

THE RESIGNATION OF LORD JOHN RUSSELL.

Oh, dear what can the matter be,
The ministers over the nation will scatter be,
The news says John Bull, all to pieces will shatter me,
What made you give in Little John ;
I thought with the Tories you nobly would tattle,
And set them a rowing by making a bustle,
Oh, crikey, oh dear, what a shame Jacky Russell,
That you are compelled to resign.

Victoria declares while she is in her station
She will not receive Little John's resignation,
Old Arthur surges out in great aggravation,
What made you resign Little John ;
Lord Stanley rejoiced, and D'Israeli capered,
And said feed the poor on red herrings and taters,
They shan't have the taxes off windows and papers,
Since we have nobly conquered Lord John.

Shall Stanley and Winchelsea lead us, no never,
They are sure to get licked, though they think themselves clever, Shout England huzza, give us Free Trade for ever,
And keep in his place little John ;
We don't want the men who are fond of Protection.

If Lord John goes out there must be an election,
The Lords and the Commons must have an inspection, Pray don't run away Little John, Lord John has resigned, and the nation is undone,
All the Pops in the world will be coming to London,
And the Lords and the Commons will all nearly mad run,
What made you resign Little John ;
What made you get licked Lord Johnny so easy, I know very well all your friends could not please ye,
Since the day you first met they have done nothing but tease ye,
And now they have made you resign.

From the House to the Palace it has caused a bother,
Old women are tumbling one over another,
The Queen says it is with her, one thing or t'other,
They must not discharge Little John ;
Her Majesty vows that she is not contented And many ere long will have cause to repent it,
Had she been in the house she would nobly resent it,
And fought like a brick for Lord John.

High-street, St. Giles's.
