm of Gibsons and Fraser, W.S. In February of that year he was admitted a member of the Society of Solicitors before the Supreme Court.

During all this time he maintained a regular correspondence with his uncle and with a number of his early friends. From such letters as have been preserved it is plain that away in Edinburgh, and steadily climbing the professional ladder, Sir William maintained a keen and kindly interest not merely in his own kith and kin, but in his native place and its people generally, and was always ready to help every deserving object—and some undeserving ones—that were commended to his notice. It was the time of the great Disruption controversy, and many of the letters have references to that unfortunate dispute. Fraser had a great admiration for the Rev. Dr. Thomas Guthrie and was much under his influence, but while that influence made him a strong and even bitter non-intrusionist, it was not strong enough to make him leave the Church of his fathers in 1843. To this result his uncle would seem to have contributed not a little. The hard-headed old gentleman, for many years an elder and Session Treasurer of the parish of Fetteresso, did not regard the constitution of the Church as perfect; but he did not think that a Disruption was the best way to put things right, and he made this very clear to his nephew, who till the end of his long life remained a member of St. Cuthbert's Church.

In those days the remuneration of a law clerk depended a good deal on the amount of writing which he did, and Fraser's remarkably fine script was thus of material use in increasing his income. He also for a considerable time kept the business books of his employers, and so developed those orderly and methodical habits that characterised him in such a marked degree. It was his good fortune also to be concerned in various cases requiring antiquarian and, in particular, genealogical research, and he was thus early introduced to those studies in which he became such an expert, and steadily built up that remarkable body of knowledge which made possible his great series of family histories. But he was not too absorbed in his work to despise the ordinary enjoyments of his fellows, and to those who knew him only in his later years two excerpts from his private books will prove illuminating.

The first is taken from a home-made, paper-covered notebook entitled 'Cash Book of William Fraser, Writer, Edr., commencing 10 Octr. 1839 and ending 31st December 1841,' in which he noted all his earnings and all his expenditure. In the autumn of 1840 he and another law clerk, Archibald Grant with whom he lived, decided to spend part of their holiday in visiting London, and this excerpt shows how they travelled, what they saw, and what the outing cost them.

In those days the ancient Scottish virtue of thrift was still held in estimation, and to the end of his life Sir William retained a horror of that waste that has come to be regarded by some as an indication of superior social position.

The other extract is from a similar book headed 'Memorandum Book,' which began in May 1845 and ends abruptly on 15th November 1846. It illustrates in a way that nothing else can do the kind of life that the writer lived, the friends with whom he consorted, and the recreations in which he indulged—and also his mental attitude with regard to various matters.

It is so short that it is printed in extenso :—

MEMORANDUM BOOK of WM. FRASER, Writer, 18 Dundas Street, Edinburgh

1845, May 20, Tuesday.—I went to Stonehaven on Saturday the 3d and returned this day. My maternal grandmother Mrs. Jean Aitershank or Walker, widow of John Walker my grandfather, died at her house near Cowie on Wednesday morning the 14th Instant about 8 o'clock and was buried in Fetteresso Churchyard on Saturday at 1 o'clock. I had the melancholy satisfaction of laying her head in the grave according to her wishes. She was quite well when I first saw her at this time on Monday the 5th Instant, and again on Saturday the 10th. She was suddenly and severely seized with paralysis on Sunday the 11th and only survived till the Wednesday. She had attained her ninety-seventh year, having been born 8 February 1749. It is a striking fact that my father's father and mother and my mother's father and mother all died in the same house near Cowie and are all buried in the Churchyard of Fetteresso, the two former on the south side, and the two latter on the north side.

Tuesday, 6th May.—I dined with the Revd. Mr. Thomson at Fetteresso Manse. Professor Patrick Forbes of Old Aberdeen, Revd. Mr. Mearns of Kinneff, and Mr. Watt, helper to Mr. Thomson, were also there.

Thursday, 8th.—I dined with the Revd. Mr. Silver at Dunnottar Manse. Mr. Smart and Mr. Falconer, Writers, were also there. We had much talk about Mr. Wood of Woodburnden's succession.

Friday, May 9, 1845.—I dined with Mr. A. Smart, Writer. Mr. Silver of Dunnottar was with us.

Saturday, May 10, 1845.—Supped with Mr. Smart.

Sunday, May 11.—Attended Fetteresso Church—much crowded in afternoon—to hear Mr. Watt address the Sunday School teachers and scholars.

Tuesday, May 13.—Dined with Mr. and Mrs. Brand.

Wednesday, May 14 and Thursday 15th.—My grandmother died to-day as already stated. I went to Brechin in the morning and spent this and the following day in investigations about Mr. Wood of Woodburnden's succession and had the good fortune to discover a common ancestor which establishes the claim of Mrs. Farrell to about £60,000. A lucky hit for her, poor woman.

Saturday, 17th.—I buried my poor grandmother.

Sunday, 18th.—Attended Dunnottar Church forenoon and Fetteresso afternoon.

Monday, May 19th.—Breakfasted with Mr. and Mrs. Brand.

Tuesday, 20th.—I returned to Edinburgh. I felt a good deal on parting with my friends, especially my uncle's wife, on this occasion.

Tuesday, 27th.—My sister came to Edinburgh.

Saturday, June 7th.—I received a presentation from the Home Office, London, in favor of Mr. John Watt as A. and S. to Mr. Thomson in the parish of Fetteresso and forwarded the same to Messrs. Kinnear and Munro, Writers, Stonehaven.

Et: die.—I also received a long letter from Patrick Chalmers,

Esq. of Auldbar, lately M.P. for the Montrose District of Burghs, in answer to mine of the 3d in regard to Dr. Young, Dean of Winchester, and the Gib family, &c.—a very excellent and satisfactory letter his is.

I bathed at Caroline Park this afternoon—the first time this season.

Sunday, 8 June 1845.—Revd. James Veitch preached in the afternoon in the West Church.

Wednesday, 11 June 1845.—When I was in the Register House between 2 or 3 o'clock this afternoon, Prince Henry of the Netherlands, who is presently on a visit to this country, came in and saw the House, Records, &c. The Prince seems a plain intelligent young man.

Wednesday, 25 June, 1845.—Wrote Mr. Smart, Writer, Stonehaven, with Memorandum of my searches in the Records here in support of Mrs. Farrell's claim as heir of the late Mr. Wood of Woodburnden.

Sunday, 29 June 1845.—Attended at the West Church in the forenoon. Mr. Veitch preached. In the afternoon I went to worship in South Leith Church—a stranger preached. My friend Mr. Milne had called on me between sermons, and I on him, so we missed each other. My sister came and spent the evening with me.

Wednesday, 3 July 1845.—I see by to-day's newspaper the death of Sir William Follett, Attorney-General, exceedingly regretted. When he was Solicitor-General he was Counsel for the Claimant of the Marchmont Peerage; and when I was in London upon it in May 1843, I remember his saying to me at the Bar, when our Counsel Fitzroy Kelly was speaking, 'Tell Kelly he has been speaking nonsense for the last half hour,' and Kelly overhearing this or seeing me in conversation with Follett whispered loud enough to let hear, 'Take care of Follett—he never opens his mouth to an opponent except to entrap him.' Kelly, it is generally rumoured, will be the new Solicitor-General. I have doubts. He is not pliant enough in voting through thick and thin with Peel. I received a letter from my uncle about my grandmother's matters and about his own will dated 23 June 1845.

1845, Augt. 9.—I took from the Revd. Dr. Laird of Portmoak the shootings on his estates of Colzium and Cairns in the parish of Mid-Calder for £10 this season.

12.—I shot over them to-day and got 8 brace of grouse, being more than was ever known to have been shot upon these moors in one day. I was at work by 3 o'clock A.M. and terminated at 7 P.M., and walked full 50 miles. The extent of the moors is about 1200 acres.

13.—I returned to Edinr. this morning—gave Mr. Sands 1 brace of grouse; Dr. Alexander do., Mr. Kerr do.

18.—I took from James Watson, Writer, the house in No. 11 Forres Street, from the first week of October next to Whitsunday per missives of let between us.

August 29, Friday.—I removed from Mr. Archd. Grant's, 18 Dundas St., to Mr. Finlayson's lodgings, 9 Queensferry St., till my own house is ready.

Monday, Sept. 1.—I attended (as 'best man') at Archy Grant's marriage to Miss Shiel at her house this day. The Revd. Dr. Grant of St. Mary's married them.

Friday, 5th.—Went to Colzium shooting, and on Saturday, I shot 3 hares, 3 brace of partridges, 2 brace of snipes and a brace of grouse. Returned on Monday morning.

Wednesday, 10th. I attended the service of Mrs. Farrell as heir of the late Mr. Wood of Woodburnden. The judge (Lord Robertson) and the jury were both favourable to her claim, and she was unanimously served heir. We had a dinner in the Royal at night.

Tuesday, Sept. 16th.—Shot with Mr. Sands and his son at Craighiehall, but we were not successful.

On the 11th instant I received a letter from my friend Mr. Silver, minister of Dunnottar, asking me if I would accept of a partnership with Mr. Alexander Smart, Writer, Stonehaven. I answered that I would, if the share was sufficiently liberal.

Saty. Sep. 20.—I received a letter from Mr. Smart himself on this subject which I answered, per copy apart, requiring to know his business profits for the last 5 years and the share he would give me.

Eo: die.—Mr. Alex. Paul came to lodge with me.

October.—Mr. Smart ultimately offered me a third part of his business, but after deducting several of the best paying parts of it, which he reserved to himself, I decidedly declined such a partial partnership, and so ended this affair.

Tuesday, Oct. 7.—I went to Kincardineshire per 'The Duke of Richmond' steamer and was swept past to Aberdeen by the violence of the storm. We landed there next morning at 6 o'clock A.M. very sick and fatigued.

Wedy., Oct. 8.—Came to Stonehaven to my uncle and aunt.

Friday & Saty., Oct. 10 & 11th.—Shot over Redmyre and Bridge of Leppie and Whiteriggs.

Sunday, 12th.—Was at Alpity of Arbuthnott and Knox of Benholm visiting my cousins.

Monday & Tuesday, 13th & 14th.—I went to Mr. Scott's at Tullo of Garvock and shot. Shot again as above and returned to Stonehaven.

Saturday, 18th.—Do. and staid all night at Middleton. I killed 2 partridges and a hare at a single shot.

Sunday, 19th.—Went to Tullo again and shot a little next day.

Monday, 20th.—Was exceedingly windy and the crops greatly injured in that part of the country. The sheaves were blown in all directions and much destroyed.

Tuesday, 21.—Shot over Redmyre, Whiteriggs, &c., and killed 12 hares and 3 partridges. I have killed in all these excursions, never having a whole day from the wetness of the weather, about 60 head of hares and partridges.

Wednesday, 22d.—Dined with Mr. Alexander Burnett.

1846, March 4.—Mr. Logan, Teind Clerk, informs me to-day that there are a great many old papers about Berwickshire families at Burnhall, the property of the late Mr. Grant: also at Renton, the residence of Sir Samuel Stirling.

This was a very windy morning. A butler in Hope Street was killed by the blowing down of a chimney stalk. I received a letter from Col. Spottiswood about his family pedigree, and another from A. Smart about the Woods.

Mrs. Isobel Walker or Barclay, widow of the late Robert Barclay, and a cousin of my mother, died at Finlayston on Monday, 16th March 1846, of influenza—she was blind for many years past.

April.—He came back again for a few days and I sent him away in the beginning of this month to Mr. Dunlop at Cumbernauld House.

10th Nov.—I this day received a letter from my uncle, William Fraser, Stonehaven, informing me of the death of my mother's youngest sister Mrs. Isobel Walker or Robertson, widow of the late David Robertson sometime farmer at Tewel. He thinks she died on Friday the 6th Instant, and was buried yesterday. She left an only daughter Jean Robertson. My aunt was the last of her father's family surviving. She may have left about £400 or £500.

14th Nov.—I received a letter from my uncle saying that my aunt Mrs. Robertson died on Thursday evening about 5 o'clock and not on Friday as stated in his last letter.

15th Nov.—I supped with Mr. W. B. D. D. Turnbull, Advocate. I admired his splendid library.

In the year 1852 the Keeper of the Register of Sasines was Mr. Pringle of Whytbank, who for a number of years had been M.P. for Selkirkshire. He was not a lawyer, and his appointment was a reward for political service. The condition of the office was far from satisfactory, and Mr. Pringle was very anxious for its improvement. Knowing well the practical experience and the very special qualifications of Mr. William Fraser, S.S.C., he persuaded him to agree to accept, and the Treasury to appoint him to the office of Assistant Keeper. At some pecuniary sacrifice Fraser accordingly retired from the firm of Gibsons and Fraser, and entered with zeal on his new and congenial work. So successfully did he discharge his duties, that on Mr. Pringle's death in September 1857 it was expected, not merely by himself but by others, that he would be duly promoted to the vacant office. But apparently there were several hungry politicians abroad, and on the usual pretext of time being required to consider the possibility of re-organising the office, the filling up of the vacancy was delayed. On 19th February 1858 Lord Palmerston's Government was defeated in the House of Commons, and next day their resignations were tendered to and accepted by the Queen. But this notwithstanding, advantage was taken of the theory that Ministers continue to act till their successors are appointed, and three days later the office of Keeper of Sasines was conferred on a prominent Whig partisan, who by the defeat of the Government had lost his position as Crown Agent.

As might have been expected, the relations between the new Keeper and his Assistant were far from cordial. Fraser especially resented what he regarded as the arrogant manner in which he was treated by his superior; and long afterwards, when Deputy Keeper of the Records, Sir William, after noting in his Diary sundry painful details regarding the last days of his oppressor, reflects with becoming resignation on the 'humiliating' end of 'the proud Keeper of the Sasines.'

It is possible, however, that to this disappointment and the worries that followed, Sir William owed the eminence which he ultimately attained. As head of his office he would probably have become absorbed in its administration, secured with much trouble various necessary reforms, and finally been retired by some Treasury regulation in the midst of his usefulness, and with nothing particular to occupy the remainder of his life. But the routine work to which he had been officially condemned was insufficient employment for his energies, and so in his spare time he turned to those pursuits which he had always loved. Ever since the Marchmont case, in 1842, he had kept in touch with peerage and pedigree questions, and he had also edited the Dryburgh Cartulary for the Bannatyne Club. For some time past, moreover, he had been working on the family papers of his friend Mr. William Stirling—better known by his later style of Sir William Stirling Maxwell—and also on those of the Earl of Eglinton.

John & Luke
Brodie

In 1858 there accordingly appeared in one volume, The Stirlings of Keir. The smallest as well as the earliest of Sir William's family histories, it yet contained the scheme on which they were all constructed. That scheme for which he is entitled to much credit was a new one. Not merely was the history of the family and its possessions set forth, with separate memoirs of its successive heads and distinguished cadets, embellished by portraits and other illustrations, but many of the actual documents in the muniment room—charters, sasines, contracts, and correspondence—were printed, and sometimes reproduced in fac simile, with the result that each one of these publications, besides telling the story of the family, has made available to historical students a mass of material sometimes of inestimable value.

Next year saw the Memorials of the Montgomeries, in two volumes, followed, in 1863, by The Maxwells of Pollok. And from that time onwards till the year of Sir William's death these sumptuous contributions to Scottish History kept appearing.

The knowledge that enabled Sir William to produce these volumes was not acquired merely by an arm-chair perusal of charters and the books of earlier writers. For many years, as his Notebooks and Diaries show, it was his custom, generally on his autumn holiday, to visit the places associated with the history which he was writing or the family whose pedigree he was endeavouring to trace, to inspect their ancient castles or their grass-grown sites and collect on the spot any surviving stories of the past. And later, when his holiday was often spent in going from one country house to another, he was always noting matters of historical interest and gathering information from all who had it to give.

In 1869 an additional outlet for his energies was provided. In that year the Royal Commission on Historical Manuscripts came into existence, and Sir William was appointed to report on the contents of such charter chests as their owners might submit for examination. This appointment of course curtailed the time he could devote to his books, but it also made him acquainted with a wealth of material hitherto unknown, and often illuminating the inquiries on which he was engaged.

In all this work he was fortunate in obtaining the assistance of such men as John Anderson, Walter Macleod, and Henry Paton, as well as others to whom he could with full confidence delegate not a little of the necessary research. Even with his enormous and tireless industry the results could not otherwise have been obtained. But still the details received his own personal supervision, and for any erroneous theories or mistakes in fact the responsibility is his alone. More than once he was attacked—by John Riddell, by Mark Napier, and by Dr. Burnet, the Lyon King of Arms, whom he seems to have particularly disliked—but he had no taste for controversy and left his books to speak for themselves.

In 1880 certain changes occurred in the Register House, and Fraser was appointed Deputy Keeper of the Records. Desirable in itself, this office was made still more pleasant by the courtesy and consideration of the Earl of Glasgow, who had become Lord Clerk Register in 1879. Among other duties which fell to the Deputy Keeper of the Records was arranging the elections of the Representative Peers of Scotland, and though from time to time he affected to grumble at the extra work occasioned by these Holyrood functions, there was no part of his official duties which Sir William more thoroughly enjoyed.

For many years past his professional aid and advice had been anxiously sought in connection with questions relating to pedigree or peerage law. To go into details would be improper, even if it were possible. But Lord Kellie's successful claim to the Earldom of Mar, created in 1565, may be mentioned as an instance. By 1880 he had thus become well known all over Scotland as well as at Westminster, and numbered among his personal friends many of the great ones of the time, who found him an interesting and amusing companion. And it is difficult to say which gave him greater pleasure—to be asked to meet Royalty in some stately mansion or to entertain his own friends, and in particular some lady of quality, to tea in his modest house in Castle Street, and hear their appreciation of his old furniture or of some historic documents produced for their inspection.

Public recognition now began. In 1882 the Senatus Academicus of Edinburgh somehow became aware, probably through Lord Rosebery the Lord Rector, of the services which for so long Fraser had been rendering to the history of Scotland, with the result that he was offered and accepted the degree of LL.D.

For many years he had, though no politician, quite sincerely entertained for Mr. Gladstone an admiration not less extreme than that which it was then regarded as the duty of every earnest Liberal to profess, and it was accordingly with special satisfaction that, on the recommendation of that statesman, he was, in 1885, created a Companion of the Bath. Two years later high-water mark was reached when he received the following letter from the Marquess of Salisbury, then Prime Minister :—

DEAR DOCTOR FRASER,—I am very glad to be the channel of conveying to you the intimation that Her Majesty has been pleased to give expression to the high esteem in which your literary and official labours are held both by herself and by the public generally by conferring upon you a Civil Knight Commandership of the Bath.—Believe me, yours very truly,

SALISBURY.

For the next five years Sir William's life went on much as before. Daily attendance at the Register House—work at his books and reports during the evening, and an autumn holiday, now in one part of the country, now in another, with eyes and ears always open for the acquisition of antiquarian or historical information. But he had come to realise that his health required greater care, and that it was needful to curtail the week-end visits to his many friends round Edinburgh which he used to enjoy so much.

In 1892 he was compulsorily retired from the Register House after forty-one years service, at the age of seventy-six. He had thus more time to devote to his books and reports on which he continued working with unabated zeal and energy to the last.

On 21st December 1897 his sister, who had kept house for him since 1846, passed away. He survived her only a few weeks, and the end came on 13th March 1898.

By his industry and frugality he had accumulated a large fortune, which his shrewd knowledge of investments made still larger. Under his will this all went to public purposes, and chiefly to the Royal Infirmary and University of Edinburgh. In accordance with his directions the Sir William Fraser Homes at Colinton and the Sir William Fraser Chair of Ancient History and Palæography in the University of Edinburgh have been founded by his Trustees, who have also been able to assist in various ways in the publication of historical materials.

The present volume contains a selection from the numerous documents which Sir William had gathered together, and it is with satisfaction that his Trustees now offer it to the members of a Society which has done and is doing so much for the history of Scotland.

PAPERS RELATING TO SIMON LORD LOVAT

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

THE last word has not yet been said about Simon Lord Lovat. The abuse of Hanoverian partisans and the imaginings of the popular storyteller are no longer accepted at their face value. It is also realised that from every point of view he was no ordinary man, and anything that tends to throw light on his character and doings is worthy of attention. The following pages contain, it is thought, some interesting material, in the form of a broadsheet issued by his enemies with regard to an early episode in his career, and some contemporary documents dealing with the same matter.

A brief statement of the circumstances of the Lovat family will make it easier to follow the story. On the death of Hugh 9th Lord Fraser of Lovat, on September 14, 1696, survived by four daughters, his heir-male was his great-uncle, Thomas Fraser of Beaufort, and a twofold question arose regarding his succession, viz. to whom went the title? to whom went the estates? No doubt they had gone together since the creation of the dignity more than two hundred years before, and always to the heir-male. But, of course, the descent of the peerage fell to be regulated by the terms of the royal grant—and, equally, the succession to the estates depended on the terms of the deeds under which they were held.

The estates were not entailed, and therefore were at the disposal of the dead man. At the early age of nineteen he had married the Lady Amelia Murray, second daughter of John 1st Marquess of Atholl. By his marriage contract, dated March 18, 1685, he settled the whole estates, failing heirs-male, on the heirs-female of his body. Such an arrangement, it is obvious, entirely disregarded the interests of the ancient family, of which he chanced to be the temporary head and representative; and it would seem as if advantage must have been taken of his youth and inexperience. It is said that a little later he repented of his mistake and attempted to restore the ancient investiture, but if he did so, the attempt was ineffectual and the marriage contract ruled the succession. In accordance with its terms the territories of the Frasers all passed to the eldest daughter Amelia, who in 1702 was married to Alexander Mackenzie, son of Roderick Mackenzie, a brother of the 1st Earl of Cromartie, and a Lord of Session with the judicial title of Lord Prestonhall. By the purchase of a small debt on the Lovat estates, and other devices, Lord Prestonhall succeeded in acquiring these and settled them on his son in liferent, his infant grandson in fee, so that it seemed as if in time to come the Mackenzies would be Lords even of Stratherrick. And in 1702, by a decree in absence, the Court of Session declared that the dignity also belonged to Amelia, while her husband manufactured for himself the fanciful designation of Fraserdale. It was also given out, untruthfully it seems, that Hugh Lord Lovat had resigned the dignity and got a new grant thereof in favour of his daughters (see Crawford's Peerage, p. 273, Edin. 1716). Fraserdale survived till 1755, and his widow died in 1763.

This Alexander Mackenzie of Fraserdale was forfeited for his share in the 'Fifteen, and next year Simon Lord Lovat, who was then in favour with the Government, received a grant of his liferent escheat. That meant that so long as Fraserdale lived the whole free income of the Lovat estates was payable to Simon and nothing was available for the support of Amelia and her children. There was much litigation in which Simon was successful. And eventually recourse was had to arbitration, by a submission dated March 6 and 7, 1733, to determine on what terms the fee of the Lovat estates should be made over to him. The arbiters were two judges, James Erskine (Lord Grange) and David Erskine (Lord Dun), and their decree of arbitral was pronounced on March 13, 1734, under which, in return for a sum of £12,000 sterling, Lord Lovat was to receive a conveyance of the fee of the whole estates.

In this way the estates were acquired by Simon Lord Lovat, not as the heir-male, but on what is technically termed a singular title. And accordingly, even if some one had thereafter shown himself to be the heir-male of the body of Simon's elder brother, the mysterious Alexander of Beaufort, he could not have obtained the estates whatever right he might have established to the ancient dignity.

Having for many years treated the Decree of 1702 with contempt, Simon in 1730 raised an action in the Court of Session for its reduction, and on July 30, 1730, it was declared that the title, dignity, and honours of Lord Fraser of Lovat belonged to him as the heir-male.

In 1696, however, these legal technicalities did not much interest the Frasers. The heir-male and chief was Thomas of Beaufort, and he and his son Captain Simon would have had the support of the clan even if their claims had been less reasonable and just. All the Frasers knew—and it was enough—was that the Atholl Murrays were trying to destroy their existence as a clan and to filch away the inheritance of MacShimei, and such a plot had to be met with counterplot and, if need be, with cold steel. In the course of the struggle occurred the incidents with which this old broadsheet deals—from the Murray point of view.<sup>1</sup> What the truth may be is another question. And, if disposed to study more closely this early part of Lovat's career, the reader will find further material in Simon Lord Lovat of the 'Forty-Five, by the late Mr. William Burns (Inverness, 1908).

PAPERS RELATING TO SIMON LORD LOVAT

A SHORT ACCOUNT OF THE PROCESS AND TRIAL
at the instance of His Majesty's Advocat, by Special Order of His Majesty's Privy Council, against THOMAS FRASER OF BEAUFORT and Capt. SIMON FRASER HIS SON, AND THEIR COMPLICES, for the crimes of treason, and other crimes, contained in their Indytment

LORD LOVAT having deceased in the year 1696, leaving four Daughters under age, in the keeping and custody of their Mother; And the Right of Succession, according to the tenor of the Lord Lovat's infeftments, as well as by his own express Deeds, divolving upon the Eldest Daughter: nevertheless Thomas Fraser of Beaufort, and Captain Simon Fraser his son, pretending, That they were the apparent heirs male of the Family, and alledging (without any ground) that the Right of Succession of the Estate of Lovat should only appertain to them; endeavour to possess those of the Name, and the Vassals and Dependens on the Family (who make a numerous Clan in the Highland parts) That the young Lady the Heiress was to be disposed upon, by her Mother and her friends, to a Stranger, and that thereby their Clan and Chiftianrie (names of great Value with that Sort of People), were to be broken, and they brought under Subjection to a foreign Lord and Master.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The statement was absolutely true: vide The Frasers of Philorth, vol. i. p. 195. Whatever may have been the misdeeds of Captain Simon Fraser and his friends, it is plain that the ultimate responsibility for all the troubles rests with the Atholl Murrays, whose intrigues were naturally resented by the whole Fraser clan. Lord Saltoun no doubt bore the Fraser name, but he was an Aberdonian and an alien in feeling if not in blood. It is interesting to Whereupon the said Thomas Fraser with his Son Simon Fraser (tho' persons of no Estate, and who for a long Time had lived precariously by the allowance and tolerance of the Lord Lovat, upon a Piece of Land of his called Beaufort), do enter into a combination and conspiracy with those of the name of Fraser, whom they could induce to follow them; And first, holding Secret Councils, and signing Bands, and leagues amongst themselves, and then making open convocations and rendezvous in armes. They resolve about the Month of September 1697, to invade and possess the Estate and Lordship of Lovat, (to which they knew perfectly that they had no legal Right or Title), by plain force and violence. And thus proceeding from one Step and Degree of violence to another, they break out into a treasonable rising in armes, and open and manifest Rebellion against his Majesty. And that attended with the aggravations of such insolent and horrid crimes as have scarce been heard of in any Civil Nation or Kingdom.

But because the exact account of these their crimes and treasons, as also of the method taken by the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council to reduce them to a better mind, and prevent the foresaid extremities, will best appear from the two Lybels or Indytments, which upon this occasion were raised against them; the just and full doubles thereof were and are as follows :

speculate on what the course of events might have been if Captain Simon had succeeded peacefully to the place and possessions of MacShimei, or had even received fair play when he attempted to assert his rights. Similarly, it seems plain that but for his treatment by Walpole—'gross and insolent injustice' as it has been termed—the old man would never have been driven into the intrigues that ended in the '45.

manner, as if the persons accused had compeared, and were present.<sup>1</sup> Which raising convocating and convening in Arms without or against our Authority, with the other Crimes foresaid, are highly aggravated, and the Treason and Rebellion yet more open and manifest, while the persons guilty presume to persist and continue therein, after having been charged in our Name, by our Officers, or by a Herauld thereto waranted, to Lay down their Arms, and render their persons to bide the Law; under the pain of Rebellion. <sup>1</sup> In Arnot's Criminal Trials, p. 79, the learned editor observes: 'This is the only case I know of since the Revolution in which a person was tried in absence before the Court of Justiciary; a proof led, a jury inclosed, a verdict returned, and sentence pronounced, forfeiting life and estate, honours, fame and posterity. . . . By the law of Scotland outlawry, even for treason, inferred the forfeiture only of personal estate. It was sanctioned by statute that trials for treason could not be taken in absence, but that the whole accusation, argument and evidence should be led in presence of the accused and no otherwise.' This was changed by the Act of 1669 which, aimed at the Covenanters, was not repealed at the Revolution, and under it the proceedings against the Frasers professed to be taken. But, as Arnot points out: 'Tyrannical as this Statute was, Captain Fraser could not have been convicted upon it but by an obvious wresting of the law, for it authorised trial in absence only in cases of treasonable rising in arms and open and manifest rebellion. Now it is altogether absurd to construe the collecting of an armed force for the purpose of private rapine into treasonable rising in arms and open and manifest rebellion.'

We have putt on a full resolutione to defend our lands, possessiones, goods, lives, wyves, children, liberties, and priviledges of free subjects, which lye at the stake, against all invading and insulting avarice, ambitione and appressione pro aris et focis, contra omnes mortales, the King's Majestie, his authority and laws only excepted. It's reported, that my lord Saultone hath bein endeavouring to gett Lovat's eldest daughter to his sone, which the pretended tutors take advantage of, to insnaire us, by giving it out that a Fraser will be the man, whylle ther is noe such thing intended, by which they think to facilitate their other sinistrous designes, and to befool both him and us. For how is it possible, that a family who still had a voracious desyre after greatness and tooke all occasiones of raising themselves, and expressing their ambition, will now prefer any other people to themselves. This is simply impossible; therefore tell him, as he wishes his own weell and our standing, that he lay noe stress upon any promises or assurances, except he gett the child in his custody, which if they refuse, it is ane evident prooffe that their wholle pretences will turne to a shamme. And when he hath gott the child we advyse, that nothing be done without the unanimous consent of the friends here, otherwayes wee assure my lord Saltoune by these, that it will occasion a rupture, that neither this nor the next (and perhaps no succeeding) age will sement, and therefore, wee expect that he will not move a step in this bussiness, nor intrude upon us or our affaires, particularly that he come not to this cuntry without our free and frank consent and call. It would requyre a tractat to give a full account of the bad useage wee mett with, and how much justice wee have upon our side. The two or three miscreants who shocke off all principles, naturall, divine and humane, and who did all they could to eradicat us and themselves, have been so flouted and hissit at by all people, that ther taking a remorse of conscience, and making recantations for fear of being diverted by the women of the country. My lord, these few lynes flowing from a deep sence of our deplorable conditione, we expect you'll concurr with my lord Saltoune, in giving us your best advyce. Wee have sent ane honest gentleman with these to whom you may communicat what you think not fitt to committ to paper. Soe expecting that my lord Saltoune will preserve the old friendship built upon the principles of naturall affectione as inviolable with us, as wee'l doe with him, and as our predecessors have done for severall centuries, we waite both your returnes and subscribe ourselves, My Lord, Your lordship's most affectionat uncle, cousings, and servants. Sic subscribitur, Lovatt, W. Fraser of Foyer, Fraser of Borlind, W. Fraser of Knocvean, John Fraser of Miklegarth, Jo. Fraser of Munthegair, Hugh Fraser of Kintrelye, Jo. Fraser of Erigik, William Fraser of Dalcraig, H. F. of Leadcloin, Hugh Fraser of Strowie, Alexander Fraser of Faraline, T. Fraser of Gortuleg, H. F. of Dunctien, Jo. Fraser of Abersbie; Alexander Fraser of Ruthven, Jo. Fraser, of Litlegarth; J. Fraser, younger, of Belnane; T. Fraser of Drumund; J. Fraser of Bochruben; A. F. of Mikleglendo. [Follows the Postscript.] My humble duty to my lady Fraser. After communicating of this lyne to my lord Saltoune, lay the same up and preserve it, that it may not only be a prooffe of our fair advertisement to my lord Saltoune, but also a monument of the friendly correspondence wee keep with your family; therefore we expect that your lo'p will trust none with it, and I and my friends have kept severall doubles of it, in futuram rei memoriam.'

Likeas the said Letter of Association doth also contain bold and wicked Threatnings against the L. Saltoun, and false and undue Reflections and Insinuations against the Marques of Athol and his Family. And this Letter being framed and agreed to, as said is, to be sent to the Lord Fraser after his parting from the Banders and Leaguers, doth farther declare their purpose to continue in the said unlawful association, and to have the same recorded ad futuram rei memoriam. And the Letter was accordingly sent to the Lord Fraser, to his House of [Castle Fraser?].

The Lord Saltoun having gone North the next day to visit the Lady Dowager of Lovat at her House of Castledounie, after he had stay'd there a few days, and as he was returning homeward with the Lord Mungo Murray, Son to the Marques of Athol, and some other Gentlemen; by the way passing thro' the wood of Bonchrew, about four miles from Castledounie: The said Lord Saltoun, Lord Mungo Murray, and their Companie, were upon the sixth or one or other of the days of October Last, Surprised by the said Captain Simon Fraser and his Father, who having convocat a great many Men in Arms, above four score, or a hundred, Did place themselves in ambush for waylaying and seasing the said Lord Salton, Lord Mungo Murray and their Companie. Whom they accordingly seised with great Violence and Barbarity, Disarming, Dismounting, throwing them down and Beating them: with many Threatnings, to Murther them outright. And the said Thomas and Simon Frasers, having with their foresaid Companie (whereof several were Subscribers, of the foresaid Letter of Association) taken Prisoners the Lord Salton, Lord Mungo Murray, and their Companie, unable to resist so great a Force. They caused them again to Mount on little pitiful beasts instead of their own Horses, whereof they had Rob'd them as also of their Arms, and other things about them, and thus carried them away captives, under their Guards of Men and Arms, to the House of Fanellan, where they made them closs Prisoners, every one in a Room by himself, for the space of six or seven dayes: Having in the mean time fortified and stuffed the House with armed Men and other Provisions. And further, in prosecution of their wicked Band and League to rise in Arms, the said Thomas and Simon Frasers and their Complices, sent the Firie cross thro' the Country, to raise their Men and People in Arms; whereby they conveyed to the number of two hundred Men in Arms, to assist and joyn with the saids Frasers and others above complained upon, in their foresaid open and manifest Insurrection and Rebellion: In further prosecuting whereof the said

Thomas and Simon Frasers and their Complices above complained upon, Did the same day that they made the Lord Salton, Lord Mungo Murray, and others their Prisoners, March with a Companie of about one Hundred Men in Arms, to the Lady Lovat's House of Castledownie, and there, violently and wickedly seised upon the Widow Lady and her Servants, and made them Prisoners; and Robed and spoiled the Goods in and about the House, at their pleasure. And thus the said Thomas and Simon Frasers, and their Complices, above complained upon, having broken out into open Rebellion and Arms, and seised the foresaid two Houses with the Prisoners therein; They garisoned the same, and appointed Captains, and other Officers, over their Troops and Garisons: and adding yet more Barbarity to all their violence, They set up a Gallows before the House of Fanellan, and in the view of the windows where the Prisoners were; threatening to hang them thereon. And by sending the said Firie Cross as said is, They convocat and conveened yet more Men in Arms, and after they had kepted the said Prisoners, some six or seven days in the foresaid Captivity and Terrors, they carried them from Fanellan by armed Guards, to the Isle of Aigies,<sup>1</sup> where they kepted them Prisoners in a Creel House for their Lodging, and did Treat them in a most Miserable manner, So that the Lord Salton fell so sick, that they were obliged to dismiss him: But still keeping the Lord Mungo Murray Prisoner for some days thereafter; And about the same time, they have the Lady Dowager of Lovat still their Prisoner in Castledownie. And during their imprisonment the said Thomas and Simon Frasers, and their Complices above complain'd upon, propone Conditions, Extort Articles and Aggreements, and whatever they pleased to Demand; there being no resisting such a Wicked and Barbarous Force, which continually proceeded to greater violence and Barbarity. For not only the said Thomas and Simon Frasers and their saids Complices refused to lay down Arms, and desist from their violence, when commanded and charged by the Shireff of Inverness, But going on in their villanous barbarities, They kepted the said Lady Dowager in most Miserable Captivity. And when nothing that she could propose or Promise would satisfie them: The said Captain Simon takes up the most mad and villanous Resolution that ever was heard of. For all in a Sudden, he and his saids Complices make the Lady closs Prisoner in her Chamber, under his armed Guards; and then comes upon her, with Mr. Robert Monro Minister at Aberturfe, and three or four Ruffians in the Night time, about two or three in the Morning of the Month of October Last, or one or other of the days of the said month of October Last: And having draged out her Maids Agnas Mackbrayer, and Fraser, he proposes to the Lady, that she should marrie him. And when she fell in Lamenting and Crying, The great Pipe was blown up, to drown her cryes, and the wicked villans Order the Minister to proceed. And tho' she protested with Tears and Cries, and also offered all promises of any thing else, and declared she would sacrifice her Life, sooner then consent to their proposall, nevertheless the said Minister proceeds, and declares them married Persons: And Hugh Fraser of Kimmonavie and the said Hutcheon Oag (both of them Thieves and Murtherers), are appointed for her waiting Maids. And tho' she often swarfed and again cryed out most Grievously, yet no relenting, but the Bag-pipe is blown up as formerly; and the foresaid Ruffians, rent off her Cloaths; cutting her Stayes with their Durcks, and so thrust her into her Bed. After this most horrid violent Rapt, when the Ladies Friends offered to make some attempt for her rescue, out of Captain Simon's hands, The said Captain Simon, and his said Complices, carrie her away to the Hills, and raising the Country to the number of four or five hundred Men in Arms, of their own Name and Dependens, did detain still the afflicted Lady, and did stand to their own Defence. And further, when the Lords of our Privie Council, having intelligence of this violence and insurrection in Arms, and of the foresaid wicked practices and Rebellion of the said Frasers and others above complained upon, Did Order an Herauld<sup>1</sup> to charge the said Traitors and Rebels, to lay down their Arms, and set the Lady at Liberty, and render themselves Prisoners, to abide the Law : And did also Order the Shireff of the Shire, with the Posse Comitatus, as likewise our Troops and Forces to March against them and Subdue them : Yet the foresaids Thomas and Simon Frasers and their said Complices, Disobeyed the said charge, and in manifest contempt thereof, continued in Arms and Rebellion for a Considerable time after they were so charged, and detained the said Lady Prisoner for several dayes thereafter. By all which it is evident that the haill foresaids Persons and each of them Respective, are guilty as Actors at least as art and part of the Crimes of Treason and open Rebellion, convocating and convening in Arms, unlawful Banding and Leaguung, Robbery, Ravishment, and the other Violences and Crimes abovementioned, or of one or other of them. As also, the said Mr. Robert Monro, Minister, is guilty of celebrating a Clandestine Marriage : Which being found by the knowledge of an Inquest, they ought to be punished by confiscation of Life, Lands, Honours, and Goods, and other pains of Law ; to the example and terror of others to commit the like in time coming.

ment Ja. 2nd, Parl. 6. Cap. 24. It is Statute, That who commits Treason against our Person and Majesty, rises in feir of War against us, resets and supplies such as have committed Treason, or stuffs their Houses and holds them against us, or Stuffs Houses of their own in furtherance of Rebels ; shall be punished as Traitors. And by the Act of Parliament Queen Mary, Par. 9. Cap. 75. It is Statute, That none attempt to do or raise any Bands of Men of War, upon Horse or Foot, with Culverings, Pistols, Picks, Spears or other Munitiion Bellical, without special licence in Write Of her Majesty and her Successors, under the pain of Death to be execute upon the raisers of the saids Bands, as also upon them that rises and conveens in Bands. And by the Act Ja. 6. Par. 8. Cap. 131. It is Statute, That none of our Subjects presume to Convoeat, Conveen or Assemble for holding of Councils, to treat, consult or determine in any matter of State, Civil or Ecclesiastick, except in the ordinary judgements, without our special command or express licence, under the Pains made against such as unlawfully Convocats our Leidges : and by another Act Ja. 6 Par. 10. Cap 12. It is Statute That that no Leagues or Bands be made amongst our Subjects of any degree, without our Privity and Consent, under the pain to be holden and execute as movers of Sedition to the breach of the Peace. Which two last Acts are ratified, Ch. 2. Par. 1st. Cap. 4. And by the Act Ch. 2. Par. 1st. Cap 5. It is declared, that it is and shall be High Treason to the Subjects of this Kingdom, or any number of them more or less, upon any ground or pretext whatsoever, to rise and continue in Arms, to maintain any Forts, Strengths or Garisons, or to make any Treaties or Leagues with Foreigners or among themselves without our special Authority and Approbation first had and obtained thereto. And by the Act, Ch. 2. Par. 1 Sess. 2 Cap. 2. It is Statute and declared, That to Plot, contrive, or intend to Levy war, or to take up Arms against us, or any Commissionat by us, is punishable as High Treason. Likeas by the Act Ch. 2. Par. 2 Cap. 11. It is Statute, That in time coming, in all Cases of Treasonable rising in Arms and open and manifest Rebellion against us and our Authority, Our Advocate for the time may and ought to insist and prosecute such Persons as he shall be ordered by us and our Privy Council to pursue. And if they be cited and do not appear, the Justices notwithstanding of their absence, may and ought to proceed to consider, and give Interlocutor upon the Libel: And if it be found Relevant, admit the same to the knowledge of an Assize, and upon their Verdict finding the same to be proven, the Doom and Sentence of Forfaulture ought to proceed, and be given in the same manner, as if the Persons accused had compeared and were present, which raising, Convocating, and Conveening in Arms without or against our Authority, with the other Crimes foresaid; are highly Aggravated, and the Treason and Rebellion becomes yet more wicked and Atrocious when they are perpetrated by Persons under Process for former Treasons, and other Capital and wicked Crimes, and after having been charged in our Names by our Officers or by a Herald thereto warranted, to lay down their Arms, and render their Persons to abide the Law, under the pain of Rebellion. Likeas, to attempt to seise, and actually to seise and keep back by force and Violence, Persons cited and under Bail to appear before the Court of Justiciary, or any other Court or Judicature, to bear Witness and give evidence, or for any other cause or effect. As also, to extort by force and violence, Bonds, Declarations, or any other Write or Paper from any one of our frie Leidges, are likewise Crimes of a high nature, and ought to be severely punished. Nevertheless it is of Verity, that the said Thomas and Simon Frasers, and the hail other Persons above complained upon, shaking off all fear of God and regard to our Laws and Authority are guilty Art and Part of the Crimes above and aftermentioned. In so far as the said Captain Simon Fraser and his Complices above named, being either already under a Process of Treason, or designing to frustrate the foresaid Proces raised against others of their Accomplices did upon the occasion that certain persons witnesses were to come or be brought from Stratherick, and the bounds Adjacent thereto within the Shire of Inverness, for to give evidence in the said Process anent the Crimes of Treason and others therein libelled, wickedly add to all their former Rebellions and wiked horrid Crimes, their convocating and conveening in Arms of Men to the number of two or three Hundred Men less or more ; who appearing in an open insurrection and manifest Rebellion in Arms, did upon the fifteenth of June last by past, the sixteenth, seventeenth, or eighteenth, or one or other of the days of the said Month, Mareh in feir of War, and open Hostility against certain of our Loyal Subjects conveened by our Authority : And for furthering of Justice within the foresaid bounds of Stratherick and others within the shire of Inverness, and their Invading and Incompassing, Threatening and Over-mastering them, did seise upon their Persons, and make them Prisoners, and violently kept back such as were either cited or under Bail to appear and give Evidence and Witness in the Process abovementioned. As also they extorted from our free Leidges certain Bonds, Declarations, and writes, according to their own wicked Imaginations and Purposes : Likeas, that they might raise and promote their foresaid manifest Insurrection and Rebellion, they sent the fiery Cross through the Countrey (a sign and simbol used amongst them to gather their Complices in Arms for making Insurrection and Rebellions, and other unlawful convocations) : As also they did place a Garrison in John Fraser's House of Meiklegarth in Stratherick, and in a word have committed most manifest Treason and Rebellion by open rising in Arms against our Laws and Authority, and using Hostilities and Violences upon our good Subjects. By all which it is manifest that the foresaids persons complained upon, or an or other of them are guilty of the Crimes of open and manifest Rebellion in Arms, Treason, unlawfull Convocation, Violent Imprisonment, and the hail other Crimes above libelled : Which being found by the knowledge of 'an Inquest, they ought to be condignly punished by the Forfaulture of Life, Lands, Honours and Goods, to the example and terror of others to commit the like in time coming.

This being the Libels and Inditements raised and pursued by his Majesties Advocat, against the forenamed Persons, and the criminal Letters, containing the same, with the Executions thereof by Pursevants and Heralds, which [with ?] Coats of Arms displayed, and sound of Trumpet, and other Solemnities appointed by Act of Parliament, having been duly returned to the Clerk of the foresaid Court of Justiciary, at the Days and Diets thereof: His Majesties Advocat after the Court was fenced, and that he had first given in the Order and Warrant of the Lords of his Majesties Privy Council, for his pursuing of the foresaid Process of Treason, produced the criminal Letters of Treason duly execute; and the Pursevant who execute the Letters, with his Witnesses being solemnly sworn, and having made Faith upon the Truth of the Executions, his Majesties Advocat declared, that the Persons summoned, against whom he intended to insist, being absent, and not compearing, to underly the Law, he did insist against the Persons after named, in order to their Forfeiture in absence, viz. Captain Simcon [sic] Frazer, Eldest lawful son to Thomas Frazer of Beaufort, William Frazer of Fogr, Hugh Frazer in Kinmonavie, William Frazer in Dulleraig, William Frazer of Erechit, Alexander Frazer of Kilduthil Younger, Hugh Frazer alias Huiston Oig in Leadclune, Alexander Frazer in Ruthven, John Frazer his Brother, Alexander Frazer son to Farratin, Alexander Frazer son to Meggивie, Tais Frazer, brother to Littlegarth, Thomas Huiston, Son to the Minister of Stratherick, Æneas Mackbane Brother to Drummond Mackbane, Hugh Frazer Son to Struie, Hugh Frazer Younger of Bochrubine, John Frazer Brother to Old Kilduthil, Major Thomas Frazer Elder of Strouie, Hugh Frazer Brother to Strechit, and John Frazer Younger of Megivie. Whereupon the Lords of Justiciary, having with consent of his Majesties Advocat, deserted the Diet as to certain other Persons contained in the Inditement, and his Majesties Advocat having restricted the Libels against Captain Simon Frazer and the other Persons insisted against, to their treasonable rising in Arms, and open Rebellion against his Majestie, in the terms of the Act of Parliament 1669, which in the Case of these Crimes, allows and ordains process of Treason to proceed before the Lords of Justiciary, against the Persons thereof accused, tho absent, with all the aggravations libelled, or aggravating the said Treason and Rebellion.<sup>1</sup> The Lords Commissioners of Justiciary, after consideration of the saids Libels and as restricted in manner foresaid, found the said Libel so restricted, relevant, to infer the Pains of Treason, and remitted the same to the Knowledge of the Assise.

And the Assise consisting of Fifteen Persons,<sup>2</sup> being called and chosen out of the Forty Five Persons that had been named and given out in a List with the Libel and Criminal Letters, that the Defenders might see and object (if they had any Exception against them). And no Objections being moved against them, they were all lawfully sworn.

And then his Majesties Advocat produced for Probation the Letters abovementioned in the Libel, direct by the Lords of his Majesties Privy Council against the said Captain Simon Frazer and his Complices, charging them to lay down their Arms, render up the Houses by them stuffed and fortified, and to submit themselves, and enter their persons in prison, in the Tolbooth of Inverness, to underly and abide the Law within the space of Forty Eight Hours; under the pain of Treason and Rebellion, and denouncing them as such to the Horn. And also (in case of their Disobedience) commanding the Sheriff of Inverness, and all other his Majesties Officers and good Subjects, to rise, concur and act in Arms in feir of War, for reducing the saids Rebels and Traitors to Obedience, and to apprehend and bring them to underly the Law, as the saids Letters more fully bear. Together with the Execution of the saids Letters, whereby it appeared, that the foresaid Defenders were both lawfully charged upon the                    Day of                    And for their Disobedience and Contempt, duely denounced and put to the Horn upon the                    day of                    the said Month of                    . Thereafter, and for the more Verification of the said Charge and Execution, his Majesties Advocat did furder adduce the Pursivant, who execute the same, with the Witnesses to the Executions, who being all solemnly sworn, made Faith upon the Truth thereof in all Points.

<sup>1</sup> That is to say, the whole charges were dropped against the majority of the persons accused, and in the case of the others the only charge not dropped was that of treason—in which alone it was possible to get a conviction in absence.

But here it is to be observed, That albeit the foresaid Letters were directed by the Lords of his Majestics Privy Council for charging the saids Defenders to lay down their Arms, etc. And in case of their Disobedience for denouncing them Rebels and commanding the Sheriff of the Shire, and all others his Majesties officers and good Subjects, to march against them as such: And that the foresaid Letters and Executions were also made use of by his Majesties Advocat for a further Evidence of the Defenders Treasonable rising in Arms in open Rebellion, in regard of their obstinat continuing in Arms after they were thereby charged; yet that the Defender might have all fair Justice, and that no pretext might be left them to alledge, that it was incongruous and unjust to proceed to try them for their Crimes in Judgement, for adducing Probation against them, when in the mean time they stood legally debarred, and were rendered incapable to compear, as having been denounced Fugitives, and so deprived of personam standi in judicio, care was taken before the day appointed for their Compearance, to take out other Letters by Deliverance of his Majestie Council, for relaxing them from the Horn, and discharging their

Out-Lawrie as Fugitives, that if they had pleased to Compear in Judgement, and defend, they might have done it as freely as any other of his Majesties Leidges; but the Persons insisted against not compearing, his Majesties Advocat went on with his probation. And the principal point to be proven conform to Interlocutor, being their treasonable rising in Arms, and open Rebellion against his Majesty: He adduced in all Fourteen Witnesses, whereof Eleven Men and Three Women. The Men, Alexander Frazer of Balnean, Thomas Frazer of Gortilick, William Frazer of Kilbockie, Robert Spence in Sudie, Alexander Macknish in Groom, Mr. Leonard Robertson of Stralock, Mr. George Frazer, Sub-Principal of the Colledge of Aberdeen, John Monro late Servant to Captain Simon Frazer, Alexander Stewart, Brother to Ulart [Urrard?], Peter Frazer, Servant to Balnean, and William Oig Frazer Tenent to Balnean.

Who being all witnesses in this Case above Exception, and many of them Landed Men, did prove the Defenders their Treasonable raising in Arms, and open Rebellion with the greatest Evidence that could be desired. For tho it was not to be expected, that Eleven Witnesses should depone uniformly against Twenty Persons, all engaged in a Treasonable Combination, and raising in Arms, consisting of several steps, Convocations, Rebelions, Meetings, actings in a tract of Time, and in several places; yet it is most Clear and Apparent from the Testimonies lying in Process, and upon Record, That Against every one of the Defenders, there were at least two or three Witnesses to prove their Accession: And further, That as to the Principal and most atrocious Acts of their Treasonable Insurrection; There was an evident Concurrence of the greatest part of them all; In as much as the Witnesses being solemnly Sworn, did make Faith, and gave their Deposition upon the whole Points and Articles of both the Libels, in reference to all these particulars. First, The Combination, Convocating and Conveening in Arms, without any lawful Authority. 2do The violent Seising of the Prisoners. 3tio The taking the House of Fanellan, and keeping the Prisoners under Guards therein. 4to The Keeping Garisons and Guards upwards of a Hundred Men in the House of Fanellan and Castle-Downie. 5to The raising of the Countrey, by sending the Firie Cross, and making the Cry called the Coronch pass throw it, the ordinary Signal for raising the Countrey in Arms in these parts. 6to The Mustering of Men in Arms under Commanders, and with Colours, sometimes above Two Hundred, and sometimes above Three Hundred. 7mo The setting and keeping of Centinels and Guards and detaching of Parties. 8vo Their marching with their Prisoners under Armed Guards throw the Countrey to remote Places. 9no And wherein, in effect the whole Defenders were engaged; Their continuing in Arms in feir of war and an open hostile manner, sometimes above Two Hundred, after they were charged in his Majesty's Name, by warrand of the foresaid Letters directed by the Lords of Privy Council, to lay down their Arms under the pain of Rebellion. And 10mo and lastly, Their again Convocating and Conveening in Arms several months after they had been charged to lay down their Arms under the pain of Rebellion, as said is, to the Number of two or three Hundred, and marching against, and again seising his Majesty's free Leidges, for acting for His Majesty's Authority, and making them Prisoners.

All which particulars, the several and manifest steps of a most Treasonable raising in Arms and open Rebellion, having been proven, and for the greatest and most atrocious part against the whole Defenders. The Probation as to the principal point was concluded with the most full and satisfieing evidence.

And as for the Aggravations, viz. The Injuries and Indignities done to His Majesties free Leidges, and those Persons of Honour and Quality, the making and treating them as Prisoners with all Severity the threatening them with Death, by setting up a Gallows in their View before their Windows, when under closs Restraint in separat Chambers, their carrying them about under Guards as Prisoners, and detaining of them for several days, their most Inhumane, Cruel and Barbarous Usage of the Lady Dowager of Lovat, and carrying her with them, in a most Afflicted Captive Condition for several Weeks, thorow the most Barbarous and Mountainous Places that can be imagined, and extorting from her, by the Extremities of Violence, such Writings and Declarations as they were pleased to demand, all these Aggravations were also proven by the foresaid Witnesses, at least two of them, to every particular. And further, the Detestable and Horrid Violence done to the Lady Dowager by Captain Simon Frazer, and his Wicked Complices, was yet more particularly and distinctly proven by Mr. Leonard Robertson of Straloch, and three Women, who, no doubt, in a Case so Circumstantiat, were not only necessary, but most lawful and sufficient Witnesses. But because this Violence was acted and perpetrated by the said Captain Simon with such Cruelty and Barbarity, as is scarce credible, the summ of the Evidence given in this matter is here more particularly set down as follows.

Mr. Leonard Robertson of Straloch<sup>1</sup> Aged 44, solutus, purged and sworn, Depones That upon the sixteenth of October last, being Saturday, he came to Inverness, and was there informed, that the Lady Dowager of Lovat was under restraint at Castle-downie, whereupon he repaired to that place, and after some difficulty made, got Access to my Lady, who acquainted him with the proposals that Captain Simon Frazer had made to her; and intreated the Deponent, to perswade the Lord Saltoun, and her Brother Lord James Murray to condescend to the Terms; which the Deponent undertook: And having returned to Inverness, prevailed with them to sign the Articles, for her own and Lord Mungo's Liberation, and brought them back to Castle-Downie on Tuesday, to get my Ladies hand to them. Which being done, the Deponent expected nothing, but that my Lady was fully at Liberty.

<sup>1</sup> A dependant of the Atholl family. The Reid (Ruadh) Robertsons of Straloch were an old branch of Clan Donnachie, and their head was generally known as the Baron of Straloch. On 27th November 1717 Alexander Robertson was served heir-general to his father, Leonard Robertson of Straloch.

But when he was conveying her to her Horse, they were both stopped at my Ladies Chamber Door, and there was a Chair and a Centry set at my Ladies Door, and all the rest of the Centries doubled; and the Deponent himself, after some time, was put under a Guard of Centinels, and was so detained under Restraint till the next day at ten of the clock, That complaining to Captain Simon, the Deponent was permitted to pay a Visit to my Lady, whom he saw in a very Disconsolat Condition, and softly spoke in his Ear, For Christ's sake take me out of this place either Dead or alive, and that he observed my Ladys face all swollen, and she fell in a Swound the time the Deponent was with her; and my Lady suspecting that he had not fully heard what she had spoken to him, sent her servant Mrs. Mackbryar with Commission to repeat the same words to him, which she did. And the Deponent thinks Captain Simon had at least Three Hundred Men with him at that time, all well Armed, in and about the House of Castle Downie, and that he heard at the time some person Lamenting and the Bagpipe played about the same time, but knows not whether it was to drown the Voice or not. And further Depones, That the next time he saw my Lady was, That the Laird of Collodine and the Deponent came to the Water side near the Isle of Aigis; and Captain Simon having come over to them by Boat, the Deponent desired to see my Lady, which he shun'd, telling him, That my Lady did not desire to see him; and the Deponent replied, That it was not done like a Commerad; especially seing it was reported at Inverness, That my Lady was Dead, or near expiring. Captain Simon Answered, That he should be soon cleared of the contrary; and returning in his Boat, he caused bring out my Lady in their sight: But so weak, as she was supported by two and then carried her back again to a little House upon that Island: But the Deponent having asked at Mrs. Mackbryar from the other side of the Water, to try at her Lady, if she had discharged the Deponent to see her; she went accordingly and brought back word, That she desired nothing more than to see the Deponent, except her own Liberation, and to tell her Brother Lord James, that she was some better, and lived longer than she desired : And that the Deponent saw my Lady several times after that, where she made heavie Complaints of the bad and rude usage she had met with ; but her Guards and others suspecting the Deponent, because he would not comply anent some Papers they were drawing up, for their own pretended Security, he had not that free converse which he had formerly ; And that this was the third or fourth Night after the Charge given them by the Herauld, to dissipat and lay down their Arms, and set my Lady at Liberty. And at the time when my Lady parted with them, and went away with my Lord Forbes, the Deponent saw about two Hundred Men in Arms with Captain Simon Frazer.

Sic Subscribitur LEONARD ROBERTSON.

Amelie Rioch late Servitrix to my Lady Lovat, aged 16 years, sworn and purged, Depones, That about the time libelled, she being a servant to my Lady, Captain Simon Frazer with several Armed Men, came to Castle Downie and set Centinels on my Ladys Chamber without and within the Doors, with drawn Swords ; That, Captain Simon's Men carried by Force my Lady's waiting Maids Mrs. Mackbryar and Mrs. Janet Frazer, and the Deponent, out of her Room, and made them Prisoners in another Room ; That about Two of the Clock in the Morning, two Armed Men came and carried the Deponent back to the Ladys Chamber, where she did see the Lady sitting on the Ground, her Hair hanging down about her Head, leaning backward to the Bed-stock ; That one Donald Beaton was pulling off my Ladys Shoes, and Captain Simon was holding Aquavitæ and brunt Feathers to her Nose, because she was then in a Swarf ; That thereafter they commanding the Deponent to take off my Lady's [shoes], and when she offered so to do, my Lady spurned her away with her Feet, shewing her unwillingness ; That the Deponent refusing to take off the Cloaths, Captain Simon ordered to beat her ; that Frazer of Kinmonavie did then hold up the Lady in his Arms, and Captain Simon pulled off her Petticoats, and sought a knife from Hugh Monro to cut her Stays; and because he had none, the Captain ordered Frazer of Kinmonavie to cut her Stays with his Durk; And then they threw the Lady upon the Bed: But the Deponent saying, that she would take off the Ladys Stays, they went a little out of the Room, in which time the Deponent did again fasten the Stays; but they returning were displeas'd, that the Stays were not taken off, and commanded to put the Deponent out of the Room; and then they turned the Lady upon her face, and stretched out her Arms, and so took off her Stays, which the Deponent did see, because she went not out of the Room, but stood at the Foot of the Bed. And when the Deponent was going away, she heard my Lady Cry, but the Bagpipe did play all the time in the next Room to my Lady's Chamber, that her cries might not be heard. Depones that next morning, she went into the Lady's Chamber, and see her Head hang over the Bed, and nothing upon it except a Handkerchief. That the Deponent did see all the Lady's Face Swollen, and she spoke nothing, but gave her a broad Look. And the Deponent thought that my Lady was not sensible for a day or two thereafter; for she did not know Lord Mongo her Brother the next Morning, when he came to see her; and when her Servant told her, here is your Brother at the Bed side, the Lady asked what Brother, albeit she was looking him in the Face with fair Daylight. Depones, that when she and the other Servants were carried by Force the first night out of my Ladies Chamber; the Ladie stood up and held out her Arms and cried: And when Dumballoch's Lady came the next Morning to the Room, and called her Madam; my Lady answered, Call me not Madam, but the most miserable wretch alive. Depones, That she see my Lady carried Prisoner from Castledownie to the Isle of Aigis at twelve of the Clock at Night, and from that to Culgrain, and from that to Deanie, and then to the Isle of Muile.<sup>1</sup> The

Reason of her Knowledge, because she went along with her.

This Disposition was the more credited that the Maid tho young, not above sixteen Years, did nevertheless in the Presence of the Court, and Hundreds attending it, depone with a Firmness and Constancy, particularly observed by all that heard her, and her foresaid Deposition was immediatly confirmed by Janet Frazer, Daughter to Dumbaloch, who agreed in her Deposition with Amelie Reoch, as the Violence put upon the Lady, and her being carried forcibly from her, and as to the sad and afflicted Condition, wherein she see her the next day.

Janet Frazer, Daughter to Dumballoch, aged 16 years, unmarried, sworn and purged, Depones, that at the time libelled, Captain Simon Frazer and several Armed Men, came to the House of Castledownie, and thereafter, there being Guards and Centries set on my Ladies Chamber-door, the Deponent and Mrs. Mackbryar, being my Ladies Lovats Servants, were about Twelve of the Clock at Night, carried by Force out of my Ladie Chamber, and my Lady taking hold of the Deponent's Cloaths, and Crying out when the Deponent was pulled away by Force, my Lady fell on her Face. Depones, that next morning the Deponent came to my Ladies Chamber about Eight a Clock in the Morning, and did see my Ladies Head hang over the Bed Stock, and see her Face swollen. And the Deponent enquiring anent my Ladies Health, my Lady answered, I am dead. And about Twelve a Clock that day my Lady appeared altogether unsensible, and did take the Deponent for Lady Catharine my Ladies Sister, who had died several years before, and about Four a Clock the same Afternoon, my Lady did not know her Brother my Lord Mungo, and could not speak to him. Depones, that about Two a Clock the same day, my Lady fell in a Swerf, and continued out and in the Swerf about two Hours. And this is the Truth as she shall answer to God : And depones she cannot write.

Likeas Christian Mackclean, late Servitrix to James

Frazer of Relict, did likewise in her Deposition agree with them.

Christian Mackelain, late Servitrix to James Frazer of Relict, aged 24 Years, unmarried, purged and sworn, and interrogat by the Lord Aberuchil and Mr. Thomas Frazer sworn Interpreter, in respect she cannot speak the English Language, Depones that the time libelled, particularly that Night that they talk of the pretended sham Marriage, she being a Servant in the Family, had the Charge of a young Child, being in the Next Room, to my Lady's, and the Doors of my Lady's Room, and the Room where the Deponent was being open, and the Doors guarded by Armed Men, she heard my Lady Moan and Lament. In the meantime there were Bagpips playing, and yet she heard my Ladys Voice So loud, that the sound of the Bagpipe did not drown her Voice. Depones, That she saw Kinmonavie drawing a Durk from one of the Centries that was at the Room where the Deponent was, and rush into the Room where the Lady was with it. Depones, that the Deponent was guarded so strictly, that she could get neither meat nor Drink for her self nor the Child, nor none allowed to come near her from Twelve a Clock of the Day, to Eight a Clock next Morning. Depones, she saw Captain Simon Fraser there, with the most part of the other Persons insisted against, all in Arms, and saw a great many moe People in Arms in and about the House. Further Depones, That before the Pipes were bended up, she heard my Lady Crying and clap her hands, saying, Is there no Person here that hath any Christian Blood in them, who will have no respect to my Woes, and repeated very often Lord have Mercy on her Soul. This is the Truth, as she shall answer to God. And depones she cannot write.

Sic Subscribitur THOMAS FRAZER.

All which Depositions as to the Centries set within and without the Ladys Chamber, and the Violence then done her, and the playing of the Bag-Pipe to suppress her Crys and the carrying of her Captive from place to place, were further confirmed by what the foresaid men witnesses did declare in their several Depositions as to these Points.

His Majesty's Advocat did also produce and lay before the Assise, the principal Letter mentioned in the first Libel,<sup>1</sup> write by Beaufort elder and younger, and their Complices, for declaring their wicked Conspiracy and Combination, and which Letter was also attested by several of the Witnesses.

From all which it was most manifest, that the Defenders their Treasonable Rising in Arms and open Rebellion against his Majesty, and the Aggravations above libelled, were fully and clearly proven: And accordingly the Assise did return their Verdict, bearing, That they all in one Voice did find the Libel with the Aggravations thereof, as the same was restricted by the Interlocutor of the Lords, clearly proven against the said Captain Simon Fraser and the other Persons insisted against in absence, as said is.

After opening and reading of which Verdict of Assize, the Lords Justice General, Justice Clerk, and Commissioners of Justiciary, in respect thereof, Decerned and Adjudged the said Captain Simon Frazer, and the whole Persons contained in the above-written Verdict, to be Execute to the Death, Demeaned<sup>2</sup> as Traitors, and to undergo the Pains of Treason and utter Punishment, appointed by the Laws of the Realm, at such Times and Places, and in such Manner, as the saids Lords should appoint: And ordained their Name, Fame, Memory and Honours to be extinct, and their Arms to be riven forth and delete out of the Book of Arms; so that their Posterity may never have Place, nor be able hereafter to Bruik or Joice any Honours, Offices, Titles or Dignities, within the Realm in time coming: And to have Forfeited, Amitted and Tint, all and sundry their Lands, Heretages Tacks, Steedings, Rooms, Possessions, Goods and Gear whatsoever pertaining to them, to our Sovereign Lord, to remain perpetually with His Majesty in Property. And this Sentence was by Sound of Trumpet, and all other Solemnities for Doom.<sup>1</sup>

For Conclusion then of this Account, it remains only to be remarked, First That both the Lybels are so evidently relevant, and the Probation so full and clear, that there cannot remain the least Scruple or Doubt, as to the orderly Procedure and just Issue of this Tryal.

It may possibly occur, that all the foresaid Convocations, Meetings and Actings in Arms were only upon the Occasion of a pretended privat quarrel, and not designed against his Majesty and his Government. And further, that the foresaids Persons found guilty, did several times openly declare, That from all their Bonds and Engagements to maintain and stand by one another, the King was expressly excepted. But to this it is Answered, That the Duty and Crimes of Subjects are to be measured and judged by Deeds, and not by Words. That the Words of the Law are most express, And it shall be high Treason to the Subjects of this Kingdom, or any number of them, more or less, upon any Ground or Pretext whatsoever, to rise and continue in Arms, to maintain Forts or Garrisons, to make Peace or War, to make Treaties and Leagues with Forreigners, or amongst themselves, without his Majesties special Authority and Approbation first interponed thereto. That there is nothing more easy and ordinary for Men, than to colour their Treasonable Rising in Arms, with specious Pretences and Excuses. And Lastly, That it is most certain, That as the foresaid Criminals, and their Complices, did disobey and contemn His Majesties Authority, charging them to lay down their Arms under the Pain of Rebellion, so had they been able to have opposed and overthrown the whole Forces and Strength of the Government, they had certainly done it, in the Prosecution of their Wicked Designs.

<sup>1</sup> From the Justiciary Records it appears that the proceedings were followed by an application on behalf of the witnesses which illustrates the conditions and cost of journeying at the time, and also explains the prolongation of the trial. It is printed as an Appendix at p. 45.

It may likewise appear strange to some, to hear and see so many Forfeited upon this Occasion. But these Persons ought first to consider, that the Persons found guilty, were the Chief Ringleaders in all the Steps of the foresaid Rebellion, and Barbarous Outrages, and who forced others to take Arms.

As also they ought to reflect, that several Hundreds whom the Law reaches, are nevertheless past by and overlook'd, and the foresaid Persons only insisted against, as necessary Examples to restrain such Lawless and Pernicious Practices: And that tho' the foresaid twenty Persons be condemned, for the Indispensible Maintaining of His Majesties just Authority, and Repressing and Curbing the Madness of such Heady Desperat Traitors: Yet the Estate and Interest of all of them taken complexly are not worth Fifty Pounds Sterling by Year; nor are they in the least valuable as to the Peace of the Kingdom, it being known, that the greatest part of them were Thieves and Murderers, and so glad of any Pretence to continue their Lawless Practices, and keep themselves out of the Hands of Justice.

Some few Moneths after the foresaid Tryal, the saids Hugh Frazer, alias Hutcheon Oig, and John Frazer younger of Migavie, two of the Convict Persons above-named, being apprehended in the North, were sent Prisoners, under a Guard of His Majesties Forces, to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh: And being called upon the 11th of April last before the Lords of Justiciary, and Interrogat, if they did bear the Names and Designation above-written, and if they knew any others of these Names and Designations, they acknowledged their Names to be as above, viz. Hugh Frazer, alias Hutcheon Oig, and John Frazer younger of Migavie, and that they knew of no other Persons of their Names and Designations, which Judicial Acknowledgment they Signed.

The said Hugh Frazer, alias Hutcheon Oig, and the said John Frazer younger of Migavie, by the former Sentence, being ordained to undergo the Pains of Treason, appointed by the Laws of this Kingdom, at such Times, Places, and in such Manner, as the Lords of Justiciary should appoint, in respect they were then absent: And they being now brought before the Lords, to hear the Time, Place, and Manner of the Execution appointed, The Lords of Justiciary Decerned and Adjudged the said Hugh and John Frazers to be taken to the Cross of Edinburgh, upon the fourth of August thereafter, betwixt two and four a Clock in the Afternoon, and there to have their Heads severed from their Bodies.

Thereafter in the Year 1701, Captain Fraser and the other Persons convicted by the foresaid Sentence, had the confidence to resort to Edinburgh, and give out by his Emissary's that he would stand a tryal for the Rape, and hame sucken committed by him on the Person of the said Emilia Lady Dowager of Lovat.

The Lady Dowager and her Friends considering that tho the foresaid Crimes of Rape and Hame-Sucken were fully proven in the former Tryal, yet being then insisted in, only as Agravations of the Crimes of Treason and Perduellion; it was thought adviseable to raise a new Process at the Lady Dowager's instance, with concurrence of His Majesty's Advocate, against Captain Fraser and his Accomplices for the said Crimes, that they might have a new opportunity of pleading their Defences against so Barbarous and inhumane Crimes, if their consciousness thereof would allow them Courage to stand their Tryalls.

There is accordingly a criminal Process raised, setting forth the foresaid Crimes with their Agravations.

At the Day of Compearance the said Lady Dowager of Lovat, did personally compear in presence of the Lords of Justiciary, and demanded Justice for the Barbarous usage she met with from Captain Fraser, and His Majesty's Advocate craved the same for His Majesty's interest: But neither he nor any of his Accomplices having appeared, albeit his Emissarys did with great confidence and assurance give out, that very Day, he would stand his Tryal, The Lords of Justiciary therefore declared him and his Accomplices Fugitives, and they were thereafter denounced Rebels.

Upon which Denunciation the Lady Dowager obtained from His Majesty's Privy-Council, Letters of intercommuning and a Commission of Fire and Sword: All which are sufficiently instructed by the said criminal Process, with the Warrants granted by the Privy-Council in consequence thereof.<sup>1</sup>

Its to be observed, that according to the Laws and Customs of Scotland there could be no Probation led upon the foresaid Libel, in regard Captain Fraser and the other Defendants were absent, but the Crimes of Ravishing and Hame-sucken being admitted to Probation in the former Tryal as is above-mentioned, the Probation there adduced is as convincing and evident, as if the same had proceeded upon the last Libel.

The following documents complete the story so far as the Dowager was concerned, and also show the vigorous but unsuccessful attempts to capture Captain Simon.

The letters do not disclose to whom they were sent, but it was probably to the Earl of Marchmont, then Chancellor of Scotland.

INNERNESS, 27 Dec<sup>r</sup> 1697.

MAY IT PLEASE YO<sup>r</sup> LO.,—Having had intelligence that Cap<sup>t</sup> Frazer and those I mentioned in my last with fiftie or sixtie and sometimes more men with them were in the Brays of Strathglash, where they kept guards, did some and cesse the countrey thereabouts; I sent to Cap<sup>t</sup> Stuart who commands in Invergerry to march a party from his garrison, whilst at the same time, I should march from this in order to surprize or at least force them from their stations in those parts, Accordinglie on Thursday the 23rd both partys marched, but the waters being swelled with a thaw that happened that day and the storm being but litle abated in those parts did so retard our march, that they had notice cre we could come at them, nevertheless we went on and made them disperse and betake themselves to the woods; and having staid two nights thereabout and charged the people who had not joined them, not to give them any assistance or harbour ym without giving notice to the nearest garrison, both partys returned each to their own garrison.

My Lord, It is a vast trouble and fatigue at this season to march great partys into these parts being the wildest and most inaccessible places, that I know in the highlands, be reason of severall unfordable rivers, narrow glens and prodigious rocky high mountains and woods, and this journey hath broken and bruised many of bothe officers and souldiers their leggs & arms and many of them have taken feavers at their return, besides the loss of firelocks broken with the falls: but I find the Country people begin to feel the burden of mantaining so many men, w<sup>ch</sup> I suppose will soon obleidge them to separate and then they may be sett and surpris'd with small partys and pickt up one & one; In the meantime I shall lay myself out to learn intelligence of their motions and give acco<sup>t</sup> yrof to your Lo. Who ame,

May it please yo<sup>r</sup> Lop, Your Lo. most obedient and most humble servant,

LETTER from Major ALEXANDER ANDERSON

MAY IT PLEASE YO<sup>R</sup> LORDSP,—I have been using my best indeavors to execute the orders given me, against Simon Fraser and his complices but by reason of storme, unfordable rivers, the distance they keep themselves at, and most of all the favour the countrie bears them, who give constant inteligence of our motions, finding it almost impossible to surprize them either from this place, or Invergarie, I thought it absolutely necessarie to send some parties to ly and quarter in the places most frequented by them, which accordingly being done, they did immediatley remove, and lessned ther party; Simon himself taking but a small party with him; left the glens of Strathglase wher they hanted this while past, and notwithstanding a party I caused post at the head of Loughnesse to intercept them, they got over to Strathharik hauing as I am since informed crossed the lough by boat in the night time, wher they have been lurking thes foure dayes past, I had a man with them yesternight about eight a clock, who tels that they wer then about to crosse the lough againe for which reason I intend as soon as I can to send out a partey to conveen all the boats upon the Lough, bring them to one place and secure them or render them useless, yet after all unlesse that some way or other the Countrie people be made to suffer for his being amonge them and those that goe along with him punished in their goods it will be deficult of a sudden to apprehend their persons howbeit I shall continue to use all possible indeavors: Who am,

MAY IT PLEASE YO<sup>R</sup> LORDSP,—In my last of the 17th current, I gave yo<sup>r</sup> Lordsp, an account, how that the parties posted in the Aird and Strathglass had chased Simon Fraser and his followers thence; that they had crossed Loughness in boat over to Strath-harik, and for that reason, that I was resolved to conveen & secure all the boats; but afterwards bethought myself to macke use of it to a greater advantage; and therby to entrap the Rebels themselues, for finding that they resorted in places neer to the Lough side where their main refuge, if pursued, must be their boats wherof they had a number sufficient at once to transport betwcn four score & anc hundreth men; I laid my Designe as foloueth; I called a partey from Invergaria to guard the head of the lough at Killi-whimine, I sent some men in highland cloathes to stopp boats from crosseing from the north side to give them intelligence; and soon after followed with the parties that lay in the Aird and Strathglass which I posted in the woods upon the lough side opposite to the place wher their boats were, where we continued from twelue a clock thursday till nine in the morning friday (at which time the signe was given by the Dragoons on the other side which I had formerly conserted with them) exposed to the weather which was vehemently cold all the while. At the same time I had ordered Cap<sup>t</sup> Hamilton and Cap<sup>t</sup> Denhame with their Troups of Dragoons to march from Inrerness hauing mounted some of our foot to be guides to conduct them wher the Rebels were, & give them alarme, that so they betaking themselues to their boats might fall into our hands who were posted under covert on the other side ready to receaue them, all which was exactly and in due order performed, so that had not the Rebels (by chance as I think) remoued the night before foure or fiue miles up towards the hilly part of the countrie to meet ther with some of the countrie men, I am Confident the project had succeeded to our mind. But being so far out of our way and hearing of a party coming against them they fledd toward Badenough being as I am told as numerous as at any time since they were outlawed, and the Dragoons tell me that in twenty foure hours that they were in Strathharik they did not see three men. My Lord I beg pardon for troubling yo<sup>r</sup> Lordsp. with the long recitall of a fruitless attempt, which is but one of maney, but though the success hath not been answerable to our pains and trauell, I am loath we should also be thought to ly still and doe nothing; the Rebels are got back againe to the north side of Loughness, they are about an hundreth men together but keep at such a distance that we cannot march from this to them in one day, nor do I expect to get much done against them till the storme & frost be ouer, houeuer I shall inbrace euery opportunity that presents with any probability of success. Who am,

and most obedient servant,

AL. ANDERSONE.

PAPERS RELATING TO THE MEARNS

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

IN the history of his native county Sir William Fraser took a special interest, and a number of documents relating to the Mearns have been found in his repositories. Some of the older or more interesting of these are printed in the following pages.

I

EXCERPTS FROM A MANUSCRIPT BY MR. JOHN NAPIER,<sup>1</sup> formerly tenant of Mains of Allardice, afterwards Merchant in Stonehaven, who died 6th February 1823, aged about 78 years. The Manuscript was made at the request of Sir Alexr. Keith of Ravelston, K.M., to whom it was transmitted after Mr. Napier's death by his executor, John Walker, farmer in Arrat, by whom these excerpts are written

DUNOTTAR CASTLE<sup>2</sup>

The reservoir in the Castle was supplied from a well in the Brae to the westward by means of lead pipes, part of which remained until of late years when they were occasionally dug up by herds etc.

<sup>1</sup> He seems to have been a storehouse of local information, though either he or Mr. Walker is not always strictly accurate. Whether his original MS. still exists is not known. In the Airth Peerage case, before the Committee for Privileges in 1829, were produced the proceedings in the service of Mrs. Sarah Ann Barclay-Allardice as heir-portioner of William, last Earl of Airth and Menteith, from which it appears that at Millplough in the parish of Arbuthnott, on 10th November 1784, evidence was taken on commission, Mr. Patrick Forsyth, Sheriff-Substitute of Kincardine, being the commissioner, and James Napier, farmer at Mains of Allardice, the clerk.

On this charter Sir William Fraser observes (The Sutherland Book, vol. i. p. 32): 'This permission pointed to the erection of a new or a stone castle on the crag, for there is evidence of a fortification on it long before this date. It is referred to in the reign of King William the Lion. In 1297, according to Blind Harry, it was held by the English and attacked by Sir William Wallace, who burned it and the church which then also stood upon the rock. In 1336 King Edward III. gave special orders for its repair and a strong garrison to hold it, but shortly afterwards it was retaken by the Scots and demolished that it

Coal house was formed of a cave below the rock secured by an arch etc.

Lord Marishal's pleasure boat used to lye at the mouth of the cave.

The bay to the northward of the Castle and from which is the entrance to the cave is called Castlehaven.

Steersman's acre on the heugh head is still called by that name.

Tillwhilly is a rock opposite the Steersman's acre—so named it is said from the Laird of Tillwhilly<sup>2</sup> having stayed three nights on it in consequence of having had some connection with Earl Murray in the reign of Queen Mary.

In the rock called the Fiddle head was a concealment said to be only known to the Earl of Marishal. After the rebellion of 1715 John Young<sup>3</sup> the Sheriff of the County caused search be made by digging there and in the Reservoir or well for the family plate, but to no purpose as was alledged tho' Mr. Honeyman told J. N. that his wife on a visit at the Sheriff's residence at Fawside was once treated with strong beer out of a silver mug on which might be useless to the English. . . . It does not appear whether the Earl of Sutherland fortified the crag or built any part of the castle, the ruins of which still have a very picturesque appearance on that bold, rocky coast. That building is usually assigned to Sir William Keith, Marischal of Scotland.'

In some way which has not yet been explained satisfactorily, the Crag of Dunottar came into the hands of Sir William Lindsay of the Byres, who in 1392, with consent of his wife Christian Keith, excambed it with his father-in-law, Sir William Keith, Marischal of Scotland, for lands in Fife, including Ugtrethrestrother—now Crawford Priory.

The reprint of Slezer's Theatrum Scotiae (Edinburgh, 1874) contains two views of Dunottar Castle, of which only one appeared in the original edition of 1693. On the forfeiture of the 10th Earl Marischal in 1715 the Dunottar estate was acquired by the York Building Company. And according to Pennant, writing in 1771, 'This Castle was inhabited till the beginning of the present century, when an agent for the York Building Company reduced it to the present ruinous state by pulling down and selling many of the materials.'

were the Marishal Arms, from which he conjectured that Young had got hold of the plate and thus the search was a sham one.

Five bells were placed in the Porter's lodge for the purpose of announcing the quality of persons calling.

On the west side of the road up to the Palace was a cave in a rock, wherein a lion was kept. The Countess being disturbed by his roaring in the night caused him to be killed ; after which a bear was put in his place which was so tamed as present his right or left paw on the Earl holding out his right or left hand, and as he generally roared on the appearance of the Earl the servants used to observe ' Our goodman himself is coming as Black beard is making his salutations.'

Altho' the Fiddle head is so high a rock that it is a trial of strength or dexterity for young people to throw a stone over it a man of the name of Lawrence in emptying earth from the top of it by a wheel barrow fell to the bottom along with the barrow without receiving any injury, and on searching his pockets found he had only broken his father's sneishen mill.

In the Tower was a vault hewn out of the solid rock cased or lined with lead and also with mahogany in which the Crown Sceptre and Sword were kept on a table covered with fine linen hung with tapestry. David Barclay along with several others accompanied from Fetteresso the Earl of Marishal with his visitors Earls Seaforth and Sutherland to see the Regalia when the governor of the Castle first opened two locks and the Earl of Marishal a third with a key taken from a bag hung from his neck by a silver tripet, on which the door of the Regalia room was opened and the Earls kneeled on cushions to view it ; after which the attendants got leave by sixes to go and do the same, when the door was locked and a salute fired from the Castle.

The smiddy, wright's shop and stables stood on the west side of the tower.

The buildings called Waterton's lodgings formerly the residence of servants and mechanics were given by the Countess of Marishal as a summer residence to Mrs. Forbes of Waterton.<sup>1</sup>

In the middle of the Green stood the Pictish Tower. In 1785 J. N. observed a stone at the foot of it dated 1374. He observed other dates on stones in the ruins dated 1580, 1581, 1574, 1596, and one much defaced and partly broken appearing as 546 but which must have probably been 1546.

The old Church burial ground and garden are yet known. The account of its having been necessary for the family after building a place of strength on holy ground, to settle with the Pope is said to be well known.<sup>2</sup>

The place where Mons Meg (a large cannon) lay is still shewn ; also the service chambers the silver tower on the west and the vaults below the palace for meal ginals, the Palace, Brew house, Bake house, and ale cellars.

Ships in passing the Castle saluted by lowering their sails. The gunner having been drinking in a public house in Stonehaven when a vessel passed without giving the usual salutation was sent for by express, and having called out as soon as within hearing of the Castle to load the long Falcon and draw her into the long gallery, he on firing a single shot cut the main mast in two altho' by this time past the Garron Point—a distance which the writer of these excerpts reckons more than two miles. The gunner's son was (afterwards as supposed) Governor of the Castle ;<sup>3</sup>

<sup>2</sup> In constructing a new fortress the Marischal interfered with the parish church, dedicated, to St. Ninian, which stood on the rock. For this sacrilege it is said he was excommunicated by the Bishop of St. Andrews—but obtained pardon from Pope Benedict XIII. by a Bull dated 13th July 1394, on condition that he built a new church at a convenient place. This new church was built on the bank of the Water of Carron and dedicated to St. Bride. The castle remained with the Keiths till the forfeiture of the 10th Earl Marischal in 1715.

<sup>3</sup> The known facts about the family are these. The Rev. John Gregory, minister of Drumoak, was the son of James Gregory, saddler in Aberdeen, to whom he was served heir 27th May 1623. By his wife Janet Anderson he had three sons: (1) Alexander, ob. s. p. ; (2) David of Kinardie, the father of the Savilian Professor at Oxford and thirty-one other children ; and (3) James, Professor of Mathematics at Edinburgh, whose son James, Professor of Physic at Aberdeen, was the father of John Gregory, Professor of Medicine at Edinburgh.

With these facts it is difficult to reconcile this statement, unless indeed the gunner was an ancestor of the saddler, which is possible.

from him is descended Dr. John Gregory of Edinburgh. The gunner had 3 sons, one bred a physician in Aberdeen, another a farmer, and a third went to France.

In the reign of King William a number of Highlanders summoned the Castle in name of King James. But the Earl answering that the Castle belonged neither to King William nor King James but to himself and at same time desiring the matches of the guns to be lighted the Highlanders ran off. A small gun from the tower was fired on their retreat but did no further harm than cutting a plough in pieces.

The Black hill was the place of execution. The site of the Gallows was shifted about 20 yards after the execution of Janet Cant (niece of Andrew Cant<sup>1</sup>) condemned for witchcraft, which was reckoned so great a crime that other criminals were not afterwards executed at the same spot. The hangman's house stood at the foot of the quarry brae and his land is now Forrest's acre.

While executions continued on the Black Hill (in view both of Dunottar Castle and Fetteresso) the Earl being often applied to by the Countess for pardon of the criminals changed the place of execution to what was afterwards called the Gallow hill a little east of where the house of Kirkhill<sup>2</sup> [now is]. The gallows stood long after 1715 and was at length stolen by a Robert Morton Cooper in Stonehaven, who having made it into water buckets, no person would on this being known, purchase buckets or any other vessels from him.

One dark evening the Laird of Drum in coming from the south to Dunottar Castle on seeing the lights (tho' mistaking the road) pushed his horse over the heugh into the Old haw, a pit on the south side of Castle. The horse was dashed to pieces but the rider sustained no injury except standing amongst water about an hour until he was got out. The coach house, ducks and geese house, dove cot etc. were near the burn of the Old haw.

well's Generals in taking the Castle were visible in the corn lands of Mains of Dunottar also the stone causeways where the peats were built. A clasp bridge began at the foot of the peat road and ran in by the side of the Fiddle head to the castle door—it could have been put up in an hour and taken down in half an hour.

David Barclay used to talk of the eleven baronies belonging to Earl Marishal. As far as J. N. recollects these were Uras Lungair Dunottar Stonehaven and Mill thereof Glenton Acquhirie—the jointure lands, Fetteresso Cowton Ury Muchalls with Elsieck Birs and Strachan also Garvoek and others.

Fetteresso<sup>1</sup> house was built at the request of the Countess as she did not like to stay a night in the Castle. The reason for the Countess disliking the Castle probably was that, in the Old haw, seals by frequenting that bay are generally shewing their heads and that as a woman in Crawton was delivered of a child whose head resembled that of a seal.

Mill of Forrest was reckoned part of the Cowton lands.

Once when the Earl was hunting with D. Barclay in company he on exhausting his firegun colfin<sup>2</sup> drew out a commission from Charles the 2nd for raising the Mearns Militia which on getting some colfin from David threw at him. Another time hunting with General Jas Keith<sup>3</sup> he got a present of a powder horn finely carved. Both the commission and powder horn fell into the hands of J. N. (who married a descendant of D. B.) and were by him presented to Lord Keith.

A hawk let off at a heron when the Earl was hunting on the farm of Upper Tewel was so besmeared with the excrement of the heron in attempting to catch him that next day on being let off on a heron he would not make another attempt.

The Earls of Marishal and Seaforth having once let off their hawks on the top of a hill in Inverness-shire, they in the first place attacked each other and after fighting for some time set off about 12 o'clock—reached Dunottar Castle about 7—hovered thereabout for some days and at length settled in Fowls heugh where they have since bred. They were originally presented to the Earls by a Danish nobleman—are a large kind of gose hawk and their young were much in request about 50 years ago in London.

Benholm had at one time consisted of Benholm Brotherton and Johnshaven. About the end of the 16th century the Earl of M. bought the lands of Brotherton from his brother the laird of Benholm, when the Earl built the house of Brotherton.

In the course of building the house he raised a fishing station at Johnshaven by bringing 12 boats crews from Peterhead etc. and occasionally lived in Johnshaven. The Earl and Sir Al. Stratton of Lauriston made a wager whether one of the fishing boats under sails and oars would draw ten of Sir Alex<sup>r</sup>'s oxen into the sea. On trial the boat had the advantage until a bystander gave the goadman a curse exclaiming 'Broad Brockie' when on this being done the ox skailed and so frightened the rest that they immediately drew the boat out of the sea and did not stop till they carried the keel and sternpost to the green of Lauriston, the fishermen having first tumbled out one by one and next the boat gone to pieces. 'Broad (or brad) Brockie' is a phrase well understood in the country to this day.

The fishers of Gourdon and Johnshaven have a peculiar sort of dialect occasioned by some boats crews having been at one period brought from Yorkshire by Viscount Arbutnot and the Earl: Horse they pronounce Ors; head, ide; Hand—and; hole, ole; ox, hox; Hen, En; cat, at; and so forth.

The present proprietor of Brotherton is descended from a Montrose butcher named Scott who made money by leases of salmon fishing. The proprietor for the time having been at Dinner at the house of Sir Al. Bannerman of Elsie thought fit to use some of his taunts and jibs towards a Mr. Mitchell minister of Dunottar one of the company; when at length Mr. M. asked Sir Alex<sup>r</sup> what gentleman this was who jeered him so much. On being told, the minister replied 'Well did I know his father as jolly a man as ever put a whittle in an ox craig. All the time my aunt kept the public house in Montrose she bought her beef from him and when she expected a large company she got a present of a haggis.'—After this remark Mr. M. was no more troubled with the laird's taunts. Mr. M. was settled minister of Dunottar about 1710 and died 1734.

A vessel having been wrecked near Brotherton the laird proceeded to take charge of the wreck; but the Earl Marishal interfered at same time abusing him for a mean low creature and so forth and telling him that he would not allow him to meddle with his prerogatives. The Earl with five others made their appearance on horseback. Brotherton took off his hat and kept it under his arm while the Earl spoke to him roughly and the bystanders were afraid the Earl would apply his whip to the Laird.

The Keiths' arms were cut in stone on the tower of Benholm and perhaps still remain.

William 4th Earl of Marishal owing to certain political and family disputes with his relative Douglas of Glenbervie was first challenged by Douglas who came to Fetteresso for that purpose, and not choosing to meet him observing that he pitied such a madman. Douglas afterwards returned with about 20 attendants, repeated the challenge and in order to provoke the Earl cut down the fruit trees in the garden and used every other insult. But as matters with the Queen and Murray then ran high the Earl was advised to reside in the Castle for some time.<sup>1</sup> The principal point of the quarrel was thought to be the aversion the Earl had to a proposed marriage of his son with a daughter of Douglas which was broken off all at once after there was no doubt of its taking place and some light words that came to Glenbervie's ear.

<sup>1</sup> From this he was locally known as William of the Tower. Not merely did he avoid political troubles, but by his economical mode of life he is said to have greatly increased the wealth of the family.

Beatrice Keith 5th daughter to William in the Tower was married to John Allardice of Allardice<sup>1</sup> with whom he got the lands of Powburn which he sold and purchased Pitcarrie.

In the Civil Wars the laird of Allardice engaged with the Covenanters. But having deserted and joined the Royal Army with his servant named Martin, the servant returned to the Covenanters; on which Ja<sup>s</sup> Stewart of Ardvolich put on the servant's cloathes and going into the Royal Army stabbed Allardice and returned in safety. The servant returning to the country was fallen upon by the country people on the top of an eminence or knap on the estate of Allardice called Tilly Martin,—probably bearing its name from that of the servant.

Lady Mary Graham daughter to Lord Kinpont<sup>2</sup> and sister to the Earl of Menteith died in the house of Allardice aged 113. She was 29 years old when she was married.<sup>3</sup> She sate 7 hours in the marriage seat in the Kirk of Dunottar and got bread and wine 3 times before Allardice came. When Allardice was coming into the Church Lord Marishall clapped him on the shoulder and asked him how he had staid so long. He said he was waiting his Uncle. A day or two after the marriage Allardice's creditors came and took possession of the house mill and lands of Allardice, when Allardice and Lady Mary fell a crying and for sundry days wept sore. Lady Mary then said 'This will not do Allardice to sit and weep together. I will yet go and see what my friend Lord Marishall will do for me.' She then set off to Dunottar, staying 3 days. Allardice was up at the Barns looking for her, when she perceived she waved her handkerchief bidding him to take courage and pointed to her lap. Next day Lord Marishall came to Allardice and stayed a night. A messenger was sent to the creditors the following day and some of the largest creditors having been merchants and apothecaries in Montrose who expected to get a bargain of the lands of Allardice Lady Mary told them there should not be a pottinger laird of Allardice while there were Piggars at Kinnaird.

After Lady Mary had visited all the farmers houses she observed the tenant's house of the Mill and Mill farm to be the fullest and in particular got a present of a linen web from the goodwife. This occasioned her to resolve with the laird to take the possession into their own management which was accordingly done. Lady Mary was a great meal dealer. Her daughter Elizabeth Keith, after mentioned was her multurer. A considerable trade was carried on in outsucken for which the 25th boll was received. Elizabeth Keith and the miller Al. Steel having been tried at Aberdeen for embezzlement (or perhaps rather over exaction) of multures, it is said Lady Mary had influence with Lord Forglen<sup>1</sup> one of the judges, and on the Sheriff having been found fault with he was obliged to take Elizabeth Keith on his own horse and set her down at her own door. E. Keith lived to about 100 and her daughter Marg<sup>t</sup> Milne also to a great age.

Lady Mary's eldest son John Allardice having married a woman of the name of Barclay,<sup>2</sup> she was so much offended as to leave Allardice before the marriage and not return until the death of her son which happened only six weeks after the marriage, when she took possession for her 2nd

<sup>2</sup> John Allardice married Elizabeth Barclay, daughter of William Barclay of Balmakewan, and died in December 1690. By their marriage contract, dated 17th October 1690, she was entitled to a liferent provision of 10 chalder of victual. But this became void under Scots law in respect that the marriage was dissolved within a year and a day without a living child having been got. The widow subsequently married Wood of Drumnagair.

son George<sup>1</sup> who married Lady Ann Ogilvie daughter to the Earl of Findlater. When Lady Ann arrived both Lady Mary and she shed tears the one for joy the other at the mean appearance of the house. Lady Ann was a maiden after she had 17 nights with Allardice. After she lost her maidenhead she wept sore. This anecdote from a Rob<sup>t</sup> Webster whose grandmother was servant in the house of Allardice who hearkened them in a room she slept in adjoining to theirs.

Lady Mary in speaking of her son John's marriage said he was always a soft silly creature and these puddock stools had imposed on him. But thanks to God the B——h had not bairns or we would not so easily get quit of her.

Laird George by the interest of Earl Findlater got himself appointed officer of the Mint. He kept a smiddy in a vault in the house of Allardice. J. N. has seen his hearth with several crucibles on it, his forge or fireplace, his bellows which hung from the top, the pipe turning or bending to the fire, and some small pipes could be conveyed to the place where the crucibles were fixed. The bellows were wrought by the foot after the manner of a spinning wheel.

Ja<sup>s</sup> Allardice the late laird's father in a dispute with Sir D. Ogilvy<sup>2</sup> at a County Meeting at Stonehaven fought with Sir David who disarmed him, pinned him down and besmeared his light coloured cloathes with gutter and onions, the conflict having taken place in a garden on a rainy day. After which he went home and never returned to Stonehaven.

<sup>1</sup> George Allardice, born 1672, married Lady Ann Ogilvy, and died in 1709. Their son James, born 1693, married, 1720, Mary, daughter of Robert Milne of Balwyllie, and died in 1728. Their son James Allardice, born 1727, married, March 1756, Ann Barclay. He died July 1765, leaving an only child, Sarah Ann Allardice, born 1757. She married Robert Barclay of Urie, was divorced in 1793 and married, secondly, John Nudd, and died in 1833. On 20th February 1785 she was served heir to William Graham, Earl of Menteith and Airth. Her son Robert Barclay-Allardice of Ury and Allardice, the celebrated athlete, born 1779, died 1854, claimed the earldom of Airth in 1839.

This Laird married Mary Milne the only daughter of Mr. Milne of Balwylo in expectation of getting the estate ; but her mother dying her father married a 2nd wife who had a son Mr. Milne of Bonnington.

J. N. has been shown the pictures in the house of Allardice. Those he recollects of are Lady Mary Graham, Lady Ann Ogilvie, Mary Milne of Balwylo, Chancellor Ogilvie, Lord Menteith, Laird George, the Earl of Haddington, Tom in the Cowgate, William in the Tower, Laird James and some others—the laird of Arbuthnot with his fair hair.

Sir David Ogilvy was a great swordsman, yet in attempting to chastise a fish cadger from Badenoch who was trespassing with his horse in passing Barras, he found himself worsted by the Cadger. On which he invited the Cadger to dine with him not only that day but alwise when he should have occasion to pass that way. The weapons used at this conflict were staves. But afterwards when the cadger came to Barras he and the knight fell to sword exercise.

Sir David Ogilvy in some dispute with the Laird of Ury drew his sword and said he would make him eat his own words which Ury did trembling at the term.

Lady Mary Graham with a sister at the time the family of Menteith were much reduced lived with Earl Marishall who got Lady Mary<sup>1</sup> with child. He gave the lands of Davo for the support of the child Elizabeth Keith before mentioned.

J. N.'s narrative mentions a dispute which arose about Marches between Arbuthnot and Allardice in Lady Mary G.'s time and how it was settled by arbitration but which seems of little importance to any others than the proprietors of these lands.

In the time of Montrose's Burning<sup>2</sup> the laird of Allardice having been on a visit to Benholm where he staid a night, his tenant John Fettes of Mains of Allardice came next day to apprise him of the burning being commenced at Millplough.<sup>1</sup> It seems that by the orders given it was not intended to proceed further north with the burnings than to the Water of Bervie, but a fellow having a few weeks before broken a cart (the first ever seen at Allardice) while in the laird's employ and got some chastisement for his carelessness, he had joined Montrose's army and from revenge not only set fire to the houses on the property, but also on seeing the laird approach his house (tho' strongly entreated by Fettes to return to Benholm on meeting him by the way) shot him while on horseback. And tho' some of the tenants on seeing him fall came to his assistance and conveyed him to Benholm he died soon after.

On the complaint however of Mr. Keith of Benholm the Earl of Montrose tried Ronald the perpetrator of the deed by a Court Marischall and made him be hanged on the head of the Gallow hill of Allardice.

A second son of the house of Allardice [who] held a wadset of Clashendrum part of the lands of Allardice was married to Marjory Arbuthnott daughter to the laird of Little Fiddes.

In the time of Montrose's Burning going to dine with his father in law at Little Fiddes both he and his servant were shot on the head of Bruxie hill, where there are two cairns one called Allardice's cairn the other Barrie's cairn.

The wadsetter left a son in the cradle which son left a numerous issue [by] his wife daughter of Rait of Halgreen. By the influence of the families of Allardice and Arbuthnott they occupied several of the best farms in Mearns and Angus.

[The] Laird of Allardice who was defeated by Sir D. Ogilvy died about 1738. He got the nickname of Thumbs from having very large thumbs. It seems Allardice was much disappointed in not getting Balwyllie (beforementioned) and often treated his lady with neglect. When putting a piece of beef in the pot he would have told her he wanted no such boils as these Burgher bits she had been used with (The Milnes were originally merchants in Montrose).

After the death of Allardice Mary Milne married Sir W<sup>m</sup> Nicolson of Glenbervie to whom she bore a son and daughter both now dead.

Sir W<sup>m</sup> Nicolson after the death of his spouse the late dowager of Allardice seeing that in all appearance his son (by another wife) Sir Ja<sup>s</sup> would have no children, married a very young lady daughter of Mr. Milne sometime laird of Dysart and by her (tho' he was then considerably above 80 years of age) had 5 or 6 children, one of them was a son who died young.<sup>1</sup> The 2nd daughter is now Lady of Glenbervie who has been thrice married without having children.<sup>2</sup> Another daughter is married to Mr. Wilson minister of Farnell Forfar-shire who has some daughters and a son apparent heir of Glenbervie.

It has been remarked that for a long time the Proprietors of Glenbervie have failed to have male heirs of their own body. The first by tradition is Oliphant who left 3 daughters (his nephew got the large estate in Perthshire); his eldest daughter got the lands of Arbuthnot. His second daughter married Melvil<sup>3</sup> and got the lands of Glenbervie.

<sup>1</sup> Edinburgh Courant, 3rd May 1766: 'Wednesday last the lady of Sir William Nicolson of Glenbervie was safely delivered of a daughter. What is very singular, Sir William is at present ninety-two years of age and has a daughter alive of his first marriage aged sixty-six. He married his present lady when he was eighty-two, by whom he has now had six children.' Sir William died 6th June 1766, in the ninety-third year of his age.

<sup>2</sup> She succeeded her brother Sir James in 1782. Her third marriage was in April 1803.

<sup>3</sup> Like some other families the Melvilles profess descent from Hungarian retainers of Margaret, the queen of Malcolm III. Three brothers, so the story goes, found their way to Scotland. 'The eldest brother was Lord Maluill of that ilk. The second brother got the lands and leving of Raith. The third brother got the lands of Glenbarve in the Mernis, out of the which is cum the hoves of Dysert in Angus and the Maluils thereof' (The Melvilles, by Sir William Fraser, i. 24). But apart from this legend the name is found in the Mearns from the middle of the twelfth century, and the Melvilles probably acquired Glenbervie about that time and continued to possess it for several generations. On 6th April 1365-6 David II. confirmed a charter of Legwyn and other lands granted in her widowhood by Cristiana de Mala Villa domina de Glenbervie to John de Mala Villa consanguineo suo, whom failing to Alexander his brother,

The 3rd daughter married Sir John Graham and got the lands of Garvock. It has been said he was laird of Fiddes and married the eldest daughter and got the Estate of Arbuthnott.

Melvil of Glenbervie was Sheriff of the Mearns about 1400. He was so oppressive that the county gentlemen complained of him to the King who having said, apparently without reckoning his words would be taken seriously, they might boil him and drink the broe, they invited him to a hunting party where a cauldron was prepared in a situation appearing to the Sheriff on observing the smoke to be the haunt of thieves and coming along with him plunged him in and tasted the broe. Letters of fire and sword were issued against the authors who were much distressed until a general pardon was obtained. The laird of Arbuthnott as being within the ninth degree of Macduff Earl of Fife<sup>1</sup> had obtained his pardon before the others.

from which it would seem that she was an heiress and probably married to a cousin. Little seems to be known about John Melville the 'Sheriff,' apart from his unpleasant fate. From the dates his successor was probably Alexander Melville who left two daughters: Elizabeth, married to Sir John Auchinleck of that ilk, and Egidia, married to his younger brother James.

<sup>1</sup> According to tradition, any one who killed a man, if he were within nine degrees of kindred to Macduff who restored Malcolm III. to the Scottish throne, had this privilege—he was entitled to betake himself to Macduff's Cross near Newburgh in Fife and there claim that on payment of a certain penalty he should be free from all other punishment. See Wyntoun, Book vi. cap. 19. There is, however, so much mystery about this whole matter that the following passage from the Family History written by Principal Arbuthnott about 1580, is of interest:—'Also yir Confederattis willing to arme yaim selfis nocht onlie be force but be law also, seing Hew and mony of yaim war sib to Makduff Earll of Fyffe the trustie freind of King Malcolme Canmor thair tak yaim to ye privilege of ye Clane of Makduff quhilk was on yis maner that all yai of ye Clane of Makduff suld haif no judge in ony actioun except treasonne but ye Earll of Fyff allanerlie ye cheife of yat clane and y<sup>t</sup> it suld be leisume to yaim of y<sup>t</sup> kynd to appeill ay home to yair anin clane. Unfortunately the document is no longer to be found in the 'cofferis of Arbuthnot.' But it was extant in the time of Sir George Mackenzie, who says (Genealogical Collections, Adv. Bib. MSS., 34.6.8):—'In anno 1421 Hugh Arbuthnot with the rest of the gentlemen in the Mearnes who had been accessory to the slaughter of John the Melvin off Glenbervie were receased to the Lacht or girth of Clan M'Duff as being within the 9th degree of kin to M'Duff Earle of Fyffe by Johnston Stewart of Fyffe, as a testificat under his hand, quhairunto his seall is appended, of the date at Falkland the first day of September 1421, which I have sein, beareth.' And according to the minister of Garvock, writing in 1835 (New Statistical Account, xi. p. 35), 'The pardon is still extant in Arbuthnott House.'

A copie of the testificat itself is preserved in another MS. volume in the Advocates' Library (31.6.15) which belonged to Sir John Lauder, Lord Fountainhall. The transcriber, it will be seen, has added within brackets certain observations of his own. Though printed by Mr. Maidment, it has been thought well to give it here:—

pit dug for holding it, it being recollected that in letting fall a stone the sound was similar to what is occasioned by striking a large kettle with a piece of wood.

The Melvil left an only daughter who married the 2nd son of the family of Auchinleck of Auchinleck in Ayrshire.<sup>1</sup> According to tradition the only son of a poor woman on being put into his grave (sup<sup>d</sup> in Glenbervie Churchyard) was heard to cry and having been taken from the coffin and the circumstances being mentioned to the Laird whose residence was near at hand, he in consequence of an idea which then prevailed that he would have lost his land by the recovery of the person slew him with the spade he had for that purpose snatched from the hand of the Grave digger and then tossed him into the grave and covered him with mould himself. The mother of the person used her utmost entreaties with the Laird to desist from his purpose—but in vain.

Tradition further states that the woman having gone to the gate of Glenbervie prayed on her bare knees that no laird of Glenbervie might ever have a son to succeed him in the property, and that the perpetrator of the above deed might never rot neither above nor below ground. And it is even said that about 80 years ago, the Grave digger discovered a body in the family burial ground as fresh as if newly buried. And it is well known that the lairds of Glenbervie have as yet failed to have heirs male of their own bodies to succeed them.

Sir W<sup>m</sup> Nicolson purchased the property of Glenbervie from two heiresses who were married, the one to a Mr.

<sup>1</sup> Sir John and Elizabeth had a son James, who in 1480 married Egidia Ross of Hawkhead, and had by her a daughter Elizabeth. She was married to William Douglas, second son of Archibald, 5th Earl of Angus—Bell the Cat—who with her acquired Glenbervie circa 1500. Their grandson William Douglas became 9th Earl of Angus in 1588, and Glenbervie passed to his younger son Robert, with whose descendants it remained till 1673, when it was sold to Robert Burnett, brother of Sir Alexander Burnett of Leys. His son Thomas married Agnes, daughter of Robert Burnett of Cowtown, and died 1712 leaving a son Thomas who died soon after his father, and a daughter Katharine who married George Gordon of Buckie. By this Katharine Burnett Glenbervie was in 1723 sold to Sir William Nicolson, who married, as his second wife, her mother Agnes Burnett.

Burnett, a branch of the house of Leys and the other a Mr. Gordon of Buckie.

Sir Al. Falconer of Glenfarquhar<sup>1</sup> one of the most worthy of men used when speaking of Earl of Marischall to call him his good and great brother, and on the other hand Earl Marischall called Sir Alexander his good and worthy cousin.

Glenfarquhar used to vie with others in having good ale which he called his Glenfarquhar wine and in general treated his friends with it except that when Earl Marishal visited he would have said to his lady 'Indeed my dear hinny I must go to France this day,' and he generally met the Earl in his chariot at the water of Bervie. It seems Sir Alexander's lady was rather jealous of him and on one occasion when in their carriage on the way to Glenbervie a well favoured widow who occupied a small pendicle from the knight and wished some assistance of horse work to labour it, accosted him by saying in the customary way of the country on such occasions 'Sir Alexander I mun hae a yocking from you the morn. Troth Sir Alex<sup>r</sup> I 'm nae jocking I am in a strait for a yocking.' The lady on this occasion having understood the request quite in a different light from the true one matters came to such a length twixt the knight and her that when near Glenbervie the carriage returned to Glenfarquhar and a separation was likely to take place until Earl Marishal when in company with them so managed matters in explaining the trouble he had in giving yokings to poor widows who held pendicles under him that her ladyship rested satisfied the widow who accosted the knight meant nothing bad.

<sup>1</sup> David Falconer, second son of Sir Alexander Falconer of Halkerton, acquired Glenfarquhar in 1630. His eldest son Alexander was created a baronet on 30th March 1670. His second son David Falconer of Newton became Lord President of the Court of Session.

Sir Alexander married as his second wife Helen Graham, daughter of John Graham of Criggie, second son of Sir Robert Graham of Morphie. She was a keen Jacobite. Her will is printed, post, p. 163. Built into the farm steading at Mains of Glenfarquhar is a stone wall with the inscription 'S.A.F. 1674. D.H.G.' (Jervise, Epitaphs, i. 358). On 3rd May 1718 David Falconer of Newton, afterwards 4th Lord Falconer of Halkerton, was served heir-male to Sir Alexander Falconer of Glenfarquhar, his uncle, who died without male issue.

On another occasion her ladyship who was rather of an overbearing disposition and alwise giving trouble to the knight happened to notice the following words chalked on the coach house door.

‘Souple Sandy Falconer and dirten Helen Grahame
God bless the good man and Deil confound the Dame.’

On this she blamed Sir Alexander for keeping people about his hand who would do such tricks. In reply Sir Al. observed—Eh my dear ’tis just the flock of cairds in revenge for scolding them the other day and being set off without a drink. It soon was discovered that Jockie the herd had written the lines; and tho’ the Laird found it necessary to set him off from Glenfarquhar he was rather pleased to see some appearance of a poetical turn in the boy and allowed his parents the expense of giving him education after which he became a schoolmaster.

When country people at times applied to Glenfarquhar to be umpire or give them advice in disputes he uniformly dissuaded them from going to law, observing the lawyers would soon eat them and the matter in dispute too and always adding, what afterwards became a sort of byword ‘Quietness is best.’ I would advise you both to take Lord Forglen’s Interlocutor ‘Take a pint an gree.’

The great market called Paldy fair<sup>1</sup> was first instituted by Sir Alexander. Previous to this another market stood in the lands of Dillavaird on the opposite side of the water of Bervie, and as Sir Alexander was anxious that the preference should be given to his market he on one occasion invited Earl Marishal and about 40 noblemen and gentlemen to dine in a tent prepared in the market. After which Glenfarquhar people went with colours flying and drums beating to the water of Bervie when the people from the other market cut the drums.

<sup>1</sup> There is much controversy as to the identity of the saint from whom this fair derives its name. According to some he was Palladius, an ecclesiastic whom Pope Celestine sent on a mission to the Irish who declined to receive him, and who is one of the personalities who are combined in the traditional St. Patrick. According to the Rev. Archibald Black Scott (The Pictish Nation, etc.), his name was Paldoc or Paldy. He was a Pict, and one of St. Ninian’s early followers; and from living to a great age is sometimes known as Paul Hên—i.e. Paul the aged. He founded a church at Fordoun and is buried there. As to Paldy Fair, vide post, pp. 114 et seq.

On this Glenfarquhar's men were about to proceed to take revenge until he made use of his customary saying 'Quietness is best.' However a law plea took place on the occasion of this fray and some disputed links of ground adjoining to the River which in the end occasioned the proprietor of Dillavaid to sell his property and which Sir Alexander purchased.

Sir Alexander intrusted his Butler to always give dinner and drink to any person having occasion to call at Glenfarquhar from his own lands and expressed his happiness on seeing them going away tipsy and apparently merry.

When his tenants paid their rents they were always asked without distinction to dine with Glenfarquhar. After dinner he presented them with fruit and sweetmeats so as they might take a part home to their wives and children and on drinking a few glasses with them and giving a sort of blessing and good advice left them to make merry in their own homely way.

When any tenant could not hold a large farm Sir Alexander gave him a less and if he could not hold it he gave one still less and if he could not hold it he got a house and yard in the Muir of Auchinblae with 6 bolls of meal 6 firlots of malt and a cow grazed in the parks of Glenfarquhar. His usual saying on such occasions was 'God forbid that any old tenant of mine shall be brought to beg his bread or suffer thirst.'

At any time it became necessary to roup a tenant's stocking he instructed his ground officer not to enter the house and to be sure to leave a stocking to buy a cow etc.

Sir Alexander not having heirs of his own body was much grieved to know that his Estate would in consequence of an Entail made by his father go to the Halkerton family. Had there been no entail it is reckoned he would have left part of his property to Earl Marishal and part to Rob<sup>t</sup> Vis: of Arbuthnott. He lies buried at Kirk of Fordon and on his Tomb is written (perhaps subsequently to the first inscription) 'Here lies Glennie at his rest until the day of Judgement. Quietness is best.'

Glenfarquhar would not let any of his lands but to Farmers or farmers sons. On one occasion a person from Dee Side called at Glenfarquhar with a view of taking a farm, but having had a hat which at that time was a thing unusual for a farmer to have, he on his lady asking why he had not invited the person to stay dinner, told her he would have nothing to do with any but farmers or farmers sons adding 'Let Soutters be soutter like no hat tenants for me.' He died about 1727 or 1728.

ARBUTHNOT OF FORDON descended of the family of Arbuthnott.<sup>1</sup> It is said that Falconer Lord Phesdo's daughter who married the Laird of Fordon was authoress of the song called The yellow haired Laddie.<sup>2</sup> She was mother to John Viscount of Arbuthnott who succeeded about 1756 and it is believed that the family for the most part have still fair hair.

The first vestige of Drumtoughty house was built by Keith Laird of Craig and Garvock as a hunting seat.

The lands of MIDDLETON or Fettercairn belonged to Colonel Middleton a man of fierce appearance, so much so that on occasion of a band of Cairds or tinkers giving much annoyance in the Country he armed himself and set off to their rendezvous in tippling houses accompanied by his servant when all of them 16 in number, altho' partly armed with pistols, submitted to let their hands be tied behind their backs and conducted to Stonehaven jail. He had begot a child on a daughter of Lindsay of Edzell<sup>3</sup> which occasioned her Brother who was in Germany to be sent for to challenge the Collonel, but this he declined on seeing him.

J. N. has seen a son of one of his sisters a schoolmaster a very fierce looking grim fellow.

RAMSAY OF BALMAIN

A respectable family. J. N. has seen Sir Al. Ramsay of Balmain walking on the green of Arbuthnot with the Viscount in 1765 a graceful looking gent<sup>m</sup>. He was preses of the Scotch Freeholders who met at Ed<sup>n</sup> that year relative to a proposed alteration in the election of members of Parl<sup>t</sup>. He was elected member for Kincardineshire after the death of Sir J. Carnegie of Pittarrow. The last laird of Allardice had not conformed to Government until the day of the election, he was taken ill before leaving the Court, rode home without being able to stay dinner and died about a month afterwards.

Sir Alexander<sup>1</sup> was succeeded by his nephew Sir Al. Burnett who took the name of Ramsay and who was father to the present Sir Al. Ramsay who supports the dignity and family of his ancestors.

THE HALKERTON FAMILY OF THE FALCONERS

By tradition in the time of William the Lion who dwelt some time at the Castle of Kinneff his Fowler was laird of Lumgair and his son having married the heiress of Luther and succeeded by her to the lands on Luther side—the lands were called Halkerton in like manner as his ancestors from holding a similar office were called Falconer.

One of the family having been appointed a Lord of Session was so partial that the Country Gentlemen complained of him to Government and having been ordered to attend the Privy Council to answer the charges brought against him he died at York on his way to London. The story of 'Halkerton's Cow' is proverbial in the Country when people observe that any representation is directly contrary to the truth.

<sup>1</sup> Sir Alexander Ramsay, 6th Baronet, died 1806, when the title destined to heirs-male whomsoever was assumed by a distant cousin. He was succeeded in his estates by Alexander Burnett, the second son of his sister Catherine by Sir Thomas Burnett of Leys. This Alexander Burnett assumed the name of Ramsay and was created a baronet on 13th May 1806. He died in 1810, leaving with other issue Edward Bannerman Ramsay—the well-known Dean of Edinburgh.

It seems that according to the story a Poor man having had some cattle grazing in a field adjoining to a Park in which his Lordship's cows pastured one of the poor man's oxen leaped the fence and killed a cow. A boy on seeing what had occurred ran to tell the poor man what had happened but in giving the account had by some inaccuracy made the man believe that the reverse was the case. In consequence of which the man went and informed his Lordship that one of his Lordship's cows had killed one of his oxen. On this his Lordship decided the matter to be accidental and that the poor man behoved to sustain the loss. But on being afterwards told how the matter exactly stood he then decided against the poor man by finding out a distinction between cattle getting into and out of an enclosure and so subjecting him in the full value of the cow and expenses.

By tradition either the Proprietor of Halkerton or the Tenants of Mains of Halkerton have had a taint of insanity since the heir of Halkerton killed the Miller's son in a scuffle, when as an expedient to free the Heir of punishment, it was proved chiefly by the evidence of the tenant of the Mains who perjured himself, that the heir was insane.

Lord Alex<sup>r</sup> Falconer of Halkerton and the late Laird of Allardice made the tour of Europe together. J. N. saw them set off for Aberdeen in 1751 in a coach drawn by 6 black mares to take ship there. They returned about 1754.

Lord Alex<sup>r</sup> was succeeded by his brother Lord William who paid Alexander's debts tho' the estate was entailed and no legal claim consequently [lay] against him. J. N. saw Anthony Earl of Kintore Lord Halkerton and the late and present Lord—in all 6. Lord Alexander is said to have left Inglesmaldie<sup>1</sup> one winter and to have resided at Ed<sup>n</sup> owing to the Peats having from the wetness of the season been unfit for fuel. (It would not surely have required much art to make a kiln capable of drying them.)

ARBUTHNOTT OF ARBUTHNOTT

There are sundry traditions respecting the rise of this Family.<sup>2</sup> One is that a certain Chieftain having affronted the Queen, her Majesty could not get any person of note to challenge him until a Danish Lord undertook to do so; and having slain him was rewarded by the King on the application of the Queen according to a song made on the occasion with 'Bonnie Arbuttle lying low down by the sea.'<sup>3</sup> A lady of Arbuthnott on hearing the song from an old woman was heard to exclaim 'Pox on the Queen she did not ask twice as much.'

Another tradition is that the Arbuthnot family were at first proprietors of Fiddes and succeeded to Arbuthnot by marrying the eldest daughter of a person of great renown named Oliphant (see another part of this narrative) who had great Estates in Fife Perth and Mearn shires who left the Arbuthnott property to the eldest daughter, the lands of Glenbervie to the 2nd and the lands of Garvock to the 3rd; his Estates in Perthshire having descended to a nephew. And that there is some likelihood in this appears from the similarity of part of the Arbuthnott and Oliphant coats of arms.

<sup>2</sup> From a decision of a General Synod held at Perth in 1206, incorporating the depositions of the witnesses examined, and printed in the Spalding Club Miscellany, vol. v. p. 210, it is proved beyond all doubt that the founder of the family of Aberbothenoth or Arbuthnott was a certain Hugo de Swinton, who acquired the estate about 1150 from Walter Olifard or Oliphant. It is practically certain that this Hugo was the son of Cospatrick de Swinton and a member of the great family of Dunbar or March, and there are good reasons for accepting the tradition that Hugo's mother or wife was an Oliphant.

<sup>3</sup> This song, obviously the ballad of Sir Hugh le Blond, was first printed by Sir Walter Scott in The Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border, having been written down from the recitation of an old woman at Arbuthnott. Whatever truth may be in the story, Arbuthnott was acquired from Walter Oliphant by the great-grandfather of Sir Hugh le Blond, and Fordoun was not acquired till 1608.

J. N. was informed by a David Stephen who died in 1750 aged 90 or rather when a young boy heard him tell J. N.'s father whose house he frequented that his own father was ground officer at Arbuthnott to three lairds and one lord.

The 2nd wife of the 1st Lord was a daughter of Lord Lovat. She was extremely extravagant and oppressive to the tenants and almost occasioned the ruin of the Arbuthnot family. She is still mentioned with disrespect in the country under the appellation given her in her life time from the dress she wore of 'Lady Green gowns.'

When the 2nd Viscount succeeded he had only the Mill and the Mains free. At the suggestion of his cousin Lord Southesk he accompanied him to Dunottar Castle to pay his addresses to Lady Elizabeth daughter of Earl Marischal, when a match was settled on, after which the Earl extricated his Lordship from his difficulties and gave his daughter a peremptory injunction never to wear a green gown and to burn all the green gowns about Arbuthnott. It seems this Viscount's appearance was so inviting that the young lady fell deeply in love with him at first sight, and tho' the Earl saw that his finances were embarrassed, yet he was so pleased with the young man's appearance that he readily agreed to the match. This Viscount from his prudence was termed the Wise Lord. Altho' he had a numerous family to provide for he added to the family Estates the Upper Barony (now sold to Gordon of Avochy).

The Viscount who succeeded in 1756 after placing the family pictures in the order he meant them to be put up desired the person employed to tell him when matters were adjusted for putting them up, on which his Lordship saluted the picture of the Wise Lord observing he would if possible make him his pattern, but in speaking of Lady Green gowns said that had she not been a nobleman's daughter he would have tossed the huzzy's picture over the window. He however only gave the picture a place behind the door.

At same time he stated that she was called a witch by the Country people who said that the Cook and Butler murdered her by stoping her mouth with the dishclout. Report also stated that after Lady Green gowns death the Country people believed she rode in her coach between Arbuthnott and the Lodging in Bervie calling out for 'Reek hens and green lint Will Dick.'

J. N. has heard old people speak of an And<sup>w</sup> Arbuthnot of the family of Arbuthnott<sup>1</sup> who bought the lands of Arrat on the north side of Southesk about 3 miles below Brechin and has seen the Arbuthnot arms in the house of Arrat. The Mill lead of Arrat Mill was cut in one night by the tenants and servants from the Estate of Arbuthnot, owing to some dispute with the family of Southesk; and it would appear that as the Mill was set to work next morning the law so stood that the water could not be afterwards kept from it.

Lord John who succeeded his elder brother Robert and who died in 1756 was the biggest man J. N. ever saw. His mother<sup>2</sup> was of the house of Sutherland of huge stature. Robert died at Bath in 1710 where he is buried and [a] stately monument erected to his memory. This Rob<sup>t</sup> Arbuthnott Marshal Keith and Alex<sup>r</sup> Arbuthnott of Catterline were once seen walking together at Fetteresso by David Barclay who never saw three such people together for figure and stature.

Lord John having been a stiff Jacobite set out a company of men to join King James at Sheriffmuir but his factor a Rob<sup>t</sup> Thomson having taken the blame on himself the Estate was secured from forfeiture.

Mr. Thomson was afterwards recalled to the Viscount's service when the state of affairs admitted of this being done, and his son who succeeded him in the Viscount's employ was also factor for L<sup>d</sup> Halkerton and Sir Al.

Ramsay as well as Sheriff of the County but died a young man. His sister resided at Cortachy aided by the Airly and Arbuthnott families.

After Sheriffmuir Viscount Arbuthnot had a Chapel of his own, but after Culloiden the articles in it were taken out and burnt at the suggestion as was reckoned of John Young then Sheriff of the County.

At this time the Viscount ran some risk of a forfeiture. A tenant of the name of Morgan who occupied one of his best farms had given such information to Young the Sheriff that he was promised his farm in property if he could procure another person to join with him in giving testimony. This he attempted but without success, the tenants to whom he applied spurning at his proposals.

After a toleration was granted for Chapels the Viscount again fitted up one, and J. N. has often seen him walking to it in great state, his dependants walking uncovered even in rainy weather. His Lordship was a man of strict honour and very religious, but not otherwise possessed of great mental endowments. Tenants and others in conversing with him used to always stand uncovered. J. N. once saw Lord Halkerton walking arm and arm with his Lordship when the servants observed his Lordship had got a Brother.

The Grandfather of the present Mr. Barclay of Ury was observed not to lift his hat on once introducing himself but merely gave his hand. After he retired L<sup>d</sup> A. observed he was scarce a Christian (alluding perhaps to his being a Quaker). Lord A. was very much given to change his servants except a John Wilson who outlived him. Altho' his Lordship was always offended with any of his servants lying or being seen drunk, yet this man had the art of making him believe what he chose and got drunk almost daily. At times when he knew his Lordship to be listening he prayed in the stable, not omitting to name his Lordship etc., and one occasion after his Lordship had heard him and returned to some friends in his house, he observed that tho' Wilson attended his Chapel and the ordinances yet he suspected him from his low grovelling manner to be a Whigg at bottom, tho' he was certain of his not being a rebell, and he knew he loved his Lordship as he gave Morgan (before ment<sup>d</sup>) a cudgelling and some times used very opprobrious epithets which Morgan deserved. The son of this Morgan in getting a new lease from the Rich Viscount contrived by giving a scroll of the lease himself to a man of business to extend to make an agreed on additional rent only appear as a grassum and to be only payable for the first year. But in a reduction being brought the lease was set aside, and so much was the Viscounts integrity known that Lords Gardenstone and Monboddo on the first appearance of the action expressed themselves as clear that something was wrong when Lord A. was prosecuting a tenant.<sup>1</sup>

The Religious Lord had several differences with his Lady,<sup>2</sup> the last of which occasioned him to separate and live in a separate wing of the house. It happened that his Lordship in conversing with some of his visitors on religious topics often quoted the Apostle Paul, when her Ladyship exclaimed 'Pox on you and the Apostle Paul too. You pay more respect to him than Lady Arbuthnott.' On which his Lordship ordered her out of the room. After his death she spoke of him with respect and regretted she had not bridled her passion observing that 'if any person get to Heaven he certainly will.'

J. N. heard the late Mr. Sharp preach his funeral sermon, from the text 'The righteous perish and no man layeth it to heart' etc., calling him 'an Israelite indeed in whom there was no guile.' Many people shed tears and cried aloud on this occasion.

Some young Probationers having thought fit to place a print of the Pretender as a mark for shooting at, were kept by his Lordship from getting kirks as long as he lived.

The late John Duncan, writer, Stonehaven told J. N. that the Pretender cost the family of Arbuthnott £60,000, which money he Mr. Duncan as agent for the Viscount gave to Mr. Forbes mer<sup>t</sup> Ab<sup>n</sup> who remitted same to Hamburgh. Perhaps others had contributed.

ARBUTHNOTTS OF CATTERLINE were of the Arbuthnott family.<sup>1</sup>

ARBUTHNOTT OF KINGHORNIE

Mr. Al. Arbuthnott Minister of Arbuthnott was proprietor of Kinghornie. He was deposed in the time of King William for not conforming and resided in Kinghornie. Davo was also his property at one time, at another that of Mr. Allardice of Allardice, and was originally granted by Earl Marishall for support of his natural daughter by Lady Mary Graham. Mr. Arbuthnott of Kinghornie had three sons.<sup>2</sup> The first was the famous Dr. John Arbuthnott Physician to Queen Anne and Poet. His second, a Minister of Bervie, a satirist and droll poet who owing to this writing and conduct, was deposed, particularly a satirical poem on a Minister of Arbuthnott (Melvill) of great sanctity who carried on some concern in bleaching and was a sort of guide to the then Vis<sup>t</sup> of Arbuthnott in his devotions.

<sup>2</sup> There are several mistakes here. The Rev. Alexander Arbuthnott was twice married. By his first wife Margaret Lammie he left three sons: Dr. John, Robert the well-known Jacobite banker in France, and George an East India merchant. By his second wife Catherine Ochterlony he had one son George. The disreputable minister of Bervie was not his son, but, as appears from his will, the brother of Robert Arbuthnott, bailie of Montrose.

J. N. only recollects a line or two of the Poem to this purport.

'O' he was a fine heavenly teacher and a fine linen bleacher as ever was seen,
Well could he open women's cases and solve their doubts in secret places as clean's a bean.'

In riding to Glenbervie on a Sunday to preach in room of a Minister who was that day assisting at the Sacrament in another Parish but who was very ill attended in his own parish, he had taken a couple of dogs with him who hunted in their way to and from Glenbervie, and on being asked by one of the Parishioners his reason for bringing the dogs replied—As it is probable the parishioners may not attend sermon how can I without the dogs being present address my hearers.

This circumstance bore hard against the parson and tended greatly to depose him. After his deposition he lived at Montrose on a small annuity and occasionally amused the dissolute Beaux with smutty Sermons. He died on a Sunday he should have appeared in Church to make oath on a woman alledging him to be the father of her child. He composed a few poems relative to David Bruce landing at Kinghornie—erecting a Chapel—endowing High Mass to be sung etc. and his mode of being entertained one of the lines of which poem J. N. recollects was to this effect in speaking of his entertainer 'He roasted a hen to him with strea and gave him a dram out of a paiten tea.'

Sir W<sup>m</sup> Nicolson of Glenbervie said to be descended from the Nicolsons of Laswade<sup>1</sup> first purchased Mergie and afterwards sold it and purchased Glenbervie from the husbands of the heiresses of Mr. Douglas.

In 1746 he was very zealous for Government, while his Lady was as much so for the Pretender. Lord Ancrum on his way to Culloden sent two dragoons to Glenbervie intimating to Sir W<sup>m</sup> his relative<sup>2</sup> that he intended to call there on his return. The appearance of the Dragoons at first much alarmed Sir W<sup>m</sup> who reckoned the language his lady was in the practice of uttering had brought him into a scrape. But after their departure she still adhered to her resolution of making their son (then about 18 years of age) join Earl Marishal on his coming over.

After Lord Ancrum had returned from Culloden to Glenbervie, where he staid three days and nights, happening to talk of the manner the rebel scoundrels were tumbled in heaps, Lady N. observed with a sigh she hoped their souls were safe. On this Lord A. said I w<sup>d</sup> not give the soul of my horse in the stable for the souls of all the rebels in the Nation. In a few minutes her Ladyship retired to her bedroom lamenting in the presence of her maid for her Prince in some such words as 'Oh! my Royal hereditary King what will become of him?'

Sir W<sup>m</sup> had a practice of keeping a candle burning in his Bedroom at night, observing that a house was never known to be robbed if light was noticed in it. But the country people rather concluded that Sir W<sup>m</sup> had been guilty of some crime which made him afraid to sleep in the dark.

John Young the Sheriff before ment<sup>d</sup> had lodged with Lord Ancrum an information against Sir Al. Bannerman of Elsick as to his connection in the rebellion. But on conversing with Sir W<sup>m</sup> Nicolson he resolved to rather interfere in his favour, observing that Young had lodged information rather from self-interested than Loyal motives. It would appear that Sir Al. was related [to] L<sup>d</sup> Ancrum.

<sup>1</sup> There were several families of the name who all originated in Aberdeen and attained to considerable eminence, e.g. Lasswade, Carnock, Tillicoultry, and Glenbervie. Sir William was the second son of Sir George Nicolson of Cluny, etc., who as Lord of Session was known as Lord Kemnay, and he succeeded his brother Sir Thomas in 1728.

Sir W<sup>m</sup> lived to a great age and looked fresh coloured to the last. It was reckoned by some people that he painted himself. His son Sir James being without issue when the old man was about 85 years of age he married a young Lady of about 18 daughter of Mr. Milne laird of Dysart who had five children to him.

KAIR. Sibbald<sup>1</sup> was anciently the family name of the Proprietors of this Estate. The name of the present Proprietor is G. Farquhar Kinloch descended from a person of the name of Kinloch who fought at Bothwell briggs. This person settled on the property of Halkerton where his son after taking a larger farm than the father occupied was appointed factor on the Estate.

He was so economical as to send straw and oats to Montrose for the use of his horse when he went there to receive the farm victual of the Estate, and by taking bread and cheese with him in his pocket, only put himself to about 1<sup>d</sup> for beer each journey.

He was so attentive to see all his animals fed particularly in time of storm that he made a trough be filled with pease for his pigeons hens ducks etc.

The present proprietors mother seems to have been a daughter of Kinloch and his father's name Farquhar.

REDMIRE AND CASTLETON

An heiress of this property having married and soon after become a widow, William Stewart of Inchbrakie who happened to accompany her to bring her first husbands

<sup>1</sup> The Sibbalds were a very old family in the Mearns, appearing in the Registrum de Aberbrothoc as early as 1203. The celebrated Missale de Arbuthnott was the work of James Sybbald, vicar of Arbuthnott in the end of the fifteenth century. The estate of Kair passed in 1683 to an heiress, who married Guthrie of Halkerton. See also post, p. 90.

corps to the place of interment from the River Dee where he accidentally was drowned paid his addresses to the widow and married her a few weeks afterwards.

This William Stewart (or Stuart) being related to the Royal family of Stuart was very inquisitive as to the pedigree of those bearing that name, and generally on finding them to be what he term hill-run Stuarts or such as had assumed the name in consequence of being concerned in crimes which would have brought them to the gallows applied his horse whip to them without ceremony.

Both this Mr. Stuart and his son Dr. John Stuart an eminent physician were very bad husbands. The Doctor's first wife hanged herself and the second was under the necessity of separating from him.

A brother of the Doctor's accompanied the Pretender in 1746.<sup>1</sup> About 1760 he paid a visit to his native country and then wore a star or bage which some reckoned the insignia of St. Lewis, others reckoned it was given by the pretender.

Dr. John Stuart was succeeded by his son Dr. Dav. Stuart who sold the property of Inchbreckie to his brother John Stuart Professor in Marishall Colledge, Ab<sup>d</sup>.

Dr. David Stuart's children sold Redmire to Ja<sup>s</sup> Allardice. Castleton was sold to a Mr. Forbes.

BURNETT OF MONBODDO<sup>2</sup>

Said to be descended of Burnett of Craigmilie who married the heiress of it named Irvine descended from the 2nd son of Irvine of Drum. The late Lord Monboddo's father was a strict Jacobite. 25 men were sent out to join the Pretender under the charge of his gardener Ja<sup>s</sup> Haig who took the blame on himself. This man was kept for some time in prison but after relieved by the Act of

<sup>1</sup> James Stuart, second son of William Stuart of Inchbreck, was a captain in Lord Ogilvie's regiment. His Day-book, containing the army orders, is printed in the first volume of the Spalding Club Miscellany. After Culloden 'he entered the French service, where he was created a Knight of the Order of Merit, and died at St. Omer in 1776.'

Indemnity and both he and his family were afterwards attended to and respected by the family of Monboddo.

OGILVY OF BARRAS

The genealogy of this family published by the Knight was challenged about 1702 by the Earl of Kintore and having been found false the Knight was fined in £200 scots and the genealogy burnt by the hangman at the Market Cross of Ed<sup>n</sup>.

The genealogy given by Dav. Barclay before met<sup>d</sup> relative to that family is as follows. His father was born in 1603 and remembered well the first of the Ogilvies of Barras coming to Dunottar Castle.

The kitchen peat driver was loading his barrow on the brae when a stout beggar boy wished to get himself introduced to the Castle. The boy having taken hold of the barrow was proceeding with him when the Countess noticed him and enquired his name, and being informed it was Willie Ogilvy, she, being of the Airly family of Ogilvies, patronised him, sent him to school and advanced him by degrees until he obtained the lands of Lumgair<sup>1</sup> in wadset from the Earl and was entrusted as Governor of the Castle.

What is said about Ogilvy preserving the Regalia is reckoned false. It was the Earl's Brother who removed it by getting a Crawton boat on a dark night to receive it from the Sally port.

About 1767 Lord Ogilvy being allowed to come home after the rebellion, Sir William Ogilvy introduced himself to him at Mill of Stonehaven as he was passing northwards to visit his friends and having got his promise to call at Barras on his return made great preparations for his reception. By the time he returned however he had got the genealogy of the Barras family above recited and on Sir W<sup>m</sup> again introducing himself he was accosted in language which he conceived so insulting as to call on his man of business for the purpose of getting pen ink and paper to write a challenge but was dissuaded by the man of business who represented L<sup>d</sup> Ogilvy as a madman.

<sup>1</sup> William Ogilvy, who got a wadset of Lumgair, is said to have been a younger son of Ogilvy of Balnagarro. For information regarding this family and the controversy about the defence of Dunottar, vide Nisbet, Heraldry, ii. p. 221; Papers relative to the Regalia of Scotland, Bannatyne Club; Papers relative to the Preservation of the Honours of Scotland in Dunottar Castle 1651-52, Scottish History Society, 1st Series, vol. xxvi. p. 99; and In Defence of the Regalia, by the Rev. D. G. Barron.

BARCLAY OF URY pretends to be descended of Barclay of Mathers. But from particulars given in Mr. Napier's narrative this seems doubtful.<sup>1</sup> It there appears rather the family are descended from a Leith merch<sup>t</sup> and of his son who fought in the protestant wars with (perhaps under) Gustavus Adolphus King of Sweden.

MEMOIR OF THE IRVINES OF MONBODDO <sup>2</sup>

'IRVINE of Kincoussie' was a Cadet of the Ancient Family of Bonshaw in Ayrshire. The late Macfarlane, a great Antiquary, told my father that one of their Ancestors, as appears from the peculiarity of their Cypher, had been among the Crusaders attending King Richard <sup>1</sup> It is unfortunate that these particulars are not included in Mr. Walker's excerpts! A short sketch of the history of the family is printed post, p. 92.

<sup>2</sup> The writer of this Memoir is understood to be Helen Burnett, the elder daughter of the well-known Judge, Lord Monboddo. She was married to Kirkpatrick Williamson, succeeded to Monboddo on her father's death in 1799, and died in 1833. It is an interesting circumstance that the neighbouring families, the Irvines of Drum and the Burnetts of Leys—both from the south of Scotland—were established by Robert I. in the possessions which their descendants still hold. Further information regarding them may be found in The Irvines of Drum (Aberdeen, 1909), and The Family of Burnett of Leys (New Spalding Club, 1901). The former book illustrates the desirability of documents being read before they are published. Facing p. 20 is the photograph of an ancient writ described as 'Charter of Drum Royal Forest to William de Irwin 1322-23.' It is, however, in reality a charter by Robert I. to Thomas de Carnoto of an annual rent of ten merks from the lands of Ures! For the Charter of Drum by Robert I. to William de Irewyn, recourse must be had to The Book of the Irvings, by Col. Irving of Bonshaw, generally regarded as the chief of the name, where it is reproduced in facsimile to face p. 94.

Cour de Lion and perhaps with Byron's forefather 'John of Horstain' beneath the Walls of Palestine slumbers. Mr. Irvine married Jean Collyson, Daughter of Thomas Collyson of Achlunes, who bore him two sons John and Thomas called black batts. A notable esprit, no doubt in his day, tho' none of his exploits have descended to our Day. He married Janet Wishart of Pittarow, by whom He had a son named Robert, who went to Germany to his Mother's Brother Captain Wishart, and rose to the command of a Troop of Horse. Successfull also in the pecuniary fruits of His Services, He was enabled to look out for a settlement, when He should incline to retire to his native Country—for which pur[pose] He seems to have employed Mr. Thomas Lindsay Writer in Edinburgh. On the wreck of the Strachan Family, Monboddo came into the hands of the Wisharts, who soon fell in their turn, and were succeeded at Pittarow by Sir John Carnegie Bart. married to Capt. Irvines sister, which naturally suggested the Purchase of Monboddo to Mr. Lindsay along with Culbacks, Drumsleed, Den Mill and Abbeytoun or Abotstoun—which belonged originally to Kair but given in marriage with their Daughter Miss Eva Sibbald to the Laird of Mondynes, and being settled on Herself was piously bequeathed to the Abbeyacy of Arbroath, and restored at the Reformation on a Few duty of 15s. Sterling which I pay yearly to the Minister of Lethnot—Drumsleed and Den Mill were bought from Glenfarquhar. On the Brae near Gilberts Hill was the remains of an ancient Castle, and on the hight was held the Market of Pady fair—which Sir David Falconer reserved, transferring the Stance to a part of His domains about a mile to the north of His house, where it continues every July according to the original charter. This Sale was effected finally in 1629 and in 1630 Capt. Irvine was duely infeted at Edinburgh—while he was distinguishing Himself on several occasions, particularly the Battle of Lutzen 6 December 1632 where His Royal and brave Commander Gustavous Adolphus perished—after which with many others, He became disgusted with Count Horn, Sold his Commission and took possession of Monboddo in the following year—where in 1635, He built the Manor Place as it is called in the old Writ—upon the site of an older Building—according to the fashion He had seen in Flanders with 2 small Turrets—Garden in front to the south, and wood and Orchards to the North and East. He married Elizabeth Douglas eldest Daughter of Sir William Douglas<sup>1</sup> of Glenbervie Bart. 2nd Son of Archibald Earl of Angus the 11th in the direct Male Line of the Douglas's. Sir William had acquired great property by His Lady Elizabeth Achenfleck of Balmano—His 2nd Daughter married Sir Thomas Burnett of Leys, Bart. and his 3rd and youngest Daughter married William Rait of Halgreen. Captain Irvine's Lady bore him 2 Sons and 3 Daughters—the eldest of these Margaret, married Sir David Falconer of Glenfarquhar and died in child bed of a Daughter, Elizabeth, married to Sir Charles Ramsay of Balmain Bart. from whom the late family were descended—Lady Falconer was much celebrated for Her beauty—'that resplendent fairness,' as Rousseau calls it, recorded in the following doggeril :—

'From Monboddo there flew a Swan
And lighted on Glenfarquhar—
She laid an egg, and then she died,
And that was all her laughter.'

From which we may infer, that to Helen's 'Milk white arms' She had united the Supple limbs of Atalanta—His 2nd Daughter Elizabeth married James Burnett of Lagavin Grand Son to Sir Thomas Burnett Kt. of Craigmyle and consequently the Heir Male of that Estate, tho' the Court of Session found otherwise—in my father's opinion most unjustly. The 3rd Daughter Jean married Mr. Robert Irvine of Cults—and appears to have died without issue. Captain Irvine died in 1652 aged 80 and from His <sup>1</sup> Sir Robert Douglas, fourth son of William Douglas of Glenbervie, who became 9th Earl of Angus in 1588. According to Sir Robert Douglas, Baronage, p. 19, the eldest daughter was Margaret, married to Burnett of Leys; the second, Jean, married to Rait of Halgreen; and the youngest, Elizabeth, married to Irvine of Monboddo.

connection with Glenfarquhar, Affection for His Daughter, or agreement in the bargain of Drumsleed was interred in their burial Place in St. Paladius Chapel in a handsome Stone Tomb with a Latin inscription commemorative of His Virtues and His Bravery :—

‘ Conjuge progenie felix virtutis honestae.
Cultor et antiquis exoriundus avis—
Hoc cubat Irvinus monumento Caetera norunt
Musa et vitiferis Sequana Claris Aquis.’

He had been a man of powerful frame and large stature, as is evident by his suit of Armour still preserved at Monboddo. His Lady survived Him some years and was laid by His side in the Tomb—where I can remember seeing their tall skeletons when the chapel was first arranged for a temporary place of Worship and on the last purpose of this kind it was utterly dismantled to make room for a Stair to the Gallery—and the stones cased up outside the Wall. His eldest Son Robert lived unmarried and continued, as the old writs express it, ‘Sometime of Monboddo,’ but an indefinite sort of transaction seems to have been adjusted between Him and his Brother Alexander (to whom the Captain had left Abbeytoun for a portion) who is now also styled ‘Sometime of Monboddo’ probably upon the latter taking to Himself a Wife. (His Mother confirmed it in 1655, and on her death in 1655 His Brother renewed the gift which was likely the old Ladies Dowery.) In May 1670 a final sale of the whole was concluded with their Brother in law Lawgaven ‘always with the consent of Sir David Falconer,’ and the price divided among the Heirs. But I find the reading of the old writings so difficult that I am unable to discover what either Irvine or Burnett paid for the property to which the latter entered into possession at Whitsunday in that year paying so much, and giving a bond for the remainder bearing Interest. Alexander Irvine and His Wife died at an early age, leaving 1 Son Alexander and 2 Daughters Margaret and Elizabeth. In 1686, 4th of October, we find their Uncle Robert, apparently from his altered signature in a dying condition, executing an Assignation of the above Bond in their favour—as ‘granted by Lawgaven, in the Hall of Monboddo at 12 o’clock noon 6th June 1682, for twa thousand Merks Scotts money balance then due of the price of the Lands of Monboddo, Sold by me (Robert Irvine) and my Brother Alexander now deceast—also a Legacy of 248 pounds 13 shillings 5 pennies Scotts bequeathed to me by my late Mother Dame Elizabeth Douglas, as the amount of some gear or plenishing in Life Rent, and my Brother Alexander in fee—with consent of Sir David Falconer etc. etc. writtein at Glenfarquhar and witnessed by His Nephew Sir Charles Ramsay of Balmain—Robert Irvine of Cults—Robert Irvine Parson of Glenbervie’ etc. etc. He had however recovered from this illness, for on the 4th of April 1691 there is a formal corroboration at Stonehaven ‘in presence of Master James Keith of Augharask and Caldame, Sheriff Depute of Kincardinshire sitting in Judgment’ etc., meantime J. Burnett seems to have thriven wonderfully by His removal to Monboddo extending His wings to Kair Whitefield Sillyflatt Halgreen, Johnshavin and Balandra. Kair He bought in 1685 from Harry Guthrie and his Spouse Elspet Sibbald the Heiress of that Land: the others He acquired by advances of money to his Brother in Law William Rait,<sup>1</sup> a bon vivant of the old School and admirably supported by the Viscount of Arbuthnott, who had a ‘Lodging’ as it was called in Bervie for His winter residence. Between that, the Castle of Halgreen and a certain Public-House in the Borough, their time past merrily, till Mr. Rait’s Creditors lost patience, and broke up the party—They next attacked J. Burnett, as having purchased the lands at an under value; but He gallantly defended Himself, and the Court at Edinburgh found the price paid to be fully fair and adequate—upon which He took out a charter of confirmation, Settling all these new acquisitions upon Himself in Life Rent and His 2nd Son Robert in fee.

His eldest Son Alexander was so remarkable for his personal appearance that on His visiting London He attracted the notice of a Young Painter, who requested the favour of His Portrait to ornament His Studio, promising to send a copy to his Mother, which I have heard my father regret never arrived. In January 1686 He married Margaret Burnett of Leys, 2nd Sister of Sir Thomas Burnett, Knight and Bart. So zealous had Monboddo and His Lady been for this match, that they gave up Monboddo to the Young Couple—not only that, but in the event of the death of Alexander and of His father J. Burnett, the widow was to have Lawgaven for Her Jointure; 'manor place' and farm warranted to produce 14 Chalders of Victual worth 100 Merks Scotts per Chalder and Elizabeth Irvine gave up her provision of 12,000 Merks Scotts, on that property, for which she was remunerated by 700—and twenty Merks yearly from Johnshaven fishings, and the manor place and park of Kair if she should survive Her Husband. The Brides portion was only 8000 Merks Scotts but it seems she was thought a prize of Herself. Their family as recorded in a Leaf of their Bible in a very antiquated hand was 1st Margaret born in 1687, 2nd James born in 1688, 3rd Thomas in 1689—I believe a poshumous child and soon James alone remained the Inheritor of His Father's beauty and eventually the whole possessions of His family. Old Lawgaven after an active and useful Life, died in May 1699 exactly 100 years before His Grandson Lord Monboddo finished his not inglorious course. On this event Margaret Burnett asserts Her claim, and puts Her marriage contract on record at Edinburgh but did not live long to enjoy her 14 Chalders. The Misses Margaret and Elizabeth Irvine's seems to have removed to Edinburgh and also on their Uncle's death assign His Bond aforesaid safely vested in them since the decease of Robert Irvine and their Brother Alexander to Mr. Richard Strachan Writer there, Grandfather to the late George Strachan Keith Esquire, a Relation most likely of their mother's with power to uplift the same and manage it for their behoof. Mr. Robert Burnett, so amply provided, did not long survive his father, but died unmarried about 1700 for in March 1701 His Mother residing at Kair executed a deed of Factory to Her only living child Jean Burnett Lady Carnegie of Pittarow 'having good experience of Her affection and faithfullness, to receive and grant discharges in her name, and do all that Her age and infirmities required etc. etc. in presence of Dr. Thomas Burnett of Cowton Tutor of Leys residing at Glenbervie (being married to the Dowager) and Tutor Dative to Her Grandson James Burnett now Heritor of all these Lands (viz. Kair etc. etc.). Witnesses Mr. John Arbuthnott of Fordoun Mr. John Carnegie younger of Pitarow and J. Mitchell Servitor to Sir John Carnegie attested by James Irvine Sheriff Clark and Notary Public.' She here styled herself by Her maiden name Elizabeth Irvine and Lady Lawgaven, on which she had been first alimeted is docuted on the back of the Paper.

Doctor Burnett was supposed to take much better care of His own interest than that of His Ward, the first important affair that occurred in His Guardianship was the openings of the succession to Craigmyle, which after much litigation, He treacherously connived with the Female Heirs to gain the cause from the young Laird and by a series of mismanagment paved the way for future embarrassments. On attaining majority Mr. Burnett espoused Elizabeth Forbes only Daughter and at that time only child of Sir William Forbes of Craigivar 3rd of November 1709. He was esteemed the handsomest Man in the Mearns and she a fine woman tall and fair—of good sense and pleasing manners—my father used to say to the late Mrs. Wright of Lawton, 'Why, Mally, considering two such Parents really I think I should have been a little handsomer.' Tho of middle size Monboddo was uncommonly strong and active, a putting stone remained long in a corner of the courtyard as a memorial of his prowess but was unluckily lent to the Tenant<sup>s</sup> of Abbytoun for a Hay Weight and never returned. By this Lady He had 11 Sons and 3 Daughters some of whom died in Infancy, many after they were educated and sent into the world—only 2 lived past 70 and 1 to 87. His attachment to the House of Stuart led Him into the fatal 15. He was wounded and taken prisoner at the Battle of Falkirk—A prisoner in Stirling Castle removed to London for trial, but liberated after long confinement by the intervention of powerful friends particularly the Son of Bishop Burnett His Relation. All this combined to derange his finances and to estrange him from the affections of His good Mother Margaret Rose of Killrauk Lady Dowager Forbes, who had ability to assist Him (but upon her death in 1741 she left her daughter 10,000 merks to be divided as she thought fit among the children). He got involved into Lawsuits with the Heirs of His Tutor, so that His Estates began to melt away. 1st Kair was sold in 1726 to George Kinloch in Achenblay factor to Sir David, or Sir Alexander Falconer. Halgreen, Johnshaven, and Balandro in 1723 to Thomas Fullarton of Gallery Commissioner of Excise and lastly Lawgaven to his eldest surviving son James on His commencing Advocate with the freehold qualification on which He was inrolled. Here I beg leave to conclude this imperfect sketch in abler words than my own :

‘ Veniam pro laude peto
Laudatus abunde
Non fastiditus se tibi lector ero.’

OVID.

CORRECTIONS AND ADDENDA UPON THE MEMOIR

Halgreen, Sillyflatt, Whitefield, Johnshaven, and Balandro were sold for 49,000 pounds Scots Money to Thomas Fullerton of Gallery Commissioner of Excise. Kair was sold in 1726 for 18,313 pounds 17 & 2<sup>d</sup> Scots money to George Kinloch residing in Achinblay Factor to Sir David Falconer Lord of Halkerton and a Strickt deed of Intail detailed in the Disposition from Monboddo on account of his Daughter marrying to displease Him to Farquhar, hard-ware merchant in Edinburgh at the sign of the Red Lyon, by which only Her Heirs Male were called to the property—whom failing to the second and youngest Son of His Brother Alexander Kinloch Servant to the Earl of Northesk.

In a note upon the marriage of J. Burnett to Elizabeth Irvine, He is called J. B. of Tillywhilly which at first seemed a mistake, but [I] found it in a warrandice upon some of his purchases which at that time He must have been possessed of—but on what terms—how long—and when sold—have yet to learn.

I remember seeing a Letter of His daughter Jean upon Her marriage with Sir John Carnegie to Her Brother Robert,<sup>1</sup> written on a slip of paper as Swift says the Ladies of England wrote in His time, 'from corner to corner' in a Lassie like hand and Lassie like joy:—'ever dear Brother Robert you wish to know how I am and how I am like to be—assure yourself tho not so bonny as my handsome Aunt of ever dear memory I trust I have flown as happily—my Knight desires His Service.'

James Burnett tho' he sold so much and seems to have been much embarrassed bot Cushnie farm of Sir James Carnegie for £1000 Stirling part of the Barony of Mondynes as it lay at the gate of Monboddoo to the East between it and Castleton, now the property of William Stuart of Inchbreck by his wife the heiress of Harry Guthrie and Miss Sibbald who sold Kair to Lawgaven—By a deed of provision for His younger Children, He names among other Tutors for them Hugh Forbes of Shivas. His eldest Daughter Margaret married Mr. Lauder of Pittscandle in Forfarshire but it proved a barren and unhappy marriage—tho He was a remarkably handsome fair spoken Man, and she a young accomplished sensible woman they separated. His affairs went into disorder and obliged Him to go to the West Indies where He died. By a neglect in taking Infement to secure Hir Jointure, the Creditors refused to implement the obligation—so that Monboddoo, besides the loss of His Daughters portion—expences of the Dispute etc. had Her returned on his hand—and, coldnesses ensuing, agreed to settle on Her £32 Sterling per annum which, with a small sum recovered and sunk for high Interest in the hands of Kincoussie, by wonderfull, yet genteel economy She contrived to keep a comfortable house in Aberdeen—with the kindness of friends inviting Her to the country in summer and a dozen or two of Claret when she became old and weak from Her Brother Lord Monboddo. In the sale of Halgreen it appears that a jointure was secured upon it for the wife or widow of William Rate the younger with whom the Race expired. It would appear that Lawgaven had been Executor and probably Residuary Legatee to His Mother in Law Elizabeth Douglas—as an instruction from Robert Irvine Her Son urges, the speedily turning the effects settled on Him into money. Tis also like likely the old Lady had ended her days at Monboddo.

2. Humphrey his son, cousin of Walter de Berkeley, Great Chamberlain of the Kingdom, became owner of a large domain in this County, and from the lands of Balfeith, Monboddo, Glenfarquhar, and other portions of it, granted to the monks of Aberbrothwick, donations that were confirmed by William the Lion.

3. Richenda, his only child, renewed & made additions

<sup>1</sup> The MS. from which this is printed is in the handwriting of Mr. William Fraser, Stonehaven, uncle of Sir William, to whom he sent it in July 1855. The first part may be a summary of some earlier pedigree (cf. Nisbet, Heraldry, vol. ii., App. p. 236), but the inscriptions on the monuments were copied by himself.

This MS. must have been known to the late Mr. Jervise, as it appears, with various additions, in his Epitaphs and Inscriptions (1875), vol. i. pp. 80 et seq.

to these donations, and her grants were confirmed by Alexander the Second.

4. Dying without issue, she was succeeded by John de Berkeley, brother of Humphrey, who dispossessed the monks of all these donations, but was obliged to compromise & give them instead, a portion of his lands of Conveth, and that transaction was confirmed by Alexander the Second.

5. Robert de Berkeley, son of John, had concurred in his father's compromise with the monks.

6. Hugh de Berkeley, son of Robert, obtained from King Robert Bruce a Charter over the lands of Westerton in Conveth.

7. Alexander de Berkeley, son and successor of Hugh, married Catherine, sister of William de Keith, Marischal of Scotland, A.D. 1351, and by that marriage added to the paternal estates the then extensive domain of Mathers, conveyed by Charter from the Marischal, confirmed by King David Bruce.

8. David de Berkeley, 2nd of Mathers, married the daughter of John de Seton.

9. His son Alexander de Berkeley, 3rd of Mathers, married Helen, daughter of Grahame of Morphie.

10. Their son David de Berkeley, 4th of Mathers, who built an impregnable castle called the Kaim of Mathers and according to tradition there took refuge on account of his concern in the murder of Melville the Sheriff,<sup>1</sup> married the daughter of Strachan of Thornton.

11. His son Alexander, 5th of Mathers, married the daughter of Wishart of Pitarrow. He changed the spelling of the family name to Barclay.

16. George Barclay, 10th of Mathers, elder son of David, married, first, the daughter of Sir Thomas Erskine of Brechin, Secretary to James v. of Scotland; second, the daughter of Wood of Bonnington. To his son by her he gave the lands of Bridgeton & Jackston.

17. Thomas Barclay, 11th of Mathers, elder son of George, married the daughter of Straiton of Lauriston.

18. David Barclay, 12th of Mathers, son of Thomas, was born anno 1580. Polite & accomplished, he lived much at Court, incurring extravagant expenses to the great impairment of his fortune, whereby he was obliged to sell five valuable Estates. He married, first, Elizabeth, daughter of Livingston of Dunnipace, by whom he had five sons & a daughter; second, Margaret Keith, grand-daughter of Earl Marischal. To his daughter he gave a handsome fortune; to his sons a liberal education. The two eldest died young; David the third became eminently conspicuous; Robert the fourth was Rector of the Scots College at Paris; James the youngest, a captain of horse, fell gloriously at the battle of Philiphaugh.

19. Colonel David Barclay, the 12th of Mathers, was born anno 1610 at Kirktonhill, the ancient seat of the family. Instructed in every accomplishment of the Age, he entered as a volunteer the service of Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden, in which he so distinguished himself as to gain the favour of that monarch. But called home by the civil wars which distracted Scotland, he was anno 1646 placed in the Coloneley of a royal regiment of horse and was repeatedly entrusted with the command of an army and the military government of considerable portions of

Accordingly he brought into high cultivation 2000 arable acres, planted 1500 acres of wood, & executed the manifold operations connected with such, in a manner so unexampled & successful that his practice became the conventional standard over an extensive district, & placed him in the foremost rank among Scottish Agriculturists.

By the grant of feu-rights on his estate of Arduthie, he laid the foundation of the New-town of Stonehaven & lived to see it become a populous & thriving community.

By unanimous election, he represented his native county in three successive Parliaments, distinguished by his loyalty & patriotism, & honored with [the] intimate friendship of the great William Pitt & other eminent statesmen of the time.

He died at Ury the 7th of April 1797.<sup>1</sup>

WRITS RELATING TO THE HAYS OF URY <sup>2</sup>

The Thanage of Colly or Cowie, including apparently the lands of Ury, seems to have belonged to the Comyns, and on their forfeiture to have been granted to the Frasers by King Robert I. On 10th October 1413, William Fraser, Lord of Philorth, 'for a sowme of syluer beforehand in my mykil myster to me payit' disposed to William de Hay, Lord of Eroll and Constable of Scotland, his baronies of Colly and Durrus. On 14th May 1415 the Constable obtained a charter of Cowie from Robert, Duke of Albany, Governor of Scotland. The Letters of Sale and the Charter are given in The Frasers of Philorth, vol. i. pp. 201-202. The estate of Ury, which seems to have been made part of the barony of Eroll at an early date, remained in the possession of the Hays till 1647, when it was acquired by William, Earl Marischal, from whom it was purchased by Colonel David Barclay (vide supra, p. 95).<sup>3</sup>

<sup>2</sup> These writs seem to indicate that some of the statements in the article 'Eroll,' Scots Peerage, vol. iii., require reconsideration.

<sup>3</sup> For further information as to Ury and its owners vide The Baron Count Book of Urie (Scot. Hist. Soc., First Series, vol. xii.).

<sup>1</sup> Divorce a vinculo did not exist before the Reformation, so this obviously refers to an action to have the marriage declared null because of the existence of some impedimentum dirimens, e.g. that the parties were within the forbidden degrees.

WRITS RELATING TO PALDY FAIR<sup>1</sup>

According to the law of Scotland the right of holding fairs or markets, including the powers necessary for holding them peaceably and effectually, belongs to the Crown, and can only pass to the subjects by a grant express or implied. This right was at one time of considerable value in respect of the convenience which the market afforded to the neighbourhood, the concourse of strangers which it induced, and the dues which it yielded. The documents here printed with regard to Paldy Fair throw light not merely on that particular market, but also upon the kind of legal questions that arose with regard to markets generally.

Execution of the commissione 1641.

Before much time had passed the whole question of Paldy Fair came before the Court of Session. On 25th March, Sir William Douglas of Glenbervie obtained a Crown Charter giving him the right to hold two fairs, one at Drumlithie and the other 'apud Capellaniam de Dulliwad,' beginning on 24th June and lasting for eight days. This of course seriously interfered with the prosperity of Paldy Fair, which began on 1st July, and the Laird of Glenfarquhar accordingly took proceedings for his own protection. The case, which is reported by Lord Durie under date 24th June 1642 [M. 4146], has always been regarded as one of importance. The report is as follows :—

Mr. David Falconer being infest in the lands of Glenfarquhar, with the privilege of an ancient fair, called Padie Fair, from Palladius, holden upon the said lands of ——— past memory of man, from the 1st of July to the 7th day thereof, pursues the Laird of Glenbervie, who had acquired from the King a late infestment, anno 1635, of his lands, with the privilege of a fair to be holden on his lands of Dillivard, which lyes within a mile, or less, of the pursuer's lands, whereon his fair holds, to be holden from the 24th of June to the 1st of July yearly, to hear it be found, that the said infestment ought to be declared null, so far as concerns, or may be extended to the having of any fair on the said lands of Dillivard the time foresaid, as being a privilege privately purchased, and indirectly tending to take away the liberty and privilege of the pursuer's fair, in respect that the pursuer's lands and the defender's, which has the fairs, are not distant from others a mile of ground; and the time of the holdings is so ewest, without any interval of time, that the defender's fair, (which ends the very day when the pursuer's fair begins,) must necessarily evert all privilege and use of his fair, and prejudice him of all commodity which he can have thereby, and tends manifestly to kindle trouble betwixt the parties, and to disturb the quietness and peace of the country: Which action being heard in the LORDS Presence, and the parties and their advocates being heard to dispute thereupon, they found, That the defender's infestment ought not to extend to the privilege of a fair, to be holden of such nearness to the said lands, for keeping of the same, within the time contained in his infestment, which is in such vicinity, and immediately precedes the time of the pursuer's ancient fair; the defender having taken the same to end the same day when the pursuer's fair begins; for however he might take a right from the King of his lands, with the said privilege of a fair, yet that privilege ought not to have been sought, to destroy the effect and use of that ancient fair, granted to, and bruiked immemorially by the pursuer, and his authors and predecessors of before; and therefore they ordained that privilege, so far as concerns that time of the holding thereof, to cease, as impetrate in aemulationem vicini; and found, that the said fair might be lawfully impetrated, and may be kept by the defender, upon his said lands, at any time after the end of the pursuer's fair, or at any time before, by the space of a month preceding the pursuer's beginning of his fair; but found, that the defender cannot have any fair before the pursuer's fair begin, except there intervene the space of a month at least free, betwixt the end of the defender's fair, and the beginning of the pursuer's; and the LORDS decerned accordingly.

PAPERS RELATING TO THE VALUATION OF KINCARDINESHIRE

From a very early date there have been in Scotland valuations of lands known as Extents and framed as the basis of taxation. Their history is obscure, and what we know about them is due chiefly to the researches of Mr. Thomas Thomson in connection with the election case of Cranstoun v. Gibson in 1818. Of his Memorial for the Complainer in that case, Mr. Cosmo Innes says (Legal Antiquities, p. 12): 'Mr. Thomson laid before the Court the most learned and accurate history of Scotch taxation that has ever been written.'

One of Mr. Thomson's propositions (p. 100) is: 'That there were ancient valuations or extents of every species of real property in the kingdom;—of the ecclesiastical lands and rents and tithes holden in mortmain by the clergy, whether regular or secular;—of lands holden of the Crown, by lords, barons, and other free vassals in ward or in blench farm;—and of the proper demesnes of the Crown occupied by its thanes, stewarts, chamberlains, or other collectors of the Crown rents according to these extents.'

In another place (p. 95) he points out that 'in 1643 the former system was set aside and another completely different substituted in its stead.' One result of this change, so far as Kincardineshire was concerned, was the framing of a new valuation of the shire, parish by parish, in terms of an Act of the Convention of Estates in 1643. This, which does not appear to have been finally adjusted till 1657, is the first document here printed. The other two documents are, as they bear to be, the Tax Roll for the year 1669, showing the sums payable by the several lands, and a Retour of the Temporal and Spiritual lands made in the same year and giving practically the same details.

PAPERS RELATING TO WILLIAM RAIT OF HALLGREEN

William Rait of Hallgreen (ante, p. 87) had got himself into financial difficulties. His creditors were pressing him, and he was in danger of imprisonment, against which he unsuccessfully sought what was technically known as a protection. What followed is thus noted by Lord Fountainhall (Decisions, vol. i. p. 734), under date 18th November 1696: 'The Lords gave a warrant to apprehend William Rait of Halgreen and one Crokot for sending a minatory letter to Lord Whitelaw<sup>1</sup> upon an apprehension that he had opposed a protection he was seeking. They sent one of their Macers to put it into execution, with an order to the Sheriff of Kincardon and his deutes to assist him, and further got a warrant from the Commander-in-Chief of the Forces to the nearest garrisons and regiments lying thereabout, to give their concurrence in securing their persons and bringing them to the Edinburgh Tolbooth, for the Lords thought the honour of the Judicatory concerned that they be not threatened for their steady and equal administration of justice in their office conform to their oaths: and the assassination committed on Sir George Lockhart<sup>2</sup> was an instance to prevent such attempts in time coming.'

On 27th February 1697, he proceeds, 'The Laird of Halgreen, mentioned 18th November 1696, and Mr. Andrew Darling had petitions craving to be set at liberty upon acknowledgment of their offences in what terms the Lords should prescribe. But many of the Lords thinking fit they should find caution for their good deportment in time coming, it was delayed in regard they were not able to get such caution at this time.'

<sup>1</sup> Sir William Hamilton of Whitelaw, an Ordinary Lord of Session 1693, Lord Justice-Clerk 1704. 'Betwixt man and man wherein he had no particular concern he was just, but extremely partial where his friend or his own politics interfered. He has a sound solid judgment, but all his actions were accompanied with so much pride, vanity, ill-nature and severity, that he was odious to everybody' (Lockhart Papers, i. 107).

Some time having elapsed, Hallgreen sent a petition, apparently to the Lord Chancellor, Lord Polwarth—created Earl of Marchmont in April 1697—and as no quorum could be got for its consideration, he sent another praying for some mitigation of his imprisonment. These petitions are as follows :

(1)

MY LORD,—I have troubled your Lo<sup>p</sup> several times with my hard circumstances, and being abruptlie brought frome home I am in greater straits then is fit to mention I have enclosed the interloquiter which noe body will be caution in, unles it be explained unto whom I am to keep the peace, for as it is worded if any body should offer me ane affront, if I recented it, or in passion should strike a servant my cautioner might be found lyable as they say ; But for wronging my Lord Whitelaw or any of the Lords ; my ffreinds are willing to fulfill the whole heads of the interloquiter, and I dclare upon the word of a gentleman that I had never any evill designe against my Lord Whitelaw, nor will it ever be found, that I or any of my predecessors was guilty of any base deed but on the contrary my grandfather was fined in three hundred pound sterline in Midleton's parliament, and payed it which is notourlie known, And I know that your Lo<sup>p</sup> has more goodness and generosity then to suffer me and my ffamilie to be ruined being now detained this four moneths upon a frivolous mistake, I was advised by some to represent it above, but having evidence of your Lo<sup>ps</sup> Kindnes, I will doe nothing unacquainting you, soe I humblie entreat that your Lo<sup>p</sup> would order a quorum of the Lords to meet, and explaine the interloquitour and accept of the caution offered, and order my liberation and I assure your Lo<sup>p</sup> that I shall doe nothing without your commands, which shall be punctuallie obeyed by, My Lord, Your Lo<sup>ps</sup> most obedient humble servant,

W. RAITT of Halgrein.

UNTO the Right Honourable my Lord High Chancelour and the remanent Lordis of his māties most Honourable secret Counsell,

The Humble suplication of William Rait of Halgreen prisoner in the Tolbooth of Ed<sup>r</sup>,

Humble sheweth :—

That whereas I have now been these five moneths in prison, which hath occasioned a great indisposition of my body through the want of the free and fresh air as doctour Trotter and all within the Tolbooth can testifie, and having made severall applications and proferred all satisfaction lying within the compass of my power as severall of the members of this most honourable judicatory knowes, But was still postponed for want of a quorum, And now my life being in Hazard,

May it therfor please your Lo<sup>ps</sup> to take my circumstances to your serious consideration, And order my liberty upon any termes that is within the compass of my power to think fitt to grant, or otherwayes to grant warrand to the master of the Tolbooth to goe out with a keeper to get the fresh air, upon my finding sufficient caution not to escape, and to returne to the Tolbooth at night. And your petitioner shall ever pray &c.

W. RAITT of Halgreen.

Nothing, however, seems to have been done, and a third application was made which was thus dealt with by the Privy Council :

Anent the petitione given in to the Lords of his majesties privie counsell at the instance of William Raite of Hallgrein shewing that wheras the petitioner has bein these ten moneths in prisone to the great prejudice of his health soe that he was near to the gaitts of Death as also his circumstances are very hard for ther is a factor putt upon his estate by a false representatione and he being in firmance had no opportunitie to ansuer for himself and likewayes his wife<sup>1</sup> hes possest herself this seven yeirs of the lands of Angus as also his outsight and insight planishing to a considerable value The petitioner hes not soe much as gotten one groat soe that he must of necessitie starve and die in miserie therfor he is alreadie a great daill adebted to the people of the tollbuith for his mentainence as also all his cloathes and furniture are worne out by soe long track of imprisonment and seing the fault the petitioner is imprisoned for are nether capitall nor criminall neither did he ever in the least either speake or act against the present government of either church or state the veritie of all which he hes sett downe is knowen to severall at the Counsell table and therefore humbly craveing ther Lordships conforme to ther laudable custome in such caises to grant warrand to the maister of the tolbuith to grant the petitioner libertie to goe out with a keeper to gett the air for his healths sake as also that ther Lordships would order a competent soume of money to be payed out of his own estate and out of what is possest by his wife for payment of what the petitioner is adebted in the tolbuith and for his own mentainence and all things neidfull as ther Lordships in ther wisdome thinks fitt for the petitioner cannot expect any hearing till the Sessione sitt downe and if he gett not some present remedie and releiff from ther Lordships he must of necessitie perrish hopeing ther Lordships will take the premiss to ther sereows consideratione As the said petitione bears which petitione haveing upon the eight of September last bypast bein read in presence of the saids Lords of his majesties privie counsell They as to the petitioners imprisonment Remitted the same to the Lords of Sessione by whose order he is imprisoned and as to the other point of money and mentainence they named and appointed a comitie of ther own number to call for and convene the creditors of the estate of Hallgrein and Halgreins Lady and to deall with them and endeavoure by ther consent to modifie ane certaine soume for the

The tenants, feeling themselves aggrieved by the order made on them for payment of an allowance, took steps for its suspension, and in this they were successful :

Anent the bill of suspensione presented to the Lords of his majesties privie counsell be Robert Hamptowne in the Maines of Hallgrein Agnes Hendersone in Gowrdoun James Dickie ther Thomas Folly in Hillsyde Andrew Stevensone and John Watt ther and others the tennents of Hallgrein shewing that wher they are lately charged be vertue of Letters of horning raised at the instance of George Drumond keeper of the tollbooth of Edinburgh (assigney efter speci-feit) by ane pretended act of ther Lordships of the date the sixth day of October last bypast modifyeing the soume of five hundereth merks to be payed to William Rait of Hallgrein for his aliment and contained in ane pretended assignatione made and granted be the said William Rait of Hallgrein to the said George Drumond of the date the threttein day of the said moneth of October last bypast to make payment to the said George Drumond of the said soume of five hundereth merks in maner following viz. the said Robert Hamptowne of the soume of ane hundered pundis the said Agnes Hendersone sixties six [pundis] threttein shilling four pennies the said James Dickie seventie pundis the said Thomas Folly threttie pundis the said Andrew Stevensone fourtie pundis and the said John Watt twentie six pund threttein shilling four pennies And that within ane certaine short space under the paine of rebellione and putting of them to the horne most wrongouselie and wnjustlie considering it is of veritie that they cannot make payment of the foirsaid soumes charged for, for the reasones and causes following—First because neither they nor any of the creditors of Hallgrein were cited to the modifyeing of the foirsaid aliment But upon application to ther Lordships be ane bill given in be the said William Rait of Hallgrein without any citatione given therupon to them or any of the creditors the said William Rait obtained ane act in his favoures Whereas if the petitioners or the creditors of Hallgrein had bein summoned they would have compeared and alleadged lykeas they now alleadge that ther could be no aliment modified to the said William Rait in soe far as the creditors of Hallgrein are in the actwall possessione of the lands of Hallgrein by reall rights and ane factor settled be the Lords of Sessione for uplifting of the rents therof for the behove of the creditors and so this being the propertie of the creditors no pairt therof could be given off to Hallgrein for aliment especiallie considering that Hallgrein was imprisoned for his misdemeanors towards The Lords of Sessione and not at the instance of the creditors and secundo the said William Rait of Hallgrein his Lady haveing gott the gift of her husbands estate and preferred to all her husbands creditors quoad fiftein chalders of victwall and wherof she is in peaceable possessione she owght out of this to aliment her own husband especiallie seing that this properly belongs to the creditors Tertio that William Rait of Hallgrein haveing ravished and taken from the tennents by violence the rents of Hallgrein of the cropts j<sup>m</sup> vi<sup>c</sup> & nyntie four j<sup>m</sup> vi<sup>c</sup> & nyntie five and j<sup>m</sup> vi<sup>c</sup> & nyntie six albeit ther was ane factor settled be the Lords of Sessione for uplifting therof to the behove of the creditors the which is offered positively to be proven by the tenents or otherwise that he or some in his name did the same so that these rents were ane sufficient fond to have alimented ane sober gentleman for many yeirs and which he spend in a verie short tyme and its hoped in justice he will not be indulged to have any share in this yeirs rent Quarto esto ther were any aliment dwe by the creditors as is mordicus contended ther is not yet the petitioners the foirsaid tennents cannot be lyable for payment of what they are charged for till the same be dwe and ita est ther rents are not payable till Candlemise and Whitsunday next and yet they are charged instantly to make payment therof as is cleare by the charges therwith produced to ther Lordships and if they are thus wrongouselie charged instantlie to make payment therof as is cleare befor the termes of payment soe they are exorbitantlie charged for greater soumes then they pay and for money rent wheras most of them pay only victwall from all which it is obviows to ther Lordships how wrongously they are charged all which pleads for ane suspensioe from ther Lordships and nevertheles for obedience they are content to find and become cautioners for ilk one another that they shall make payment of the foirsaid soumes charged for in caise it be fownd by ther Lordships that they owght soe to doe And therfor etc. beseeching ther Lordships that they may have Letters to sumond the saids George Drumond and William Rait personallie etc. to compear befor ther Lordships at ane certaine day bringing with them the foirsaid pretended Letters and charges and executiones of the same and hail grownds and warrands therof to be sein and considered by ther Lordships and to hear and sie the samen suspended and to suspend and discharge in commwni forma As the bill of suspensione at more lenth bears Which bill of suspensione being this day called in presence of the Lords of his majesties privie counsell and the suspenders compeareing be Mr. Francis Grant advocat who compeared also for the creditors of Hallgrein And the Laird of Hallgreine and his assigney chargers compearing be Mr. Roddrick Mckeinzie Junior ther advocat Bothe pairties lawiers being fullie heard the saids Lords of his majesties privie counsell sustains the reasones of suspensione and have suspended and heirby suspends the saids Letters and charges raised and execute at the chargers instance against the saids suspenders simpliciter against the saids chargers in all tyme comeing.

William Rait died in February 1698, and was succeeded by his son James, who married Isobel, daughter of Robert Douglas of Bridgeford.

confirming it and the changes which he made (vide Thomson's Acts, ii. 389, and Reg. Mag. Sig., 14th November 1516). Though it has been ignorantly called a monastery, it was truly a hospital—as this letter says, for lipper folk—and is so styled in a charter of Hugo Malherbe, circa 1245 (Regist. Vetus de Aberbrothoc, p. 337). And among its other possessions were the lands of Spittaleschelis.

Its possessions, as the letter says, were dilapidated by various masters, and notably by one Andrew Reid who was master in 1492 (R.M.S., 8th October 1492). Several writs relating to the Hospital and its possessions were found by General Hutton in the Archives of Montrose. From an early date there was a Dominican Friary in Montrose (vide Exchequer Rolls, iii. 478), and Abbot Panter's scheme was to amalgamate the two Foundations and remove the Dominicans to the Hospital. They did not, however, like their new residence and, on the ground that their devotions were disturbed by its proximity to the public road, were allowed to return to their old home (vide Thomson's Acts, ii. 395, and R.M.S., 11th November 1537).

<sup>1</sup> The Reformation of Hospitals was the object of an Act of 1466 (Thomson's Acts, ii. p. 86), and in 1469 it was re-enacted, and Mr. Richard Guthrie, 'principal confessoure to the king and generale elemosinar,' was appointed to carry it into execution (ibid., p. 87). He was Abbot of Arbroath.

LETTER from DR. JOHN ARBUTHNOTT <sup>2</sup>
giving medical advice

23rd April 1729.

MY LORD,—I had your lōps letter late last night & could not peruse it sufficiently till this morning, rather than delay the answer I chuse to write in English since I know you have those by your lōp who can explain it to the physicians & chirurgeons. I write not only from my owne experience but from that of an able chirurgeon and we are of opinion that the extirpation of these Hæmoroids should not be rashly attempted, ther is one inconveniency that may follow & I know did follow in the case of a friend of mine, that the internal coat of the gutt may so contract it self as to leave very little passage afterwards for the excrements by which my forementioned friend is so miserable that he is forced to take a purge every day to make his excrements fluid else they would not pass at all. Upon the main I am of opinion that some outward application should be tryd to take of that fungosity in the Hæmaroids. I know wher a powder made of Burnt Alum Galls & myrh touching the parts with it severall times a day has been effectuell for that purpose, after every time going to stool the parts most be washed with warm Brandy strongly endud with Alum. This method I know has succeeded in taking off the fungosity I am sure this or some such a method should at least be tryed befor they proceed to such an operation. In the meantime your lōp should drink Asses milk in as great quantity as you can & turn your dyet upon milk. I have known the decoction of the millefoil or the expressed juice of the same plant do a great dale of good in your lōps case & I think one of them should be used. Ther is an Aplication that is likewise usefull tho not so effectuell as the forementioned powder, that is a suffimigium or sitting upon the warm steam of Vinegar poured upon Red Hott Flints. I am heartily concernd for your lōp & wish you a happy recovery, & hope your lōp will be pleased to order your chirurgeon from time to time to inform me of the state of the case—being with the greatest respect, My Lord, Your lōps most faithfull humble servant,

<sup>1</sup> It will be noticed that the cautious executor described this in the inventory which he gave up (ante, p. 164) as 'the Pretender's picture.'

<sup>2</sup> Vide ante, p. 77. Because of Dr. Arbuthnott's double eminence as a physician as well as a writer, these documents have a value, in addition to the light they throw on the therapeutics of the time.

Jo. ARBUTHNOTT.

LONDON, Aprile 23, 1729.

As to the uneasiness & restlessness your lōp sometimes feels I think you ought to take in such a case six drachms or an ounce of the syrup of white poppys in a proper vehicle when your lōp has it in a great degree.

MEDICAL MEMORANDUM by DR. JOHN ARBUTHNOTT

The disease is a very great one of its kind; & being inveterate hard to cure. The consequences of that distemper in the extremity if not prevented by dyet and good medicine are hectic feaver dropsy an ulcer one or all. Ther is loss of blood to most by the Hæmeroid vessels & letting blood by the Arm will rather do hurt.

Epsom salts irritate the distemper Elixir salutes too hott & so is spirit of Hartshorn or spirit of scurvy grass.

The swimming of the Head & other symptomes like vapours cannot be otherwise curd than by curing the distemper of which they are the effect.

The intention must be to cool & incrassate the blood to strengthen the fibres of the bowels for which purpose I would advice the continuance of the Spaa water above a pint in the morning & drink at mails w<sup>t</sup> a strong red wine for ordinary drink.

In the first glass of Spaa water in a morning putt 20 drops of the elixir vitrioli, if it agrees with the stomach the patient may take 30.

I would purge very seldom, only to abate the soreness of the part affected the patient may take the following Bolus which is a specifick for the piles.

℞ Flor sulphur J ii pulp. Cass. recenter extract. ℥ iii.
M. fiat. Bolus.

This may give perhaps one stool extraordinary, but the chief intention is rather to bind & strengthen the bowels for which purpose

℞ Sanguin. dracon. Croci Martis Astringent āā ℥ ii<sup>s</sup>
Sachar. Saturn: alumini Rupill āā gr. xx
Terebinthin e cio 9s. misce es singulis drachmis fiant pilulæ xii. quarum capiat iv mane et hora cubitus quotidie. ex haustulo potia ordinarii.

I approve of the lotion. I suppose they foment warm with it rather than inject it.

If the juice of millefoil or yarrow could be gott this time of year I know it to be a sovereign remedy.

In this case if the heat and quickness of pulse continue perhaps it may be adviseable to take the juice of young nettles & plaintain when it can be had tuo spoonfulls of each mixd with a little oakbud water in a morning & sweetened with sugar. Nettles . . . he had fever.

For the vapourish symptoms complained off he may take at night going to bed the following pill interrupting his astringent pill.

℞ Galban solut. Ass. fœtid āā gr. vi. Caster sal.
succini aa gr. iv. Balsam peruvian 9s. Misce fiant pilulæ pro una dosi.

As for his dyet it must be such a person would use who is affraid of a Hectick feaver. I need say no more.

As for drink, strong liquoir must be avoided as poyson except what I mentioned befor, a styptick red wine such as strong claret Hermitage or Red Florence mixd with Spaa water or Tincture of Red Roses vitriolated & white drink are very proper drinks or an emulsion made with Barly water. Boyling one ounce of chalk in every pint of it.

Marmalade of Quinics is good jelly &c but oyl & oily things must be avoided because they relax the bowels too much.

In as much as the Bouells in the patients case are deprived of the natural means, the ingredients of the Astringent pill above mentiond made up into a pill with half an ounce of yellow Beeswax a little melted instead of turpentine will prove very balsamic & healing. Take either of the tuo pills as best agrees with the patient for in this case wher one can not visit it is necessary to mention more Remedys than the patient can take in one course.

WRITS RELATING TO FISHINGS IN THE YTHAN

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

RISING at Wells of Ythan in the parish of Forgue the River Ythan, after a winding course of nearly forty miles, falls into the sea at Newburgh. It is well known for the pearls which it yields, and from it the Great Pearl in the Crown of Scotland is said to have come. Its fishings of both salmon and trout are still famous, and apparently have been so from time immemorial. The following writs show how highly these fishings were valued in the early sixteenth century, and how jealously the right to them was guarded. Incidentally they throw some light on the legal procedure of the time, and on the pedigree of some of the local families.

<sup>1</sup> Alexander Ogilvy of Deskford and Findlater was served heir to his grandfather, Sir James, in fishings in the Water of Ythane on 9th April 1510 (Antiquities of Aberdeen and Banff, iii. 105). This family was descended from Sir Walter Ogilvy, a younger son of Sir Walter Ogilvy of Carcary and Lintrathen, ancestor of the Earls of Airlie. The name was derived from the earliest possession of the family, the Den of Ogilvy near Glamis, which remained with the main line of the family until the middle of the seventeenth century, long after such cadet branches as Airlie, Findlater, etc., had outstripped it in importance. This family was truly Ogilvy de Eodem, though the designation was assumed by the junior family of Deskford, in respect that they somehow got their lands erected into a barony with the name of Ogilvy.

<sup>1</sup> Generally known as James Ogilvy of Cardell, only son of Alexander Ogilvy and his first wife, Janet Abernethy, a daughter of Lord Saltoun. On her death Alexander Ogilvy married Elizabeth Gordon, a bastard daughter of the Dean of Caithness, who induced her husband to disinherit his son in favour of John Gordon, a son of Lord Huntly, with whom she had become infatuated, and whom she subsequently married. This resulted in much civil trouble, and, as Mr. Andrew Ross points out (Scots Peerage, vol. iv. p. 23), had an important bearing on the relations between Queen Mary and the House of Huntly. In the long run James Ogilvy recovered his inheritance.

ANNE R.

Whereas We have Received certain Information, That the Person <sup>1</sup> who, during the Life of the late King James the Second, Pretended to be Prince of Wales and since his Decease has taken upon himself the Stile and Title of James the Third, King of England, and James the Eighth, King of Scotland, being bred up in the Popish Superstition, and instructed to introduce the French Government into all Our Realms and Dominions, Openly and Traiterously has undertaken an Invasion of this Our Kingdom of Great Britain, with an Armed Force of the French King's Troops, Our Declar'd Enemies, and of divers of Our Rebellious Subjects, who have Traiterously Adhered to Our said Enemies, in manifest Violation of Our Lawful and Rightful Title to the Crown of these Realms, and of <sup>1</sup> One of the most impudent acts of William of Orange and his associates was to assert that the son of James VII. and Mary of Modena, born on 10th June 1688, was not their child at all, but a strange infant that, by means of a warming pan, had been surreptitiously introduced into the Queen's bed. This lie was adroitly utilised in William's declaration of 'the reasons inducing him to appear in arms in the Kingdom of England for preserving of the Protestant Religion and for restoring the Laws and Liberties of England, Scotland, and Ireland,' and proved of considerable service in promoting what used to be called 'The glorious Revolution.' It also made easy the passing of a special Act in March 1702 by which the young prince, then aged fourteen, was attainted of treason and made liable to the atrocious penalties of English law in the event of his falling into the hands of his sister's husband.

This shameless attitude towards her brother was shared by his complaisant wife, and after her accession was publicly maintained by Queen Anne, though latterly at least she appears to have been fully convinced that he was her father's son.

the several Acts of Parliament made, as well for Recognizing the same, as for Settling the Succession to the said Crown in the Protestant Line: And Whereas the said Pretended Prince stands now Attainted of High Treason by an Act of Parliament made in England, in the Thirteenth Year of the Reign of Our late Brother King William the Third, of Glorious Memory, and all manner of Correspondence with the said Pretended Prince, or any of his Adherents, is hereby forbid to all Our Subjects, upon Pain of High Treason: And altho' all Persons, as well in Criminal as other Cases, are bound to take Notice of the Law at their Peril; yet to the Intent that none may think to escape due Punishment, by pretending Ignorance of the Nature of their Crimes, and that nothing may be wanting on Our Part, for the Defence and Preservation of Our Faithful and Loving Subjects; We have therefore thought fit, by the Advice of Our Privy-Council, and in pursuance of the Humble Address<sup>1</sup> of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in this present Parliament Assembled, to Publish and Declare the said Pretended Prince, and all his Accomplices, Adherents, Abettors and Advisers, to be Traitors and Rebels. And we do hereby strictly Command and Require all Our Good Subjects to use their utmost Endeavours to Seize and Apprehend the said Pretended Prince, if he shall at any time be found within any Part of Our Realms or Dominions, and all his Traiterous Confederates and Adherents, and all and every Person and Persons, who shall be Aiding and Abetting to the aforesaid Traitors and Rebels, and to Secure their Persons till Our further Pleasure shall be known. And We do hereby further strictly Charge and Command all Popish Recusants, Natives and Denizens, who shall be above the Age of Sixteen Years, That they do, according to the Statutes in that behalf made, Repair to their respective Places of Abode, and do not thence Remove or Pass above the Distance of Five Miles, until Our Will and Pleasure be further Declared. And We do likewise Charge and Command all Papists and Persons reputed so to be, except Merchant Strangers, Settled Housholders, and other Persons excepted in the Statutes made in this behalf, on or before the Eleventh Day of this instant March, to Depart out of Our Cities of London and Westminster, and from all Places within Ten Miles Distance of the Same. And We do hereby Command the Lord Mayor of London, and all other Justices of the Peace, and other Officers within the Said Cities, and Ten Miles of the same, That they make Search for, and Proceed, against all such of them as shall presume to Remain, Repair or Return within the Limits aforesaid, by Tending to them the Declaration mentioned in the Statute made in the First Year of the Reign of Their late Majesties King William and Queen Mary, of Blessed Memory, Intituled, An Act for the Amoving Papists and Reputed Papists from the Cities of London and Westminster, and Ten Miles Distance from the same—And we do likewise Charge and Command all Justices of the Peace, who shall know or be informed, That any Person be Suspected to be a Papist, or Disaffected to Our Government, to Tender to such Person the Declaration aforesaid, and Proceed thereupon by Seizing the Horses and Arms of such Person, and otherwise, according to One other Act made in the said First Year of the Reign of Their said late Majesties King William and Queen Mary, Intituled, An Act for the better Securing the Government, by Disabling Papists and Reputed Papists. And for the better Discovery of Persons who are Disaffected to Our Government, We do likewise Command all Justices of the Peace, and other Officers in that behalf Authorized, to Tender unto such Person or Persons, as they shall find or be informed are Suspected not to be Well-affected to Our Person or Government, the Oaths that are Appointed by an Act made in the said First Year of the Reign of Their said late Majesties King William and Queen Mary, Intituled, An Act for the Abrogating the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance, and Appointing other Oaths : And in case any such Person or Persons who shall Refuse to Take the same, We do hereby Require due Prosecution to be made thereupon ; And in Order thereunto, the said Justices of the Peace are to Make and Keep Entries and Records of such their Proceedings, that the said Oaths may again be tendered to The Person or Persons who shall so Refuse the same. And We do hereby particularly Charge and Require all Deputy-Lieutenants and Justices of the Peace, That they do frequently meet to Enquire into, and Inform themselves of the affairs of their respective Counties in relation to the Premisses, and take special Care to Preserve the Peace, and Prevent all Unlawful Meetings and Assemblies ; and that from time to time they do give Information of their Proceedings and Discoveries to the Lords of Our Privy Council. And We do likewise hereby Charge and Command all Our Lord-Lieutenants, Deputy-Lieutenants, Sheriffs, Bailiffs of Regalities, Justices of the Peace, Mayors, Provosts, Bailiffs, and all other our Officers Civil and Military, strictly to put in Execution all Laws and Statutes whatsoever now in Force within Our Kingdom of Great Britain, against such Persons as have Refused, or shall Refuse to take the Oaths Required by Law.

and Suburbs thereof, have been filled of late with great numbers of Loose, Idle, and Disorderly Persons, who Resort thither in Crouds, and in a Riotous Tumultuous manner offer Violence to the Persons and Coaches of divers of Our Liege Subjects, whose Lawful Occasions require them to Pass and Repass the same, which at this Time greatly tends to the Obstruction of the Course of Justice in Our High Court of Parliament; and that among these Disorderly Rabble there are divers Papists, Persons Disaffected to Our Government, who have never taken any Oaths appointed by Law to be taken, to bear Faith and true Allegiance to Us; but in Open Defiance of Our Regal Authority, as Enemies of Our Crown and Dignity, have so far Transgressed the known Laws of this Land, as in a Rebellious Manner to appear in many Places of Our said Cities and Suburbs, bearing weapons in their Hands and with Force Breaking open and Entering divers Houses and Edifices belonging to Our Subjects, in several Parts of Our said Cities and Suburbs: And having received an Humble Address from Our Commons of Great Britain, in Parliament Assembled, Expressing their just Detestation and Abhorrence of these Wicked, Seditious, and Traiterous Practices; and Beseeching Us, that We would be Graciously Pleased to take Effectual Measures to Suppress these Tumults, Set up and Fomented by Papists, Nonjurors, and other Enemies to Our Title and Government, as aforesaid, and to Issue forth Our Royal Proclamation, Promising a Reward to such as shall Discover and Seize these Incendiaries as have been the Occasion of the said late Tumults and Disorders: We taking the Premises into Our Royal Consideration, by the Advice of Our Privy Council, and in pursuance of the said Humble Address of Our said Commons in this present Parliament Assembled, Have thought fit to Put forth this Our Royal Proclamation, to Declare, That all such Rioters, Traitors and Rebels and all their Accomplices, Adherents, Abettors, and Advisers, shall be forthwith Proceeded against according to the utmost Severity of Law. #### JAMES R.<sup>1</sup>

JAMES THE THIRD, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, etc.: To all Kings, Princes, and Potentats, and our Loving Subjects, Greeting.

In such an extraordinary and important conjuncture in which not only our Hereditary Right to our Crowns is so unjustly violated, but the interest of all the Sovereign

<sup>1</sup> So far as the editor can ascertain, this proclamation has escaped the notice of writers on the history of this period.

Princes of Europe is so deeply concern'd, we could not be silent without being wanting to ourself and them.

Every body knows that the Revolution in the year 1688 ruin'd the English Monarchy and lay'd the foundation of a Republican Government, by devolving the Sovereign power on the People, who assembl'd themselves without any Authority, voted themselves a Parliament, and assum'd a Right of deposing and electing Kings contrary to the fundamentall Laws of the Land, and the most express and solemn Oaths that Christians are capable of taking. And no body can be ignorant how unjustly the late King our Father, of blessed memory, suffered by this unjustifiable Revolution.

After his Demise, his Crowns which the Prince of Orange had usurp'd, being then rightfully ours, according to the fundamentall Laws of the Land, we immediately claim'd our Right to the Same by a Declaration under our great Seal dated at St. Germain, 8 Oct. 1701, and as soon as it pleas'd Divine Providence to enable us to attempt the recovery thereof, we readily embrac'd the occasion, and 'tis sufficiently known that the miscarriage of the expedition could not be imputed to us.

When we found after this that a Treaty of Peace was upon the point of being concluded without any regard had to us, we publish'd our Protestation dated at St. Germain the 25 April 1712, in the most solemn and most Authentick manner our Circumstances would then allow of, asserting thereby our incontestable Right to our Crowns, and protesting against whatever might be stipulated in the said Treaty to our prejudice.

Tho' we have been oblig'd since that time to remove from France to a remoter place, we have still continued to have our Kingdoms and our People in our view, to whom we are convinc'd that God in his mercy will sooner or later restore us; and notwithstanding the malice and open Rebellion of some and the forc'd compliance of others, we have never ceas'd to hope that God would in time open our People's eyes, and convince them not onely of the notorious injustice to the Crown and us, but of the dangerous consequences thereof for themselves. It is not our interest alone we are concern'd for, our naturall and unalterable love for our People is such, that as we could not see without grief their blood and Treasure lavish'd in the last war in opposition to our undoubted Right, so we can not now with less sorrow see them expos'd to be subjected to an Arbitrary Power, and become a prey to foreigners.

Besides that the Elector of Brunswick is one of the remotest Relations we have, and consequently one of the remotest Pretenders to our Crowns after us, it is evident that nothing is more opposite to the Maxims of England in all respects than that unjust settlement of the Succession upon his family. He his [sic] a foreigner, a powerfull Prince, and absolute in his own Country, where he has never met with the least contradiction from his Subjects: He is ignorant of our Laws, Manners, Customs and Language, and supported by a good Army of his own People, besides the assistance which a neighbouring State is oblig'd to grant him upon demand, and many thousands of Aliens refug'd in England these thirty years past, who haveing their dependance wholly upon him will be ready to stand by him upon all occasions.<sup>1</sup>

Moreover what can our Subjects expect but endless wars and Divisions from subverting so sacred and fundamentall a Constitution as that of Hereditary Right, which has still prevail'd against all usurpations how successful and for how long time soever continued, the Government finding still no rest till it return'd again to its true Center. And how can they be ignorant of the just pretentions of so many other Princes that are before the House of Hanover, whose Right, after us, will be as undoubted as our own, and who neither want will nor power to assert it in their turns, and to intail a perpetuall war upon our Kingdom, with a Civill war in their own bowels, which their Divisions will make unavoidable.

From all which it is plain our People can never enjoy any lasting peace or happiness till they settle the succession again in the right Line, and recall us the immediat Lawfull Heir, and the onely born English-man now left of the Royall family.

This being certainly the true interest of Great Britain we had reason to hope that a wise People would not have lost so naturall an occasion of recalling us as they have lately had, since they could not but see by all the steps we have hitherto made that we had rather ow our Restoration to the good will of our People than involve them in a war tho' never so just; Besides that they knew or might have known the reiterated inviolable assurances we have given them under our hand; that whensoever it should please God to restore us, we would make the Laws of the Land the Rule of the Government, and grant to our Subjects a generall Indemnity for whatever has been done contrary to the said Laws, and all the Security and Satisfaction they could desire for the Preservation of their Religion, Rights, Libertys and Propertys.

Yet, contrary to our expectations, upon the death of the Princess owr Sister (of whose good intention towards us we could not for some time past well doubt,<sup>1</sup> and this was the reason we then sat still, expecting the good effects thereof, which were unfortunately prevented by her deplorable death) we found that our People instead of takeing this favorable opportunity of retrieveing the honour and true interest of their Country by doing us and themselves justice, had proclaimed for their King a foreign Prince to our prejudice contrary to the fundamentall and incontestable Laws of Hereditary Right, which their pretended Acts of settlement can never abrogat.

After this height of injustice we then thought ourselves bound in honour and duty and indissensably oblig'd by what we ow to ourself, to our Posterity, and to our People, to endeavour to assert our Right in the best manner we could; accordingly upon the first notice sent us we parted from our ordinary Residence in order to repair to some part of our Dominions, and there to put ourself at the head of such of our Loyall Subjects as were dispos'd to stand by us, and defend us and themselves from all foreign Invasion: But in our passing through France to the Sea-coast, we were there not onely refus'd all succour and assistance, upon account of the engagements that King is under by the late Treaty of Peace,<sup>1</sup> but we were even debarr'd passage, and oblig'd to return back to Lorraine.

After meeting with such sensible disappointments from all sides, the onely comfort left us, is, that we have done our part at least to attain our just ends, and have nothing upon that score to reproach ourself with; and as our Cause is just we doubt not but God will in his own due time furnish us with new means to support it, and that he will at last touch the hearts of our Subjects with a true sense of the crying injury they have done us and themselves, and move them effectually to return to their duty.

We likewise hope that all Christian Princes and Potentats who are now in Peace together will reflect upon the dangerous example is here given them, and the formidable effects they are threatened with from such an united force as that of England and Hannover, and that they'l seriously consider whether the exorbitant power that now accrues to the House of Brunswick be consistent with the ballance of power they have been fighting for all this last war. And therefore we call on them for their assistance for the recovery of our Dominions, which their interest as well as honour engages them to grant to us as far as they are able.

In the mean time, in the Circumstances we are in, we have nothing left in our power to do at present but to declare to the world that as our Right is indefeasible, so we are resolv'd with the help of God never to depart from it but with our life. And we do therefore here solemnly protest again in the strongest manner we are capable of, against all injustices that have been, or shall hereafter be done to the prejudice of us, our Lawfull Heirs, or Successors, reserving and asserting by these presents under our great Seal all our Rights, Claims and Pretentions whatsoever, which do, and shall remain in their full force and vigour, declaring that after this we shall not think ourself answerable before God or man for the pernicious consequences which this new usurpation of our Crowns may draw upon our Subjects and upon all Christendom. Given at our Court at Plombieres the 29 day of April 1714 and in the 13 year of our Reign.

<sup>1</sup> According to the Rev. John Anderson (The Celtic Earls of Atholl, Scots Peerage, vol. i. p. 419), Henry, Earl of Atholl, had a son 'apparently illegitimate, who described himself as Conan, son of Henry, late Earl of Atholl, in a charter by him to the monks of Lindores giving to them the privilege of taking dead wood and other timber from his wood of Tulyhen or Tulloch, near Blair Atholl. This charter, which may be dated about 1220, is witnessed by Ewyn or Ewen, son of the granter, and Hath, son of Gilbrid, his son-in-law. Conan also made a similar grant to the monks of Cupar from his lands of Glenherthy and Tolkyne (Glennerrichdie and Tulloch) which was confirmed by his son, Eugenius or Ewen, who married Mary, daughter and co-heiress of Conval, son of Duncan, Laird of Tullibardine.' This same Ewen, being in need of money, obtained a loan of twenty merks from the monks of Cupar, and in security thereof granted them the following wadset of his wood of Kilbrochache in the year 1282.

struenda exceptis ramis et mortuo bosco ad sustentationem sui forestarii quem habebunt ibidem ad dictum boscum custodiendum. Et ego similiter habebō ibidem servientem meum qui segites meas et pascua nec non et dictum boscum cum dicto forestario similiter custodiet. Et est sciendum quod si contingat me vel aliquem heredum meorum aliquo casu contingente vel aliqua necessitate compellente antequam dicta pecunia fuerit soluta terram meam de Kelbrochachyu vel aliquam ejus partem impignorare vel alicui ad firmam dare preter quam filiis meis et husbandis vel aliquo alio modo a me et heredibus meis ad tempus vel imperpetuum alienare dicti viri religiosi habebunt dictam terram ante omnes alios pro eodem foro quod alii dare voluerint. Preterea est sciendum quod quando-cunque ego vel heredes mei dictas viginti marcas dictis abbati et conventui persolverimus dictum boscum una cum presenti scripto ad me et heredes meos sine omni contradictione libere revertetur salvo dictis abbati et conventui communi suo quod in predicto bosco ex collatione antecessorum meorum ab antiquo habuerunt et habent. Ego vero et heredes mei presentem conventionem dictis abbati et conventui contra omnes homines et feminas warantizabimus et defendemus. Volo et et [sic] concedo quod dicti viri religiosi possint me et heredes meos ad observationem omnium predictorum compellere per districtum regium vel per censuram ecclesiasticam vel per quamcumque aliam viam visum fuerit eis melius expedire. Renunciando pro me et heredibus meis omni exceptioni juris et facti omni prohibicione et omni juris auxilio canonici et civilis. Nec non et omnibus litteris a quacumque curia impetratis et impetrandis et omnibus indulgenciis cruce-signatis et cruce-signandis indultis et indulgendis.

Insuper supposui me et heredes meos jurisdictioni et cohercioni virorum discretorum magistrorum W. Archidiaconi et H. officialis Dunkeldensis quod ipsi et eorum successores vel eorum alter qui ad hoc fuerit requisitus possint vel possit in me et heredes meos sententiam excommunicationis et in terras nostras sententias interdicti nullamonicione premissa fulminare si presumerimus contra dictam convencionem in toto vel in parte venire nullatenus relaxandam donec dictis viris religiosis tam de transgressione quam de expensis gravaminibus et dampnis quas vel que occasione hujus transgressionis fecerint vel incurrerint ad plenum fuerit satisfactionem et credetur super hoc simplia veredicto dicti abbatis et dutorum commonachorum suorum quos ad hoc voluerit connotare sine alio onere probationis. Ad ista ante omnia sine fraude dolo et malo ingenio firmiter et fideliter observanda in manu dicti officialis fidem prestiti corporalem. In cujus rei testimonium presenti scripto sigillum meum unacum sigillo dicti officialis feci apponi. Datum apud albam capellam fratrum ordinis de Monte Carmely apud Perth die sancti Dyonisii anno gratiæ millesimo ducentesimo octogesimo secundo. Teste capitulo.

CHARTER by KING JAMES II. endowing a chaplaincy in the Parish Church of Tain, dated October 10, 1457<sup>1</sup>

Jacobus dei gratia Rex Scotorum Omnibus probis hominibus totius terre sue clericis et laicis Salutem. Sciatis nos in laudem et honorem omnipotentis Dei et gloriosissime Virginis Marie matris sue et beatissimi Duthaci confessoris <sup>1</sup> This charter is of considerable historical value. It does not appear in the Register of the Great Seal, which indeed contains only one charter of the year 1457. It also shows that King James II. was in Inverness in October 1457—a fact hitherto unknown.

The devotion of James IV. to St. Duthac is well known. He made several pilgrimages to his shrine—the last only a month before Flodden. Various explanations have been offered, one being that the King was born in Tain. It is also the fact that a similar devotion was exhibited by his father James III., whose benefactions are recorded in a charter by the Bishop of Ross, dated 18th September and confirmed 3rd December 1487. But the present charter shows that, however it originated, this devotion was of older standing in his family. It also indicates that at this time when the chaplaincy was endowed the church was already collegiate, and that accordingly what happened in 1487 must have been a reorganisation and not the original foundation. It explains various entries in the Exchequer Rolls of payments made from the fermes of Dunskaith for the support of a chaplaincy in the parish church of Tain.

It will also be noticed that among the witnesses is John, Lord of the Isles and Earl of Ross, who at this time was on friendly terms with the King and had just been appointed a Warden of the Marches.

Canons on an island in the Lake of Menteith. From its name Inchmahome—the isle of Mocholmoc—it would seem that there must have been there some ancient Celtic religious foundation associated with St. Colmoc.

In 1531 the Priory was held in commendam by Robert Erskine, who was killed at Pinkie in 1547. He was succeeded by his younger brother John, afterwards Lord Erskine, for whom the Earldom of Mar was restored or recreated by Queen Mary in 1565.

The three religious houses of Inchmahome, Dryburgh, and Cambuskenneth, with the lands belonging to them, were erected into the Lordship of Cardross and granted to his eldest son and successor in 1606.

INVENTORY of JOHN MACMORANE,<sup>1</sup> 16 Nov. 1596

THE Inventar of ye guidis & geir pertening to umqle
 Johnne makmorane being within his awin dwelling hous

<sup>1</sup> John MacMorane, whose inventory is here printed, was a magistrate of Edinburgh. The story of his death is thus told by Professor Masson (Register of the Privy Council, vol. v. p. 238, note 1): The boys of the High School, or a portion of them, having petitioned the Town Council, as patrons of the school, for an extension of the holidays, and having been disappointed with the result, had on the 13th of September 1595 barred out the master, Mr. Hercules Rollock, shut themselves up in the school with provisions and weapons, and defied the authorities. They had stood siege for a day and a half, when, on the 15th of September, Bailie Macmorran, with other bailies of the town and a posse of constables, came to the school—then a long, low building on the site of the old Blackfriars' monastery—and having been refused admittance, was forcing it by means of a log of wood applied as a battering-ram to one of the doors. One of the boys, presenting a gun at the window, and calling the bailies 'buttery carles,' fired a shot, which went through Bailie Macmorran's head, killing him on the spot. The boys had then succumbed in horror; some had fled; but eight of them had been arrested, including the boy who had fired the shot—William Sinclair, son of the Chancellor of Caithness. They narrowly escaped being torn to pieces at once by the mob; and there was great excitement over the case for some time—the magistrates and citizens, with Bailie Macmorran's relatives, insisting on revenge and scouting all offers of money-compensation, while the friends of the culprits, most of them 'gentlemen's sons,' exerted themselves on their behalf, and had the sympathies of the Court. The history of the case so far is related in the present petition of the seven less culpable boys, after they had been in prison for two months and a half. The result was that all got off soon afterwards, Sinclair included. Bailie Macmorran seems to have been the same John Macmorran of whom previous traces may be found in the Register by the index. He had been a servant to Regent Morton, and a sheriff's officer or messenger before rising to the civic dignity. Calderwood, in noticing his death (v. 382), says 'He was the richest merchant of his time, but not gracious to the commoun people, because he carried victuall to Spaine, notwithstanding he was often admonished by the ministers to refraine.' His house and place of business was in Riddle's Court in the Lawnmarket, and a very good specimen of the house of a wealthy Edinburgh citizen in the sixteenth century.

Till the demolition of the Old High School building in 1777 the window from which he was shot used to be known to the boys as 'The Bailie's Window.'

In 1581 he was created Duke of Lennox, Earl of Darnley, Lord d'Aubigny, Tarbolton, and Dalkeith. It is therefore noteworthy that his son has dropped the title of Dalkeith and assumed that of Methven, thus confirming a statement cited in the Scots Peerage, vol. vi. p. 169, that the title of Methven being 'decaied of want of heires and comming to the Kings hands he hath disponit it to the Duke [of Lennox].'

<sup>1</sup> Macaulay of Ardincaple was the chief of a very ancient clan who at one time were numerous in the Lennox. In 1591 a bond of mutual assistance was entered into between 'Alexander MacGrigor of Glenstray and Awlay Macawlay of Ardingapill understanding ourselfs and our name to be Macalpkins of awld and to be our just and trew surname quherof we are all cumen'—the seniority of the Macgregor ancestor being admitted and the Macaulays being accepted as a 'brenche of his house.' These Lennox Macaulays had, of course, no connection with the Scandinavian Macaulays of the Lewis (vide Highland Papers, vol. ii. p. 8, note 1). And yet when Macaulay the historian was made a peer, he obtained from the English heralds a coat of arms indicative of Ardincaple descent!!

Mr. John A. Fairley, to whom all interested in Old Edinburgh are so much indebted for his article on 'The Old Tolbooth' (Book of the Old Edinburgh Club, vol. iv.), has had the kindness to read this document and furnish the following note:—

'The items of the Inventory seem too luxurious for the Tolbooth. It should be remembered that the Keeper usually had other interests, and often became a man of substance. Possibly the articles in question were delivered to him in connection with some transaction quite apart from the Tolbooth. I think this very likely, and that the words "Keeper of ye Tolbooth" were added to the document to distinguish the particular "Andrew Quhytt."'

A SPEECH made to the LORD GENERALL MONCK in the cloth-makers' Hall in London, ye 13 of March St. Vet.<sup>1</sup> at which tyme he wes ther interteind by that worthie companie <sup>2</sup>

Nay, then let me come to with my adress
 Why may not Rustiek promise or Profess

<sup>2</sup> Monck arrived at Whitehall on 3rd February and King Charles landed at Dover on 25th May 1660. In the interval every possible kind of intrigue went on. The disreputable Rump was fighting for its existence, and open hostility broke out between it and the City of London, which refused to pay taxes. In reply the Rump ordered Monck and his army to enter the city. They did so, but soon showed where their sympathies lay; and on 11th February, Monck delighted the Corporation by intimating that he had formally and peremptorily demanded the issue of writs for a new parliament. In his Diary, under date 11th April 1660, Pepys writes: 'All the news from London is that things go on further towards a King. That the Skinners Company the other day at their entertaining of General Monk had took down the Parliament Arms in their hall and set up the King's.'

On this statement Lord Braybrooke has the following note:—'His Excellency had now dined at 9 of the chief Halls. At every hall there was, after dinner, a kind of stage play and many pretty conceits and dancing and singing and many shapes and ghosts and the like, and all to please Lord Monk' (Rugges Diurnal). One of these halls was that of the Cloth Workers Company; and in Hazlitt's Livery Companies of the City of London, p. 337, it is said that 'a speech or address prepared by Thomas Jordan, the City poet, was delivered to him in the course of the entertainment.' Three such addresses, viz. those given at the Vintners', Fishmongers', and Goldsmiths' Halls, appear in the British Museum Catalogue, but that delivered at the Cloth Workers' Hall is apparently now printed for the first time. A detailed account of Thomas Jordan is given in the Dictionary of National Biography. An actor and playwright as well as a writer of verse, he was, in 1671, appointed poet to the Corporation of London. The chief duties of the City laureate, it is said, were to invent pageants for the successive Lord Mayor's shows, and to compose a yearly panegyric upon the Lord Mayor elect; and these he discharged with conspicuous success. He is supposed to have died in 1685.

Debauchd by them they thought did teach & Reull them
 And now they find, did ruin & befooll them
 Our meining still wes honest but allace
 Wee neuer dreamd of what since cum'd to Passe
 T'was Neuer our intent to violate
 The setled orders of the Church and State
 To throw down rullers from their Lawfull Seat
 Mirrely to make Ambitious small things great
 Or to subwert the Lawes, bot we thought then

 Or yet for Liberties, for these things

 Nor yet for Peace, for iff we hade done so

 Yet we did fight and we did sie for what

Lord Callendar died in 1674, and was succeeded in the title by his nephew Alexander, who became 2nd Earl of Callendar. By his will, however, Lord Callendar disposed to Alexander Livingston, second son of George, 3rd Earl of Linlithgow, and eventually 3rd Earl of Callendar, inter alia, 'his hail mouceable insight and pleneshing and all moveable goods whatsoever.' LETTER by LORD PRESIDENT HOPE regarding LORD
BRAXFIELD, 1837

MY DEAR SIR,—I ought long ago to have returned the Memoir of Sir Wm. Pulteney, which I now do with your last one of Lord Braxfield; that story told of him by Lockhart,<sup>1</sup> I knew instantly to be an infamous falsehood; for, with you, I am quite certain that he never played at Chess in his life, it was much too tame a game for him. A man who loses at Chess has nothing to blame but his own bad play; Whereas at whist honest Braxfield used heartily to curse the cards, and his partner, and even his adversaries. But to make quite sure of the falsehood of the Chess story, I ordered a search to be made in books of the Circuit Courts, & I found that Braxfield never tried any Case of Forgery either at Ayr or Dumfries, and that the only man he ever tried & condemned for fforgerly was <sup>1</sup> It was to the effect that after sentencing to death for forgery an old friend with whom he had often played chess he ejaculated, 'And now, Donald my man, I think I have checkmated you for once.' According to Lockhart's Life of Scott (1st edition, vol. iii. p. 341), this story was told by Sir Walter at a dinner party at Carlton House, and 'the Regent laughed heartily at this specimen of MacQueen's brutal humour.' In the second edition, published in 1839, the story is given, but the name of the judge is suppressed. It is told also of Lord Kames in Cockburn's Memorials, p. 117, footnote. In The Riddle of the Ruthvens, etc., p. 50, Mr. Routhead, on the authority of an MS. Life of Lord Braxfield in the library of the University of Edinburgh, by Alexander Young, W.S., gives an explanation. Lord President Hope, it is said, who knew Braxfield intimately, on the appearance of the anecdote, wrote to Blackwood indignantly denying its truth, and the passage was withdrawn in subsequent editions. This letter seems to support that explanation. It is a matter of regret that the Lord President was not spared to deal with some of Lord Cockburn's observations about Lord Braxfield.

at Stirling, & instead of being any acquaintance of his, He was a miserable shopkeeper in the Town of Falkirk. Lockhart has not done credit either to himself or to Sir Walter by his life of him, for there are many other stories in it equally false, tho' not as malignant. I have many many very queer anecdotes of Braxfield, which come across my memory at times, which, if I could recollect them all at once, would make a splendid Ana.—Believe me, my dear Sir, faithfully Yours
C. HOPE.

It was the fatal illness, & at last the unexpected death of my Sister Lady Mary Murray, so soon after receiving your Memoirs of Sir Wm. P., which put that, & every thing else out of my head.
