LONDON, August 7. 1703.

OUR Advices from Tirol are daily more and more favourable to the Emperor, it being confirmed, That the Imperialists have only retaken the Passes Scharnitz, Leitach, Rattenberg, and Kufitein, but have also taken Inspruck, defeated the Bavarians, and forced them to retire, leaving all their Baggage behind them. The Imperialists have also taken two Bavarian Waggon, in which they found 60000 Guiklers.

They tell us from the Imperial Army under P. L. of Baden, that they had Advice there, That the E. of Bavaria, having lost above half his Army in the Expedition in Tirol, is marching back to Bavaria; and 'tis given out for certain, That the E. himself is wounded with two Shot. The Action between Gen. la Tour and the Fr. is Confirmed; and 'tis now said, the Imp. had 200 killed and wounded, and P. Christian of Hannover drowned; but the Fr. lost 500 killed and wounded.

Nothing is yet Interprized on either side, either upon the Danube or Rhine, the Armies continuing as formerly, only the Report, that the D. of Burgundy had past the Rhine, is false, he continuing still on the Franckfort side of that River.

An Express Courier is arrived at Dusseldorp with Advice, That the Bavarian Troops are defeated in Tirol, and the E. himself wounded in two places.

They tell us from Vienna, That the Alliance with the Duke of Savoy is fully Concluded, and they flatter themselves that the Republic of Venice will follow that Dukes Example. Their News from Hungary are not so favourable as from Tirol; the Rebels having taken little Waradin; and 'tis said Prince Ragotzi has issued out Circular Letters to call together an assembly of the States, by which means he has already got together some of the Common People: In the mean time orders are given for the Hussars and Heydukes to march thither, from the frontiers of Raab, in order to Curb them.

Our Letters from Nismes of the 23d past say, That another sharp Battle had happen'd near Genouillacque, between a party of the Sevennois, and some of the King's Troops, wherein the first had 150 Killed, and the Royalists Lost 400.

The Burgers of Thorn, and the Soldiers in Garison are at Variance; so that 'tis thought, the place will not hold out long; and some Letters say, that the Burgers had already hung out a White Flag.

The Army under the D. of Marlborough was on the 11th between Borthloen and Tongerea, but was to break up the next Day, and to march towards Borthworm; and a great Detachment was to be sent from the Army that day, to Interprize some thing considerable, while the Grand Army should cover 'em. The Fr. Army lyes between Leewen and Heylesem, and a great many of them desert daily to the D. of Marlborough.
