

The Spiritualist

AND JOURNAL OF PSYCHOLOGICAL SCIENCE.

[REGISTERED FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.]

No. 77.—(VOL. IV.—No. 7.) LONDON: FEBRUARY 13, 1874. Published Weekly; Price Threepence

Contents.

Spirit Teachings.	73
Clairvoyance of the Blind	75
A Scance on the Great Pyramid	76
A Haunted Prison	77
Mr. Gerald Massey on Spiritualism	77
A Scance at Mr. Sergeant Cox's	78
Spiritualism at the London Anthropological Society—What is the best Method of Demonstrating the Reality of Spiritual Phenomena?—What Professor Leitner Thinks—Does the Anthropological Society know all the Laws of Nature—The Cross examination of Ghosts—Spiritualism and Materialism—A Proposal to Investigate Spiritualism—The Reliability of Tradition	78
A Strange Partnership	81
Spirit Poetry.—The Kingdom	82
Spirit Forms	82
Correspondence.—The Grasp of a Spirit Hand, 83; Swedenborg on Spiritual Communion, 83; Other World Order	84
Paragraphs.—A Curious Trance, 83; Spiritualism in Canada, 84; Accident to Dr. Sexton, 84; Mr. Massey in America	84
Answers to Correspondents.	84

Crown 8vo. pp. 126, Cloth 2s. 6d.

HINTS for the "EVIDENCES of SPIRITUALISM."

By M.P.

London: Tribner and Co., 57 and 59, Ludgate-hill.

The Best Book for Enquirers. 2nd Edition.

WHERE ARE THE DEAD? or, SPIRITUALISM EXPLAINED.

Containing well authenticated and selected reports of all the different phases of modern spirit phenomena, from table-turning to the visible materialisation of the faces and forms of the departed, and the photographing of spirits; proving by undeniable facts that those we mourn as

DEAD ARE STILL ALIVE,

and can communicate with us; and that Spiritualism is sanctioned by Scripture, and consistent with science and common sense; and specimens of intensely interesting communications received touching death, the future life, and the experiences of the departed. Also extracts from the literature of Spiritualism, advice to investigators, list of books, addresses of mediums, and all useful information. By FRITZ.

Price 3s.; or post free 39 stamps, from A. Ireland & Co., publishers, Manchester, who will forward copies of the table of contents on application.

LONDON: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL & CO.

EAST LONDON SPIRITUAL MEETINGS.—LECTURES

giving information about Spiritualism are delivered every Wednesday evening at 8.30 p.m., at Mr. Cogman's Lecture Rooms, 15, St. Peter's-road, Mile-end. Inspirational addresses every Sunday evening, at Seven o'clock. Admission Free. Supported by voluntary contributions.

THE ST. JOHN'S ASSOCIATION OF SPIRITUALISTS.—SUNDAY EVENING SERVICES ARE HELD AT GOSWELL HALL,

86, Goswell-road, commencing at 7 o'clock. Admission free. Special meetings, for Members only, on Thursday evening; also a Library for use of Members. Prospectus and Rules may be had on application to the Secretary at the Committee Rooms, 30, Parkfield-street, Islington.

R. PEARCE, Hon. Sec.

BIRKBECK BANK. Established 1851.—29 and 30, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane.

Four per Cent. Interest allowed on Deposits.

Current Accounts opened similar to the Joint-Stock Banks, but without any stipulation as to amount of balance to be kept by the customer. Cheque Books supplied.

Purchases and Sales of British, Foreign, and Colonial Bonds, Stocks Shares, &c., effected. Advances made thereon.

Office hours from 10 till 4, on Mondays from 10 till 9, and on Saturdays from 10 till 2 o'clock.

A Pamphlet containing full particulars may be obtained gratis, or sent post free on application to

FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

WANTED BY A SPIRITUALIST.—A Situation as

MESSANGER, or COLLECTOR, or PACKER, in a Bookseller's and Stationer's Warehouse. Age 28. Address, G. F. Taylor, 5, Trinity-place, Trinity-street, Southwark, S.E.

MRS. CORA L. V. TAPPAN'S SUNDAY EVENING INSPIRATIONAL DISCOURSES.

NEW COURSE.

AT CLEVELAND HALL, CLEVELAND-STREET, OXFORD-STREET.

Committee:—

- Dr. Gully, M.D., Hill Side, Streatham, Chairman.
 N. F. Dawe, Esq., Fortman Chambers, Portman-square, W.
 J. T. Hoskins, Esq., 5, Connaught-square, W.
 T. H. Noyes, jun., Esq., "United University Club," Suffolk-street Pall-mall, S.W.
 Thomas Slater, Esq., 136, Euston-road, N.W.
 Mrs. Honeywood, 52, Warwick-square, S.W., Treasurer.
 Webster Glynes, Esq., 4, Gray's-inn-square, W.C., Hon. Secretary.

At an influential meeting recently held the above-mentioned persons were appointed a working Committee, with power to add to their number, for inaugurating a further course of 12 Discourses by Mrs. Tappan, on Sunday evenings.

The lectures commenced on the 18th January, and they will be continued up to the 5th April next. Doors open at 6.15 p.m., to commence at 7 precisely.

It is estimated that the expense of holding the course will be £144, or £12 a night.

Of this amount it is expected that £50 only will be obtained from the admission of the general public.

The balance of £94 must therefore be procured from other sources.

The Committee make an earnest appeal for support, and solicit liberal donations from the friends of the movement.

Tickets sold at the doors, also at Chappell's or Ollivier's, Bond-street, or Burns's, 15, Southampton-row, Holborn.

In order to prevent interruption it is requested that no person leave before the conclusion of the service. No admittance after the discourse has begun.

Donations thankfully received by the Treasurer or Hon. Secretary.

Reserved seats 2s. and 1s. each; Back seats 6d.

Body of the Hall free.

THE LIVERPOOL PSYCHOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

OFFICE-BEARERS FOR 1873.

President.—James Wason, Esq. Vice-President.—Mr. John Lamont.

Secretary.

Mr. John Davidson, 45, Kensington, Liverpool.

Treasurer.—Mr. Chatham. Librarian.—Mr. H. J. Charlton.

Committee of Management.

- | | |
|-----------------------|----------------|
| Mr. Archibald Lamont. | Mr. Riecc. |
| Mr. William Meredith. | Mr. Davis. |
| Mr. G. Wharmby. | Mr. Knox. |
| Mr. Dinsdale. | Mr. Garland. |
| Mr. R. Casson. | Mr. Dean. |
| Mr. D. Gay. | Mrs. Dinsdale. |
| Mr. T. B. Griffin. | Mrs. Casson. |

Mrs. Gay.

Trustees.

Mr. Joseph Shepherd. | Mr. John Lamont.
 Mr. J. Chapman.

Auditors.

Mr. Bretherton. | Mr. H. J. Charlton.

THE object of this Association is the discovery of truth in connection with Psychology.

The Society seeks to attain its object by the following measures, or such of them as from time to time are found to be practicable.

1.—By frequent meetings of its members for conference, inquiry, instruction, mental improvement, spiritual culture, social intercourse, and healthful recreation.

2.—By engaging in the education of children and others, for the purpose of developing their physical, mental, and spiritual powers.

3.—By the dissemination of knowledge by means of public instruction lectures, reading-rooms, the press, and spirit communion.

January 9th, 1874.

Lately published,
WHAT AM I? A Popular Introduction to Mental Philosophy and Psychology. Vol. I. The MECHANISM of MAN by EDWARD W. COX, Sergeant-at-Law. Price 8s. 6d.

CONTENTS.

CHAP.	CHAP.
1. Introduction.	24. The Mechanism of the Mind: The Intellectual Faculties.
2. What am I?	25. The Mechanism of the Mind: The Faculties that perceive the relations of external objects.
3. The Man.	26. The Mechanism of the Mind: The Reflective Faculties.
4. How we Grow.	27. Of the Memory.
5. How we live.	28. How the Machinery of the Mind works.
6. What Life is.	29. Of the Will.
7. The Beginning of Life.	30. The Soul—its Dwelling and its Destiny.
8. The Germ.	31. Soul—Spirit—Anima.
9. How we die.	32. The Argument.
10. How we are Moved.	33. Consciousness.
11. The Senses.	34. Presumptive Proofs.
12. Of the Sense of Sight.	35. The Natural and the Supernatural.
13. Of the Sense of Hearing.	36. What the Soul is.
14. Of the Senses of Taste and Smell.	37. The Dwelling-place of the Soul.
15. Of the Sense of Touch.	38. The Shape of the Soul.
16. Of the Evidence of the Senses.	39. The Condition of the Soul after Death.
17. About Life.	40. The Outlook of the Soul.
18. Of the Brain.	41. The Pre-existence of the Soul.
19. The Mechanism of the Mind.	42. The Dwelling-place of the Soul.
20. Classification of the Mental Powers.	43. The Condition of the Soul.
21. The Mechanism of the Mind: The Propensities.	44. The Mystery.
22. The Mechanism of the Mind: The Sentiments Common to Man with the Lower Animals.	45. Conclusions.
23. The Mechanism of the Mind: The Sentiments Proper to Man.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

A most useful and charming book.—Standard.
 Serjeant Cox sketches his psychological system with a bold, free, and no unsteady hand.—Daily Review.
 Written in such plain language and in such a popular and entertaining style.—Oxford Herald.
 A remarkable book.—Builder.
 A work that may be very profitably read.—Figaro.
 We commend it to the serious study of those who would find an intelligible answer to the momentous question "What am I?"—Leicester Mercury.
 Mr. Serjeant Cox's work is full of thought, and well worth reading.—Morning Post.
 Contains much ingenious speculation which, at least, seems to solve some of the manifold mysteries of life.—Leicester Daily Post.
 There is much to challenge the attention of reflectiv readers.—Bristol Mercury.
 The work will be found of the greatest value, not only to the scientific scholar, but to every reader who is desirous of knowing himself.—Irish Daily Telegraph.
 We think very highly of this attempt to set forth psychology.—Literary Churchman.
 These speculations are full of interest.—South Wales Daily News.
 We await the second volume with some anxiety, anticipating much food for thought and speculation.—Eastern Daily Press.
 This book is rightly termed popular; a book, which for clearness of statement, is worthy of all praise.—Norwich Mercury.
 The industry and research of the author are only equalled by the ability in marshalling his facts.—Somerset Gazette.
 London: LONGMAN and Co., Paternoster-row.

Lately published,

JUST OF "WHAT AM I?"
 A Popular Introduction to Psychology and Mental Philosophy. By EDWARD W. COX, Sergeant-at-Law. Price 10s. 6d.
 This Volume completes the work. It treats of the Mechanism of Man in action. The following are the

CONTENTS:—

CHAP.	CHAP.
Preface.	16. Of Artificial Somnambulism.
1. Introductory.	VI. History.
2. Of the Intelligent Motive Forces.	17. Of Artificial Somnambulism.
3. The Conditions of Existence.	VII. Healing Power.
4. The Mechanism in Health.	18. Of Artificial Somnambulism.
5. Of Sleep.	VIII. Supersensuous Perception.
6. Of Dreams.	19. Of Artificial Somnambulism.
7. Of some of the Phenomena of Sleep and Dreams.	IX. Thought Reading.
8. Of Delirium.	20. Of Trance.
9. Of Insanity.	21. Of Unconscious Cerebration.
10. Of Natural Somnambulism.	22. Of Psychic Force.
11. Of Artificial Somnambulism. I. The Condition.	23. Of Psychic Force. I. The Proofs.
12. Of Artificial Somnambulism. II. Clairvoyance.	24. Of Psychic Force. II. Its Physiology.
13. Of Artificial Somnambulism. III. The Mental Phenomena.	25. Of Psychic Force. III. The Directing Intelligence.
14. Of Artificial Somnambulism. IV. Ca'alepey.	26. Other Psychic Phenomena. I. Communicated.
15. Of Artificial Somnambulism. V. Insensibility and Unconsciousness.	27. Other Psychic Phenomena. II. Experiments.
	28. The Summing Up
	29. The Conclusions.

VOL. I. MAY BE HAD, PRICE 8s. 6d.
 London: LONGMAN & Co., Paternoster-row.

THE PROGRESSIVE SPIRITUALIST AND FREE THOUGHT ADVOCATE, a Weekly Journal. Edited by J. TYERMAN. Price Threepence. To be had of W. H. Terry, 96, Russell-street Melbourne, and all Australian Booksellers.

DALSTON ASSOCIATION OF ENQUIRERS INTO SPIRITUALISM. (ESTABLISHED 1870.)

President.—Mr. Alfred E. Lovell.

Council.

Mrs. C. A. Blyton,	Mr. A. M. Greene,
Mrs. George Blyton,	Mr. Joseph Stephens,
Mrs. Amelia Corner,	Mr. R. Pomeroy Tredwen,
Mrs. Theresa Wood,	Mr. Thomas Wilks.

Mr. A. M. Greene, Secretary, pro. tem.

A DESIRE for investigation being felt by many on hearing of the phenomena of Spiritualism, several residents in Dalston and its neighbourhood thought that if an Association were formed, and investigation instituted, the alleged facts of Spiritualism, if true, might be demonstrated. Accordingly, a preliminary Meeting was called and this Association formed on the 15th September, 1870.

Its purposes are the collection of facts, through its own circle, or circles, so as to form a perfect basis for honest opinion, and by various means to induce others to give the matter careful enquiry, before judging of the manifestations of modern Spiritualism.

Ordinary experimental seances are held weekly, on Thursday evenings, at 8 p.m., to which Members are admitted, as well as Members of similar Associations (vide Rule IX). Strangers can only be admitted to the ordinary seance held on the first Thursday evening in each month, on introduction by a Member. The last Thursday evening in each month is devoted to special seances with professional media, lectures, discussions, reading of papers, or narration of experiences of investigators; to which strangers are admitted, under the same regulations as are enforced on the first Thursday evening in each month.

All communications to be addressed to the Secretary, at the Rooms of the Association, 74, Navarino-road, Dalston, E. A stamped addressed envelope should be enclosed in all letters requiring replies.

DALSTON ASSOCIATION OF ENQUIRERS INTO SPIRITUALISM. (Established 1870.) Rooms, 74, Navarino-road, Dalston, E. Seances on Thursday evenings. Library for use of members Subscriptions:—Ordinary, 3s. quarterly; 5s. half-yearly; 10s. annual Honorary, 5s. quarterly; Life Membership, by donation of £2 2s. Prospectus and Rules on application to the Secretary.

ALFRED E. LOVELL, President.
 Mr. A. M. GREENE, Secretary pro. tem.

THE ST. JOHN'S ASSOCIATION OF SPIRITUALISTS.

President.—Mr. R. Barber.

Committee.

Mrs. Barber,	Mr. R. Howorth,
Mr. W. Cotter,	Miss Ranger,
Mr. Warner Thompson.

Librarian.—Mr. J. Cain. Treasurer.—Mr. J. S. Steele.
 Honorary Secretary.—Mr. Richard Pearce.

VERY soon after the introduction of Modern Spiritualism into England the subject attracted attention in Clerkenwell and neighbourhood, where several circles were formed, some of which were continued for a long number of years, and the great and increasing pressure from strangers for admission thereto led, in May, 1869, to the formation of this Association.

It seeks as its main object to assist, by various means, any person desirous to obtain information respecting Spiritualism, or to commence the investigation of its facts; but, whilst Members unite for this purpose, they have opportunities of improving their own knowledge of its teachings and varied phenomena, of becoming acquainted with the experience and opinions of others, and with the general literature of the movement.

Free public Services are held on Sunday evenings at Goswell Hall, 86, Goswell-road, and other meetings (of which announcement is duly made) are held on Thursday evenings; the latter meetings consist of seances, conferences, narrations of experience, the reading of papers, &c. Strangers are admitted on Thursday evenings on the introduction of a Member. Social gatherings are occasionally held for bringing Members and friends into closer acquaintance with one another. The Library is for the use of Members only.

Further information may be obtained from the Officers of the Association at the meetings, or by letter addressed to the Secretary at the Committee Rooms, 30, Parkfield-street, Islington.

New and Cheaper Edition, thoroughly revised, in One Volume, Demy, 8vo., pp. 780, price 7s. 6d.

EMANUEL SWEDENBORG: HIS LIFE AND WRITINGS. By WILLIAM WHITE. Wherein the History the Doctrines and the other-world Experiences of the Great Swede are concisely and faithfully set forth; also the singular Origin and Condition of the Swedenborgian Sect. The volume is illustrated with Four Steel Engravings, by C. H. JENNS—I. Jesper Svenberg, Bishop of Skara. II. Emmanuel Swedenborg, aged 46. III. Swedenborg's House, Stockholm. IV. Swedenborg, aged 80.

London: Simpkin, Marshall and Co.

Price 2s. 6d.

GLIMPSES OF A BRIGHTER LAND.—Showing the harmony of things spiritual with things material. "The tone of the book is exceedingly pure and good."—Christian Spiritualist.

* * * A list of spiritual and mesmeric works on application.

London: Bailliere and Co., King William-street, Strand.

The Spiritualist Newspaper,

A Record of the Progress of the Science and Ethics of Spiritualism.

VOLUME FOUR. NUMBER SEVEN.

LONDON, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 13th, 1874.

The Spiritualist Newspaper.

ESTABLISHED IN 1869.

CHARGE FOR ADVERTISEMENTS:—Three shillings and sixpence for the first fifty words or portion of fifty words, and sixpence for every ten words in addition. Ten initial letters or figures count as one word. Displayed Advertisements Five Shillings per inch Reduced terms for extended periods.

The Spiritualist is a very good medium for advertisements, because it circulates largely among those whom advertisers desire to reach, and an advertisement is not lost to view amid a mass of others. Moreover, the paper is not usually torn up when read, but preserved for binding.

CORRESPONDENCE.—Correspondents who write letters consisting of personal opinions, for publication, are requested not to make them more than a third of a column long. Letters containing important news or important facts may be longer sometimes.

All communications for the Advertising Department of this newspaper, to be addressed to Mr. T. Blyton, 11, Ave Maria Lane, London, E.C.; and orders intended for the Friday's issue should reach the office not later than by the first post on the previous Wednesday morning. All orders for papers, and letters for the Publishing Department should be directed to Mr. E. W. Allen, at the same address; and all communications for the Literary Department should be addressed to the Editor.

Subscriptions.—No notice is taken of orders received for papers unaccompanied by a remittance. The next twelve copies of The Spiritualist will be posted to any address in the United Kingdom on receipt of 3s. 6d.

London: E. W. Allen, 11, Ave Maria-lane, E.C.

Any delay or irregularity in the supply of "The Spiritualist" in London or in the provinces is the fault of the local news vendor or his City agent. Our publisher, Mr. E. W. Allen, 11, Ave Maria-lane, E.C., should always be informed of such impediments and irregularities, and copies can then be ordered of him by post, direct.

SUBSCRIBERS IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The Spiritualist may be ordered through the following dealers in Spiritual periodicals:—

UNITED STATES.

Rochester, N. Y.—D. M. Dewey, Arcade Hall.
Denver, Colorado.—S. A. Grant and Co., 383, Lorimer-street.
New Orleans.—George Ellis, 7, Old Levee-street.
San Francisco.—Herman Snow, 319, Kearney-street.
St. Louis.—Warren, Chase and Co., 614, North Fifth-street.
Philadelphia.—D. S. Cadwallader, 241, North Eleventh Street.
Washington.—Richard Roberts, 1026, Seventh Street.

AUSTRALIA.

Melbourne.—W. H. Terry, 96, Russell-street.
" Mr. B. Needham, bookseller, &c., 154, Bourke-street.
" Mr. H. G. Wynne, bookseller, &c., 149, Swanston-street.
" Mr. F. W. Needham, bookseller, 175, Elizabeth-street.
Carlton.—Mr. R. C. Thornton, 19, Queensberry-street.
Emerald Hill.—Mr. C. A. Durham, news agent, &c., 118 Clarendon-street.
Fitzroy.—Mrs. Campbell, news agent, 78, Gertrude-street.
" Mrs. Woodruff, news agent, 74, Bruaswick-street.
Richmond.—Mr. J. Cary, news agent, Bridge-road.
Sandridge.—J. T. Scholes, news agent, Bay-street.
Castlemaine.—H. Bamford, Bull-street.
Sandhurst.—J. Williams, 228, High-street.
Stawell.—M. Thornfeldt, Main-treet.
Taradale.—J. T. Riley, High-street.

Or The Spiritualist may be had by post direct from the London publisher, Mr. E. W. Allen, 11, Ave Maria-lane, St. Paul's-churchyard, by remitting to him the amount for the next thirty numbers, with postage. To America, Australia, and New Zealand the postage for each number is one penny, thus the total cost of thirty numbers is 10s., which may be remitted by Post Office Order. The cost of a Post Office Order for sums less than £2 between most of the English-speaking countries on the globe, and London, is one shilling.

FEMALE MEDICAL SOCIETY.

The Female Medical Society is established for the following objects:—
1.—To promote the employment of properly educated women in the practice of Midwifery, and the treatment of the Diseases of Women and Children.

2.—To provide educated women with proper facilities for learning the theory and practice of Midwifery, and the accessory branches of Medical Science.

The addresses of skilled Lady Midwives, Prospectuses of the College, and all particulars as to the operations of the Society, may be obtained of the Lady Secretary.

Temporary Offices—4, Fitzroy-square, W.

SPIRIT TEACHINGS.*

NO. VI.

An unsuccessful sitting having been held, the communicating spirits, through Mr. D. D. Home, said that conditions were interfered with by the Derby Day. I enquired for information on this point.

Friend, any such occasion disturbs the moral conditions, and renders it hard for us to reach you. The spirits who are antagonistic to us are massed together in great force whenever any occasion is offered for them to operate successfully on men who are gathered together for the purpose of gratifying their bodily passions. Yesterday there were vast masses whose passion of cupidity was excited to an enormous degree. They were the point of attack from similar spirits. Others there were whose bodies were wildly excited by intoxicating drinks; others who were feverish with expectation of coming gains; others again plunged into depths of despair by loss of all, the ready prey these last of the suggestions of tempting spirits; and even when these baser passions were not actively excited, the moral balance was upset; that calmness and equability which should regulate the temper, and which are as a shield against the foe, were absent, and so a chance of favourable assault was given. For, friend, short of absolute evil, much ground for assault is given by an ill-regulated, disordered mind, by minds un-hinged and ill-balanced. Avoid all such. They are frequently the ready agents of spirit influence, but of undeveloped and unwelcome guides. Beware of immoderate, unreasoning, excited frames of mind.

For these reasons the occasion to which you refer is one that would make largest demands on the efforts of the agents of good, lest the undeveloped, massed and disciplined for assault, succeed and draw down souls.

But what you say would apply to all national holidays.

Not necessarily so. So long as a holiday is associated with giving a loose rein to passion, with the immoderate use of fiery, intoxicating poison, with sensual gratifications, with the body and not with the spirit, it must needs be so. The body so situated places the spirit at the mercy of the adversaries. But the holi-

* In the Spiritualist of August 15th, an account was printed of some remarkable seances held at the house of Mr. Stanhope T. Spear, M.D., Douglas-house, Alexandra-road, St. John's-wood, through the mediumship of a gentleman in private life who does not wish his name to be published. It will be remembered that most of the spirits gave their names and proved their identity; also that the extracts they gave from their writings were found, after laborious search in the British Museum Library and elsewhere, to be true. Hence there is evidence that spirits can give teachings through this medium, free, to a large extent at all events, from colour from his own thoughts; consequently, the "spirit teachings" printed above, obtained through his mediumship, may be assumed to be to a considerable extent reliable. It is proper to state that these communications are selected in chronological order from a mass which has been given continuously for the past six months. Many of the originals are of such a personal nature that they are necessarily omitted, otherwise no change is made. The communicating spirits are many: each gives his name and details of his earth-life very fully. These facts, in all cases unknown to the medium previously, have been invariably found to be correct in every particular. The handwriting, peculiar to the communicating intelligence, is always preserved, and the individuality remains throughout the same.—Ed.

day that is associated with rest of body and refreshment of spirit is far from being such. When the bodily powers which have been drained by overtaxing work are recuperated by genial and moderate rest; when the mind, vexed and harassed by the worries and anxieties of daily toil, is refreshed by moderate amusement, and by being relaxed and plunged for awhile in oblivion of anxious care, the while it is braced and stimulated by pleasant change; when this is so, a gentle calm pervades the spirit, and renders it peculiarly open to the beneficent influences of the heavenly guardians. Thus the power of angel ministry is strengthened, and the plans of the most powerful adversaries are set at nought. Ye must progress far in knowledge of spirit guidance and of the duties ye owe to yourselves before your national holidays become aught but opportunities for the degradation of your people. The holiday that is marked by riot and debauchery, by sensuality and gambling, and evil, angry passion and despair, this is no holy day to us, but one to be dreaded and watched and prayed over. God help and guard the blind souls in their insensate folly!

* * * *

On enquiring about some results of a previous seance, it was written—

Yes, we have experimented, but it is extremely difficult to do anything well, or indeed to attempt special manifestations with you during the time that your daily work is of an exhausting description. We can only make attempts with care, and under carefully guarded conditions. Nor can we do anything save in the study, and when atmospheric conditions are favourable. Were your state of mind and body suitable we could do far more, and could show the lights you name more freely.

Can we do anything to help?

Keep yourself as passive and quiet as you can. When over-tired with work, or fretted with care, or exhausted, do not attempt to seek communion with us. Do not add to the circle any new elements which do but disturb and perplex conditions. Suffer us to perfect our experiments before you interfere to spoil them. We will advise you of any change we wish in the composition of our circle. Do not alter the room in which you meet: and strive, in so far as may be, to meet with a passive mind and a healthy body.

Yes, working all day with body and brain does not improve conditions, I suppose. But Sunday is generally worse.

It is not a favourable day for us because, when the strain is removed from mind and body, the reaction leaves the spirit disinclined for action and more apt for repose. We are fearful of cultivating new manifestations with you; we fear experimenting with physical manifestations lest they do harm. Moreover, they are not our object, only subsidiary to it. They are but the signs which witness to our mission; and we do not desire that you rest in them. There is also a special reason why we are unable to manifest on Sunday for you. You do not know the difficulty which changes in conditions make to us. You have heard before that sitting down immediately after a meal is not good. The bodily conditions which we seek for are passivity and quickness of receptivity: but not the passivity which comes from sluggishness and torpor. No worse condition can be than that state of somnolence and torpor which follows on a plentiful meal during which stimulating drink has been taken. Such stimulus may aid the physical manifestations in some cases, but it is a bar to us. It opens the door for the advent of the more material spirits, and stops our power. We have frequently found our plans frustrated by such means. You would do well to think of this and guard yourselves against excess in any way when you are about to seek communion with us. The body should not be heated nor torpid with food: nor the mind drowsy and inactive. Both conditions prevent us from operating freely. They react on us, and sensibly mar our power. One such member in a circle, even as one ailing or suffering, will create conditions which we cannot overcome.

But a weak body and temper disturbed by want of food is bad surely?

We do but counsel moderation. The body should be strengthened with food, but you should not sit down until the food is assimilated. You require moderate stimulant to fit you for your daily work, but that should be guardedly taken, and you should see that you do not enter into communion with us save under such conditions as we have stated. When mind or body is pre-disposed to sleep or indisposed to sustained attention, or sick or suffering, it is better not to sit save under direction. Equally when the body is replete with food, the physical spirits may be expected to be in the ascendant, and we are unable to operate. Even the physical phenomena are then of a ruder and more violent character, and not of the delicate and beautiful description, which they would assume under more favourable circumstances. We do not desire extremes. A body wasted by fasting is not in any way profitable: but neither is a body which is clogged and loaded by over indulgence. Temperance and moderation are what help us. If you desire, friend, to facilitate our work, and to attain the best results, you should bring to the sitting a body healthy and sound, senses clear and watchful, and a mind passive and receptive. Then we can do for you more than you think. With a circle harmonious and properly constituted the manifestations would be more delicate, and the teaching given more refined and trustworthy. Even the light of which you spoke under such conditions is pale, clear, and smokeless: under unfavourable conditions would be dull, dirty, and smoky in appearance.

* * * *

It having been said that a friend and his wife who had frequently manifested were now removed to other spheres of work, I asked whether the marriage ties were perpetuated.

That depends entirely on similarity of taste and equality of development. In the case of this being attained, the spirits can progress side by side. In our spheres we know only of community of taste and of association between those who are on the same plane, and can be developed by mutual help. All things with us are subordinated to the education of the spirit which is perpetually being developed. There can be no community of interest save between congenial souls. Consequently no tie can be perpetuated which is not a help to progress. The uncongenial bonds which have embittered the soul's earth life, and marred its upward progress cease with the bodily existence. The union of soul with soul which in the body has been a source of support and assistance is developed and increased after the spirit is free. The loving bonds which encircle such souls are the greatest incentive to mutual development, and so the relations are perpetuated, not because they have once existed, but because in the eternal fitness of things they minister to the spirit's education. In such cases the marriage tie is perpetuated, but only in such sort as the bond of fellowship between friends endures, and is strengthened by mutual help and progress. All souls that are mutually helpful remain in loving intercourse so long as it is profitable for them. When the period arrives at which it is more profitable for them to separate they go their way without sorrow, for they can still commune and share each other's interests. The reverse of such law would only perpetuate misery, and eternally bar progress. Nothing is permitted to do this.

No. But some, I can conceive, may not be exactly the same mental or moral plane, and yet be full of mutual love.

Spirits filled with mutual love can never be really separated. You are hampered in understanding our state by considerations of time and space. You cannot understand how souls can be far apart, as ye count space, and yet be, as ye would say, intimately united. We know no time, no space. We could not gain to be in close union with any spirit unless the intelligence be absolutely on the same mental and progressive plane. Indeed any such union would be impossible for us. Soul may be linked with soul in bonds of affection, without any intimate connection such as we mean by being on the same plane of development. Love unites spirits at whatever distance. Ye see that in your low state of existence. The brother loves the brother, the vast expanse of ocean separates their homes, the long years have rolled away since the eye looked on the form, and the ear listened to the words of the absent one. Their pursuits may be widely different: they may have no mutual idea, yet mutual love exists. The wife loves the degraded besotted ruffian who mutilates her body, and strives to crush her spirit. The hour of dissolution will free her from slavery and pain. She will soar while he will sink, but the bond of love will not be snapped, though the spirits may no longer consort together. Even here space is annihilated, with us it does not exist. And so ye may dimly understand that with us union means identity of development, community of interest, mutual and affectionate progression. We know no such indissoluble ties as exist with you.

Then the Bible words are true, "They neither marry nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God."

It was truly said. We have before told you of the law of progress, and of the law of Association. They are invariable. Much that now seems good to you, ye will throw aside with the body. Your state now colours your views. Much we are obliged to clothe in allegory, and to elucidate by borrowing your phraseology. So that ye must not insist too strongly on literal meanings of words used by us to describe what exists only with us, which finds no counterpart in your world, and transcends your present knowledge, and which therefore can only be approximately described in language borrowed from earth. This is a necessary caution:

Yes. That would account for discrepancies in spirit communications in some cases.

Such differences arise in many cases, from want of knowledge on the part of the spirits themselves; from their inability to get their ideas through the channel of communication: from imperfect conditions at the time of the communication and from other causes.

Doubtless, one cause is, that curious and foolish questions bring foolish answers from spirits on the plane of the question.

But would not a high spirit endeavour to raise the questioner instead of "answering a fool according to his folly?"

Yes, were it possible; but the foolish frame of mind precludes too frequently such raising. Like attracts like, and the silly curious enquirers who ask from no desire for information, but only to gratify a whim or an idle curiosity, or to entangle us in our talk, is answered, if at all, by a spirit like to himself. Such is not the frame of mind in which to seek communion with us. A reverent, earnest mind gains for itself that information and instruction which it is capable of receiving. The self-conceited, flippant, ignorant, and curious, receive only what they seek and are sent away without reply, or with such as suits their query. Flee such. They are empty and foolish.

CLAIRVOYANCE OF THE BLIND.

In a recent number of this journal we published a statement by Dr. Henry Childs, of Philadelphia, telling how a blind medium of his acquaintance had clairvoyant powers which enabled him to drive vehicles in the crowded streets, and to see persons walking, although his physical organs of sight were useless. The Baroness Vay also stated in an article written by her, and published in the last number of the Spiritualist, that she knew a blind woman who was able to see persons by clairvoyance, and if she would give more detailed particulars about the case they would be of interest in connection with the present subject. Mr. Edwin Lee, M.D., issued a book in 1866 upon Animal Magnetism (published by Longmans), in which he not only tells how mesmeric sensitives can sometimes clairvoyantly read books when their eyes are bandaged or otherwise secured, but he incidentally mentions a few cases of blind persons who have the same power. For instance, he quotes the following sentence from Nature's Secrets, by W. Denton, published in London in 1863, by Houlston and Wright.

Harriet Martineau tells of an old lady who had been blind from her birth, and yet saw in her sleep, and when in her waking state described the colour of the clothing of individuals correctly. Most blind persons exhibit such phenomena to a greater or less extent, according to the sensitiveness of the individual and the length of time during which the power has been cultivated. The case of the blind Yorkshire surveyor is familiar to most persons, and in his case the possession of vision without the use of the eyes seems most evident.

Who was the blind Yorkshire surveyor of whom Professor Denton makes the above casual mention?

Dr. Lee also quotes Dr. Wayland's Intellectual Philosophy, in which Dr. Wayland states that "persons totally blind, when in a state of mesmeric consciousness, have possessed for the time the power of perceiving external objects."

Dr. Lee also quotes a book by Dr. Macario who describes the case of Miss M'Evoy, of Liverpool, who was blind, yet could read from a book by placing her finger ends upon the pages. Dr. Macario adds:—

A venerable prelate related the following circumstance to the illustrious philosopher, Rosmini. Having requested Miss M'Evoy to tell him the hour indicated on a watch, she touched the glass and said, "You have put something under the glass so that I cannot perceive the hour." I had, in fact, put a piece of paper between the glass and the face of the watch, in order to see whether she would be able to distinguish the figures. On its being removed, she told me the hour to the half minute.

Thus it will be seen that the fact is well established that blind persons may in some cases have clairvoyant powers developed by mesmerism, after the physical organs of sight are utterly useless, and such is the importance of this mesmeric truth because of the power which it gives of relieving sufferers from a very terrible calamity, that the readers of these pages would do well to bring the matter under the notice of their medical friends, and of the managers of all public and private establishments for the relief of the blind.

In conclusion, we append the following letter on the subject from Mr. Henry G. Atkinson, the author of the well-known letters to Miss Martineau on psychological and metaphysical subjects. Perhaps the case which he describes is the same one which is casually mentioned by Dr. Lee, as already stated:—

To the Editor of "The Spiritualist."

SIR,—As we can only rightly interpret nature through order, classification, and comparison, it is all important in reporting rare or exceptional instances to refer to any similar cases that may be on record, by doing which we shall aid the reader, and greatly assist the investigator in his scientific researches and inductions.

In regard to the astonishing case of a clairvoyant, physically blind, reported in your issue of January 16th, I beg to say that I have a blind friend who sees in her sleep. She is a lady of great intelligence—one of three sisters, all blind from birth. Among other peculiarities, this lady tells us that she always sees in her sleep—in her natural sleep. She has never been mesmerised. This lady is so honourable, so benevolent, and of such acknowledged excellent good sense, that all idea of her willingly deceiving one is out of the question; and the fact of her seeing in her sleep has long been known to her family. It may seem difficult to say how such a fact can be known; but I have elicited what is, for my own part, satisfactory. She says that the perception she has in her sleep is intense and clear, and quite distinct from all other impressions and ideas arising from them. She has a sense of the chair, she says, from touch, and the idea of this sense; but her vision of form is totally different from the touch impression, though seeming to include it. She sees colours, and light and dark; describes their effects, and the similitude of those effects to musical sounds, as a corresponding harmony. She likens the sparkling light to the brilliant music, and shade to the grave sounds. She describes the distinction between light, and shade, and colours, and the relation of light and dark to colours, and forms, and feeling. She pictures the effect of light and shade on objects, and describes the different qualities of colours, and their harmony in relation to the feelings. She sees the deep blue sky, the agreeable green of the grass, the sparkling waves of water, the glare of the white clouds, and the simple light of the sun; and this sense, in all varieties, is wholly distinct from any other sense or perception she has when she is awake. She sees distance and space in a broad survey of a landscape at once, so different from any idea she could form from touch and from moving about.

It seems to me clear that she has a new sense opened to her in her sleep, which answers to those effects and relations that we perceive in seeing, and which is, in fact, sight. But this is not all. This lady is clairvoyante in other respects, and frequently in her sleep perceives what is going on in distant places; and she also foresees events. With this fact her family are familiar; many striking occurrences have happened, precisely as she has foreseen them; and in such visions she perceives forms and colours such as no one could have guessed at, such as the different colours of a person's dress; and she is invariably found to be correct. Is not this case, then, doubly conclusive? If this lady could have her eyesight given her, she could not only say that red was different from green, but which was red and which green; so that the blind boy operated upon in the celebrated story related by Hobbes might not, after all, have been an impostor. As the eyes are merely instrumental, one can see no positive objection to vision occurring without them, and it is by the exceptional or deviating instance that we learn the most, as we have found in all the advanced sciences, from astronomy downwards, even to the sounding and sensitive flames that have been made so much of, yet ignore the facts now revealed concerning the more sensitive nature of man, striving to exhibit him as a mere machine. HENRY G. ATKINSON.

A SEANCE ON THE GREAT PYRAMID.

THE Banner of Light (Boston, U. S.) of January 10th last publishes a letter from Mr. James M. Peebles, late American Consul at Trebizond, about a seance upon the top of the Great Pyramid. The medium was Dr. Dunn, who recently visited England in company with Mr. Peebles, after their tour round the world for the purpose of gaining personal knowledge of the present position of Spiritualism in all the chief countries upon the globe. The result of this enterprising trip is that Mr. Peebles has lecturing engagements among Spiritualists in the United States extending to the middle of this year. The following is Mr. Peebles' account of the seance:—

Sunny and joyous, Dr. Dunn and his Arab aids started first to make the ascent, but for some unaccountable reason they had not yet reached the pinnacle. Looking over the precipitous rocks, there he was, full a third of the way down. "What's the matter?" we inquired. "Why those gesticulations? and why the delay?" "Dun no," was the Arab response in broken English. "Well, go down and help them." A shrug of the shoulders said No! Becoming alarmed, I exclaimed with strong emphasis, "Go down after them!" They stood mute and stolid as statues. Impulsively taking all the silver from my pocket and giving it to the leader, I said once, "Go to the rescue!" Down they went. Alone now upon the pyramid! What a moment! But here the whole party comes, Dr. Dunn unconsciously entranced and the Arabs all excited—frightened at his "fits." The mystery was solved. Michael O'Brien, the controlling spirit, said:

"Faith, Jamie, I saw these beastly fellows pulling away at the maeum, and I thought I would just lind a hand."

"Well, you probably did more harm than good."

"More harm than good! and is that the way you talk to a fine Irish jintleman?"

"But you alarmed me; what did you entrance him for?"

"Sure, and don't I understand my own business? and don't I want to see the Round Towers of ould Ireland?"

"These are not the Round Towers of Ireland."

"Well didn't I know that? These are the Pyramids, and I wanted to see 'em, that I might compare them with those Round Towers of my native country, that puzzle you and everybody else. But I must out of this, for here's one of those old long-haired spirits, who lived awhile after this pyramid was built. He wants to talk to you. The top of the morning to you, Jamie!"

A change; owing to inharmonious conditions the entrancement is spasmodic. How the Arabs stare! It is difficult to keep them at a distance.

But listen—another spirit has taken possession. What dignity in the attitude! and what a deep-toned voice:—

"Traveller, you stand now upon the summit of one of the world's wonders—a mountain of stone rising from trackless sands. I once lived under these skies, vested in a mortal body. The same majestic river rolled through the valley; but winds, storms, shifting sands, and maddened convulsions have changed all else. This pyramid, upon which I often gazed, was, even then, more a matter of tradition than history. It must have received its final cap stone full six thousand years since. Our time was measured by ruling dynasties. My years on earth seem now like a half-forgotten dream. Starry worlds have faded; islands have risen from the ocean; continents have disappeared; thronged cities have perished; conquering kings have been born, ruled, died, and been forgotten; but this Titanic monument of the desert still stands in stately solitude! And yet nothing earthly is immortal; this pillared pile of composite, of granite and of porphyry is slowly, surely crumbling. Only the undying soul, the templed pyramid of divinity within, is eternal. See, then, oh, stranger and pilgrim, that every thought, deed, act—each a 'living stone' placed in the spiritual temple you are constructing—is polished and fitted to its place with the master's 'mark.'

"But you wish to know the purpose of this, the oldest of the pyramidal structures. The aim was multiform. Carefully considering the constellations, the position of the North Star, and the shadow cast by the sun at the time of the equinoxes, it was built, upon mathematical principles, to the honour of the Sun-God that illumines and fructifies the earth; built for the preservation of public documents and treasures during wars of invasion, and built as a store-house for grain during famines and devastating floods, with that mystic coffer in the centre, as an exact measure for the world. A universal system of weights and measures, a universal currency, and a universal government were Utopian theories of the ancients before my period of time. This pyramid was not built by forced toil and at a great sacrifice of life, but by gratuitous contributions, the servants of the wealthy doing the manual labour. There are seven granary apartments in the structure, with shafts leading from each to the common granary of the coffer, now called the King's Chamber. These shafts have not yet, to my knowledge, been discovered.

"During long rains and terrible floods, ancient Memphis was twice swept away—once even to its walls, with all its inhabitants, in a single night. Convulsions of Nature and terrible floods were then common. Immediately after one of these, the pyramid was commenced, requiring more than a generation in the construction. It was completed before the great flood and the wars of the Shepherd Kings.

"Once in my time the water rose and rolled over the very apex of these stones. It rained forty-five consecutive days; and while torrent swept down the Nile valley from the south, stout, heavy winds from the Mediterranean drove the water up the country, piling wave upon wave, till this structure was completely submerged. But, though thus buried in the flooding waters, the treasures and well-filled granaries remained to feed, when the waters subsided, the famishing people who had fled southward to the hilly country. There seems to be less water upon the face of the earth now than then. Liquids are giving place to solids, and change in every department of being is doing its destined work. Only pyramids of truth, constructed of immutable principles, are eternal!"

"Che-ops-see, the great king of the world, died in Thebes. Embalmed by the priests, he was placed, after a time, in this pyramid, as a mark of honour for having conceived and planned a monument serving as the saviour of his subjects. Finally, he was godded or deified—Ramses the First; and the Sphinx, that calm, weird, unreadable face, now mutilated by a degenerate people, was designed to hand the outlines of his physiognomy down to posterity. I must leave. Stranger from a foreign country, do well the work appointed you, that, when ashes and sand claim their own, you may be prepared for the fellowship of those ancient spirits of whom you seek counsel."

I have reported this Egyptian spirit's ideas and words as best as I could. Take them for what they are worth, making history, hieroglyph, and reason the umpire of decision. Powhattan, the good Indian spirit, came, and, noting the waning of the western sun as a symbol of the fading away of the aboriginal tribes before a merciless civilization, said they went down like setting stars, to rise into the better conditions of the Morning-land.

Descending from this dizzy height, we explored the passages and the inner chambers; a description of which, with Heliopolis, Alexandria, the Rosetta Stone, and the trip to Jerusalem, the Dead Sea and the Jordan, shall be forthcoming.

Madame Blawatsky, assisted by other brave souls, formed a society of Spiritualists in Cairo about two years since. They have fine writing mediums, and other forms of the manifestations. They hold weekly seances during the winter months. Madame Blawatsky is at present in Odessa, Russia. The lady whose husband keeps the Oriental Hotel, is a firm Spiritualist.

A HAUNTED PRISON.

THE Religio-Philosophical Journal (Chicago) of January 31st last, contains a long article quoted from the Joilet Sun, about a ghost who has caused much commotion in the Joilet gaol, by haunting one of the cells. A man of the name of Chase was hanged a few years ago for murdering a prison warder. His head was taken by the doctors, who opened the skull and took out the brains for experimental purposes. A cast of Chase's head, in plaster, may be seen on a shelf in the sheriff's office in Joilet. The cell in the prison that is haunted most by this ghostly visitant, is the one the murderer occupied during his confinement.

A man of the name of Perteet, who was confined in the murderer's cell, has made the following statement:—

Since my confinement in the Will county gaol I have seen the ghost of Chase a number of times. I saw him at one time without any head on him. At another time his head seemed to be opened and the brains taken out. His actions indicate that he was hung wrongfully. The spook comes in every form—sometimes pleasant at others frightful. His visit is from ten to eleven p.m. to three a.m. This is a certain fact. When I see the ghost I turn over in horror. I am sure it is the ghost of Chase.

ANDREW J. PERTEET.

Another prisoner testifies as follows:—

He is a man apparently about thirty years of age, comes and looks into my cell; has a cut across his forehead, and a dark circle around his throat, and is dressed like a circus actor; don't speak; stays about ten minutes; then disappears; at other times I find him in my cell, between me and the wall, crowding me out of bed, which awakens me; he then feels over my face with his cold, clammy hands; then seems to be satisfied, and goes away. Immediately after that I hear chains dragging over the floor. Others hear the same.

JOHN MCCARTY.

Another correspondent says:—

"Sometimes he is seen with a blue mark around his neck, and with a portion of his head removed. The frontal bone in the skull appears to have been taken out, leaving the brain exposed. His face and neck are very pale, and appear to be more so since he has dressed in black, and the contrast is very great. He has on a white shirt, without any collar. There is one cell in the gaol which the ghost apparently prefers to visit. This is situated on the south side, and is the third cell on the upper corridor. Prisoners have repeatedly refused to sleep in this cell, after staying there one night, and what is not a little singular is that some of these people have never heard of the ghost before, so it cannot be that it is a mere picture of the imagination. All persons who have seen this apparition affirm that while it is within their sight it exerts the same influence over them that some varieties of snakes throw over their victims. They are absolutely unable to move a muscle. Their eyes are fixed on the strange figure, and there remain. If the ghost moves, their eyes involuntarily follow him—not by any will of their own, but their very movements appear to be controlled by the former. Their chests seem oppressed, and they are unable to stir. He has a fashion of coming into this cell and climbing up into bed with the occupant. He prefers the further side, and forces himself into the hammock, crowding the person out in order to obtain his favourite place. He sometimes lays his hand on the person of the occupant. His hand is like his face, very white, since the finger bones are large and the hand pretty well spread out, like that of a labouring man, yet it appears that it has been in active service for some time, the palm of the hand appearing to the sight to be as soft and white as the back. Its touch is cold and clammy, and although the person who receives it is desirous of shrinking from it, and makes every effort to do so, yet he is so paralyzed as it were that he is unable to."

Other testimony is published, but the editor of the Sun gives precedence to the statement of Perteet, who is condemned for murder, but with whom he seems to be greatly pleased, perhaps for the following reason:—

A few days ago the junior editor of the Republican sent in his card and begged an interview with Perteet, but that worthy resented the idea of such a meeting, with the remark that he hoped he had not fallen so low as to hold converse with such a blackguard as that. If he ever did fall so low he hoped the governor would withhold his reprieve until he might be executed, and thus prevent the interview.

It is further stated:—

It seems that quite a number of Chicago reporters have been making ineffectual efforts to learn particulars; but Perteet and his companions have become so disgusted with the way they magnify and distort the truth that they have refused to divulge anything to them. Many of the prisoners are as firm in the faith that these are "real spirits" as they are of their own existence, and they do not propose to furnish capital for those unprincipled Bohemians to manufacture into ridicule and a senseless sensation.

MR. GERALD MASSEY ON SPIRITUALISM.

MR. GERALD MASSEY is making a tour, and delivering lectures at the present time in the chief cities of the United States, where he has been received in a cordial manner, more especially among Spiritualists. Among the varied subjects which he handles in his masterly way, Spiritualism is one; and in Boston last month, at the Music Hall, where American Spiritualists have been accustomed to hear their own best speakers, he delivered a discourse which must have delighted his audience, and proved to them how boundless the subject is when dealt with by a man of Mr. Massey's genius. In proof of these remarks, we give a few extracts, and regret the want of space to quote the entire discourse, which, however, it is to be hoped, will in due time, together with his other discourses on this theme, be published by him in a separate form.

"Since my first gropings in the darkness of this subject, light has dawned on me more and more, and the facts have gone on unfolding their meanings until the presence of the Spiritual world is to me as real as that of the natural world; the unfeatured darkness has unveiled a living face.

"Standing on this side of my facts, how should I care to argue with those who stand on the other to assert they cannot be true? Where is the use of arguing when sheer ignorance of the subject is to be the base of our opponents' reasoning, and his fundamental assumptions are false, which are, that he sufficiently divines the relationships of mind and matter in the life which is known, so as to say that these things are impossible in their relationship to a life that is to him unknown?

"If it were possible to set aside our facts, we should still be acting on a belief professed by the whole Christian world. It is asserted by them that the soul of man is for ever influenced by good or evil suggestions, invisibly conveyed of course.

"Spiritualism has already proved itself the greatest solvent of dogmas yet known. It is the truth that sets you free for good as well as for evil. It has acted, and is acting, on the most stupendous obstacles of progress, and an imposture cannot do that. It will finally break up many a poor miserable effigy of God to fully reveal the Divinity Himself to the unfettered human soul."

A SEANCE AT MR. SERJEANT COX'S.

THE following is an extract from the second volume of Mr. Serjeant Cox's "What Am I?" published last week by Messrs. Longmans:

"On Tuesday, June 2, 1873, a personal friend, a gentleman of high social position, a graduate of Oxford, came to my residence in Russell-square to dress for a dinner party to which we were invited. He had previously exhibited considerable power as a Psychic. Having half-an-hour to spare we went into the dining-room. It was just six o'clock and of course broad daylight. I was opening letters; he was reading the Times. My dining-table is of mahogany, very heavy, old-fashioned, six feet wide, nine feet long. It stands on a Turkey carpet, which much increases the difficulty of moving it. A subsequent trial showed that the united efforts of two strong men standing were required to move it one inch. There was no cloth upon it, and the light fell full under it. No person was in the room but my friend and myself. Suddenly, as we were sitting thus, frequent and loud rappings came upon the table: My friend was then sitting holding the newspaper with both hands, one arm resting on the table, the other on the back of chair, and turned sideways from the table, so that his legs and feet were not under the table but at the side of it. Presently the solid table quivered as if with an ague fit. Then it swayed to and fro so violently as almost to dislocate the big pillar-like legs, of which there are eight. Then it moved forward about three inches. I looked under it to be sure that it was not touched; but still it moved, and still the blows were loud upon it.

"This sudden access of the Force at such a time and in such a place, with none present but myself and my friend, and with no thought then of invoking it, caused the utmost astonishment in both of us. My friend said that nothing like it had ever before occurred to him. I then suggested that it would be an invaluable opportunity, with so great a power in action, to make trial of motion without contact, the presence of two persons only, the daylight, the place, the size and weight of the table, making the experiment a crucial one. Accordingly we stood upright, he on one side of the table, I on the other side of it. We stood two feet from it, and held our hands eight inches above it. In one minute it rocked violently. Then it moved over the carpet a distance of seven inches. Then it rose three inches from the floor on the side on which my friend was standing. Then it rose equally on my side. Finally my friend held his hands four inches over the end of the table, and asked that it would rise and touch his hand three times. It did so; and then, in accordance with the like request, it rose to my hand held at the other end to the same height above it and in the same manner.

With such conclusive proofs before me it is impossible to doubt that there is some Force, whatever it may be, by which heavy bodies are moved without muscular contact or effort. What is it, whence it comes, and how it operates in the production of these results, are questions in no way affecting the fact. These problems it is the province of science to solve by experiment when the fact itself is proved.

SPIRITUALISM AT THE LONDON ANTHROPOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

ON Tuesday night, last week, a meeting of the London Anthropological Society was held at 37, Arundel-street, Strand, under the presidency of Dr. R. S. Charnock, F.S.A.

The proceedings began by the reading of a paper by Mr. Churchill, in which he narrated how mythical stories have become matters of history, either in poetry or prose, and afterwards accepted as true. He included in his list of cases the narrative about Samson catching the foxes, and turning them loose into the camp of the Philistines, with firebrands tied to their tails.

WHAT IS THE BEST METHOD OF DEMONSTRATING THE REALITY OF SPIRITUAL PHENOMENA?

Mr. George Harris, F.S.A., then read a paper upon certain tests applicable to the determination of the reality of phenomena like those seen in connection with modern Spiritualism. He began by saying that subjects relating to the mind should not be ignored by anthropologists, who especially should give attention to the question of the nature and reality of spiritual beings, since no system of anthropology could philosophically grapple with the whole subject, which did not take into consideration the spiritual and mental nature of man. All the various branches of anthropology ought to be investigated together, for anthropology, as he understood it, dealt with the living, and not with the dead man. Man was composed of something more than bones and clay, and if the anthropological society studied bones and clay only, it was to some extent exercising the functions of a burial board. Few people were free from superstition. Sailors firmly believe that ill-luck is attached to Friday, and others think it is a bad omen if thirteen persons sit down to dinner at one table. Not a few people also believe in presentiments, or a feeling that some unknown danger threatens them. Why were these superstitious feelings excited within us? Did they come from some timidity, or from our own nature? If spiritual beings visited the earth, how could their visitations be proved? This was no idle question to ask, for if they once, as was generally believed, paid visits to men, was there any reason for supposing that they did not do the same in our own day, especially when there are many living witnesses who say that they have seen or communicated with spirits? Was it possible to test these things? For a long time superstition had revelled in these subjects, while science had been standing aloof, without even attempting to draw scientific conclusions relating to the matter. Mr. Harris then spoke of the descriptions given by Shakespeare, and Sir Walter Scott, of the visitations of spiritual beings, and he added there was within us a feeling that death was not annihilation, and that every soul will seek its own centre when the body dies. If such ideas did not belong purely to the imagination, they should be submitted to tests and to laws of evidence. Facts only, and not opinions, should be allowed to guide the investigators. He believed that the great majority of alleged spiritual manifestations were due to self-deception, or to disease, while some of them had turned out to be imposture; he could tell instances of the latter, but that would not disprove that there had been genuine visitations as well. After a passing allusion to Scott's Demonology, to Brewster's Natural Magic, and to the experiences of De Foe, he said that Baxter had written a most remarkable work upon The Revelation of a World of Spirits, and the Appearance of the Dead, in which he stated that he had been visited by spirits himself. There were several ways in which the denizens of another world were alleged to communicate with man, firstly, as apparitions; secondly, supernatural communications were said to be given by voice, by sounds, or by spirit rappings; and thirdly by dreams, in which communications were supposed to have been sometimes given. How could these things be tested? If a man said he had seen a ghost, it did not absolutely prove the fact, which might be due to the disease of his digestive organs, or to imposture; he also might have mistaken a stump in the twilight for a ghost, or have been deceived by luminous emanations from grave-yards. The narrative was more likely to be true if he both saw and heard the ghost, so that two of his senses were brought into play, and the fact would be further strengthened if two persons or more saw it; further, if an animal, such as a dog, also saw it, and exhibited signs of fear, as in certain well-authenticated cases, the evidence would be stronger still. Another test of the reality of an apparition might be when the ghost gives information to the listener of which he knew nothing before. Sir David Brewster tells persons who see ghosts to lift their hands, and place them between their eyes and the ghost, saying that this would prove whether there was any delusion, since if the apparition were due to internal disease, the raising of the hands would not cut off the sight of the spirit; still, this advice was not necessarily sound, for the spiritual powers of the seer might be developed for a time, enabling him temporarily to observe things in the spiritual world. After telling the story of the ghost of the Duke of Buckingham, as narrated by Lord Clarendon, Mr. Harris came to the subject of spirit rappings; he said that the sense of hearing was very deceptive, especially as to the direction of sounds, and that it was also much subject to disease; but if many persons were present, and all of them heard the same sounds, that was good evidence, though he thought that the proof of houses being haunted should go beyond noises which might be caused by rats. In all ages dreams had acted powerfully upon the ignorant and superstitious, but if in dreams facts were ever communicated, which could not have been known in any other way, that would be some proof that they had a real spiritual origin. As to the phenomena alleged to take place at spiritual seances, they should have evidence that the motions of furniture which occur are not produced by artificial methods, and the communications themselves should contain information previously unknown to every person in the room; vague answers should be considered unsatisfactory. Lord Amberley, in a recent article in the Fortnightly Review, on Spiritualism and its Phenomena, had stated that the people who attend seances should be free from theories and from the desire to astonish. He (Mr. Harris) thought that the great majority of the things which occurred at seances, arose from disease or imposture; but, after allowing for all these, many of the phenomena were well established, and tended to prove that the souls of departed persons were permitted to return to communicate with friends on earth. He had heard the charge brought against the ghosts that they were very unreasonable in their conduct, because when they had a murder or other crime to reveal, they did not go at once to the magistrate of the district, but to some person in no way interested in the matter; he did not think them much to blame in this, because if all troubled ghosts were to act as had been recommended, very few persons would like to be in commission of the peace, and it would hinder timid persons from acting as magistrates. Another objection was that they have a rude habit of disappearing through walls without going through a polite form of taking leave. De Foe was very hard upon the poor ghosts because they did not reveal hidden treasure enough, but he (Mr.

Harris) thought that the ghosts had acted very fairly and creditably in the matter, since nobody ever offered to pay them for their work. He thought that total disbelief in spirits was as irrational as utter credulity; it was a subject of deep and thrilling interest, and had attracted the attention of wise men in all ages. (Applause.)

WHAT PROFESSOR LEITNER THINKS.

Professor Leitner, P.H.D., M.A., said that he thought that the charge had often been brought against the Anthropological Society that it took extreme views on the subject of religion, but an answer to that charge had been practically given in the paper which had just been read, which was reverent and enthusiastic; he therefore spoke of it in words of praise, without committing himself to any superstitious views of the author, or approving his methods of investigation. He was glad when Mr. Harris deprecated flint implements, but his surprise was great when he heard demonology introduced as one of the chief branches of anthropology, and as connected with anthropology, in its truest and noblest sense. It was satisfactory to know that in that Society such views would get a fair hearing, but Mr. Harris very much represented a voice from the other world; candour like his would have been good in the Middle Ages, when his tests also would have been very useful, for no doubt they would have helped to abolish superstitions much sooner, but to hear at the present time the question raised whether we shall inquire into the supernatural—when it had long ago been settled that there was no supernatural, that supernaturalism was inconceivable, and that the word involved a negation of terms—when such things were heard, it was a matter of surprise to him, but also of pleasure; in fact it was a great and new pleasure to him. Once upon a time there was an honest judge, who before condemning a witch because a black cat had been seen entering her room, tried very carefully to find out whether the cat was black and had entered the room as stated, and after a most thorough investigation he came to the conclusion that a black cat had walked into the room, consequently he ordered the person to be executed. It was curious that such views should exist still, that it should be supposed that anthropologists really ought to have anything to do with such matters, and that men should really exist who suggest that these subjects should be taken up. If so they ought to add to the tests proposed by Mr. Harris, those of chemistry, physics, and all branches of science as well as of law. The thing was absolutely beyond the scope of a scientific society, which ought to forfeit its name if it took the subject up, since if it once recognised the reality of the supernatural, the realms of science would have been left behind, and they must go for information to cardinals and priests.*

DOES THE ANTHROPOLOGICAL SOCIETY KNOW ALL THE LAWS OF NATURE?

Mr. Grazebrook said that he thought the Society was not in a position to say that certain things did not exist. Were they able to define the life or the soul of man, or to tell how the soul worked? If they could not understand these things then they ought to approach the Unknown with respect, for there were many instances of communication with another world which could not be gainsaid, although tens of thousands of other cases might be due to disease of the mind, or to intoxication. Many of the laws of nature were known to them, but there were plenty of laws which they did not know nor understand; they were only on the threshold of knowledge; he said this with all deference to the important discoveries which had been made by science. In speaking upon the powers and possibilities of the spirit, they were all at sea, and when spiritual manifestations took place, the particular points relating to them ought to be carefully examined; if they proved to be natural, then the difficulty was solved, but if they found something beyond themselves, then it was only honest that gentlemen should admit that there was something in the universe which they did not understand. Not only were visitations from beyond the grave spoken of by tradition, but in our own time men of science and others had stated facts which seemed beyond all explanation. The evidence about the appearance of apparitions in distant places at the moment of the death of the individual was very strong. He knew of a wife who possessed a subtle intelligence somewhat common amongst women, whereby they know or have an idea of what is going on in distant places, and he had himself met such instances and could testify to them; yet he was a cool, and calm, and logical thinker, and after allowing for coincidence and chance over and over again, facts remained which he could not account for. There was something belonging to our higher nature which told us that after we parted with our material bodies, we might be able to travel with the force of will, and scientific men should not close their eyes to the possibility of such facts, but approach them with modesty, criticise, examine, discover, and find out. Years ago mesmerism ought not to have been left to quacks, for at the present time it was acknowledged that men have power over each other as regards their nervous systems. He believed that it was possible for a departed wife to appear to her surviving husband when it was necessary for his welfare, whilst those who said that it could not be, defined the limits of nature's laws. It was said that the ghost, not having substance, could not make an image on the retina, consequently there could be no ghosts but those of the imagination, but that was but speculation. Mr. Harris's paper dealt with great problems of which men of science knew nothing, and they ought to approach the unknown with reverence. (Applause.)

* All the phenomena of Spiritualism are governed by law, but most of the laws have not yet been discovered.—Ed.

THE CROSS-EXAMINATION OF GHOSTS.

Mr. H. B. Churchill, V.P.L.A.S., said that he disclaimed making any distinction between the natural and supernatural, and he should like to examine a ghost just as he would examine a criminal; he had never yet found a ghost who would bear cross-examination; he had never even met a person who had seen a ghost. But as to dreams, certainly many curious things had been discovered by dreams. If a disembodied spirit could take human shape—and he would neither deny nor affirm it—how was it that it never appeared naked? Were there ghosts of coats, and waistcoats, and breeches? If he saw a ghost of the last century, he should say to him, "Where did you get your clothes made?" (Laughter.) The question was a fair one.

SPIRITUALISM AND MATERIALISM.

Mr. J. Jeremiah, jun., M.A.I., said that he was astonished that there had been no mention in the paper of the researches of Dr. Carpenter of Miss Frances Power Cobbe upon unconscious cerebration, which would explain many of the facts mentioned by Mr. Harris. If they denied many of the phenomena of Spiritualism, how were they to avoid eliminating those in Holy Writ? How could they say, "These are miracles, and these are not miracles?" He raised this question reverentially, and not to offend any person present. When they looked upon the human race as merely one portion of the animal creation, it seemed to him that man had been continually searching after the ideal of goodness, and in this search savages and others had given forms of expression to their ignorance; at least, sometimes it was called ignorance and sometimes religious enthusiasm, but it seemed to all come from the dreams of the human mind in its attempts to unravel the incomprehensible in nature. Savages were uncultured, and continually saw apparitions, and as they became civilised they gave up many absurd superstitions. Man continually projects his mind forward, and then in comes superstition; but civilised people know rather more than savages, so have not the same series of superstitions, but higher ones of a more divine nature. Thus the phenomena which man cannot comprehend have the effect of uplifting the human mind, and allowing it to expand unhampered by carnal and worldly considerations. In putting forward these ideas, he desired not to offend the religious susceptibilities of any person present, for these superstitions tended to raise men, even though they were founded upon misunderstood phenomena. They had persons in their midst who believed in such individuals as Mr. Home; they were absurd enthusiasts, and he would say, "Put the ban upon such people, and not mix up their ideas with such as are included in the Christian religion." He looked forward to the day when even the high standard of superstition of civilised people should be swept away; the whole drift of the age was in favour of materialism, and he was very glad of it. He did not think that the paper had comprehended the subject as Dr. Carpenter had explained it, or as explained by Liebnitz in his essay on Latent Thought.

A PROPOSAL TO INVESTIGATE SPIRITUALISM.

Dr. C. Carter Blake said that he was thankful for the paper, because it fulfilled the pledge made in the President's opening address, of giving a fair hearing to all scientific questions; and, indeed, the Society was giving gentlemen who believed in Spiritualism a fair method by which they could bring forth their arguments—that paper, he was told, being but the first of a series. He could not agree with his friend Professor Leitner. They ought to enable witnesses to bring forth their evidence, and if Spiritualists chose to bring forward their bill of indictment, and to bring forth their witnesses, the society would be glad to cross-examine them, and Mr. Harris had pointed out certain rules by which their statements might be tested. Then, again, he disagreed with Professor Leitner about the past generation having used inferior methods of study, for he submitted that the anatomists of a hundred years ago uttered far fewer absurdities, and perpetrated fewer grammatical errors than are done by anatomists of the present day; they also knew their facts better, for he contended that the old method of teaching and testing these facts was better than the modern one; he preferred the old Aristotelian system. If some of those gentlemen who have the power of presenting some of the spiritualistic phenomena, would only bring them before the Society, or before certain members of the Society, and would submit to a series of tests, he thought that good results would arise, and he hoped that no Spiritualist would feel offended at the nature of some of the tests which might be proposed,* for there had been a tendency to avoid some of the severer tests which it might be desirable to apply. These things ought to be worked out by a psychological committee, and then the matter might once for all be settled. He did not think that such a term as "spirit" should be used, while they were unable to give any precise definition; at the same time he did not think that the idea of the existence of man apart from the visible body should be regarded as an absurdity; such philosophy would set aside the researches of Dr. W. B. Richardson, and men like him. He was glad that the subject of Spiritualism had come up for discussion, and he hoped that Spiritualists would come before them to have the matter investigated; they would have a fair field, and no favour. He wished that Professor Leitner had told them that evening something about the curious psychological phenomena which had been witnessed in Tibet. He thought that the subject was a great one, and might occupy the attention of the Society for three or four years, if it were dealt with in a business-like and scientific manner; the tests should be carried on with the same fairness as in the experiments of Dr. Bastian and Dr. Terrier, and if the witnesses of spiritual phenomena differed no more than the witnesses of the experiments of the two doctors just named, he did not wonder that there were many contradictions in Spiritualism.

Mr. A. L. Lewis (secretary), said that Mr. Harris's paper did not go into the question whether supernatural beings exist; it merely told them how to put salt on the tails of the ghosts if they appeared. (Laughter.) He hoped that Mr. Harris would make a further communication to the society; he entirely agreed with the paper, and with most of the observations made about it. There had been much evidence in favour of supernatural occurrences, and it was unscientific to say that such things could not be; he had never seen anything supernatural himself, but he knew people of high character who said that they had seen such phenomena, and under such conditions that it was very difficult to suppose they were mistaken; he therefore particularly desired to see the subject investigated in a scientific and perfectly fair manner, without any previous conclusions being brought to bear upon the question. At the same time he protested against being supposed to express any view, for or against, or whether it was an imposture or not; he merely waited for evidence. Referring to Mr. Churchill's first paper saying how loose statements had been made the theme of history, poetry, and science, he thought that in some respects he had been a little too sceptical.

THE RELIABILITY OF TRADITION.

The President said, in reference to that part of Mr. Churchill's paper which described the incident of catching the three hundred foxes, and tying their tails together, as was said to have been done by Samson, Samson could not have been a worthy descendant of Nimrod. He did not see how it was possible to catch three hundred foxes. Even supposing them to be caught, and tied together by their tails, they would then pull against each other, and after they got loose they would be sure to seek their covers. It had been said that the word "foxes" meant "jackals." David spoke of giving up a body to foxes, but he must have meant jackals, for jackals like bodies, and there were places in Asia Minor in which the word was used for jackal; the word was also found in Persia. Mr. Harris had spoken of the prejudice against thirteen people sitting down to dinner; he believed that prejudice had arisen from what is generally called the Lord's Supper; it had also been said that one in thirteen was the average that died within the year, but if one of thirteen would die he should have thought that one in fourteen would have been more likely to die; further, as the average in England is now one in forty, he did not see that the idea of the origin of the prejudice held good.

* The members of the society should form spirit circles in their own homes, with no Spiritualist present, just as the Dialectical Society did. Instructions will be found on the last page of this number of the Spiritualist. No Spiritualist will feel offended at any test which the fellows of the Anthropological Society may impose upon themselves, or upon any member of any of their families.—[Ed.]

Mr. G. Harris said that the amount of prejudice perhaps depended upon the quality of the dinner more than anything else. He had heard that a tradition about Judas Iscariot upsetting the salt, gave rise to the superstition relating to the spilling of salt at a dinner-table. Dr. Leitner had seemed to say that he (Mr. Harris) was an advocate for Spiritualism, but he had only urged inquiry into the subject, and it well deserved it at the hands of the Society. Medical opinions were not infallible. A short time ago there was a statement in the Times about sixteen persons dying from poison, and not one of the medical men who had been called in to attend them thought to look to the stomach for poison. A speaker opposite had spoken of savages as believers in spiritual phenomena, but the truth was that such phenomena were believed to be real by the most enlightened people of Greece and Rome, and he (Mr. Harris) did not see how mental phenomena could be discussed without considering also the question of the spiritual nature of man. Dr. Carpenter had been supposed sometimes to deny spirits, and sometimes to affirm their existence, so it was difficult to understand his position. Professor Leitner had defined the limits of human knowledge, and said, in a dogmatic way, there were no such things as spiritual beings, and he had then dismissed the subject altogether.

Mr. Churchill said that somebody had argued that the word "foxes" in his paper should have been "wheat sheaves," but then firebrands could not have been tied to them, or if they had, they could not have gone into the standing army of the Philistines. He had an impression that Jerome and the translators of the Septuagint knew the Hebrew quite as well as any modern scholar, and the word had been translated "foxes" in nearly every European language, therefore he would stick to the foxes, and not accept the jackals.

The proceedings then closed.

A STRANGE PARTNERSHIP.

PAUL DUHALDE was born at Paris, in 1691; he was the son of a dealer in diamonds, and lost his father at the age of sixteen years, when he was sent to Spain by his mother to learn the arcana of the business. The lad had no success, and returned. He was then placed with a merchant at Rouen, but did not get on, and subsequently passed to America, but his restless disposition soon sent him back to France. This brought him to the year 1717, and he was now twenty-six years of age. He remained some months with his mother, and then, having contracted a partnership with two jewel merchants, set off a second time to Madrid. This enterprise was, however, not more successful than those preceding it, and he came back to Paris, in the month of February, 1719, profoundly discouraged, and not without reason.

Here the melancholy reflections consequent on his repeated and persistent failures suggested to him a very singular notion—that of contracting a partnership with God. He proceeded to enter seriously into this bizarre contract, and drew up an act in regular and technical form, which he transcribed into his day-book on Sept. 24, 1719, in the following terms:—"I have resolved to enter into a partnership with God, promising and undertaking to fulfil all the within-named articles; and I enjoin my heirs, whoever they may be, to carry out these my intentions in case I should die before accomplishing them myself." He then proceeds to declare that this association, the object of which is to deal in precious stones, shall hold for five years, reckoning good from Oct. 2, 1719. He fixes his capital at 3,000 Spanish piastres (£600), being all that remained to him of his patrimony. He binds himself not to enter into any other partnership during the five years, unless with a woman by marriage. As soon as the five years shall have elapsed, he proposes to balance his accounts, to begin by withdrawing from the partnership the 3,000 piastres with which he started; secondly, to take from it the dowry that his wife may have brought him; thirdly, any sum or sums that may have fallen in to him by succession or otherwise during the time; after which he adds, "And the surplus shall be equally divided between God and myself."

This unique partnership having been thus determined, Duhalde starts a third time for Spain, but the outset of this new attempt does not augur well for the partners. Two years after, however (1721), the project of a double marriage between the Courts of France and Spain gives a new impetus to the branch of commerce in which he is engaged, and he resolves to improve the opportunity. At last fortune seems to smile upon his endeavours, and the ultimate results exceed his fondest hopes. He now returns to Paris, resolving to settle himself finally there. In 1772 he married the daughter of De Hansay, a well-known bookseller, who brought him 30,000 livres, and from his mother, who died in September of the same year, he inherited 70,226 livres. On May 20, 1723, a son was born to him.

Meantime Duhalde never loses sight of the obligations he has taken upon himself towards God. He draws, from time to time, from the common fund, sums which he distributes in the name of God to the poor, and inscribes these with regularity and precision in his registers. On October 1, 1724, the partnership expires. Duhalde strikes a balance of his accounts, and finds from the aggregate of the entries that he has already paid to the poor 13,684 livres; but this is not all. In the statement of account drawn up, he has considered three classes of stones as constituting a portion of the profits; one of these lots is at Amsterdam, one at Madrid, and one at Paris; these he shares equally, inscribing on the packets which contain them, "Half for the poor;" and at the foot of the statement of account he writes:—"Misfortune and malefaction upon my heirs, whoever they may be, if, under any pretext whatever, they should fail to distribute to the poor the half of whatever proceeds may come from the jewels now in my possession, if so be as God should call me away before I shall have been able to satisfy their claims myself. Further, if by any extraordinary event it should appear at my death that no other amounts are forthcoming but those goods or sums which are virtually the property of the poor, let not a sacrilegious hand be laid upon them; they constitute a deposit which can under no circumstances be diverted from its just course." In addition to this precaution, and in order to secure to the poor the amounts he regarded as strictly their due, Duhalde drew up in the month of January, 1725, eight bills of 1,000 livres each, payable to order from year to year, comprising the years 1725 to 1732, and placed these bills in the hands of the Vicar of St. Germain l'Auxerrois.

On January 14, 1725, he fell ill and made his will, by which he declares that:—"In the books which contain the minutes of his affairs there are several articles touching matters that concern the poor; he begs the executor to examine these articles with the greatest accuracy, and to see they are carried out with the strictest attention. Two months after Duhalde dies, leaving a young widow, a minor, and an infant two years' old. The schedule of property is called over, the administrators of the Hospital General are invited to attend. Among the effects of the deceased are found packets of precious stones, labelled "Half for the poor;" their portion is estimated at 18,188 livres. The administrators claim it, but offer to compromise for the sum of 15,900*l*. The young widow protests; the guardian contends that the will should be set aside on the ground that no sane man ever got into a partnership with God. The parties appeal to law, and after a spirited altercation, a judgment was obtained, April 3, 1726, on the decision of D'Agusseau (Avocat General), ordering that "The will of Duhalde and the acts and codicils dependent thereon shall be fulfilled according to the desire of the testator; he consequently condemns the guardians of the widow and her son to hand over to the administrators of the hospital funds the jewels constituting the legacy made by the testator to the poor, but leaving him the choice of paying the sum in money value, as estimated by experts to be provided by the Court; the course adopted by the said guardian to be decided within a fortnight."—Weekly Times, Feb. 8th.

Mrs. M. E. Tebb recently remitted £15 17s. 6d. to the Rev. J. Murray Spear, Philadelphia, in addition to the £26 2s. she had previously collected for the benefit of this veteran medium.

Spirit Poetry.

THE KINGDOM.

THE following poem, given through the trance mediumship of Miss Lizzie Doten, is extracted from her Poems of the Inner Life, published by Colby and Rich, Boston, U.S.:-

'Twas the ominous month of October—
How the memories rise in my soul!
How they swell like a sea in my soul!—
When a spirit, sad, silent, and sober,
Whose glance was a word of control,
Drew me down to the dark Lake Avernus,
In the desolate Kingdom of Death—
To the mist-covered Lake of Avernus,
In the ghoul-haunted Kingdom of Death.

And there, as I shivered and waited,
I talked with the Souls of the Dead—
With those whom the living call dead;
The lawless, the lone, and the hated,
Who broke from their bondage and fled—
From madness and misery fled.
Each word was a burning eruption
That leapt from a crater of flame—
A red, lava-tide of corruption,
That out of life's sediment came,
From the scoriac natures God gave them,
Compounded of glory and shame.

"Aboard!" cries our pilot and leader;
Then wildly we rush to embark,
We recklessly rush to embark;
And forth in our ghostly Ellida*
We swept in the silence and dark—
O God! on that black Lake Avernus,
Where vampires drink even the breath,
On that terrible Lake of Avernus,
Leading down to the whirlpool of Death!

It was there the Eumenides † found us,
In sight of no shelter or shore—
No beacon or light from the shore.
They lashed up the white waves around us,
We sank in the waters' wild roar;
But not to the regions infernal,
Through billows of sulphurous flame,
But unto the City Eternal,
The Home of the Blesséd, we came.

To the gate of the Beautiful City,
All fainting and weary we pressed,
Impatient and hopeful we pressed.
"O, Heart of the Holy, take pity,
And welcome us home to our rest!
Pursued by the Fates and the Furies,
In darkness and danger we fled—
From the pitiless Fates and Furies,
Through the desolate realms of the Dead."

"Jure Divino, I here claim admission!"
Exclaimed a proud prelate, who rushed to the gate;
"Ave Sanctissima, hear my petition,
Holy Saint Peter; why should I wait?
O, fons pietatis, O, glorious flood,
My soul is washed clean in the Lamb's precious blood."

Like the song of a bird that yet lingers,
When the wide-wandering warbler has flown;
Like the wind-harp by Eolus blown,
As if touched by the lightest of fingers,
The portal wide open was thrown;
And we saw not the holy Saint Peter,
Not even an angel of light,
But a vision far dearer and sweeter,
Not as brilliant nor blindingly bright,
But marvellous unto the sight!

In the midst of the mystical splendour,
Stood a beautiful, beautiful child—
A golden-haired, azure-eyed child.
With a look that was touching and tender,
She stretched out her white hand and smiled:

* The dragon-ship of the Norse mythology.

† The Fates and Furies.

"Ay, welcome, thrice welcome, poor mortals,
O, why do ye linger and wait?
Come fearlessly in at these portals—
No warder keeps watch at the gate!"

"Gloria Deo! Te Deum laudamus!"
Exclaimed the proud prelate, "I'm safe into Heaven;
Through the blood of the lamb, and the martyrs who claim us,
My soul has been purchased, my sins are forgiven!
I tread where the saints and the martyrs have trod—
Lead on, thou fair child, to the temple of God!"

The child stood in silence and wonder,
Then bowed down her beautiful head,
And even as fragrance is shed
From the lily the waves have swept under,
She meekly and tenderly said—
So simply and truthfully said:
"In vain do ye seek to behold Him;
He dwells in no temple apart;
The height of the Heavens cannot hold Him,
And yet He is here in my heart—
He is here, and He will not depart."

Then out from the mystical splendour,
The swift-changing, crystalline light,
The rainbow-hued, scintillant light,
Gleamed faces more touching and tender
Than ever had greeted our sight—
Our sin-blinded, death-darkened sight;
And they sang: "Welcome home to the Kingdom,
Ye earth-born and serpent-beguiled;
The Lord is the light of this Kingdom,
And His temple the heart of a child—
Of a trustful and teachable child,
Ye are born to the life of the Kingdom—
Receive, and believe, as a child."

SPIRIT FORMS.

BY PRINCE WITTGENSTEIN, AIDE-DE-CAMP TO THE EMPEROR OF RUSSIA.

THE uncourteous attacks, systematically directed by part of the Spiritualistic press in England, against a young lady of scarcely seventeen, should make it a law to every gentleman who has had the honour of being admitted to her private seances, to stand up in her behalf, and join the few generous persons who, like Messrs: Crookes, Luxmoore, Dunphy, Tapp, and others unnamed, have loudly borne witness for her, and to whom you, sir, have most loyally opened the columns of The Spiritualist newspaper.

Being little accustomed to write your language, I beforehand beg your readers' pardon for every sin I may perchance commit against it, hoping that they will forgive the form for the sake of the intention which dictates these remarks.

I have, during my short stay in London, some six weeks ago, been twice favoured with invitations to Miss Cook's seances, once at Mr. Luxmoore's, the other time at Hackney, and found that not only the manifestations I witnessed were beyond all human power of imitation, thus excluding any possible suspicion, but that the extreme youth, modesty, and gentle ladylike demeanour of the medium herself, as well as the respectability of her parents and of the company I had the pleasure of meeting—but especially the fact of no material interest whatever being in question—made every interpretation of deceit and charlatanism quite inadmissible.

I confess that the illusion produced by the materialised "Katie" is complete, and that one might strongly be induced to believe that the graceful, lively, sympathetic young woman smiling at you is not merely a momentary condensation of impalpable fluids, but a real, charming human being in flesh and blood. I confess, also, that she resembles Miss Cook by the law of the perisprit keeping, when disengaged, the impression of the material form to which it belongs. But it requires only a glance to ascertain the difference in shape, proportions, manners, voice, &c., existing between Miss Cook and "Katie," and to get convinced that they positively are two very distinct personalities, not to be mistaken, and only bearing between themselves a sort of strong family likeness.

One of the most striking proofs of Katie's immateriality appears to me in her way of moving. She did not walk; she did not even slide; she seemed to be there at once, without my knowing how she came. The touch of her hand also, is not that of a material one. It feels more like velvet than like skin, and produces the impression of an empty glove, filled with air; it came accidentally in contact with a slight cut on my chin, and produced a little burning sensation, which lasted upwards of two minutes.

But the most irrefutable proof of her and Miss Cook being two separate individuals, was given to me at the end of the seance at Hackney: Katie had not disappeared for longer than forty seconds at most, when we opened the curtain and found Miss Cook in the act of awaking. It would have been quite impossible for her to change her gown, put on her boots, dress her hair in so short a time; and the space itself in which she sat is too narrow to admit the possibility of moving about and dressing in it, had even the time been sufficient for the operation.

Another proof of Katie's reality as an immaterial being, was given to me, by her putting some flowers into my button-hole. [In the dark?] I felt her hand touching my coat; but I did not feel the rest of her person, although it stood nearly between my knees, seeming to lean against me.

This, sir, is what I can affirm, as the result of my personal experience, and I should feel most happy, if, by your kind insertion of this in your next publication, it could help to disable ungenerous and hostile insinuations, which ought not to gain ground against a young lady, having no other defence than the purity of her reputation.

EMILE, Prince of Sayn Wittgenstein.
Neider Walluf on the Rhine, 9th Feb., 1874.

A CURIOUS TRANCE.—There is a little boy in Detroit, Michigan, who can mimic death, during which he has strange dreams and visions. His name is Ned Baker, and he lives with his aunt on Macomb-street. The Detroit Free Press says that he will, for a small compensation, stretch out on the floor, cease to breathe apparently, grow white in the face, affect the rigidity of a corpse, and his pulse becomes so feeble that the beating can only be detected by a practical finger. He lately went through this performance in a saloon on Woodbridge-street, and so much like genuine death was his counterfeit, that the men who put him up to the trick became greatly frightened, and bribed him to come out of his trance. His breathing was so faint that it could not be felt on the hand or cheek, and hardly dimmed the glass held down to his lips. He says that the performance does not injure his health, and he can make himself so near dead, that it is only by a great mental effort that he throws off the lethargy.—Religio-Philosophical Journal.

Correspondence.

[Great freedom is given to correspondents, who sometimes express opinions diametrically opposed to those of this journal and its readers.]

THE GRASP OF A SPIRIT HAND.

SIR,—Supposing any one, doubting the reliability of Professor Tyndall's exhibition of a sounding and sensitive flame, were to conduct himself in some outrageous manner, by way of satisfying his doubt, or of detecting an imposture, would not all the benches of the Royal Institution resound with shouts of execration, and would such conduct be less profane when accepting conditions of admission to a private circle? The only excuse I can see is that opponents of Spiritualism seem often to quite lose their senses, and to be hardly masters of themselves.

But I can well conceive the danger of interference in spirit circles, knowing what it is for lookers on to interfere with a mesmerised patient; I have known most alarming consequences to result from such interference, which is termed "cross-mesmerism."

In regard to the Davenport's, I have seen people at private seances often endeavour to catch hold of the hands, though without succeeding, but then there were no conditions imposed, and it was never objected to; but the fact of the hands eluding the grasp was rather amusing, so that I am surprised at the story related of them after their giving a seance expressly for the object of convincing the person referred to. I had been told that spirit hands, if taken hold of, would melt away in your grasp; so that it was natural to conclude that if you could succeed in taking hold of one of those hands, its melting away in your hold would settle the question of its spiritual nature, and if it did not melt away, and you could keep hold of it till the door was opened, you would detect the imposture. Now, I did, at a private seance, succeed in taking fast hold of one of those hands; it grasped my hand in return, and, in spite of all resistance on my part, dragged my hand into the aperture and downwards, and I thought my wrist would have been broken against the sharp edge of the aperture. Thankful I was when it let me loose, as the door was being opened, and there sat the brothers secured just as we had left them. Thus, then, the hand neither melted away, nor did I detect imposture, but I felt the injury to my wrist for a long time. Our old notion in respect to spirits or ghosts was as things that could vanish through walls, or such as you might cut through and through with your sword without doing them injury. But these materialised hands flashing into existence and gone again into airy nothing in an instant, yet "sensible to feeling as to sight," and equal to making you only too sensible of their power and actuality, must make one pause and ponder touching what is spirit and what is flesh, until one seems to see some slight glimmering in the path of life leading up to its spiritual source, in quite an opposite line from the dead mechanical materialism of Messrs. Darwin and Wallace.

Boulogne.

HENRY G. ATKINSON.

SWEDENBORG ON SPIRITUAL COMMUNION.

SIR,—I presume the quotations from Swedenborg on "Communion with Spirits," which appeared in your paper of Jan. 30th, were not meant so much for the instruction of Spiritualists, as for the sake of such interest as might attach to the writings of the great seer upon the subject. Admirable and instructive as are the works of Swedenborg, and probably not sufficiently read by Spiritualists generally, yet I think that modern Spiritualism has so far outgrown his guidance as the nineteenth century has outgrown the eighteenth, or as the Christian dispensation may be said to have outgrown the Mosaic, or Jewish. It must be thus ever in the growth and development of the human race. There is no retrogression in knowledge. We cannot now, I think, hamper our movements by the warnings that might have been suited to the time when Swedenborg lived. At any rate we shall find it impossible so to do, for the spirit world, under Divine direction, is pressing down upon us with a power that compels attention. It is well, however, to know what the character of our visitants may be. Forewarned, we become forearmed, but it does not follow that all from the spirit-world are to be disbelieved and treated as liars, because Swedenborg says so. If all spirits are liars, how much are the teachings of this medium of the last century to be relied upon, all of which came from spirits? And if man—as he says—may be deceived into believing he converses with the Holy Spirit, and the spirit then with man believes himself to be that Holy Spirit, what was the fate of Swedenborg, who tells us that the Lord Jesus Christ appeared unto him and taught him?

From modern Spiritualism has grown the system of spirit guides, the only safeguard, perhaps, in our dealings with the other world. At this day, if a man be determined to commune with the invisibles (and why should he be debarred from seeking knowledge in that way as well as any other?) his safest plan is to find out who are his spirit-guides, and under their direction and protection, he can safely expose himself to those dangers against which Swedenborg warns us so frequently in his works; a warning which his followers adhere to strictly, thereby closing the door upon much useful knowledge.

In regard to the identity of spirits, spiritualists generally know how to obtain tests; but when the returning spirit is a lately departed friend, and the medium's spiritual senses are sufficiently opened to permit an actual enjoyment of the presence equal in many instances to what it was in the flesh, seeking for tests of identity becomes superfluous. The actual presence is there; the personal sphere of the spirit is strongly felt; the form in its enhanced beauty is beheld; the turns and form of speech peculiar to the individual in the flesh, are exhibited to the medium purposely to mark identity; the acts of the spirit in kindly ministrations carry out to the full the character and nature that was known on earth. In such a case as this, falsehood is no more to be thought of than in our communion with beloved and trusted friends on earth.

As regards the danger of intercourse with spirits,—egotism, irreverence, and folly alone make it dangerous. When for years one has had communion with the same spirit, and he proves himself by every act to be in very truth a guardian angel,—urging on to good, reproofing tendencies to evil, bestowing moments of highest spiritual happiness, or tenderly and sorrowfully inflicting the necessary pains for wrong doing, as a parent would chastise a child. When one converses with such a being at any instant as with a friend in the flesh; when in the fullness of time one's eyes are opened to behold the spiritual presence in all its beauty, it is impossible to believe in danger; but the soul ravished with the contemplation of the great blessings accorded unto it, is overwhelmed with sentiments of love, admiration, and worship of that great God, whose will and whose work are gloriously exhibited in our much decried and despised Spiritualism.

Swedenborg wrote of the spiritual faculties inherent in every man, which may be opened to this celestial communion; he also prophesied that the time would come when angels would again walk upon earth with man. The time has come, and we have only reverently and humbly to make ourselves clean for such company to be raised to its enjoyment.

CATHERINE WOODFORDE.

OTHER WORLD ORDER.

SIR,—The opening sentence of my last paper must have puzzled any careful reader. It ought to have run thus:—"It is one of the hardest things in the world to get accurately understood, and when misunderstood we are apt to consider the reader's perspicacity at fault rather than our own perspicuity." "Perspicuity" was substituted for "perspicacity;" and a friend remarks, "You are rightly served for using such a long word." I am also made to say, "The salvation of a devil is equivocal to his conversion into an angel," when I meant to write equivocal. Such mistakes made me miserable when I was young, but now I am hardened.

WILLIAM WHITE.

30, Thurlow-road, Hampstead, N.W. 9th Feb., 1874.

SPIRITUALISM IN CANADA.—Spiritualism is spreading in Montreal and Western Canada. The son of a wealthy merchant—Mr. H. Matheson, 16, King-street, East Toronto—has been developed by the invisibles as a medium for spirit materialisations, musical and physical phenomena, and the writing of discourses and messages while in an unconscious trance. Owing to the perfect reliability and high social standing of the family, the strange occurrences have caused the utmost curiosity in Toronto.

THERE will be another meeting of the Council of the British National Association of Spiritualists next Monday, to finally decide upon the prospectus.

THE object of Mrs. Showers in visiting London, is to observe spiritual phenomena, not to give seances, and it is to be hoped that facilities will be given her for so doing, since she has published such interesting testimony as to the reality of spiritual manifestations, by narrating what she has witnessed in the privacy of her own house.

ACCIDENT TO DR. SEXTON.—On Sunday evening last, as Dr. Sexton was crossing the street opposite the statue in King William-street, City, he was knocked down by a four-wheeled cab, which was being driven along at great speed. He was thrown nearly under the wheels of an omnibus, and it was almost a miracle that he was not killed on the spot. Fortunately, he escaped with some bruises and a severe shaking, from the effects of which, we trust, he will speedily recover.

MR. MASSEY IN AMERICA.—On more than one occasion Mr. Gerald Massey's lectures in the United States have been too unorthodox for the listeners. The executive committee of the Chicago Philosophical Society recently replied as follows to a protest from the trustees of the Chicago Methodist Church, who had let their building to the society for the delivery of one of Mr. Massey's lectures:—"We fully recognise not only your right, but your duty, to protest against any improper use of the church property held by you as trustees, and we are free to admit, in the case of Gerald Massey's lecture, we did not use our usual caution in ascertaining the character of it; and are equally free to say that, had we been aware of its character, we should have declined it." On the 17th of last month, at a dinner which took place in Boston in connection with the Franklin Typographical Society, Mr. Massey said:—"I am pleased that the first public social reception given to me in Boston should have come from the working-men. I was born among the workers, and to them I belong. At the present time I am associated with a subject that is tabooed and unfashionable—so much so that only a single preliminary word of welcome was given to me by the Boston press. It has always been my fate to stand on the weaker and unpopular side, and it is so still. But, gentlemen, I can assure you it was the side that came uppermost, and was the stronger in the end, and I do not doubt it will be so with this much despised subject of Spiritualism. I carry with me from England letters of introduction from some of our foremost people to some of your most honourable citizens. But, as fate would have it, none but the despised Spiritualists invited me to lecture in Boston, and with them have I cast in my lot. In this connection, too, it is pleasant to reflect that all the private hospitality extended to me in America has been in the homes of the Spiritualists."

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

B. EDINBURGH:—Mr. Blyton, who was present at the seance, published an account of it in these pages a few weeks ago.

MISS LOTTIE FOWLER, the GREAT AMERICAN SOMNAMBULIST AND CLAIRVOYANTE, whose reputation is well known throughout Europe and America for Revealing Startling Facts to the public, can be consulted on either Medical or Business Affairs connected with the Living and Dead. Hours 12 to 5. Terms, One Guinea. Address, care of Mr. Middleton's "City Temperance Hotel," foot of Lord Cockburn-street, Edinburgh.

MR. W. G. SCOREY, MEDICAL MESMERIST AND RUBBER, having successfully treated several cases, is again open to engagements.—194, Cornwall-road, Notting-hill, W. (Hammersmith line). Please write.

DR. JOHN HUNTER and DR. MESMER may be consulted upon all forms of illness, through MR. ROBERT HARPER, from whom Mesmeric Treatment and Eclectic Medicines may be obtained, at 114, Wardour-street, Oxford-street, W. Fees, 10s. and upwards. Hours, one to five o'clock daily.

MRS. EMPSON, MEDICAL CLAIRVOYANT AND MAGNETIC HEALER, undertakes the Diagnosis and the Cure of Diseases (if curable). Patients at a distance may obtain diagnosis and advice by sending magnetic link and fee of 10s. Address, 114, Wardour-street, Oxford-street, W. Hours, one to five o'clock daily.

FOR SALE, PRICE £5, BRECHES' BIBLE (Geneva edition), 1610, black letter, with copious annotations throughout. Illustrated with plates. In perfect condition. To be seen on application to T. Blyton, 74, Navarino-road, Dalston, London, E.

HUGH McLEOD, M.D., Psychometric, Impressional, and healing by the laying on of hands; in which departments of Mediumship Dr. McLeod is prepared to give the highest references. Terms, 5s. each person. Visits by arrangement. Hours 10 till 4. 22, Robert-street, Hampstead-road, N.W.

MRS. WOODFORDE, TRANCE MEDIUM & MEDICAL MESMERIST, will also give Sittings for Development in Writing or Drawing under Spirit Control. Terms reasonable.—Present address, 41, Bernard-street, Russell-square. Private Seances attended.

MESMERISM AND CLAIRVOYANCE.

PROFESSOR ADOLPHE DIDIER (28 Years established) ATTENDS PATIENTS and gives his Consultations at his residence daily, from Three till Five o'clock.—19, Fitzroy-street, Fitzroy-square.

MR. CHARLES E. WILLIAMS, Medium, is at home daily, to give Private Seances, from 12 to 5 p.m. Private Seances attended at the houses of investigators. Public Seances at 61, Lamb's Conduit-street, on Monday evenings, admission 2s. 6d.; Thursday evenings 5s.; and Saturday evenings, for Spiritualists only, 5s.; at 8 o'clock each evening. Address as above.

THE MANCHESTER ASSOCIATION OF SPIRITUALISTS.

A MEETING of the active members and friends of this Association was held on Sunday, the 26th day of October, 1873, to take into consideration the best means to adopt for the consolidation of the society. A provisional committee was appointed, from which a sub-committee was chosen, to draw up a prospectus.

The Objects of this Association are:—

1. Mutual aid on the part of its members in the discovery of all truth relating to man's spiritual nature, capacities, duties, welfare, destiny, its application to a regenerate life, also to assist enquirers in the investigation of the facts of Spiritualism.

2. To spread a knowledge of the truths connected with the facts, chiefly the truth of the reality of a future state of progressive existence for all.

As soon as a sufficient number of members is enrolled, a meeting will be called, at which a permanent committee will be elected for the management of the society.

The provisional committee earnestly solicit the co-operation of all who desire the spread of the true and ennobling principles of Spiritualism.

The public meetings of this association are held, pro tem., at the Temperance Hall, Grosvenor-street, every Sunday afternoon, at 2.30, except when other arrangements are made, of which due notice will be given.

RICHARD FITTON, Secretary pro tem.

Now Ready, Price Sixpence.

GOD AND IMMORTALITY, viewed in relation to MODERN SPIRITUALISM.

A Discourse delivered in the City Hall Saloon, Glasgow, on Sunday Evening, February 23rd, 1873, by

GEORGE SEXTON, M.A., M.D., LL.D., D.Sc.,

Honorary Member of L'Accademia Dei Quiriti, at Rome, &c.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR—

Price Threepence,

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF MACBETH.

A Lecture delivered before the Psychological Society of Glasgow, on May 4th, 1869.

"We advise all playgoers and dramatic readers to give a glance at this pamphlet; they will be well paid for their trouble, and will see the phases of Macbeth's character far better than any actor of the present day can delineate them."—Theatrical Journal.

"The lecture is a full, careful, and philosophical treatise on the Shakespearean tragedy. Dr. Sexton makes the most patient analysis of the character of the Thane; and in his conclusions, generally speaking, the student will readily acquiesce."—The Era.

PHOTOGRAPHIC COPIES OF THE ILLUMINATED ADDRESS to be presented by the Spiritualists of Great Britain to Judge Edmonds, of New York, may be obtained of Messrs. Negrotti and Zambra, Crystal Palace, Sydenham. Price—Large size, 3s.; small size, 1s.

AUSTRALIAN DEPOT for all Spiritualistic Literature, W. H. TERRY, 96, RUSSELL-STREET, MELBOURNE, where The Spiritualist, and all other Journals devoted to the same subject, may be obtained.

The Harbinger of Light, the Victorian exponent of Spiritualism, sent to 11 parts of the world. Subscription, 5s. per annum, exclusive of postage.

AARON FRANKLIN, PRESERVER OF BIRDS AND ANIMALS, AND DELINEATOR OF NATURE. Museums and private collections attended. British and foreign birds'-skins, stags'-heads, fox's heads, shells, and corals in great variety. The Spiritualist and kindred periodicals kept on sale. Established 1847. AARON FRANKLIN, 100, Suffolk-street, Birmingham.

THOS. WILKS, BOOKSELLER, STATIONER, CIRCULATING LIBRARY, &c., &c., of 2, Napier-place, Dalston Lane, London, E., respectfully solicits the patronage of Spiritualists residing in the vicinity of Clapton, Hackney, Dalston, and Kingsland.—Information as to Local Associations, Seances, &c., to be obtained on application. The Spiritualist newspaper kept on sale.

INSPIRATIONAL LECTURES BY MR. J. J. MORSE (Trance Medium).

Opinions of the Press.

"Every word was listened to with breathless attention, and every eye riveted on the speaker, who, for an hour and a half, poured out a flood of eloquence without stopping or hesitating for a single moment."—Birmingham Daily Mail.

"The prayer over he commenced an eloquent and philosophical address on modern Spiritualism."—North-Western Daily Times.

"The medium then passed into what is termed the trance state, and in clear and forcible language, with a readiness of expression and fluency of utterance delivered a discourse on Spiritualism."—Liverpool Daily Albion.

"For nearly an hour and a half the orationist, medium, lecturer, or whatever name he chooses to go by, spoke with a fluency, a logical and grammatical correctness, a fitness of language and figure, upon this abstruse subject—'Humanity; its Nature and its Needs'—which no half-dozen orators in England could hope to equal in their normal condition, without the most laborious preparation beforehand, and the greatest coolness during delivery. . . . He never paused except when a pause was necessary for rhetorical effect!"—South Wales Press.

"Those who are intellectually inclined, and desire to know what Spiritualism is as taught by the spirits, will learn more in an hour's conversation with Mr. Morse's guides than in months of misdirected seeking."—Medium.

"The address given through the lips of Mr. Morse was of a very philosophical and high-class character."—Spiritualist.

"Mr. Morse is what is called a speaking-medium, of no mean order, for he kept crowded audiences intently listening each evening for above an hour and a half to his certainly most powerful and accomplished addresses."—Darlington and Richmond Herald.

"He (Mr. Morse) dealt with the various theories set up against Spiritualism, and sometimes he stated his argument so well and became so eloquent, as to provoke rounds of applause from the audience. . . . As the lecture proceeded these demonstrations on the part of the audience became more frequent and prolonged."—Glasgow Herald.

MR. J. J. MORSE, Trance Medium, is open to receive engagements in London or the provinces, to attend seances, or address public meetings. Mr. Morse holds a seance every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at 15, Southampton-row, W.C., when he is in London, where letters, &c., may be addressed, or to his private residence, Warwick Cottage, Old Ford, Bow, E.

TO ENQUIRERS INTO SPIRITUALISM.

ONE of the most compact, and well-considered masses of evidence that Spiritualism is true, is No. 49 of The Spiritualist, price 4d. or 4½d. post free. It is a number compiled specially for the information of enquirers, and will give them a very large amount of information at a cheap rate. This number of The Spiritualist is of special value for sale at the doors at public meetings connected with Spiritualism, so copies should be kept on hand by psychological societies in all parts of the United Kingdom. London: E. W. Allen, 11, Ave Maria-lane, E.C.

HENRY B. BUSH,

(From Hunt and Marsland's)

PRACTICAL BOOKBINDER, STATIONER, BOOKSELLER, LETTER-PRESS, COPPER-PLATE, AND LITHOGRAPHIC PRINTER, ENGRAVER, &c.

14, HIGH-STREET, BOW (FACING THE CHURCH).

Newspapers and Periodicals supplied. Agent for The Spiritualist Newspaper.

Recently published, in Crown 8vo., price 2s.

HYMNS OF MODERN MAN. By Thomas Herbert Noyes, jun. B.A., of Christ's Church, Oxford. Author of "An Idyll of the world," and "Lyrics and Bucolics," &c. London: Longmans, Green, and Co., Paternoster-row.

WORK BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

An elegant little volume, bound in blue and gold, carmine edges,

Price 4s. 6d.

LYRICS AND BUCOLICS. The Eclogues of Virgil, a selection from the Odes of Horace, and the Legend of the Sibyll.

"Mr. Noyes' qualifications are of no mean order. In the first place, he has the essential one of thoroughly entering into and appreciating the true spirit of his master, and even where, as we have said, he exceeds what we conceive to be the limits of a translation, we attribute it rather to his being carried away by his own muse than to his misunderstanding his author's. And here we have a second and no less important qualification for success. Mr. Noyes has a genuine poetic vein of his own, and his lines have almost always the ring of true metal."—Standard, April 7th, 1868.

"There is a certain freedom and swing in these translations, which not only more resembles the brisk spirit and ringing tone of the original, but is truly refreshing after the stiff rendering which had been generally made of Horace's choicest composition."—London Review, Feb. 15th, 1868.

"The translations from Horace are spirited and musical. His light Epicureanism and gay Stoicism are happily hit off."—Daily News, March 3d, 1868.

"Mr. Noyes' version of Virgil's Pastorals may fairly take its place by the side of Mr. Conington's translation of the Æneid. The lovers of such poetry have here as pleasant a bouquet as can well be set before them."—Speculator, March 7th, 1868.

TO SPIRITUALISTS, BOOKSELLERS, AND NEWSAGENTS.

J. C. ASTON, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL BOOKSELLER, STATIONER, AND PUBLISHER, Agent for the Sale of The Spiritualist, 39, Smallbrook street, Birmingham, Supplies the Town and Country Trade, on London Terms, with Periodicals, Stationery, and all Goods connected with the Trade. The largest Stock of Periodicals, &c., out of London. Agencies accepted for any Publications.

Established 1842.

EVIDENCE THAT SPIRITUALISM DESERVES INVESTIGATION.

SPIRITUALISM deserves investigation because within the last twenty years has found its way into all the civilised countries on the globe; it has also a literature of thousands of volumes and not a few periodicals.

The London Dialectical Society, Adam-street, Adelphi, under the presidency of Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P., appointed a Committee to investigate spiritual phenomena. The Committee was appointed on the 26th January, 1869, as follows:—

“H. G. Atkinson, Esq., F.G.S.; G. Wheatley Bennett, Esq.; J. S. Berghelm, Esq., C.E.; H. R. Fox Bourne, Esq.; Charles Bradlaugh, Esq.; G. Fenton Camerou, Esq., M.D.; John Chapman, Esq., M.D.; Rev. C. Maurice Davies, D.D.; Charles R. Drysdale, Esq., M.D. D. H. Dyte, Esq., M.R.C.S.; Mrs. D. H. Dyte; James Edmunds, Esq., M.D.; Mrs. Edmunds, James Gannon, Esq.; Grattan Geary, Esq.; Robert Hannah, Esq., F.G.S.; Jenner Gale Hillier, Esq.; Mrs. J. G. Hillier; Henry Jeffery, Esq.; Albert Kisch, Esq., M.R.C.S.; Joseph Maurice, Esq.; Isaac L. Meyers, Esq.; B. M. Moss, Esq.; Robert Quelch, Esq., C.E.; Thomas Reed, Esq.; C. Russell Roberts, Esq., Ph.D.; William Volkman, Esq.; Horace S. Yeomans, Esq.

“Professor Huxley and Mr. George Henry Lewes, to be invited to co-operate. Drs. Chapman and Drysdale and Mr. Fox Bourne declined to sit, and the following names were subsequently added to the Committee:—

“George Cary, Esq., B.A.; Edward W. Cox, Esq., Serjeant-at-law; William B. Gower, Esq.; H. D. Jencken, Esq., Barrister-at-law; J. H. Levy, Esq.; W. H. Swepston, Esq., Solicitor; Alfred R. Wallace, Esq., F.R.G.S.; Josiah Webber, Esq.”

After inquiring into the subject for two years, the Committee issued its report, which, with the evidence, forms a bulky volume, published by Messrs. Longmans. Among other things this Committee reported:—

“1. That sounds of a very varied character, apparently proceeding from articles of furniture, the floor and walls of the room—the vibrations accompanying which sounds are often distinctly perceptible to the touch—occur, without being produced by muscular action or mechanical contrivance.

“2. That movements of heavy bodies take place without mechanical contrivance of any kind, or adequate exertion of muscular force by those present, and frequently without contact or connection with any person.

“3. That these sounds and movements often occur at the time and in the manner asked for by persons present, and by means of a simple code of signals, answer questions and spell out coherent communications.

One of the sub-committees of the Dialectical Society reported:—

“Your committee studiously avoided the employment of professional or paid mediums. All were members of the committee, persons of social position, of unimpeachable integrity, with no pecuniary object, having nothing to gain by deception, and everything to lose by detection of imposture.”

HOW TO FORM SPIRIT CIRCLES.

INQUIRE into Spiritualism should begin by forming spirit circles in their own homes, with no Spiritualist or professional medium present. Should no results be obtained on the first occasion, try again with other sitters. One or more persons possessing medial powers without knowing it are to be found in nearly every household.

1. Let the room be of a comfortable temperature, but cool rather than warm—let arrangements be made that nobody shall enter it, and that there shall be no interruption for one hour during the sitting of the circle.

2. Let the circle consist of four, five, or six individuals, about the same number of each sex. Sit round an uncovered wooden table, with all the palms of the hands in contact with its top surface. Whether the hands touch each other or not is usually of no importance. Any table will do, just large enough to conveniently accommodate the sitters. The removal of a hand from the table for a few seconds does no harm, but when one of the sitters breaks the circle by leaving the table it sometimes, but not always, very considerably delays the manifestations.

3. Before the sitting begins, place some pointed lead-pencils and some sheets of clean writing paper on the table, to write down any communications that may be obtained.

4. People who do not like each other should not sit in the same circle, for such a want of harmony tends to prevent manifestations, except with well-developed physical mediums; it is not yet known why. Belief or unbelief has no influence on the manifestations, but an acrid feeling against them is a weakening influence.

5. Before the manifestations begin, it is well to engage in general conversation or in singing, and it is best that neither should be of a frivolous nature. A prayerful, earnest feeling among the members of the circle gives the higher spirits more power to come to the circle, and makes it more difficult for the lower spirits to get near.

6. The first symptom of the invisible power at work is often a feeling like a cool wind sweeping over the hands. The first manifestations will probably be table tiltings or raps.

7. When motions of the table or sounds are produced freely, to avoid confusion, let one person only speak, and talk to the table as to an intelligent being. Let him tell the table that three tilts or raps mean “Yes,” one means “No,” and two mean “Doubtful,” and ask whether the arrangement is understood. If three signals be given in answer, then say, “If I speak the letters of the alphabet slowly, will you signal every time I come to the letter you want, and spell us out a message?” Should three signals be given, set to work on the plan proposed, and from this time an intelligent system of communication is established.

8. Afterwards the question should be put, “Are we sitting in the right order to get the best manifestations?” Probably some members of the circle will then be told to change seats with each other, and the signals will be afterwards strengthened. Next ask, “Who is the medium?” When spirits come asserting themselves to be related or known to anybody present, well-chosen questions should be put to test the accuracy of the statements, as spirits out of the body have all the virtues and all the failings of spirits in the body.

9. A powerful physical medium is usually a person of an impulsive, affectionate, and genial nature, and very sensitive to mesmeric influences. The majority of media are ladies.

The best manifestations are obtained when the medium and all the members of the circle are strongly bound together by the affections, and are thoroughly comfortable and happy; the manifestations are born of the spirit, and shrink somewhat from the lower mental influences of earth. Family circles, with no strangers present, are usually the best.

Possibly at the first sitting of a circle symptoms of other forms of mediumship than tilts or raps may make their appearance.

BRITISH NATIONAL INSURANCE CORPORATION, LIMITED.

CAPITAL—ONE MILLION STERLING.

Head Offices.—BROWN STREET AND MARSDEN STREET, MANCHESTER

FIRE.

INSURANCES AGAINST LOSS OR DAMAGE BY FIRE may be effected with this Corporation upon every description of property at equitable rates

BONUS RETURNS.—In all cases where no claim has been made upon the Corporation during the year preceding, a Bonus of ten Per Cent. will be returned on the payment of Renewed Premiums.

FIDELITY GUARANTEE.

Policies are issued by this Corporation Guaranteeing Employers against loss by the Fraud or Dishonesty of persons holding confidential and other places of trust.

The Local Government Board have approved the Policies of this Corporation as security for the Poor Law Officials.

Chief Offices for Guarantee.

20, KING WILLIAM STREET, LONDON, E.C.

 Applications invited from Solicitors and Agents of influence standing to act for the Corporation in unrepresented localities

TO OWNERS OF HOUSE PROPERTY.

E. BIRD, HOUSE AGENT,

11, PARK GROVE, SHEPHERD'S LANE, BRIXTON,

RESPECTFULLY solicits the patronage of Owners of House Property, the situation of his Offices—opposite the Brixton Road, and near the Railway Station—offering special facilities for the prompt letting of Houses of every description.

All Orders for Building, House Decorating, Plumbing, and Gas Fitting, well and promptly executed.

ARTHUR MALTBY,

TAILOR AND HABIT MAKER,

8, HANOVER PLACE, PARK ROAD, REGENT'S PARK.

Established 1833.

Orders executed on the shortest notice. Workmanship and Fit guaranteed. LIBERAL DISCOUNT FOR CASH.

SPIRITUAL LEAFLETS.—Handsome-printed Blue Leaflets, containing instructions how to form Spirit Circles, the results of the investigation of the Dialectical Society, and other information, may be obtained in packets, each containing 400, price 2s. 6d. per packet. They are especially useful for distribution at public meetings, also in railway-carriages, letter-boxes, reading-rooms, clubs, and places of public resort.

E. W. Allen, 11, Ave Maria-lane, St. Paul's-churchyard, London, E.C.

A NEW ERA IN JOURNALISM!

THE FREE SPEAKER, a High Class Family Newspaper. Weekly—One Penny.

SPECIAL POLITICAL AND SOCIAL ARTICLES,

BY INDEPENDENT WRITERS.

Full Reports of Home, Foreign, and General News. Law and Police.

FREEDOM OF CORRESPONDENCE.

WEEKLY TALES BY THE FIRST WRITERS.

Publishing Office: 125, Fleet-street. Advertisement Office: 106, Shoe-lane.

LUNACY LAW REFORM.

ALL PERSONS cognisant of cases of INCARCERATION, under a false plea of Insanity, or of MALTREATMENT OF LUNATICS, or who are ready to co-operate in obtaining AMENDMENT OF THE LUNACY LAWS, are earnestly requested to communicate with

MRS. LOUISA LOWE,

97, BURTON ROAD, BRIXTON.

The following Extract from the “ACT TO AMEND the Law relating to LUNATICS” is a fair specimen of Lunacy Legislation:—

“It shall be lawful for the Proprietor or Superintendent of any licensed house with the previous assent in writing of two or more of the Commissioners, or in the Case of a House licensed by Justices, of two or more of the Visitors to entertain and keep in such house as a Boarder, for such time as may be specified in the assent, any person who may have been WITHIN FIVE YEARS immediately preceding the giving of such assent, a Patient in any asylum, hospital, or licensed house, or under care as a Single Patient.”—25 & 26 Vict., ch. iii., sec. 18.

Printed for the Proprietor by BEVERIDGE & Co., at the Holborn Printing Works, Fullwood's Rents, High Holborn, in the Parish of St. Andrew-above-Bar and St. George the Martyr, London, and published by E. W. ALLEN, Ave Maria-lane London, E.C.