

CHELMSFORD AGRICULTURAL SHOW

Come all you gallant ladies
And you gentlemen likewise,
The glorious sights of Chelmsford,
Will all the world surprise,
From every quarter of the world,
To Chelmsford town they go,
With smiling faces for to see,
The agricultural show.

CHORUS.

The Duke and Squire and farmer Chub
With smiling faces go,
To Chelmsford with delight to view
The agricultural show.

There's farmer John from Maldon,
From witam charming sue,
There's Baintree Bill & Dunmow Jill
And Little Nancy too;
There's Brentwood Sall and Springfield
Moll.

Oh! crikey how they sweat,
There's Baddow Jack & Paddy-whack
And bouncing Moul's-law Bet

There is jolly John the ploughman,
And Dickey with his flail,
And there's the lovy dairy maids
Who carries the milking pails,
And there's the farmer's daughters,
With their ringlets and their veils,
And there's old Squire Ninecompasses
With a hat like a ship's sail,

There was never such a sight before,
Beheld by high or low,
There's nothing can come up to
Chelmsford agricultural show.
There's bustles like a haystack
Likewise large fibidy hobbiddy hats,
There's penny loaves and ginger pop,
Fried peas and pickled sprats,

There's a great large flich of bacon
From Dunmow town it came
And it's seven times as long,
As all the river thames,
There is a pig as large as any bull,
And sacks of noble Corn,
There's a horse as big as an elephant,
And a cow with seven horns,

There's violets and posies
And noble lumps of peath,
There's tulips pinks and roses
As big as triptree beath.
There's cauliflowers cabages,
And bot pea soup so nice,
There's bullocks fry and sausages
And puddings stuffed with spice.

To see the Essex ladies
A donkeys heart would charm,
Then in they go with their true loves,
To the glorious Masons-arms,
To sing so keen God save the Queen,
That glory we se now
Here's Chelmsford agricultural show,
And heaven speed the plough.

We ever will remember,
This great and glorious sight
Which we behold at Chelmsford,
With wonder and delight
God bless the Surrey ladies.
May they banish care and pain,
And Chelmsford agricultural show
May they live to see again.

We will toast in a bumper,
All classes high and low
Who goes to Chelmsford for to see
The agricultural show,
