Containing

A New and Curious Vocabulary English and Latine page 11. 1.
Latine and English Vocabulary page 28, wherein (besides other Advantages) the Affinity of not a few Words, in both Languages, is cleared, to the avoiding many vulgar Errours;
 also the exact Spelling of Words, according to their different Meanings, is explained, the knowledge of which is most useful, and want, shameful; and much to be regrated, but not easily to be attained, unless by practice in peoples tender years, to which are added

. An Alphabet of Words, which seem to signify the same thing, but do not usually, page 37.

. A Discourse concerning the Excellency of the English Language, page 42.

. A Tractate concerning POINTING, page 44.

. Directions when to write Capital Letters, page 46.

. Some General Rules for SPELLING, page 50.

. Short Minutes of GEOGRAPHY excerpted out of Eacharact depend and others, in which some Kingdoms and Towns, the most obvious Names, under which, they have to pass; Every Kingdom hath its length and breadth with chief City subjoynd.

Affinitas vocum saepe fallit pueros.

The 2d Edition enlarged by ROBERT BLAU, M.A. for the use of his private School, especially the higher Classes, the first Edition whereof was licensed the 16 of Sep: 1686. By His MAJESTIES Privy Council for 19 Years to come.

Printed by the Heirs and Successors of Andrew Anderson, Printer to the King's most Excellent Majesty. And are to be sold by the Author, within the foot of Forester's Wynde, together with the third Edition of his English Rudiments.
 2. INDEX POETICUS containing all the quantities which fall not under the former Rules & 39 kinds of verses, both most necessary Additions to Disputers and Poets. 3. Oration by way of a Tragical Play, both English and Latine upon several Subjects, to each of which there are a Chorus, to different Tunes, subjoynd.

Grace before Meat.

GOD, in whom we live, move,
and have our Being, be merciful unto us, in pardoning our sins and blessing the Creatures, which thou hast provided for us, through Jesus Christ thy Son, Amen.

Grace after Meat.

Great art thou, O God, and greatly to be feared! who from the womb unto this day, hast been merciful unto us, in supplying all our wants, both Spiritual and Temporal, for which we bless and magnifie thy Name, through Jesus Christ thy Son, to whom, with thee, and the blessed Spirit of grace be eternal praise, Amen.

Concerning Pronunciation, and Spelling in General.

AS we have two ways of expressing our selves; to wit by word of Mouth and writing ; So there are two things required for that purpose, true Pronunciation and Spelling which are mainly requisite in Speaking and Writing a Language well. For what Pronunciation is to the Speaker, the same is Spelling to the Writer.

True Pronunciation is nothing else but giving to each Syllable, by one Motion of the Tongue, a sound agreeable to the Genius of the Language : There are four sorts chiefly of Pronunciation, viz. National, Provincial, Grave and Familiar.

National is the most universal, and as a standard to the Nation. Provincial recedes somewhat from the general use, and is particular to some Counties, which are remote from the Court Metropolis or Center of the Nation.

Grave is properly used in Grave and serious Discourses, and comes nearest the regular way of, Spelling.

Familiar is used in common Discourses by the vulgar, who generally speak swift or slow, and so are apt to start aside from the regular way, by giving those sounds to vowels which are not altogether proper and agreeable : Seing the Pronunciation of the English is scarcely attainable by us without frequent converse with those who understand it well. I shal not set down any Rules or Directions for acquiring the same but come to treat a little about Spelling.

True SPELLING, otherways called Orthography, is nothing else but an Image of the Pronunciation and consists in expres-every Motion of the voice, with a certain concurrency of letters, such as is established by use. For since the way happily found out by the Invention of Letters, speak to the Eyes, as well as to the Ears, all Nations, have a share in this so beneficial and usefull a Discovery, & adopted the Letters of their Pronunciation, every one to their own way.

Though there have been many Attempts made to reform the English way of Spelling, and purge it from superfluous & excremental Letters, yet there has been but little progress in it, however these following Observations may be useful to young Beginners.

Obs. 1. That i e in the end of a Subst: in the singular number is torn out of use, and is reduced to y, but in the plural we add an e to e as liberty, liberties, and so in these few words, easy, reply. &c.

Obs. 2. That the final e is now expunged from a multitude of words, where it was superfluous: as; goe owe, cilde, blindnesse.

Obs. 3. That we now spell with a single consonant in the end of a word, as war, hot, big, &c.

Obs. 4. That these words of old, Summe, brutish, monethly, honey, burthen, murther, fathom, Spight, are now spelled Sum, brutish, month, money, hony, burden, murder, fadom. and these, fo, forty, prove, moove, choose, behoove, pseece, theef, feild, yeild, blood, are thus, forty, prove, move, chuse, behove, piece, thief field, yield, blood

A Discourse concerning the English Tongue.

SEING, by our frequent and advantagious converse and traffick with our neighbouring Nation, we now generally use the English Tongue, I thought it fit to speak something concerning the ORIGINAL and EXCELLENCY thereof according to one of their own Writers.

The ORIGINAL of the English Nation and Language fetched from the Saxons, a people of the Lower-Germany, who having invaded Britan, and forced the antient Natives of that part of the Island to retire beyond the Severn into Wales, and divided the same into seven Kingdoms, called the Saxons Heptarchy. Which at last was reduced into a Monarchical state by Egbert, King of the West-Saxons, by whom the whole united body (in a Parliament held at Winchester anno 819.) was named Engellond; since termed England, from whence the Nation Language came to be called English. Its thought that King Egbert gave it this name because he was descended from the Angles, an antient People, which joyned with their Neighbour the Saxons, and went under their name in the conquest of Britan. They lived in that part of the Cimbrian Chersonese, which now goes by the name of the Dukedome of Sleswick; there being still a small Town called Angolen, which preserves the Memory to this Day. The English Tongue hath been extraordinarily improv'd by the continual Accession of other Languages, especially the Latine and French: The first brought in by the learned part of the Nation, the other by the Norman conquest, as yet, and formerly by Courtiers and Travellers. The Danes by their long Conquest made little Alteration in the Language, because they used the German Dialect. By which we may understand that the English is a compound of Saxon, Latine, and French, The first because of its predominancy may be justly called the stock into which the other two are ingrafted. And this much to the Original of the English Nation and Tongue.

The EXCELLENCY of the Language consists in Facility, Clarity, Significancy, and Sweetness.

Its FACILITY is easily demonstrable, by its Exemption from flexions, and the other Accidences of Words (making an y Concordance) which some call the Emblems of Babels curse Confusion. What Difficulty is in the French Pronouns, In- tives and Reciprocal Verbs is well known to all who learn COPIOUSNESS needs not to be demonstrat, for besides Treasures of the antient Dutch, which the English retains in Saxon Monosyllables, the choicer wits of this Nation have hitherto the very quintessence of some forreign Language, which breeds Admiration in Strangers to see their own translated Words thrive better in the English than in their native Soil, and whereas the French is stinted and become barren through its exceeding nicety, the English on the contrary grows mighty copious; by its innate Liberty of making such compounds & derivatives, as are proper and futable to abridge Expression, (almost equalizing the Greek & even exceeding the Greek in this) which is one of the greatest beauties can be in a Language. Nor does it aboundancy ly here only, for there is Court and Country English, Northern and Southern Dialect, which differ not only in pronunciation, but also in Words & Terms, upon all which Accounts, its clear, that no vulgar Language can deliver a matter, with more variety, either plain- ly by Synonima's, or by Circumlocution with Metaphores.

The SIGNIFICANCY of the English most clearly appears in the matchless and incomparable pieces of Eloquence published of late; in which more sense cannot be seen in fewer words than in any other Language. What Poetry has more Majesty, & conveys a greater sense than the English, when it flows from a great Poet, as is evident by Mr. Sandys Translation of the Æneid, which might be thought done by peerless Maro himself. It is not the prose classics done to the life, and so far from losing any luster of the Original, that in many places, they seem to excel it. Has not the renowned Lord Bacon taught us to make the terms of Art, in our own Language, a thing judged impossible till we saw it.

The surpassing SWEETNESS of the English appears, if compared with the Italian, swarming with vowels, and so passes away smoothly like a silent Water, though it be an excellent concely and pleasant Language, next with the Dutch, abounding with Consonants, by which it becomes harsh, tho' manly. With the truly delicate, but too affected French. 4ly. With the Majestical Spanish, but terrible and boisterous. Now the English hath the advantage of the first two, by a happy mixture of vowels and consonants, in giving strength of Consonant to the Italian, and dissolving the stiffness of the Dutch, by addition of some soft vowels, Yea the English gives a full sound of Syllables to the French, and a variety of Terminations, with milder Accents to the Spanish, and all this by borrowing from each of them, what may contribute to SWEETNESS.

Now, these things being thus stated, in such a happy mixture how easily will one frame his Discourse Majestick, Pleasant, Delicate or manly, according to his Subject, seing in the English Language, Substance combines with delight, Plenty with Delicacy, Beauty with Majesty, and Expedition with Gravity. Of all which Advantages, inherent to the English, Forreigners are become so great Admirers, that they, as frequently, learn it as we do the French, and though formerly they slighted it, as an Insular speech, not worth their notice.

If any pretend to degrade the English, from the worth of a Language because of its Mixture and Mutability, I would have them consider, that the first is very natural to all Languages, that none are free of it, scarce the HEBREW, the LALINE itself hath a great mixture of Greek and Gothish: The FRENCH consists of Latine, Dutch and Gallique, the SPANISH of Latine, Gothish and Morisco; The GERMAN, as original as it is pretended to be, has a taste of the Roman Empire, and the bordering Neighbours. As for its Mutability, all men know, that Languages, as states, have their infancy and age, wax and wane.

But to conclude, seing the English is come to so great a perfection, and become so very copious and significant, by the Accession of the Quintessence and Life of other Tongues, its to be wished, that a stop were put to this unbounded way of naturalizing forreign words, and that none hereafter should be admitted but with judgement and Authority, were this Island content to improve what grain they have already, without over stocking themselves from other parts, and putting their Language on a perpetual motion, it would be much for the credit of it; For the truth is, there is as much in it, as is needfull, and perhapps more than the English soil is able to bear.

A Short Tract concerning the 7 Points, Notes and Accents, necessary for directing the voice and Pronunciation, when one Reads or Declains, and proportioning or dividing Sentences.

ences, in respect of their dependance, or government in instruction. The Variety of the stops flow from a natural necessity of breathing, from time to time, when we speak or read; it being greater or lesser, depends upon the subject matter of Discourse, and in print, most be made obvious to our eyes by Characters, which cannot be represented to the Ears.

Comma, is a note of short breathing in a Sentence, where the sense is not perfected, The artificial order or the ornate placing of words, in the Latine occasions more use of this stop or distinction than the English requires, as qui bene imperat: paruerit aliquando esse est; & qui modeste parer, videtur, qui aliquando imperet, dignus esse: There is much use of Comma verse for constructions as as Hac domus edit, amat, punit, conseruat, honorat, Nequitiam, pacem, crimina, iura, probos.

Semicolon; is a note of somewhat longer breathing, and hath a middle space betwixt a Comma, and a Colon.

Colon: is a note of suspending the voice yet longer, and notes the perfect part of a Sentence, the whole sense being not yet finished.

Punctum. is a note of longest breathing, which we use, when the sense is completed, whether in one or many Clauses.

Interrogation ? is used when a question is asked.

Exclamation ! when we express any thing with wonder.

Enthesis () is when a sentence is put within another. A sentence lying betwixt any two of these stops, must be expressed in few words, that the Speaker or Reader may have a convenient time to breath after he hath read or repeated the prior sentence, and not breath in the midst thereof.

Words, before the least of these seven interjections, are called a Grammatical sentence, as 1 Cor: 3 2: Though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge: and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains; and I have all charity, I am nothing.

Hyphen - is used, either when two whole words are united, as face, or when we divide a word into syllables, leaving one in the end of the first line, and bringing the other part to the beginning of the next line.

Diæresis or Diæresis . . is when a Diphthong is parted into two syllables as pietâi, or when two syllables are made one as evoluisse.

Interlineation Δ is when we bring in a word interlined.

Apostrophus ' is when a letter is cast out as dix'tin' for dixistin'.
And we often use it to denote the Genitive case, as my Brochers Book.

Quotation ' ' we use in the Margine, when we quote a sentence out of an Author.

Accute tone ' is used to distinguish doubtful quantities, as Cecidi from cedo. cecidi from cedo

Grave tone ` above the last Vowel of a word tells the Reader the word to be an Adverb, which mark of Grave tone, if the word wanted, it would be a Noun or someother part of speech as stultum, serò, quàm than, cùm seing.

Circumflex tone ^ is used over Ablatives in à and Genitives in as Musà Manùs. 2 Over syllables long by nature, as legerè in the perfect and future passive 3 Over words contracted by Syncopè as amâsti, tibicèn aliàs in the Genit. for alius. 4 Over ergò when it is taken for causà.

A Tractate concerning words which begin with Capital letters.

Proper Names and surnames of Men, women, Gods, Goddesses, Winds, Nymphs, Furies, Mountains, Towns, Ships, Horses, Musè, the pronoun I and words derived from them as Cicero, Cicetonianus, Janus, Januarius.

Epithets or Titles of dignity as King, Provost.

Names and Terms of Arts, as Grammar.

Names of Feasts as Pascha Easter.

The first letter after a point, and the first letter of every verse.

Letters put for Words must be Capitals as S. P. Q. R. Senatus Populusque, Romanus, S. P. D. Salutem Plurimam Dicit, Capitals are placed for proper Names of Men as A. J. Aulus, M for Marcus, D D Doflor of Divinity, M A. Master of Art, M S: Manuscript.
