This manuscript was formerly in a very fragile and fragmentary condition. It is described as follows in Professor Mackinnon's "Catalogue of Gaelic Manuscripts in Scotland" (1912): MS. LII. "The litter gathered together within this cover consists of some forty-five separate items, mostly written in verse, with one or two in prose. The writing is mainly in the Gaelic hand, but two or three scraps are in current Roman hand. The subjects are varied,- mainly secular, but two or three are religious, a hymn or two and a prayer, and there are one or two medical notes. They are nearly all written in Gaelic, but there is a scrap in Latin, and another in English."

In the year 1915 it was inlaid and bound, the leaves being arranged in their order, so far as possible, by Professor W. J. Watson, Professor of Celtic Languages in the University of Edinburgh.
