Personal appearance is more aided by a skilful Hair Dresser than by any other Artist.

A LITTLE CHAT.

Some Ladies met some Ladies, and a question soon arose.
On whom they could for dressing hair, full confidence repose?
One mention'd Mr DOUBTFUL, and another Mr. C.,
And a third one said with emphasis, "there 's none like Mr. E."
"Then is it ELLIOTT, whom you mean?" the youngest Lady said,
For if 't is he, I also think he studies well the head,
And hence it is, on only him, I make a point to call,
Whenever I'm invited to a concert or a ball,
For he displays a certain taste, which any eye can trace
In charmingly developing the beauties of the face."
"Tis he I mean," the Lady said, who mentioned Mr. E.,
"And when we meet at Madam D.'s, his talent we shall see,
For many Ladies I could name who oft assemble there,
Rely on ELLIOTT's skilful taste in setting off their hair,
And though 'tis breach of confidence, some dozens I well know
Who have obtain'd through ELLIOTT's care, a fond and faithful Beau;
For ev'ry ringlet of the head he curls on such a plan,
As cannot fail to catch the eye of every gentleman!"
At this the Ladies had a laugh, and felt forthwith inclin'd,
To try if ELLIOTT could for them a loving Partner find,
But whether such has been the case, 'tis not for us to say,
Until we have the privilege upon some future day;
Yet well assur'd are we that those who trust to ELLIOTT's care,
Will be delighted with his style, and fashions for the hair.
