PREFACE.

THE admission of the Gaelic language at last to a recognised place, and to a substantial grant on the Code, made it necessary to provide Text-books. This is the first of a graduated series that is in preparation. The method of looking at the language from above downwards is perhaps new, but is easy and natural. It is meant for those to whom Gaelic is the native tongue, and to whom the language should be instructive, and not a constructive task. The value of the mother tongue as a medium of mental and moral training cannot be too highly estimated, and it is anticipated that the privilege of studying it will be accepted with a keen relish by pupils and teachers alike. The little pieces from Dr MacLachlan, here given, are so exquisitely pure and poetical as to be irresistible. The prose extracts are from the best writings, and their vitality is preserved, as far as possible, that they may be the more interesting.

In the little grammar given, there is no attempt at detail; that is avoided. It is simply a guiding outline. The Exercises are carefully prepared. The Notes given in the Grammar explain any change that has been made; and those to the text may prove a help to the pupil. The Publishers will thankfully accept any suggestions from Teachers, so that effect may be given them in the other books of the series.

GÆLIC TEXTS FOR SCHOOLS.

THE SIMPLE SENTENCE.

All our reasonable speech is made up of short statements called Sentences.

A Sentence is the expression in words of a complete thought.

The simplest Sentence consists of two essential parts—Subject and Predicate.

The Subject in the Sentence is the thing spoken of. The Predicate is what is said about the Subject.

EXERCISE I.

Read the following aloud, and translate exactly into English.

Distinguish the Subject and the Predicate in each Sentence.

Thuit duine. Ghoir coilleach. Sheinn eun. Ghlaodh ciobair. Chaoin paisde. Phos gille. Dh'eirich grian. Laidh sprèidh. Ruith each. Leum cu. Shuidh Seumas. Dhanns mise. Ghàir ise. Thainig Tomas. Rainig Mairi. Chluith iasg. Bhris tonn. Sheol long. Bhasaich each. Shoillsich solus.

A Sentence must have these two parts ; it may have a third part called the Object.

EXERCISE II.

Chual' thu sgeula. Sgaoil a' chearc a sgiathan Tharruing an t-each an crann. Fhreagair Calum an litir. Phaigh athair na fiachan. Chum esan a theanga. Dh'innis mi naigheachd. Lùb e glun. Caisgidh tu iad. Ni mise beallach. Fhuair mise moran litrichean. Deoch slainte an Rìgh ars' an t-uachdaran. Chluinneadh tu anail na luch. Mhol e na Gaidhil. 'S e an slachdan beag an gille arsa mise. A dhaoine uaisle thuir an t-uachdaran.

The parts of a Sentence are made up of Words, as the whole Sentence is, and the whole language.

All the words of the Gaelic language are divided into eight groups or classes called Parts of Speech, viz., Nouns, Adjectives, Pronouns, Verbs, Adverbs, Prepositions, Conjunctions, and Interjections.

The Article is not given a separate class; it is in every respect an Adjective.

The Noun group is a very large one, containing the Names of everything. The word noun means name (Lat. nomen). A Noun, therefore, is the name of anything; as duine, tigh, gaath, firinn, brèug, Tomas, Duneidean, America.

The Verb group contains all words that express Action, as Ruith mi, I ran; Thuit mi, I fell; Thainig iad, they came; Bhuail thu mi, you struck me; Theich e, he ran away; Tog do cheann, lift your head.

The group is again divided into Transitive and Intransitive Verbs. Transitive means passing over; Intransitive means not passing over.

A verb is therefore said to be Transitive when the action it expresses passes over to an object in order to make the sense complete: as Rinn mi bàta, I made a boat; Chuala mi fuaim, I heard a sound.

Intransitive Verbs are such as do not pass over, and do not require an Object to complete the sense; as Ruith mi, I ran; Shuidh mi, I sat.

There are two verbs, Bi, to be; and Is, am, that are neither Transitive nor Intransitive, and may therefore be called Neuter.

The Pronouns are words used for or instead of nouns. The word pronoun means for a noun. Such pronouns as are used instead of the names of persons are called Personal Pronouns, as Mi, thou, e, and i; I, thou, he, and she; and so may, instead of a noun, form the Subject or Object, or both, in a sentence.

EXERCISE III.

Distinguish—

- (1.) The Subjects, Predicates, and Objects.
- (2.) The Parts of Speech.
- (3.) Whether Verbs are Transitive or Intransitive.

Ruith mi. Rinn mi bàta. Shuidh mi. Thainig carbad. Fhuair Mairi solus. Thog mi balla. Throd mo bhean. Bhuail Alasdair an t-eorna. Sheas Ian Gilpin. Dh'iarr e sgeula. Thog an long a siuil. Theich an t-each. Chual' e fuaim. Reic mi an damh. Sgaoil sinn cuirm. Dhuisg mi Seumas. Ghabh e oran. Sheinn e oran. Shèid e a' phiob. Cheannaich mi clach chaise. Chreach e nead a chromain-lòin. Fhuair an t-uan bàs (the lamb got death). Ruisg na ciobairean na caoirich.

ENLARGEMENT AND EXTENSION.

An Adjective is a word that goes with a noun to express some quality or attribute:—as, Beinn mhor, a big mountain; Duine maith, a good man; Gille tapaidh, a clever lad.

When an Adjective goes along with the noun that forms the Subject, the Subject is said to be Enlarged, and the Adjective is called an Enlargement of the Subject.

Tha Curra ag iasgach.	Not enlarged.
Tha a' Churra ag iasgach.	The article a is an enlargement.
Tha a' Churra ghlas ag iasgach.	The adjective is a further enlargement.
Tha a' Churra mhor ghlas ag iasgach.	The two adjectives are enlargements.

The Object like the Subject, and in a similar way, is said to be Enlarged.

Tha a' Churra 'glacadh eisg.
Tha a' Churra 'glacadh nan iasg.
Tha a' Churra 'glacadh nan iasga mora.
Tha a' Churra 'glacadh nan iasga mora geala.

* * Observe that every Enlargement, whether of Subject or Object, is an Adjective.

EXERCISE IV.

Tell—

- (1.) The Simple Subject, Predicate, and Object.
- (2.) The Enlargements of the Subject, and of the Object.
- (3.) The Parts of Speech, and
- (4.) Translate the following:—

Fhuair sinn iasg. Ghlac Seumas beag iasg mòr.
Chunnaic mi fiadh. Bha am bùth lan. Fhuair na gillean beaga fliuchadh maith. Mhianaich mi sgiathan an iolair. Tha eilein fada caol ga chuartachadh. Reic e bian bruic agus boicinn goibhre. Giulainidh bàta mor na smuid moran sluaigh. Thainig do litir chaoimhneil an dè. Mhol an duine coir gach creag agus garbhach. Thoisich a' bhas-bhualach agus a' ghlaodhaich. Tharruing an Teachdaire coir 'anail. Mhol càch esan agus mur do mhol esan iadsan. Labhair càch gu maith; labhair esan deich uairean ni b' fhearr. Choisinn e urram na h-oidhche. " 'S e am bodach mor an gille," arsa mise. Bha na tonna mora maola gorma a' nuallanaich.

An Adverb is a word, or more commonly a phrase, which extends, limits, or in some way modifies the value of a Verb in a Sentence.

The great number of Adverbs express the manner, time, or place of the action, and therefore commonly answer to the questions How? When? Where?

Ruith e gu duineal, he ran pluckily (manly). How?
 Chi mi thu an duigh, I shall see you to-day. When?
 Chaidh e 'sios, he went down. Where?

Any Adjective by placing gu before it becomes an Adverb: as maith good, gu maith well; cinnteach sure, gu cinnteach surely; deas ready, gu deas readily.

This gu corresponds to the ly in English as to meaning, but in its origin to the Latin con, with. Gu fìor = con fìor — with truth = truly.

* * I am doubtful if there be any Simple Adverbs at all in Gaelic. In the long lists given by Armstrong and by Munro, with exception perhaps of the Simple Negatives, the so-called Adverbs are Prepositional Phrases of Adverbial value: E.g., Am bliadhna, (in) this year; A' nochda, (in) this night, to-night;

An toiseach, on beginning, first; O chian, (from) of old, &c., &c. It would therefore serve no purpose to give long lists of "Adverbs."

The Adverb goes always along with the Verb in a Sentence, that is, with the Predicate; it is therefore called an Extension of the Predicate: as Tha a' churra ag iasgach.

Tha a' churra ag iasgach gu dian.

Tha a' churra ag iasgach gu dian dichiollach.

All these Enlargements and Extensions can occur in one sentence:—Tha a' Churra mhor ghlas a' glacadh nan iasga mora geala gu dian dichiollach, the large grey heron is catching the great white fishes closely and diligently.

EXERCISE V.

Point out (1) the Subjects, Predicate, Object, Extensions and Enlargements; and (2) tell the Parts of Speech.

Theich am fiadh gu grad. Tha do ghruaidh gu tana bàn an diugh. Amhaire air mac an duine ann an ceud toiseach a laithean. Air an laimh dheis bha am fearran ag eiridh gu corrach cas. Bha sinu a' seoladh ri bile nan creag. Thainig faileadh a bharraich air oiteig an t-samhraidh. Bha mìle eun beag a' seinn air gach preas, agus a' cur failte oirnn. Bha a fear posda a' spaisdearachd air ais agus air adhart. Tillidh mise 'nochda do 'n ghleann ud thall. Dh'fhag sibh mise am aonar an diugh, dall, aosda, gun mhac gun bhrathair, gun chul-taice. Fhuair mi lorg an fheidh anns a chàthar ud thall, am bun na creige glaise, fo blaths na greine. Bidh ceilleir ceolmhor air feadh nan cròc-mheur.

Prepositions are words which determine the relation of the Noun that always follows to other Nouns or Clauses in the Sentence: as Duine gun fheum, a man without use = a useless man; cu air aineol, a dog astray; air tighinn dha, on his coming.

It is to be noticed particularly that such phrases as gun fheum, of nouse = useless; gunneart, without strength = strengthless, weak, are equivalent to Adjectives.

Again, air aineol, astray; aig an tigh, at the house = at home, &c., are Adverbs.

A knowledge of this does away with much of the perplexity of idiom in translation. For instance, Tha e air mhisg should be rendered, not as some do, he is on the drink, but he is drunk. Air mhisg is distinctly equivalent to an Adjective, drunk.

And such expressions as Chuir e mi air chul should be translated he put me behind, and not literally he put me on back. Air chul is plainly equivalent to an Adverb.

EXERCISE VI.

Translate the following Sentences (1) literally, word for word, and (2) into correct English.

Tha mi fo thrioblaid agus fo sgios. Tha mi air deireadh. Chaidh iad ri bruthach. Thig mi air a mhionaid. Chi mi e air uaireibh. Thainig mi an ceart uair. Tha iad nan cadal. Tha sinn air acras. Tha iad troimh 'cheile. Thainig iad as a cheile. Gille gun bhiadh gun tuarasdál cha bhi e uair gun mhaighistir. Chaidh e ann a dh-aon obair (purpose). Thug e dhomh e ach beag. Rainig mi an latha roimhe. Chaidh sinn a leth-thaobh. Tha e na amadan. Tha e na fhiodhleir maith. Tha e air an dearg chuthach. Deoch an doruis. Cia meud punnd a tha ann. Gabhaidh sinn an rathad mor. Tha e na righ. Tha mi an so leam fein.

Thus we see that Prepositional Phrases are equal to Adjectives or to Adverbs, and they may therefore take the places of Adjectives, as Enlargements, or of Adverbs, as Extensions, in the Sentence.

Is bochd duine gun rath, gun seol. Enlarged Subject.

Chunnaic mi eirbleach gun sgairt, air chrith. Enlarged Object.

Thainig Seumas beag na ruith, gu luath, le bruthach. Extended Predicate.

EXERCISE VII.

Tell—

- (1.) The Prepositional phrases.
- (2.) Whether equivalent to Adjectives or Adverbs.
- (3.) What words do they qualify or modify?

Dheanadh tu sin gu maith. Cha tig mi a chaoidh. Bheirear dhutsa duais fhathast. Thogainn fonn gu ceolmhor reidh. Chaidh Fionn do'n bheinn. Dh'eirich Uilleam moch anns a' mhaduinu. Tha nead na circe-fraoiche sa mhuillean dubh. Ruisg iadsan na caoirich mhora mhaola. Tha maoisleach a chul-bhuidh air feadh na duislainn. Tha do dhoire daonan gorm. Tha suaimhneas air gach luib fo bhath. Tha baigh air gach creig agus air gach cluain. An robh thu ad thosd an còs a chnuic fo dhubhar? Tha guth na Cuthaige air do stuchd. Cluith thusa "Calum crubach as a ghleann." Cairibh mi ri taobh nan allt. Leag mo cheann fo sgaile a bharrach. Chi mi Sgur-Eilt air bruaich a ghlinn.

"Air muir, air tìr, an innsibh cian
Biodh moladh Dhe gu brath.

"Air maduinn mosglam fein gu moch
A's seinneam ceol gu h-ard."

Conjunctions are words that connect the parts of a Sentence. Conjunction means to join together.

Bha sith agus sonas aige. Dh'amhairc e mun cuairt agus mhothaich e buidheann ghaolach ann an deireadh na luinge agus ghabh e g' an ionnsuidh. Thainig an t-àm ach cha robh esan ri fhaotainn.

Interjections are expressions of emotion, as—

O! Oh! Oich! Puth! Ubh Ubh! &c.

Interjections have no governing connection with the other parts of a Sentence.

THE PARTS OF SPEECH.

Nouns are divided into three classes, Common, Proper, and Abstract.

Common. Duine, cat, bord, tigh, nighean.

Proper. Tomas, Duneidean, Diluain, an Ceitein, an Fhraing.

Abstract. Firinn, ceartas, smuain, trocair, maitheas.

Nouns are of the Masculine or of the Feminine Gender.

Masculine. Fear, each, tarbh, mult, gleann, ceartas.

Feminine. Bean, bo, caora, craobh, firinn.

Nouns that agree with the Pronoun e are Masculine, those with i are Feminine (H. B. MacCurtin).

Nouns are of the Singular or Plural Number.

Singular. Fear, each, caora, craobh.

Plural. Fir, eich, caoraich, craobhan.

Case is a certain change in the form of a Noun to show its relation to other words. Five Cases are recognised in Gaelic: Nominative, Genitive, Dative, Accusative, Vocative.

	Singular.	Plural.
Nom.	Bean, a wife.	Mnai, wives.
Gen.	Mna, of a wife.	Mnathan, of wives.
Dat.	Mnaoi, to a wife.	Mnathaibh, to wives.
Acc.	Bean, a wife.	Mnai, wives.
Voc.	O 'Bhean, O wife.	'Mhna, O wives.

EXERCISE VIII.

- (1.) Tell whether Proper, Common, or Abstract Nouns.
- (2.) Tell the Number and the Gender separately.
- (3.) Translate each word into English, and give Number and Gender at once.

Bard, cluasan, cro, dorsa, sliochd, reulta, Tomas neul, leabhraiche, meud, clarsaichean, clin, tobraiche, sloigh, Duneidean, bà, saibhlean, lagh, sleibhte, caora, cu, tim, feidh, daimh, muc, lòn, lon, Mairi, iasg, laithean, dàn, bròg, cuirn, clann, clachan, fras, preasan, seol, deur, lìn, guth, gaithean, lasraichean, barail, iall.

EXERCISE IX.

Translate into Gaelic, and write correctly—

A harp, an ear, doors, stars, a star, clouds, a sheep-fold, a book, books, bulk, sheep, a well, a cow, a moor, a barn, a day, dogs, voices, swine, an ox, a deer, marshes, a fish, poems, a bush, shoes, showers, thongs, darts, beams (of light), a flame, tears, times, a net, opinions, greed.

The Nominative is the form that goes with the Verb, and is the Subject in a Sentence. It is exactly of equal value with the Nominative in English. The Nominative form can always be determined by putting the Verb tha before the Noun in question; as tha fear, tha bean, tha cearc, tha cu, tha tigh, tha Tomas, tha beinn, tha gleann.

The Genitive is the form used to denote possession, source, property, &c., and can always be found by placing some other Noun before the Noun in question, as ceann fir, a man's head; ceann mna, a woman's head; ceann circe, a hen's head; ceann coin, a dog's head; ceann tigh, head of a house; nighean Thomais, the daughter of Thomas; mullach beinne, top of a mountain; ceann glinne, head of a glen.

* * * The Genitive in Gaelic is equal to the Possessive in English, and all that part of the English Objective that is governed by the Preposition of. In the examples given above, man's head, woman's head, &c., are English Possessives; but the daughter of Thomas, top of a mountain, are Objectives by of. All are covered by the Gaelic Genitive.

The Dative case is the form that follows all the Simple Prepositions, as aig fear, aig mnaoi, aig circe, aig cu, aig tigh, gu Tomas, air beinn, le gleann.

The Accusative is the form that is governed by Transitive Verbs, and is always the Object in a Sentence. It corresponds to the Objective in English that follows the Transitive Verb. It is always the same form as the Nominative.

The Vocative is the form used in addressing any object; as O'ghrian, O'bhean, A ghlinn (O a' ghlinn), A Sheumais. It corresponds to the English Nominative of Address.

Singular.

Nom. (Tha).	Fear.	Bean.	Cearc.
Gen. (Ceann).	Fir.	Mna.	Circe.
Dat. (Aig).	Fear.	Mnaoi.	Circ.
Acc.	(Same as Nom.)
Voc. (O !).	'Fhir.	'Bhean.	'Chearc.

Plural.
Nom. (Tha).	Fir.	Mnai.	Cearcan.
Gen. (Ceann).	Fhear.	Mhnathan.	Chearc.
Dat. (Aig).	Fearaibh.	Mnathaibh.	Cearcaibh.
Acc.	(Same as Nom.)
Voc. (O !).	'Fheara.	'Mhna.	'Cearca.

EXERCISE X.

Tell the Cases of the following Nouns, and how they are governed.

Ceann caora. Cas coin. Sron muice. Cul cinn. Mac Dhonuil. Nighean Uilleam. Baile Lunnain. Blar na h-Eiphite. Mullach nam beann. Iochdar nan gleann. Barra nan tonn. Muile nan Craobh.

Aig sruthaibh Bhabiloin. Air bharraibh nan geug. Aig toiseach na h-oidhche. Ann an ceann seachduine. Le mor-thlachd. Tha mi fo churam. Le agartas geur. Labhair e mu sgoilibh agus mu eaglaisibh.

Reic mi mart. Thog mi tigh. Cheannaich iad sprèidh. Sheinn i duanag. Rinn Seumas cliabh. Chunnaic sinn an cuan.

Caidil a luth-choin. Failte ort fein a Mhor-thir bhoidheach. A chearc dhonn, fhuair mi do nead. Chail thu an latha. A dhuine bhochd. A ghlinn ud shios.

THE ADJECTIVE.

The Adjective agrees with the Noun, which it qualifies in Number, Gender, and Case; as duine mor, a great man; daoine mora, great men; bean mhor, a great woman; mnathan mora, great women; aig an duine mhor, at the great man; aig a mhnaoi, mhoir, at the great woman, &c.

Adjectives in Gaelic have two degrees of Comparison—the Positive, which is the simple Adjective, and the Comparative, as duine lag, a weak man; an duine is laige, the weaker man.

EXERCISE XI.

Tell—

- (1.) The Number, Gender, and Case of the Adjectives.
- (2.) The Degree of Comparison, giving the Positive or Comparative of each.

Tha an sneachda geal. Cha ghabh e 'bhi nis gille. Tha mise lag ach tha thusa nis laige. Tha an uiseag beag ach tha an dreathan-donn nis bige (or, nis lugha). Tha esan olc agus ise moran nis miosa. Is toigh leam an te dhileas dhonn. Tha i nis dilse. Bha lamhainean sioda air a min-bhasaibh bana. Failt' ort fein a Mhor-thir bhoidheach. Tha an uiseag ghrinn ri ceileir binn san speur. Tha luasgan ard nan geugri comhradh tlath. Aig lochran dealrach, daite.

The elaborately stupid systems of the Comparison of Adjectives taught by our various Gaelic Grammars is a very good instance of how the language has been distorted by its own best friends, and made to look extremely uninviting and even repulsive. An Irish clergyman in admiration writes, "The bards, in the glow of poetic rapture upon the common superlative, raised a second comparative and superlative, and on the second also raised a third comparative and superlative." This may be very good "poetic rapture," but it is nonsense. If we examine the various superlatives first, we can see that there are no such forms of the Adjective in Gaelic.

The "particles" sar, ro, fior, &c., raise the value of the adjective to which they are prefixed, but they constitute no comparison. These so-called "particles" are in reality adjectives used adverbially, and modifying the adjective that follows. Thus: Sar mhaith = excellent good; excellently good. Fior mhaith = true, good = truly good. This use of the adjective in an adverbial sense is quite common in English, and can be readily understood. That does away at once with all the Superlatives so called ; there are none such.

Now, as regards Comparatives. Munro in his grammar has three, thus—

	Positive,	Tha e lag, he is weak.
1st	Comparative,	Tha e nis laige, he is weaker.
2d	do.	Is laigid e sin, he is weaker for that.
3d	do.	Tha e 'dol an laigead, he is getting weaker.

But this Third Comparative, laigead, is a noun as plainly as it can be. Literally rendered it is, He is going into weakness; where no one would make weakness an adjective. Laigead is a noun governed by “an,” into, in the Dative Case. Such Third Comparatives then are always abstract nouns, formed from adjectives certainly, but not adjectives. Our best grammar, that of Dr Stewart, does not give this form at all, yet he gives two forms of comparison—the First and the Second.

The Second Comparative is seen in the example given, Is laigid e sin. And Donovan says, “The preposition de is often postfixed to the comparative form of the adjective.” We see therefore that the correct form is laigide (laige-de); as we have it in “is gilide e sin, he is the whiter for that.” But the postfixing is simply an accident, a development of the modern speech. In the older spoken language it was separate and distinct, thus: Is fearr de Uilleam a chomhairle, the advice is better for William (William is better for the advice). Any one can see that Uilleam is governed by de, and that really de has nothing of relation with the adjective fearr; it is an accident that they run together. It will be seen that the structure is the same as that of the Latin Sum governing a Dative with the Accusative. If for sake of convenience this Second Comparative is to be retained it must be distinctly observed that the noun or pronoun coming after is always in the Dative Case for the reason shown; and it must also be clear that it is not a form of the adjective but a noun with the “postfix” de.

But further even than that, the first comparative form is not a pure adjective, and does not govern the noun directly but by an indirect secondary reference to it. Is e an sneachda is gile, the snow is whiter (Lit. It is the snow that is whiter). The comparison is instituted with “that” (thing) which is whiter. We can see it very plainly in Tha e nis gile, it is (thing is) whiter. Nis here is just ni a is, the thing which is. Another instance, Bha an sneachda ni bu ghile, the snow was (the thing which was) whiter—of the things compared.

We are done with the Second and Third and Fourth Comparatives and Superlatives. All that remains is the Simple Positive and the only Comparative.

Many adjectives are formed from nouns by adding ail, which is contraction for amhuil = like to = like = ly in English. The rule of spelling "caol ri caol agus leathan ri leathan" changes ail into eil sometimes: Mac-ail, duin-eil, brathrail, suimeil.

THE PRONOUN.

Pronouns are classified as Personal, Possessive, Relative, and Interrogative.

The Personal Pronouns have two forms, Simple and Emphatic.

Simple.

Sing.	1. Mi or mhi.	I.
	„ 2. Tu or Thu.	Thou.
	„ 3. E and I.	He and she.
Plur.	1. Sinn.	We.
	„ 2. Sibh.	You.
	„ 3. Iad.	They.

Emphatic.

Sing.	1. Mise or Mhise.	Me, myself.
	„ 2. Tusa or Thusa.	Thou, thyself.
	„ 3. Esan, Ise.	Himself.
Plur.	1. Sinne.	We, ourselves.
	„ 2. Sibhse.	Ye, yourselves.
	„ 3. Iadsan.	Themselves.

Fein is another emphatic form, and may be translated self, as mi-fein, myself.

The -sa, -se terminal of the emphatic form is So, this, the Demonstrative affixed; and -san of the third person is Sin, that. This is interesting, and is a very natural arrangement. The -sa -se equivalent to So, this, is applied to the first and second persons only, and these are as related to themselves present, whereas the third person has the equivalent of Sin, implying absence or distance as related to the speakers.

The -ne in sinne is interesting as a relic of an old form yet preserved in Welsh, Ni, we. So that sinn-ne means we-we or we, ourselves.

EXERCISE XIII.

- (1.) Tell the simple form of each Emphatic, and the Emphatic of each Simple.
- (2.) Tell the person and number of all the Personal Pronouns.
- (3.) Analyse each sentence and translate into English.

Bhuail thu mi. Bhuail thusa mi. Bhuail mise thu. Bhuail thusa mise. Thainig e. Dh'fhalbh ise. Phill iad. Stad thusa. Thuit iadsan. Ruith mise. Loisg e mise. Tilg thusa esan. Thog ise iadsan. Chaill thusa mise agus iadsan. Chuir iad mise agus esan ann an toll. Bhris ise agus mise maide. Coinnich thusa agus esan iadsan agus sinne a maireach.

Possessive Pronouns are really Adjectives corresponding to the Personal Pronouns. They also have a Simple and Emphatic form.

Simple.

Sing. 1. Mo.	My.
„ 2. Do.	Thy.
„ 3. A.	His or her.
Plur. 1. Ar.	Our.
„ 2. Bhur or Ur.	Your.
„ 3. An.	Their.

Emphatic.

Sing. 1. Mo lamh-sa.	My own hand.
„ 2. Do lamh-sa.	Thine own hand.
„ 3. A lamh-san or-se.	His or her own hand.
Plur. 1. Ar lamh-ne.	Our own hand.
„ 2. Bhur lamh-sa.	Your own hand.
„ 3. An lamh-san.	Their own hand.

The form of the Possessive Adjective is often shortened and altered, but the ear is the guide to this, and practice in reading and writing is the way to learn it—not by rules.

Mo and Do when followed by a vowel lose the o, as m'athair, m'onair, d'ardach, d'oran.

When Ann precedes Mo and Do it causes a transposition and a change of vowel, thus: ann mo chluais becomes ann am chluais, and further an elision occurs of the nn of ann and of the a following, So ann am chluais becomes am chluais. Do also goes through similar changes; ann do chridhe becomes ann ad chridhe, and by elision ad chridhe. The perplexing use of the comma to indicate elision is to be avoided in such cases; a'm chluais, a'm' chluais, a'd chridhe, a' d' chridhe, are useless and therefore wrong.

EXERCISE XIV.

Treat like the last Exercise.

Mo chas. A cas (f.). A chas (m.). Do chas. A lamh. A cheann. A ceann. A mac. A mhac. Do lamhsa. Air mo laimh-sa. Aig ar tigh-ne. Aig bhur tigh-sa. Air ur crann-sa. Na ur laimh. Bidh tu-sa agus mi-se air an ceann-san. Am fac thu m' ad. Tha cuilleag am aid. Leig d' anail. Bha e am laimh. Chaidh smuirn am shuil. Tha am bata am laimh. Am bheil thu ad eigin. Tha mi am chabhaig. Bha e na laimh-san, agus na laimh-se.

The Relative Pronouns are as follows:—

A, who which. Am fear a thuit, the man who fell.

Nach, who not. Am fear nach do thuit, man who fell not.

Na, that which. Chuala mi na thuirt e, I heard what (that which) he said.

The Interrogative Pronouns are:—

Co, who. Co e, who (is) he?

Cia, which. Cia e, which (is) he?

Ciod, what. Ciod e, what (is) it?

The classes of Indefinite and Compound Pronouns which are given by all Gaelic Grammars I do away with entirely, as meaningless, useless, and perplexing. Any one can see that eigin, eile, cuid, cach, iad so, cia b'e, cach a cheile, cia b'e air bith, &c., &c., are some of them adjectives, some nouns, some phrases, and some whole sentences, and there can be no reason or excuse for retaining them as pronouns.

The Demonstrative Pronouns are also done away with. The words usually so classified—so, sin, sud—are essentially nouns. Their most common use is as Demonstrative Adjectives: An duine so; Am fear (s)ud; Na fir sin.

When used with the Preposition they often form adverbial phrases: Tha e an so. Chaidh e gu sin. It is simpler and better always to parse these words as Nouns; but in the analysis they must take the phrase value of Adverb or Adjective as may be.

THE VERB.

The Gaelic Verb is, like the English Verb, declined for Voice, Mood, Tense, Number, and Person.

The Number and the Person is the same as that of the Nominative.

There are three Principal Tenses—Present, Past, and Future.

The Moods are—Indicative, Negative, Subjunctive, Imperative, and Infinitive.

ACTIVE VOICE.

Paisg, fold.

Indicative or Affirmative Mood.

Past. Phaisg mi, thu, e; sinn, sibh, iad, I . . . folded.

Future. Paisgidh mi, thu, e; sinn, sibh, iad, I . . . shall or will fold.

Negative or Interrogative Mood.

Past. Nach Do phaisg mi, thu, e, &c., Did not I fold?

Future. Nach Paisg mi, thu, e, &c., Shall or will not I fold?

Subjunctive Mood.

Past. Phaisg-inn, -each tu, e ; &c., I might, could, or would fold.

Future. Ma Phaisg-eas mi, tu, e ; &c. If I shall or will fold.

* * Nam gives another value to the past tense. Nam Paisginn, If I were to fold, is the purely Conditional form.

Imperative.

Infinitive.

Paisgeam, Let me fold. A Pasgadh, Folding ; to fold.

Paisg, Fold thou.

Paisgeadh e, Let him fold.

PASSIVE VOICE.

Indicative.

Past. Phaisgeadh mi, thu, &c., I was folded.

Future. Paisgear mi, thu, &c., I shall or will be folded.

Negative or Interrogative.

Past. Cha do Phaisgeadh mi, thu, &c., I was not folded.

Future. Am Paisgear mi, thu, &c., Shall I be folded.

Subjunctive.

Past. Phaisgteadh mi, thu, &c., I could or would be folded.

Future. Ma Phaisgear mi, thu, &c., If I shall be folded.

Imperative.

Past. Paisgtear mi, thu, &c., Let me be folded.

Participle.

Paisgte, folded.

There is no form for the Present Tense in Gaelic ; the Future form is often used instead, thus, Chi mi thu, I see you, really means I shall see you. The present is expressed by the verb "to be" with the Infinitive, thus, Tha mi (ag) tighinn, I am coming ; Tha mi 'falbh, I am going, &c. All the tenses of the verb may be formed in the same way.

THE PREPOSITION.

The following is a complete list of the Gaelic Prepositions :—

Aig, at.	Iar, after.
Air, on.	Le, leis, with, by.
Ann, in.	Mar, like to.
As or a, out of.	Mu, about.
De, out of.	O, from.
Do, towards.	Os, above.
Eadar, between.	Ris or Ri, to.
Fa, upon.	Roimh, before.
Fo, under.	Tar, thar, over.
Gu or gus, towards.	Tre, troimh, through.
Gun, without.	Seach, past (comparison).

* * I have purposely said nothing about the so-called Compound Prepositions. There is no just reason at all for retaining them; they are all Nouns with Prepositions, and should be treated as such.

Prepositions, as we saw, stand before Nouns, distinct and separate; but when a Preposition comes before a Personal Pronoun, they run together and form one word, as de mi, of me, becomes dhiom; as tu, from you, becomes asad, &c. The following gives the Prepositional Pronouns, as these forms are called :—

	Singular.
	mi.	tu.	e.	i.
Aig,	Agam,	Agad,	Aige,	Aice.
Air,	Orm,	Ort,	Air,	Oirre.
De,	Dhiom,	Dhiot,	Dhe,	Dhi.
Do,	Dho,	Dhut,	Dha,	Dhi.

Plural.

	sinn.	sibh.	iad. (M. & F.)
Aig,	Againn,	Agaibh,	Aca.
Air,	Oirnn,	Oirbh,	Orra.
De,	Dhinn,	Dhibh,	Dhiubh.
Do,	Dhuinn,	Dhuibh,	Dhoibh.

And so on with other Prepositions.

It is worth paying some attention to these, for not only does a knowledge of them—not necessarily by rote—make the grammatical construction of sentences much easier to understand, but also because in them we find interesting relics of the older and less perverted language, which we cannot wisely neglect. In the spoken language we, for example, constantly confound do and de. Greim do'n aran, for a bite of bread, and earran do'n t-sluagh, for a portion of the people, are wrong. It should be de'n aran, de'n t-sluagh. We have only to look at their pronominal combinations to see at once how different these prepositions are.

Again, we look on bhuam as the proper form, and we write 'uam, as if the word were defective. But if we know that o and ua are the correct form of the preposition, bhuam = bho mi (instead of = ua mi = uam), is wrong. Thus one of our too many dots goes. Ceud gun leth, again, is not sense. Literally it means, a hundred without half; whereas the proposed value of the phrase is, a hundred and a half (hundred). If we know that gu equals Lat., con, with, then Ceud gu leth is sense—a hundred with half, or to half, in modern value.

TEXT.

A GHLINN UD SHIOS,

By Dr M'LACHLAN, Rahoy.

A ghlinn ud shios, a ghlinn ud shios,
Gur trom an diugh mo shuil,
A' dearcadh air do lagain aigh
4 Mar b' abhaist doibh o thùs.

Tha do choilltean fathasd dosrach, ard,
'S gach sithein aillidh, uain' ;
'S fuaim an lùb-uillt nuas o d' fhrìth'
8 'N a shuain-cheol sìth am chluais.

Tha 'n spréidh ag ionaltradh air do mhàgh,
Na caoraich air an raon :
Tha 'churra 'g iasgach air do thraigh,

ORAN.

Tha na siantan air caochladh, tha 'n saoghal fo
 sprochd,
 Chuir an doineann fhuar, fhiadhaich an ianlaidh
 nan tosd ;
 Tha sneachda trom, domhail a' comhdach nam
 beann,
 A' liouadh nan glacan, 's a' tacadh nan allt,
 'S mise 'feitheamh an aisig aig carraig a' chaoil,
 6 Ri smaointean air abhachd nan laithean a dh' aom.

Ann an laithean ar n-oige dol an comhail an t-sluaigh,
 Cha sheall sinn ach faoin air mar dh' aomas iad
 uainn ;
 Cha tig e 'n ar smaointinn cho goirid 's tha 'n dàil,
 Gus am brùchd gach leòn oirnn 'g ar lùbadh gu lar,
 Gun churam, gun eislein aig teumadh air taobh,
 12 Ar laithean a' snàg uainn gun aireamh air aon.

1 *The elements are changed ; the world is under gloom.
 Doinean, the storm ; ianlaidh, the bird-kind, the birds.
 Waiting the ferry at the rock of the Sound (of Mull).*

7 *An comhail an t-sluaigh, in the gathering of the people.
 We look but lightly on how they slip away from us.
 Cho goirid 's tha 'n dàil, how short is the time (delay).
 Till every ill (lit. wound) crowd on us.
 Aig teumadh air taobh, at going aside (inclining to wrong.)
 Snàg, creeping ; gun aireamh air aon, not one (day), to be found (reckoned).*

'N uair a luidheas an aois oirnn 's a dh' aognas ar
 snuagh,
 Ar ciabh 'dol an tainead, agus smal air ar gruaidh,
 Bidh teugmhail nan comhlain a' comhradh gu
 truagh,
 Agus cairdean ar n-oige air somhladh san uaigh,
 'S ann an sin bhios ar cridhe làn mulaid 'us gaoid,
 18 Ri smaointean air abhachd nan laithean a dh' aom.

O! Ard-Rìgh na cruinne, ceann-uighe ar dùil,
 Air an t-sneachda fhliuch, fhionnar dhuit a lùbas mi glun ;
 'S guidheam gun orduich thu dhomhsa gu glic.
 'Bhì 'cuimhneachadh d'orduigh'n gu h-umhal 's gu
 tric,
 Chum 'n uair chriochnaicheas m' astar ann an glacaibh an aoig,
 24 Nach cuimhnich thu m' fhàilinn anns na laithean
 a dh' aom.

13 A dh' aognas ar snuadh, when our bloom (comeliness) fades.
 Bidh teugmhail nan comhlain, *diseases, pains, lit.
 in groups.* The expression is somewhat obscure, but this is the meaning that best accords with the context.
 Air somhladh, got fewer (thinned); mulaid 'us gaoid, sorrow and disease.

19 Cruine, of this (round) earth ; chief end of our hope.
 'N uair chriochnaicheas, &c., when my journey ends in the arms of death.
That you will not remember (i.e., forgive) my weakness (shortcoming) in the days that are gone.

READING EXERCISES.

The following and indeed every Exercise throughout the book should be constantly used for translation into English, and for practice in Parsing and Analysis. While exact translation of the Gaelic idiom is a good training and desirable as an exercise, it should never be omitted to contrast with it the correct way of expressing the same thing in English.

I.

The locality is Tobermory and the Sound of Mull.

Air pilleadh dhomh air m'ais o I Chaluim Chille, thainig sinn, air an aon fheasgar shamhraidh a b'aillidh a chunnaic mi riamh, do àite tearuinte fasgach, a tha ann an ceann mu thuath an eilein Mhuilich. Ar leam nach faca mi caladh luingeis idir a tha air a dhion o eirigh fairge agus o chumhachd stoirme mar tha e. Tha eilean fada caol 'g a chuirteachadh air an taobh a muigh, a' sgaoileadh a sgiathan gu cairdeil mun cuairt air gach soitheach beag agus long a tha 'g iarraidh fasgaidh na thaice o dhruim a' chuain, no tha feitheamh ri sìde mara agus an rudha-mor a ghabhail. Air an laimh dheis mar chaidh sinn a stigh, tha 'm fearann ag eirigh gu corrach, cas. Bha sinn a' seoladh ri bile nan creag, agus bha geugan nan craobh a' lùbadh dluth dhuinn. Thainig fàileadh a' bharraich oirnn air oiteig an t-samhraidh, agus bha mìle eun beag le'n ceilearadh binn a' seinn air gach preas, a' cur failte oirnn 'n uair a bha sinn a' seoladh seachad orra gu reidh, sàmhach. Cha robh taobh a thionndaidhinn mo shùil nach robh 'n sealladh taitneach. Bha na beanntan arda Morchuanach, 's iad uaine gu'm mullach; Suaineart le 'chnocan 's le 'thulaichean boidheach, 's an Leathar-Mhorthairneach a' deanamh gairdeachais ann am blaths an fheasgair shamhraidh.

II.

An uair a dhluthaich sinn a stigh, cha robh r'a fhaicinn ach croinn nan luingeas, am brataichean a' snamh gu fann ris an t-soirbheas; 's cha robh r'a chluinntinn ach farum ramh, 's torman nan allt agus nan eas, a bha tuiteam o iomadh sgairneach ard do'n chaladh a bha nis a' fosgladh gu farsuinn romhainn. O thaobh gu taobh de'n traigh air an dara laimh, tha sràid de thighean mora cho geal ris an t-sneachd; 's gu grad air an cul tha uchdach chorrach chas, far am bheil an calltuinn, an caorann, agus an t-uinseann a' fàs gu dosrach, cho dluth, dìreach os cionn nan tighean a tha fòpa, 's gu bheil an geugan, ar leat, a' lùbadh m'am mullach. Air braigh a' bhruthaich chi thu a' chuid eile de'n bhaile eadar thu 's faire, ionnus gur duilich dhuit àite 's boidhche agus a's neo-chumanta fhaicinn. Ach 's ann a mach sa chaladh a bha 'n sealladh a b'fhiach fhaicinn—na ficheadan soitheach eadar mhor agus bheag, iomadh eithear caol le'n raimh uaine, a' bhirlinn riomhach le 'siuil gheala, 's an long-chogaidh le 'croinn arda, 's le 'brataich rioghail.

Norman Macleod, D.D.

III.

Describing an entertainment given in honour of the "Teachdaire," as old Norman Macleod was called, from the name of the Gaelic magazine which he edited.

Labhair Ceann-suidhe na cuideachd an sin gu socrach reidh. So, ars' esan, a dhaoin' uaisle, deoch slainte nach diult sibh. Labhair e 'n sin gu fonnmhor suidhichte m'an Ghaeltachd, mu ar monaidhean farsuinn, agus ar srathan seasgair. Mhol e na Gaeil, agus gach ni a bhuineadh dhoibh: cha robh monadh no srath, no coille no doire, no caol no eilean nach do mhol e. Labhair e mu ar beanntaibh arda, agus mu ar glinn iosail; mu gharthaich ar cuanta mora, agus mu bhoichead ar lochain shamhach fhior-uisge. Mhol e gach creag agus garbhach, agus am badan ceo a dh'iathas m'an timchioll. Thug e iomradh air ar n-orain, agus air ar ceol, ar saighdeirean agus ar cinn-fheadhna; agus ma's e nuallan na pioba-moire, cha do dhi-chuimhnich an duin' eireachdail! Las mo chridhe le aoibhneas. Dh'fhiosraich mi m'fheoil ag eiridh air mo chnamhaibh. So, ars' esan, T'ir nam Beann, nan Gleann, 's nam Breacan!

IV.

Thòisich mo charaid an Teachdaire—ach ma thòisich esan, bhuail iadsan. Chrom e 'cheann. Nach narach e, arsa mise ri Coinneach? An e sin do bharrail, arsa Coinneach? Tha e cho moiteil air a' cheart àm ri aon bhean-bainnse a sheas riamh an lathair ministear. Leig thusa leis; thig e as a' phaiseanaich naire ud a thiota—agus mar thubhairt b'fhior. Thòisich e gu malda narach—cò ach esan? Cha leaghadh an t-àm na bheul. Cha-n 'eil fios agam, a dhaoin' uaisle, a deir e, ciod is urra dhomh a radh—. Thug e tuisleadh no dhà, mar dheanadh each crubach 's an dol a mach ach mar ghabh e teas, agus mar chaidh e fo shiubhal, chuir e dheth gu h-innich. C'àite nis a' bheil an naire, arsa Coinneach Ruadh? Nach d'thubhairt mi riut? Sud e an impis sgaineadh le moit. Labhair e gu maith, agus gu ro-mhaith. Thug e dhoibh eachdraidh na Gaeldachd o laithibh Fhinn mhic-Cumhaill. Labhair e mu sgoilibh agus mu eaglaisibh, mu dhaoin' a rinn maith d'ar duthaich anns na linntibh a dh'fhalbh, agus anns an àm a tha lathair. Labhair e mu thogradh nan Gael gu foghlum fhao-tainn, agus mu iomad ni nach urrainn domh a chur sios.

Lachlan M'Lean.
