THE CARLTON CRICKET CLUB.

THE CARLTON CRICKET CLUB was founded under somewhat peculiar circumstances in the early spring of 1863. Those who formed it had all been members of the Young Men's Christian Association, which then had its Rooms in Adam Square, near the University—a square no longer in existence. In connection with that Association there was a Literary and Debating Society, and this Society had a Social Entertainment which was held annually in January or February in Queen Street Hall.

In connection with the Entertainment to be held in the beginning of 1863 it was proposed to have a dramatic performance by some of the members. It was intended, of course, that the performers should appear in costume appropriate to the characters represented. This proposal was perfectly odious to the good but misguided ones who formed the Committee of Management of the Young Men's Christian Association. They considered such a proposal utterly inconsistent with the well-being of the young men who were members of the Association. They placed their ban upon the proposal; but, notwithstanding their disapproval, the Entertainment was held and the performance carried through, with the result that the four leaders were formally expelled from the Association as unworthy of being members of it. Two of those gentlemen were then divinity students, and subsequently became ministers of the Church of Scotland; one became a lawyer and an elder of the Church; and the fourth, who was the son and grandson of Free Church ministers, became a member of H.M. Civil Service.

With the determination characteristic of young men who felt that they had been wronged, they set about forming another Literary and Debating Society, which was known as the St Bernard's Literary and Debating Society, with the Rev. Dr A. K. H. Boyd as President. That Society from 1863 to 1873 was one of the most vigorous, best attended, and most popular Societies in the city. Many who afterwards came to prominence in Edinburgh public and business life were members of it. But not content with founding a Literary Society for the winter, it was resolved to form a Cricket Club for the summer, and the promoters, being very "Tory," named it the "Carlton Cricket Club," after the Carlton Club of London.

Although very "Tory," they were far from being blessed with the wealth usually associated with that political party, and had to content themselves with playing on the Meadows for some three seasons. Being chiefly students (the University having no ground in those days) they made the best show they could, and asserted their social superiority by being the first to appear in whites. They further had the social courage to challenge Clubs having private ground, and gradually succeeded—but only gradually—in getting their challenges accepted. The first match the Carlton essayed to play out of Edinburgh was at Cupar-Fife, but after that Loretto and Glenalmond extended their hospitality, and in the following seasons Dalkeith, the Caledonian, the High School, Craigmount, West of Scotland, Glasgow Caledonian, Drumpeller, and Clydesdale (Glasgow) followed suit.

The Club then considered they had reached a position which justified them in endeavouring to get private ground of their own, and with great difficulty they secured a field directly opposite to the present Grange House in Grange Loan, which they occupied for three years, after which they migrated to the field now used by them. The Club has, like many other athletic combinations, had its ups and downs; but in the spring of 1871 matters were so much down that a meeting of the seven or eight remaining members was held in the Old Ship Hotel, East Register Street, to consider the question of winding up the Club's affairs. The question, however, was never mooted, as J. H. L. Macfarlane there and then proposed sixteen men for membership, amongst whom were several well-known English public school cricketers; so the situation was saved, and a capital season's cricket carried out.

Things went on smoothly, though finances were tight ; but in May of the following year (1872) the Club engaged the United South of England Eleven for a three days' match against twenty-two drawn from the principal Clubs in the district, a fair proportion of which included Carlton men, who, it may be said en passant, did not disgrace the Club's colours. The match was played on the Queen's Birthday and two following days in May. Mr Sime of Craigmount kindly granted the use of one of his pitches (adjoining the Club's own ground) viz., the old Caledonian Cricket Club Square, and old Willoughby, who was at Craigmount at the time, prepared a most excellent wicket. This was Mr W. G. Grace's first visit to Scotland, and he was naturally a big draw, so much so that the better part of £100 was cleared and the Club's finances were once more put on a solid basis. As it may be interesting to many to read a report of the match, the following extract has been taken from the Scotsman :—

“UNITED SOUTH OF ENGLAND ELEVEN

versus

“TWENTY-TWO GENTLEMEN OF EDINBURGH.

“ This match was concluded at Craigmount on Saturday, and, contrary to general expectation, ended in favour of the Twenty-two by 64 runs. This result was due in a great measure to the splendid innings of Mr Cotterill, whose score is one of the longest which has yet been made against an English eleven on this side of the “Border; and although he sometimes played riskily, yet

“his runs were well earned. General regret was felt that “he did not reach the three figures, and at the close “of the day’s play Mr M’Donald, the captain of the “Twenty-two, in a few complimentary remarks, presented “him with one of Cobbett’s bats, furnished by King, for “his fine display. The splendid fielding of the Twenty-
“two was another of the causes which greatly contributed
“to their success, while the bowling was considerably “above the average of amateurs, Mr Grant showing very “conspicuously in that department. Among others of the “Twenty-two who played well during the day may be “mentioned Messrs Grant, Campbell, and Macfarlane.
“For the Eleven, Mr Grace put on 17 in a very short “time, the ill-luck with which he opened the season having “evidently stuck to him through the match. Charlwood, “however, did not belie his reputation as one of the “fastest run-getters in England, and played one of the “finest innings of the match for his 35 before he was “unfortunately run out. Pooley’s innings, if not so dash“ing as Charlwood’s, showed some splendid defensive “cricket; but the want of ability to hit-to-leg shown by “several members of the Eleven was the subject of remark.
“A more delightful day for cricket could hardly have been “wished, the sun bursting forth in all its brilliancy about “noon. This, combined with the interesting stage at “which the game had been left off on the previous even“ing, contributed to draw out a considerably larger at“tendance than on the two previous days, the presence of “a very large number of ladies lending an air of gaiety to “the scene. The day’s proceedings were still further en“livened by the band and pipers of the 93rd Highlanders,
“who played a choice selection of music during the after“noon. Altogether the match has proved one of the “greatest successes in every respect seen in Edinburgh

 “for a long time, and reflects great credit on the Carlton “Club and their honorary secretary (Mr Robert H.
 “Christie).

“The following is the run of the game :—The two ‘not “outs’ of the previous night—Messrs Cotterill (83) and “Buchanan (5)—appeared at the wickets at a quarter to “twelve, Mr Grace delivering a maiden to Mr Cotterill,
 “and Southerton doing the same to Mr Buchanan. A “single resulted from each of the following overs to Mr
 “Cotterill, and in Southerton’s third over Mr Buchanan
 “got bowled. Eight for 103. Mr Macfarlane joined Mr “Cotterill, when the latter cut Mr Grace between point
 “and slip for a brace, and with the next ball he hit he “gave a chance, which was not accepted. Mr Macfarlane
 “cut the slow bowler for a single, Mr Cotterill next “driving him splendidly forward for 6. Mr Macfarlane
 “now got W. Grace square on for 4, and drove one to the
 “on into Mr G. F. Grace’s hands, which he dropped. Mr “Cotterill drove the next ball from the slow bowler high
 “to the on. Mr Grace made no mistake this time, and “took it in fine style, which caused Mr Cotterill to retire
 “with the long score of 95, comprising five 6’s, four 4’s,
 “one 3, fourteen 2’s, and singles. Mr Macfarlane did “another single, when he fell to the slow bowler. Eight
 “for 118; nine for 119. Mr Rayner and Mr Grant were “now together. The latter cut Mr Grace to the off nicely
 “for 3, and in the second over he got from Southerton he “drove one for a single, which brought Mr Rayner round
 “to the slows, and he got bowled. Eleven for 124. On “being joined by Mr Duncan, Mr Grant got Mr Grace to “square-leg for a 2 and a single. In the following over he “got from Mr Grace he was, however, bowled by a pretty “ball, after scoring 9. Twelve for 129. Seven overs fol“lowed for a brace of singles, when Mr Duncan hit one “round to back-stop, which Mr G. F. Grace held. Thirteen
 “for 131. Runs came slowly for a time, Mr Campbell

“breaking the spell with a good off drive from the slows
“for a couple, Mr Thomson sending back an easy one to “Mr Grace in the following over, which was taken.
“Fourteen for 137. Other six runs sufficed for the two “following wickets, when Lillywhite dropped one which “Mr Campbell put into his hands. Mr Richardson next “essayed Mr Campbell, ‘skying’ one of the slows, which “Mr W. G. Grace looked after, and he retired for 9. Mr “Richardson was soon after bowled by the slows, as was “also his successor, Mr Hayman. Nineteen wickets were “now down for 147 runs. Messrs Crole and Anderson
“now occupied the wickets. Mr Anderson put each of “the bowlers away for singles before he drove Mr Grace
“to the on for a brace, and then got him to leg for a single.
“In the succeeding over from Mr Grace, Mr Anderson hit
“one into R. Humphrey’s hands. Twenty for 154. Mr “Hill was last man, but his partner hit his wicket before “he had an opportunity of distinguishing himself, the “total being 154. The fielding of the Eleven during the “morning was very loose, several chances having been “missed.

“After an hour’s interval, Mr Grace and Mr Jupp ap“peared for the Eleven, to the bowling of Messrs Grant
“and Laidlay. Mr Grace led off with a couple of singles,
“and Jupp had one, when he was caught off a very hard cut
“in the slips by Mr Laidlay. One for 3. R. Humphrey “took the vacant wicket, and Mr W. G. Grace then got “Mr Laidlay twice to leg for 2’s, and in his following over
“he drove him over the ropes for 6 amid great cheering,
“when he lost Humphrey, who was again bowled by a “beautiful ball from Mr Grant. Two for 15. Mr G. F.
“Grace then joined his elder brother, who had several
“more singles before he lifted one to the on, which Mr
“Richardson held, and he retired for a smartly made 17.
“Mr G. F. Grace was bowled immediately afterwards, with “but two singles to his credit. Four for 19. Charlwood
“and Pooley now got together, and gave the spectators a “rare treat. Charlwood kept the field in motion, hitting
“the ball all round for 2’s and singles, till he drove one
“of Mr Laidlay’s over the ropes for 6 amid great cheer-
“ing. He and Pooley then played steadily for singles till “Charlwood again drove Mr Laidlay twice over the ropes for 6 each time, which gave the game a considerably more interesting appearance. At 61 Mr Campbell relieved Mr Laidlay, and after half-a-dozen runs had been added to the score, Charlwood was run out in his eagerness to steal a bye. His 35 was made by very dashing cricket, and on his return to the pavilion he was loudly cheered from all parts of the grounds. T. Humphrey came next. Mr Buchanan taking Mr Grant's end. Thirteen maidens were here sent in, but in the seventh from Mr Campbell, Pooley had a single, and in the eighth Humphrey got him to leg for 4, three-quarters of an hour having been occupied in making five runs. Mr Grant again took his old end, and Mr Cotterill went on at the other. A single was got from each bowler, and in Mr Cotterill's third over, Humphrey played one on to his wicket. Six for 75. Lillywhite now joined Pooley, and had a brace of singles, when the latter put Mr Grant (who had changed ends) to the wall for 4, causing 80 to be telegraphed. After putting 25 to his credit, by some good cricket, Pooley drove a hot one back to Mr Grant, who held it amid applause. Seven for 86. Phillips came next, and soon after Lillywhite sent one up to the on, which a little exertion on Mr Crole's part might have secured. Another 2 off Mr Grant followed, and then Phillips drove him for a brace. The century was now telegraphed, immediately after which Mr Laidlay bowled Lillywhite, who had made 11 during his stay. Eight for 100. Phillips on being joined by Griffiths drove one to the ropes off Mr Grant for 2, and put the slow bowler high to square-leg, but Mr Thomson dropped it, a most unusual thing for him. Phillips did not survive this long, as his partner (Griffiths) drove the slow bowler straight forward, which Mr Craig very nearly caught. Phillips started to run, and before he could get back Mr Craig, by a very fine shy, had disarranged his stumps. Southerton was last man, and got Mr Buchanan to leg for a couple before Griffiths sent one up in the direction of short leg, which fell into the sure hands of Mr Stewart, the total of the innings only amounting to 107. Subjoined are full scores and bowling analysis:—

Umpires—Willoughby and Killick (Craigmount.)

The years '72 and '73 were most successful ones. The team being strong in batting and bowling, naturally gave capital results. The following are some of the men who, at that time, helped the Club on to many of its victories. Dr J. H. L. Macfarlane, the champion in the 100, 300, and 450 yards, the hurdles and long jump, who played for Scotland at half, quarter, and forward, and who died in 1874, when resident physician in the Royal Infirmary. Requiescat in pace. Dr Macdonald, who worked sixteen hours a day and could find time to play cricket and make an excellent skipper. J. B. Richardson, champion 1 and 2 miles, and known amongst the Cabbies as "Carlton Dick," and since then twice a Mayor. Dr Hayman, six feet four, and our "pet Elephant." Dr Alleyne, the "bounding Antelope." Dr Stone, who really was a stone waller. G. F. Rayner, second to Johnny Macfarlane as an athlete, but out-distancing him as a marvellous hitter as well as a marvellous romancer. He was only equalled in the latter by F. A. Smith, who made the biggest hit on record (down hill), and which is being chronicled as something new in the funny papers every other month for the last twelve or fifteen years. G. A. Campbell, the fastest bowler seen in Edinburgh. Robert H. Christie, who steered the Club's ship as Secretary and Treasurer from '70 to '73, and a stiff job he had sometimes, such as when the erst-while Captain would intimate to him at 11 o'clock on Friday night that he was short of four or five men for the Match next morning, and how he had to scour the town for the necessary material to make up the team; and last but not least, good old Tom Forbes, the most gentle and innocent of God's creatures, a most erudite scholar and good change bowler. Good gracious! what a joyous crowd the Club consisted of in those years. Songs and yarns on the way to the Match. Song and chorus on the field when our men were batting. How delightfully quaint it was to hear "Poor Old Jeff" carolled on the cricket field. J. B. Richardson leading off with his thin pipe, Bob Christie and others helping him on, and the redoubtable Tom Forbes (Polly for short) and the great G. F. Rayner grunting out manfully the bass parts. How pleased when in the country to have a considerable audience applauding its charming (sic) efforts. Quip story, song, and chorus, in mine host's hostelry after the Match was finished. Then home to bed and rest on Sunday, so as to be ready for the week's labour, and then earn the usual Saturday's fun.

The 'Varsity having secured a field for its athletic clubs, the merry student was no longer known for some years in the Carlton. What a drear time that was, and no one could tell you of this more sympathetically than Geoghegan, who manfully and whole-heartedly ploughed the sands till better times came. His cheery, if somewhat enigmatical, shout, "Now then, boys, let us be down on the ball," did not help the winning of matches, which had become apparently a lost art, so much so that in the year 1877 the Club could only manage to win one, viz., that against the Academicals. Ah! but what a win! So proud of it was the team that, to commemorate the event, the Poet Laureate was forthwith commanded to write a "Song of Praise," lauding the team and Club generally for attaining such a mighty victory. In 1878, however, with Dr Scougal, Falconer, Blackadder, R. Todd, and one or two others going great guns with the bat, and Innes, Proudfoot, and Dr Frankiel doing great execution with the ball, the Club's aspects began to assume a rosier and healthier hue, and in 1879 it once more assumed the position in the cricketing world that its historic career deserved. But this was not achieved without hard work on the part of such men as Secretary W. J. Anderson, Secretary G. S. Turnbull, "who would yield point to no man," and "Souter Johnnie" (J. S. Sutherland), the most exemplary and finical of Treasurers. Then there came Blackadder, strong in field and Council. "Papa" Dunn, a fair bat and a good bowler, but the most nervous chap ever seen on a field. John Taylor, Sandy Macbeth, the redoubtable Jupp, and the irresistible Stevenson—all good men and true.

In 1894 the Club's membership was at high-water mark—no less than four elevens taking the field. Although this was the case, the results of the 1st XI. were not so satisfactory, for, out of 17 matches played, only 3 were won, 4 drawn, and 10 lost.

	Played.	Won.	Lost.	Drawn.
1st XI. ...	17	3	10	4
2nd XI. ...	18	14	0	4
3rd XI. ...	17	13	1	3
4th XI. ...	5	4	0	1

Special mention, however, should be made of the 2nd XI. of this year, who were invincible. Messrs J. Paxton and N. Stevenson worked havoc with all opposing batsmen, few teams reaching the score of 20. It was not surprising, therefore, to find a large number of next season's team (1895) composed of younger members, and the results showed decided improvement.

In 1896 the Club had again a very bad record against them, only 3 matches being won. This was entirely due to a complete failure on the part of the batsmen. The bowlers got rid of their opponents for less than any season before or since, but runs could not be got.

Then came a complete transformation, for, with the self-same team, those batsmen, who a year before could do nothing, became brilliant, with the result that only 2 matches were lost, and the XI. secured the League Championship. In 1898 the same success attended the Club, the League Championship again being secured for Grange Loan. Next season (1899) was also triumphant; although there was no Championship to win, the Clubs forming that League were all thoroughly beaten.

However, the following season (1900) was the greatest the Club has had or ever will have. The matches were won very easily, and so remarkable were some of the performances that it has been decided to publish the matches in detail. With the exception of two scratch games, when the team was only partially represented, the Club were not only undefeated, but they won nearly all their matches.

It is worthy of note, amongst other performances, that the Captain of the team, G. W. Jupp, scored in that season 1500 runs in all matches, with an average of 60, and the Vice-Captain, N. L. Stevenson, took 150 wickets in all matches at a cost of 7 runs apiece.

In 1901 the Club lost several of the team which had done so well, including A. Raffel, one of the finest batsmen the Club has ever had. However, the record for the season, although nothing like the year before, was on the whole good. It is worth while recording that G. W. Jupp, the popular Captain, was chosen and played for Somerset against Lancashire and Yorkshire this year. In 1902-1903 the Club did badly compared with the former seasons—the wet and unseasonable weather having a lot to do with it: members could not and would not practise, with the usual result.

However (1904) at the time of writing the Club's prospects look brighter than ever. Many new members have joined, and next season, when housed in the new field, for which all have worked so hard, it is hoped there will be no limit to the Club's prosperity.

1900.

The following notices are from the Retrospects of the Season, published by the Scottish Referee and Scottish Sport at the end of 1900.

From Scottish Referee.

I think the honours of club cricket may rightly be awarded to Carlton, who have performed in excellent style during the whole season, and have one of the best winning records in the club's history. The success of the club is due primarily to George Jupp's excellent batting, he being responsible for over 1,000 runs, but the fielding and bowling has also been much above the average. In the latter department Stevenson has been wonderfully successful, capturing no less than 100 wickets, while he has been ably assisted both by Raffel and Parkes. All round, Carlton have displayed sterling form; they must be admitted to be the best cricketing combination in the North.

From Scottish Sport.

It cannot be doubted that the success of the Carlton had a strong influence in stimulating interest in Edinburgh club cricket, and their career helped materially to lift the game out of the ruck. Their leading batsmen were all men who could hit, and there was never anything funereal about the play when they were at the wickets. G. W. Jupp scored 915 runs in 19 innings, and when it is recollected that in all he has about 1,200 runs for not many more than 20 innings, and all of these against good average club bowling, his work must be put down as far and away the best individual batting performance of the Edinburgh season. A. Raffel, D. Currie, E. F. Fox, and Parkes all contributed well to the runs, and Parkes' bowling, in conjunction with his batting, rendered him a most useful man in the club. He and N. L. Stevenson, the latter of whom tops the bowling analyses with 73 wickets, at an average of 8·5, very fine work indeed, did some of the best joint performances of the year. Raffel looked like getting a lot of wickets in the earlier part of the season, but did not appear to be quite so destructive latterly. The team all round was the best the Carlton ever possessed, and the season the most successful in the career of the club.

CARLTON v. STEWARTONIANS,

At Inverleith, April 28th.

From Referee.

The Carlton opened their season with a decided win over the Stewartonians. We had hoped that the latter were in for better days, but they gave very little indication of it by their poor batting display. Parkes made a good start by scoring 66 in his best style, while Jupp's 34 and Stevenson's 20 represented the next best individual scores. With eight wickets down for 150, the Carlton closed. Bell, the Stewartonians' prof., bowled best, having three wickets for 36 runs. Stevenson had a day out in style when it came to bowling the groundsmen. He dismissed eight of them for 12 runs, while Parkes looked after the other two at the expense of 17. The total of the Stewartonians only reached 33. Both sides tried several reserves. None of them, however, were prominent. Scores:—

CARLTON v. LEITH CALEDONIAN.

From Dispatch.

A forenoon of showers was succeeded by an afternoon of brilliant sunshine, tempered by a strong breeze from the west. Reid and Ferrier opened. Runs were slow in coming. Both, however, were cheaply disposed of, and Parkes, in dismissing Reid, broke a wicket. Then a confirmed "rot" set in, and despite the best efforts of Somerville and Sellars, could not be stayed. The remainder found Parkes simply unplayable, he having seven for 24, while Stevenson's record was three for 24. Scores :—

CARLTON v. LEITH CALEDONIAN.

From Referee.

Second to None.

The Carlton's very latest display against the Leith Caledonian on Saturday, stamps them as being the best all-round team in Scotland. For the past few weeks we have drawn our readers' attention to the splendid form shown by Jupp and his comrades, but their latest beats all previous records, and we fancy followers of the game will admit our assertion that Carlton is the strongest cricketing combination we have. To dispose of the Leith club for 48 runs on a batsman's wicket was something to be proud of, but to score 300 runs for the loss of three wickets only is a notable performance, and one which we congratulate Carlton upon. It is seldom in Scotland we have to chronicle a couple of centuries in one innings, but this was the result of Jupp and Raffel's partnership. It is quite evident that Carlton will want a lot of beating during this season at least, and we can hardly see where their conquerors are to spring from.

From Dispatch.

Another Great Score by Carlton.

Carlton gave further proof of their great scoring powers on Saturday against the Leith Caledonian, the latter being completely outclassed in all departments. Batting first, the Caledonian had lost five wickets for 42, but the tail could hardly be made to wag at all, only six runs having been added when the last wicket fell. Against this miserable total, Carlton replied with the great score of 285 for the loss of only three wickets. Of this total, Jupp and Raffel had 236 between them—133 and 103 respectively—and both were not out at the finish. Both played stylish cricket, the cutting and driving of the pair being very pretty, and each gave only one real chance in the outfield, while Jupp played on off Sellars when his score was 114, but, luckily for him, the balls remained stationary. The bowling of N. L. Stevenson had a lot to do with the discomfiture of the Caledonian batsmen, his analysis showing seven for 28; while Parkes, with three for 15, was not far behind. Both, however, were well served by their fielding, which was again particularly smart, and the lesson the Caledonian got in this important department of the game should do them some good. Attention may be drawn to the sportsman-like action of A. S. Cairns, who, besides allowing a few extra minutes to be played, sent up a couple of loose balls to allow the latter to reach his century. P. R. Herford also deserves special mention, the wicketkeeping of this player showing his value, as in the large score it would be observed that there was not a single extra, and the bowling was at times very fast.

CARLTON v. BRUNSWICK.

Played Grange Loan, May 12th.

Carlton Still Winning.

The Carlton-Brunswick match seemed to hold out the prospect of a close game. In the end, however, Carlton had a very easy victory. This was mainly brought about by some remarkably successful bowling on the part of Raffel and the vigorous batting of Currie. With 40 runs on the board, and only two wickets down, the Brunswick had every reason to feel satisfied, but Raffel soon altered matters, and quickly put to his credit six wickets at a cost of only 8 runs. The wicket was rather in his favour, and he was able to get a lot of 'spin' on the ball, the Brunswick batsmen being completely baffled by his deliveries. With only 57 runs against them, the Carlton had an easy task to accomplish.

CARLTON v. DUNFERMLINE.

A Notable Performance.

One of the best of many splendid batting displays given this season was that of Carlton against Dunfermline on Saturday, when all previous records for this run-getting ground were beaten by Jupp and his little band. On a splendid, fast run-getting wicket like Saturday's, it looked a risky experiment to win the toss and put his opponents in, but Jupp had evidently weighed up the situation to a nicety, for matters turned out to his complete satisfaction. The Dunfermline players failed to take advantage of the genial one's kindness, and admittedly several of them were out to what might be called apprentice strokes. The Carlton bowling, no doubt, was good, and the fielding the best we have seen this season, but, making every allowance for the strong opposition, we think Dunfermline ought to have done very much better. With the exception of R. K. Smith and Dr Macgregor, the batting display of the Fifers was not what we have seen and would like to see again at Lady's Mill, and although Muir scored towards the finish of the innings, it was not a display which greatly enamoured us, albeit his 27 was a most serviceable contribution.

Fast Scoring.

Considering Carlton's batting record this season, their task did not seem a desperate one, but it was hardly anticipated that they would pile up the agony in the way they did. From the very outset it was apparent that forcing tactics were the order of the day, and well did Currie and Francis carry out the programme. With the assistance of middling bowling and most indifferent fielding, runs came at a terrific rate, and before the old Gloucester County player was unluckily run out, 83 runs had been totalled. With the advent of the captain, the scoring became faster than ever, and although innumerable bowling changes were tried, they were all treated in the same way. Boundary followed boundary in quick succession, and the first 100 was signalled after 33 minutes' play, while 200 went up after 65 minutes' batting. This happy state of affairs went on till the end, when the big total of 343 runs were scored for eight wickets. This big scorching ought to be a salutary lesson to Dunfermline.

CARLTON v. GRANGE.

At Raeburn Place.From Dispatch.

The Carlton eleven are quite as strong this year as ever they were; good men have been replaced by players of equal merit, and the champions of the now defunct League are at the present time a very powerful combination. In Parkes and N. L. Stevenson they have a couple of grand bowlers, who were far more than a match for the side put out by the Grange. Singularly enough, only one was clean bowled, but this only served to demonstrate the smartness of the Carlton fielding. It was the finest we have seen at Raeburn Place for many a day, and in singling out one in G. W. Jupp for special praise, we are doing the others no injustice. His five catches were all nicely taken, and he had a big say in inflicting on a Grange eleven a sound thrashing. His batting was masterful, bar the one bad mistake which cost him his wicket. In Francis the Carlton have a batsman who should prove very useful. The Grange courted defeat by putting out such a weak team, and we feel sure the Carlton would have preferred to have met the full strength of the Raeburn Place Club.

*From Scottish Referee.*Grange's Defeat.

Carlton Trundlers' Analysis.

Consequent upon the heavy showers of the previous night and the forenoon, the pitches on Saturday favoured the bowlers, as the small totals generally indicate. There were very few batsmen who stayed long at the wickets, and scores of 50 or upwards are, therefore, very scarce indeed. As might have been expected, the poor representation of the Grange could not withstand the prowess of the Carlton, reckoned the best all-round team in the capital this season. The defeat was so pronounced to be anything but creditable to the M.C.C. of Scotland, even allowing for their weak eleven. It looks as if some one had blundered in arranging two such matches for the club on the same date.

Showery weather and a sticky wicket did not help the Grange when they took first lease of the wickets. The brothers Smith played slow but steady cricket against the bowling of Parkes and Stevenson, but when they were separated, the others formed a procession, and a sight which is not seen once in a decade, took place on the Grange ground. All the batsmen appeared afraid of the bowling, and playing back were invariably held in slips. Jupp, in the field, held five of them. A better show was expected from at least half-a-dozen of the team, who have ere this done well with the bat.

The bowling of Parkes and Stevenson deserves notice. Here is their analysis:—

	O.	M.	R.	W.
Stevenson ..	13·4	3	31	6
Parkes ..	13	4	25	5

With only 60 to beat, the Carlton started with light hearts. Currie and Francis opened so well that 35 were scored before the former left. Jupp then came in, and in his own robust style put on the boundaries until the victory was secured.

CARLTON v. PERTHSHIRE.

At Perth.

Scotland's "Ranji."

The Carlton gave a good account of themselves against Perthshire, and, had time permitted, the probability is that they would have topped the county club's score. The wicket was in grand condition for good batting. For Perthshire, Dr Stuart played a vigorous game in scoring 68, while Joe Anderson played a patient but very correct innings for his 42. Notwithstanding Perthshire's fairly high score, N. L. Stevenson came out with a fine analysis, being responsible for six wickets at a cost of 40 runs, and at the same time completed his 100 wickets for the season. Carlton were no whit behind their opponents in batting. D. Currie and Cox made a very gratifying start, but the partnership which produced the prettiest exhibition of the match was that of G. W. Jupp and Raffel. The former was the harder smiter of the two, but the latter gave a display which would have been no discredit to the well-known Indian Prince of English cricket.

CARLTON v. PEMBROKE COLLEGE (Dublin).

Hard Lines on Jupp.

Looked at in the light of their fine display against Lasswade on Thursday it was naturally expected that against Carlton Pembroke (Dublin) would make an interesting stand, but, as it proved, the contrary was the result. The game, however, thanks to Carlton, was far from being uninteresting, and in two and a half hours the Edinburgh club, for the loss of six wickets, had scored 228 and then declared. G. W. Jupp gave a splendid display with the bat, as in little more than two hours he hit the fine score of 105 (not out). The fact that he was missed on three occasions detracted little from the creditableness of his innings. It was, indeed, most unfortunate for him that Carlton declared at that stage, as, if he had carried his total to 108, that figure would have enabled him to complete his 1000 runs for the season. In his innings on Friday Jupp had a 6, a 5, and nine 4's. The visitors appeared to be at sea with the Carlton bowling, and in an hour and a half seven wickets were lost, with the board registering 34. Time alone saved them from a crushing defeat. The bowling of the Irishmen, which had been so deadly at Mavisbank the day before, was made to appear very harmless by the Carlton batsmen, and altogether the Pembroke nullified the good opinion which had been previously formed regarding their abilities. It is all the more apparent now that they were lucky against Lasswade. Both Stevenson and Currie bowled with great success for the Carlton, the former having three for 8, and the latter two for 0.

The Irishmen brought their Scottish tour to a close yesterday by playing Carlton on the Merchiston Castle ground. Carlton made a capital stand, Jupp carrying out his bat for a dashing if not faultless 105. Pembroke made a disappointing show, and had lost seven wickets for 34 when stumps were drawn. Scores:—

CARLTON v. ROYAL HIGH SCHOOL.

At Holyrood, August 4th.

From the Dispatch.

Great Sport at Holyrood.

A crowd of several hundred people witnessed the game between the Carlton and the Royal High School, most of them, unfortunately for the Holyrood bank account, from the free side of the railings, and they were rewarded by one of the grandest and most intensely interesting finishes seen in Edinburgh this season. Excepting very keen partisans of the School—and even they must have been constrained to admit victory went to the better side—the spectators, if they were sportsmen at all, must have gone away with a feeling of satisfaction that they had not wasted an afternoon. The finish was as exciting as it was amusing, and if the majority of Edinburgh cricket matches furnished as excellent sport, there would not be the same lack of interest in the game as there is at present. The School men all over gave a disappointing show, and it was not because of any effort on their part to gain a victory that the contest became so engrossing. It was their dour fight for a draw, and the Carlton's equally determined struggle for a definite conclusion.

The best batting of the day was seen during the Carlton innings, and in bowling and fielding, too, the winners were a good bit ahead of their opponents. They made their runs (210) in about two hours and a quarter, or a few minutes more than the time given to their opponents. Both Jupp and Raffal, however, we have seen in better form, and it was a big stroke of luck for the Carlton when the former was missed by the rival captain when he had made 10. It proved a very costly mistake, but it allowed the Carlton captain to get within a few runs of his 1000 for his own eleven, though previous to his "life" he had completed that number of runs in all matches. Cox and Stevenson also distinguished themselves with the bat. As for the School batsmen, only one of their number need be referred to. That one is W. C. A. Ross, and it was while he was at the wickets that excitement rose to a high pitch, and that the proceedings became funny in the extreme.

It is not often that one gets amusement out of a cricket match, but the crowd did enjoy themselves at Holyrood on Saturday. Ross has a reputation for being a "sticker," but he excelled himself on Saturday, and the amusing part of the proceedings was that soon after his arrival a good half of the Carlton fielders were occupying "silly" positions.

There were two silly slips, a silly point, a silly mid-off, and silly mid-on, and a silly short leg, and when the ball was sent down the pitch they all gathered round the batsman in such a fashion that Ross, if he had cared to let out, would have done terrible execution among his tormentors. Raffel, in particular, had his hands almost on the bat as soon as the ball reached it. Ross, however, was not the least put out by these close attentions, and by their very keenness the Carlton seemed likely to be defeated in their purpose, for Jupp, standing in slips about a yard from the wickets, missed a catch which he could hardly have failed to take if he had been in his proper place. But Ross, who carried his bat, could not get anyone to stay with him, and almost on the stroke of seven the last two wickets were captured by Stevenson with successive balls. It was a pity, perhaps, that the last man was out leg before, but the decision, we understand, was not questioned by the School, though some of the Carlton had bitter complaints to make about some of the decisions given against them. Raffel's and Stevenson's splendid bowling had a good deal to do with the Carlton victory, and the former also distinguished himself in the field. It was hard lines on Ross that his side had to submit to defeat, but on the day's play they did not deserve any better fate.

This return fixture, which has been looked forward to with considerable interest, was played at Holyrood on Saturday in pleasant weather in presence of one of the largest crowds seen at a match in the Edinburgh district this season. Both teams, recognising the importance of the issue, had made strenuous efforts to get together strong elevens, but whereas Carlton had the assistance of R. E.

Berry and the majority of their best players, the School men lacked the services of several of their leading batsmen. The School captain won the toss, and decided to put Carlton in. The first wicket fell for five runs, but Jupp and Raffel batted in free and easy style. The former completed his 1000 runs for the season. Blackadder, Stevenson, and Cox also batted well, and Carlton closed their innings with a total of 210 for eight wickets. With only two hours to bat the High School men could only hope for a draw, and this they nearly succeeded in accomplishing, for it was only in the last two minutes that their innings was brought to a close for 107. Hainsworth, J. Adair, Bucher, and Ross tried hard to avert defeat, but the remainder made a very disappointing show, the last man—Watson—getting his leg in front of the first ball, and thus summarily closing the innings. Bowling for Carlton Raffel had five wickets for 29 runs, and Stevenson four for a similar number. Scores:—

The Club have for the second season won the East of Scotland League, and on the whole have had a most successful season. In all they have played 20 matches, won 10, lost 3, drawn 3. The matches lost were mostly owing to the weak representation of the club on these days. In the League competition no club succeeded in making a century against them, the following being the scores:—

1900.

The Carlton Cricket Club closed a very successful season with a short tour in the north last week, when they defeated Aberdeenshire at Aberdeen, and Lord Huntly's Eleven at Aboyne. Nineteen card matches were played during the season, of which 12 were won, 2 lost, and 5 drawn. The wins were—Dunfermline (2), Leith Caledonian (2), Stewartonians, Royal High School F.P.'s, Watsonians, Blairlodge, Fettes, Cupar, Grange, and Brunswick. The losses were scratch games against Lord Eglinton's Eleven and Noetics. The drawn games were against Greenock, Perthshire, Brechin, Royal High School F.P.'s and Pembroke.

Appended are the batting and bowling averages of the Carlton Cricket Club. No fewer than nine batsmen have averages of double figures, and G. W. Jupp, the captain, is first in the batting, and second in the bowling. His batting has not been nearly so profitable as last season, but he has developed into a bowler of no mean ability, and has rendered splendid service in that department. N. L. Stevenson, vice-captain, has taken fifty wickets at a cost of only 6·9 runs each, and Jupp is not far behind. The Carlton have played eighteen matches, have won nine, lost five, and drawn four. The matches won were Royal High School (2), Leith Caledonian, Greenock, Stewartonians, Fettes, Blairlodge, and Dunfermline. They lost to Academicals, Perthshire, Forfarshire, Burntisland, and Clydesdale; and drew with Grange, West of Scotland, Leith Caledonian, and Brunswick.
