NOTE

This fifth annual list of holiday courses in Europe has been prepared and published by the League of Nations' Institute of Intellectual Co-operation, acting upon a recommendation of the Directors of National University Offices, who meet in regular conference at the Institute.

In compiling this list the main objects of the Institute have been : to provide a comprehensive, though not exhaustive, guide to vacation courses organised in European universities and other institutions; to include, only such courses as are open also to foreigners; to indicate in respect of each course all the necessary details likely to be of use; and to issue the list at the earliest possible date.

This year's list contains information on 135 courses (as against 119 last year) organised in 82 different localities. Except in a few cases where specific mention to the contrary is made, no previous educational or technical qualifications are required of participants at any of the courses scheduled in this list.

As in previous issues, the courses included in this list are arranged in the alphabetical order of the countries and places where they are to be held. In order to facilitate rapid reference a list of the subjects included in the various courses has been compiled this year and will be found at the end of the booklet.

While every effort has been made to ensure the publication of complete and accurate information, users of this booklet are asked to bear in mind that, if it is to contain the latest details available and to be issued as early in the year as possible, its preparation must necessarily be carried out under considerable pressure. Additional information, corrections, suggestions and criticisms will be welcomed and should be addressed to the University Relations Service, International Institute of Intellectual Co-operation, 2, rue de Montpensier, Paris I^{er}.
