

Sco. 11 35

LETTERS A wit to

TO KING JAMES THE SIXTH

FROM THE QUEEN, PRINCE HENRY, PRINCE CHARLES, THE PRINCESS ELIZABETH AND HER HUSBAND FREDERICK KING OF BOHEMIA, AND FROM THEIR SON
PRINCE FREDERICK HENRY.

FROM THE ORIGINALS IN THE LIBRARY OF THE FACULTY OF ADVOCATES.

PRINTED AT EDINBURGH.

PRESENTED TO THE MAITLAND CLUB BY SIR PATRICK WALKER

OF COATES, KNIGHT.

THE MAITLAND CLUB.

FEBRUARY, M.DCCC.XXXV.

THE EARL OF GLASGOW,

PRESIDENT.

ROBERT ADAM, ESQ. JOHN BAIN, ESQ. ROBERT BELL, ESQ. SIR DAVID HUNTER BLAIR, BART. WALTER BUCHANAN, ESQ. THE MARQUIS OF BUTE. ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, ESQ. ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL, ESQ. LORD JOHN CAMPBELL. JOHN DONALD CARRICK, ESQ. LORD COCKBURN. JAMES DENNISTON, ESQ. JAMES DOBIE, ESQ. RICHARD DUNCAN, ESQ. WILLIAM JAMES DUNCAN, ESQ. JAMES DUNLOP, ESQ. JOHN DUNLOP, ESQ. JAMES EWING, ESQ. KIRKMAN FINLAY, ESQ.

THE MAITLAND CLUB.

REV. WILLIAM FLEMING, D.D. WILLIAM MALCOLM FLEMING, ESQ. JOHN FULLARTON, ESQ. JOHN BLACK GRACIE, ESQ. RIGHT HONOURABLE THOMAS GRENVILLE. JAMES HILL, ESQ. LAURENCE HILL, ESQ. GEORGE HOUSTOUN, ESQ. JOHN KERR, ESQ. ROBERT ALEXANDER KIDSTON, ESQ. GEORGE RITCHIE KINLOCH, ESQ. JOHN GIBSON LOCKHART, ESQ. ALEXANDER MACDONALD, ESQ. WILLIAM MACDOWALL, ESQ. THE VERY REV. PRINCIPAL MACFARLAN, D.D. ANDREW MACGEORGE, ESQ. ALEXANDER MACGRIGOR, ESQ. DONALD MACINTYRE, ESQ. JOHN WHITEFOORD MACKENZIE, ESQ. GEORGE MACINTOSH, ESQ. ALEXANDER MACNEILL, ESQ. JAMES MAIDMENT, ESQ. THOMAS MAITLAND, ESQ. WILLIAM MEIKLEHAM, ESQ. WILLIAM HENRY MILLER, ESQ. WILLIAM MOTHERWELL, ESQ. WILLIAM MURE, ESQ. ALEXANDER OSWALD, ESQ. JOHN MACMICHAN PAGAN, ESQ. M.D.

THE MAITLAND CLUB.

WILLIAM PATRICK, ESQ. EDWARD PIPER, ESQ. ROBERT PITCAIRN, ESQ. JAMES CORBET PORTERFIELD, ESQ. HAMILTON PYPER, ESQ. PHILIP ANSTRUTHER RAMSAY, ESQ. JOHN RICHARDSON, ESQ. WILLIAM ROBERTSON, ESQ. ANDREW SKENE, ESQ. JAMES SMITH, ESQ. JOHN SMITH, ESQ. JOHN SMITH, YGST, ESQ. WILLIAM SMITH, ESQ. MOSES STEVEN, ESQ. DUNCAN STEWART, ESQ. SIR MICHAEL SHAW STEWART, BART, SYLVESTER DOUGLAS STIRLING, ESQ. JOHN STRANG, ESQ. HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF SUSSEX. THOMAS THOMSON, ESQ. W. B. D. D. TURNBULL, ESQ. PATRICK FRASER TYTLER, ESQ. ADAM URQUHART, ESQ. SIR PATRICK WALKER. WILSON DOBIE WILSON, ESQ.

The familiar correspondence of King James the Sixth, with his Queen and their children, originally collected by Sir James Balfour of Denmilne, and now preserved in the Advocates' Library, is curious and interesting, as exhibiting in their genuine colours the character and habits of that monarch within his own private and domestic circle, in contradistinction to what is better known of his public and political life.

Bellenden, the translator of Boece, in his "Epistle to the King's Grace," makes not an inapt introduction to this subject. "Erasmus Roterdamus, in his buke namet 'The Institution of Christin Kinges,' schawes, maist nobil prince! na thing in mair admiration than workes of kinges; quhilks ar sa patent to the sicht of pepill, that every man hes thaim in his mouth, to their commendation or reprief. Thus may nae thing be sa fruteful to dant the commoun erroures of pepill as honest and virtewis life of kingis: for the life of kingis drawis thair subdittis to imitation of thair werkis, worthy or unworthy; and the same cumis to licht be impulsion of fortoun, that nathing sufferis to be hid. Farther in every history that man redis, apperis evidently the same maneris with the pepil, quhilks ar usit be the king. And sen na thing is, that the pepil followes with mair imitation, nor kepes in mair recent memory than werkis of nobil men, of reason thair besines suld be mair respondent to vertew than of ony other estatis."

James has been hardly and not very fairly dealt with by various writers, and latterly Sir Walter Scott has contributed the aid of his able pen in turning him into ridicule for failings that belonged to the ignorance or superstitions of the times, and did not attach to him individually. If he was in dread of witchcraft, how should the blame attach to him, when the most enlightened civilians and the most learned divines of his day gave credence to it not merely in Scotland but in Europe? If he was timorous and feared Treason, no man had ever a better apology, and those who scoff at him on that account ought in candour to judge him fairly not in the haleyon days in which they themselves have lived, but as during the period in which he lived. Looking, therefore, to the state of Scotland before his birth, at his birth, during his reign, and as long as the murderer of his Queen mother swayed the sceptre of England, we find more acts of treason and rebellion attempted in Scotland than any other country has exhibited. To recount these is not the object of this introduction, and it is enough to say, that though he might have overcome and reduced to obedience the turbulent Lords that kept up discord in the kingdom, and threatened the overturn of his throne by calling forth the energies of the nation, had the origin of their intrigues been confined to the bounds of Scotland, yet he was unable to cope with them on equal terms, when it is notorious that they were instigated by Queen Elizabeth, who had attached a large proportion of the nobility of Scotland to her side, and who was most desirous to get the possession of the young king, as she had already obtained that of his unfortunate mother, on a pretence of friendship and protection. The clergy were unfortunately not friendly to the king, and endeavoured to throw discredit on all his actions, and in particular upon the account given by him of the Gowrie Conspiracy, but which is now proved beyond a doubt to have been in every particular correct, by the evidence adduced in the Criminal Trials published by Mr. Pitcairn; and when we consider that Elizabeth, having failed in her expectation of alarming the young king to seek refuge in her kingdom from the rebellions of the nobles excited by her own devices, next attempted to get him into her clutches, by means of a treaty, during the mother's captivity, who can hesitate to give credit to the supposition, that the Gowrie Conspiracy was also her causing, even if the circumstances attending that extraordinary event had not afforded, of themselves, strong presumptive proof that the capture of the king was her object?

Every apology is therefore to be admitted for the alarm which King James may have felt in these times, but, timorous though, it must be admitted, he was, it would seem to have been only in political measures, and not personal, for we find him occasionally displaying a coolness and intrepidity directly at variance with that character, two of which may be shortly noticed: the one was in that same Gowrie Conspiracy, when, at the moment of the struggle, and his life or liberty were in danger, he put his foot on the chain of his favourite hawk, which had dropped from his arm, to prevent its escape by the open window; and the other when braving the combined efforts of the witches of Denmark and Scotland to raise storms to prevent the arrival of the Queen, and in whose powers he fully believed, he put to sea in a stormy autumn to bring home his Queen from Upslo.

That he was a pedant is true, but if that pedantry, by the force of the example of their king, produced the effect of inducing his people to direct their attention to learning, then to him is due the merit of the high character which Scotland has obtained amongst nations on that account. Under George Buchanan he acquired these views. Hume remarks, "That James was but a middling writer, may be allowed; that he was a contemptible one, can by no means be admitted. Whoever will read his Basilicon Doron, particularly the two last books, the true law of free monarchies, his answer to Cardinal Parron, and almost all his speeches and messages to Parliament, will confess him to have possessed no mean genius."

This confessedly his best work was published at Edinburgh in 1590, when Prince Henry had entered his sixth year. These "His Majesty's instructions to his dearest son Henry the Prince" are divided into three heads,—the first, the Prince's duty to his God,—second, his duty when he should become king,—and third, his duty in indifferent things, which were neither right nor wrong in themselves, but according as they were rightly or wrongly used, and would affect his authority and reputation among the people. In the preface, signed James R. is the following specimen of the King's poetic talent, which Bishop Percy highly compliments.

"God giues not Kings the stile of Gods in vain,
For on His Throne His sceptre do they sway,
And as their subjects ought them to obey;
So Kings should feare and serve their God againe.
If then ye would enjoy a happy reigne,
Observe the Statutes of our Heavenly King,
And from his law, make all your laws to spring.
Since His Lieutenant here you should remaine,
Rewarde the just, be stedfast, true, and plaine;
Represse the proud, mainteyning ay the right.
Walk always so as ever in his sight,
Who guards the godly, plaguing the prophane,
And so shall ye in Princely virtues shine,
Resembling right your mightie King devine."

The birth of King James is thus announced by Sir James Melville, "All this whyll I lay within the castell of Edenbrough, preing nycht and day for hir Majesteis gud and happy delyuery of a faire sonne. This prayer being granted, I was the first that was advertist be the Lady Boyn, in her Majesteis name, to part with diligence the xix day of Junij, in the year 1566, betwen ten and elenen houres before nun. It strock tuelff houres when I tok my horse, and was at Berwik that same nycht. fourt day efter I was at Londoun, and met first with my brother: wha sent and advertist the secretary Cicill that same nycht of my commying, and of the birth of the prince, willing hym to kep it vp, vntill my being at court, to schaw it my self vnto hir Maieste, wha was for the tym at Grenwitch, wher hir Majeste was in gret merines and dancing efter supper; bot sa schone as the secretary Cicill roundit the newes in hir ear of the prince birth, all merines was layed asyd for that nycht; every ane that wer present marueling what mycht moue sa sodane a chengement; for the Quen sat down with hir hand vpon hir haffet, and boursting out to some of hir ladies, how that the Quen of Scotlandis was leichter of a faire sonue, and that sche was bot a barren stok." At the audience next day "I requested hir Maieste to be a gossup vnto the Quen, for our commers ar callit gossups in England; quhilk sehe granted glaidly to be."

James was thus born in eaptivity, and seized upon by one or other of the parties, according as strength or stratagem devised, and, amidst the history of these tumults, Sir James Melville thus goes on, when James was in his eleventh year, 1577, to describe the characters of those under whose tuition he was placed.

"Now the yong king was brocht vp in Stirling be Allexander Askin and my Lady Mar; and had for principall preceptouris Mester George of Buchwennen and Mester Peter Yong, the abbotis of Cambuskynneth and Drybrough, branches of the house of Askin, and the lard of Dromwhassell, his Maiesties maister houshald. Allexander Askin wes a nobleman of a trew gentill nature, weill loued and lyked of euery man for his gud qualites and gret discretion, in na wayes factious nor enuyous, a louer of all honest men, and desvred ever to have sic as were of gud conversation to be about the prince, rather than his awen nere frendis, gif he thocht them not sa meit.

"The Lard of Drumwhassell, again, was ambitious and gredy, and had gretest cair how till advance him self and his frendis. The twa abbotis were wyse and modest; my Lady Mar was wyse and schairp, and held the King in gret aw; and sa did Mester George Buchwhennen. Mester Peter Yong was gentiller, and was laith till offend the King at any tym, and vsed him self wairly, as a man that had mynd of his awen weill be keping of his Maiesteis favour. Bot Mester George was a stoik philosopher, and loked not far before the hand; a man of notable qualities for his learning and knawledge in Latin poesie, mekle maid accompt of in other contrees, plaisant in company, rehersing at all occasions moralites schort and fecfull, wheref he had aboundance, and invented wher he wanted. He was also of gud religion for a poet, bot be was easely abused, and sa facill that he wes led with any company that he hanted for the tym, quhilk made him factious in his auld dayes, for he spak and wret as they that wer about him for the tym infourmed him. For he was become sleperie and cairles, and followed in many thingis the vulgair oppinion; for he was naturally populaire and extrem vengeable against any man that had offendit him, quhilk was his gretest falt. For he wret dispytfull inuectywes against the Erle of Monteith, for some particulaires that wes between him and the lard of Buchwhennen, and becam the Erle of Mortons gret ennemy, for ane hackeney of his that chancit to be tane fra his seruand during the civill troubles, and was booth be the Regent; wha had na will to part with the said horse, he was sa sur of fut and sa easy, that albiet Mester George had oft tymes requyred him again, he culd not get him, and wher he had bene the Regentis gret frend of before, he becam his deadly ennemy, and spak euill of him fra that tym fourth in all places and at all occasions. Dromwhassell also, because the Regent kepit all casualtes to him self, and wald let nathing fall till vthers that wer about, the King becam also his ennemy, and sa did they all that wer about his Majeste.

"The Regent again, reuling all at his pleasour, maid na accompt of any of them that wer about the King, vntill a discret gentilman callit Mester Nycholl Elphinstoun aduertist him how that he was invyed of many and hatted of enery man, specially be them that wer in Stirling with the King; aduysing him (albeit oner lait) to bestow part of his gold vnto samany of them as he belened wer wonnable. Wha, till ane that was in mean rank, he gaif twenty pieces of gold at xx lb. the piece. What he gaif till vthers I can not tell; bot sic as had spoken ill of him before durst not alter their langage, because of the Kingis wit and gud memorie, wha culd chek up any that he persauit had first spoken euill, and then began to speak gud again, as his Maieste had done till ane of the company, alleging that he had chengit his coit, as I was informed for the tym. Sa that the Regent was ouer lang in dealing of part of his gold to them that wer about his Maieste; wha incressing in yeares and knawledge, sindre gentilmen began to sut service, and wer onwaters."

This appears a very natural and true account of the persons about the King, though not a creditable one, and shews them to have been very apt scholars in the system of bribery practised by Queen Elizabeth in Scotland.

One other extract from Sir James Melville deserving of notice, is dated in 1579, and regards the state of parties at the time, his remarks being equally severe as true. "During the Kingis yong yeares, the parcialities wer sa gret, and the haill contre sa parturbit be the twa parties, that allegit themselnes to feicht and flyte and stryue for the King and the Quen, hir Maieste being captywe in England, and the King yet very yong, that many parsaued to be bot factious, fasschious, ambitious, gredy, vengeable, warldly, wretchit creatours; and baith pairties craftyly sterit vp and halden tu be a only faction in England, wha had that Quenis car, intending the wrak asweill of our yong K. as of our Quen, to set vp some of ther frendis to bruk the croun of England, quhilk moued (dyners vthers to cry out against the foly of our nation and the malice of our nybours) many to cry out against our fulische contentions, some in proise and some in meter."

The king's marriage in 1585 is the next occurrence in chronological order, and is thus told in the "Historic of King James the Sext."

"The King in this yeir was becum a brave prence in bodie and stature, weill exercesit in reading, that he could perfytlie recorde of all things that he had ather hard or red; his memorie and jugement war becum verie ryp and fyne. Therefore that noble King Frederic the Second King of Denmare, finding sik opportunitie and occasioun be the credible report of famous gentilmen and marchands of Scotland to congratulat the gude estait of our King his confederat, he essayit him twa wayis, be his renounit Ambassadors sent in Scotland in the moneth of Julij 1585. The first way was, that he proponit be his ambassadors, that the His of Orknay and Zetland war bot lent from the croun of Denmarc for the debt of a sowme of money awin to the crown of Scotland; and for the redemptioun of thayme thay had the money present to rander to the King and his estaits for laughfull restitution and repossession, &c. The other way was, becaus the Kings gudlie stature and ryp yeares requyrit the societie of sum condigne Princess to be his bedfallow; and that King Frederic had then twa doghters, and was willing (geve it sould pleas the King of Scotland) ather to geve him his chose of thayme, or that he wald accept the ane of thayme, as it sould pleas the father to bestow, whilk sould be the maist cumlie, and the best for his prencelie contentment.' The King saw the ambassadors at Dunfermline, but delayed the first question on account of the plague then raging, and directed them to remove to St. Andrews. As to the other he thanked the King, and would communicate with his Majesty upon both by an ambassador of his own.

A curious specimen of these primitive times is here told, that would astonish our modern diplomatists to practice. "When they (the ambassadors) wer appointed to part out of Domfermeling towardis St. Androwes, there to get their dispatche, his Maieste ordonit to tell them that he suld send them horse out of the court to ryd vpon. The day of their parting being com, they send away their bagage and officers before them, and were buted them selues tareing lang vpon his Maiesteis horse; quhilk, because they cam not in dew tym, they tok their journey fordwart vpon fut. His Maieste was very miscontent when he vnderstod how they were handled, and caused his horse to folow fast efter them and ouertak them."

"Mester Peter Young, mester almowsser, was send in Denmark to thank that King and to se his dochters, that he mycht mak report again of his lyking of them, with a promyse that his Maieste suld send ther or it wer lang ane honnourable ambassade." "Crownell Stewart" followed, "and they baith returnit with sa gud and frendly answers, that ther was litle mair mention maid of the restitution of the ylles of Orkeney. The K. of Denmark was also put in hope be them that his Maieste suld send the nyxt sommer ane honnorable ambassade in Denmark to deall further in tha matters."

Queen Elizabeth was very jealous of the proposed Danish connection, independent of the disappointment it offered to her own views, and she despatched Dr. Wotton as her ambassador, who, she justly calculated, would acquire influence with James in private from his witty and facetious conversation, and who had sufficient knavery to form a secret concert with some of the Scottish noblemen for the purpose of causing a quarrel with the court of Denmark, in order to put a stop to the intended marriage, altogether, or, if that could not be, to defer it for three years. In this plot they were at first very successful, and went so far as to plan even the capture of the King, and his delivery into the hands of Queen Elizabeth, but the conspiracy was discovered, and Wotton fled.

" When the Kingis Maieste hard that they wer about till accuse and convict the Quen his mother," says Sir James Melville in his Memoirs. he remonstrated very strongly against their proceedings, by letter addressed to Queen Elizabeth, and sent off Sir William Keith, one of the gentlemen of his bedchamber, as his special ambassador, with instructions to use his utmost endeavours to avert the threatened danger. He soon after sent the Master of Gray and Sir Robert Melville to support Keith, which they had done so strenuously, and in such strong terms, as to cause her to threaten the life of Melville, because he "spak braue and stout langage to the consaill of England." There is a holograph letter of James in the British Museum addressed "To Master Archibald Douglas," October, 1586, urging his best endeavours in the same cause. "Reserve up youre self na langer in the earnist dealing for my mother, for ye have done it to long, and thinke not that any youre travellis can do goode if hir lyfe be taikin, for then adeu with my dealing with thaime that are the speciall instrumentis thairof, and thairfore gif ye looke for the contineuance of my favoure towartis you, spaire na painis nor plainnes in this cace, bot reid my letter wrettin to Williame Keithe, and conforme youre self guhollie to the contentis thairof, and in this requeist lett me reape the fruittis of youre great credit thaire ather now or neuer. Facrwell."

With Queen Elizabeth the applications of James were of little avail, for her emissaries had so completely torn Scotland with dissensions, that she knew he was unable to bring forward the only argument that could have influenced her, by marching an army into England. Her factions in Scotland were become more numerous and more virulent, from their being mixed up with religion and supported by the clergy. Of this nothing affords a stronger illustration than that the whole clergy, with the exception of the King's own Chaplains, and one other clergyman, refused to offer up the humane and merely charitable prayer, "That it might please God to illuminate Mary with the light of his truth, and save her from the apparent danger with which she was threatened." The council having obtained the sentence of death, "they gaif the Quen warnyng a nycht of before to prepaire hir for God. Quhilk schort warnyng sche tok very patiently." But here let the curtain drop upon as foul a murder as ever disgraced the page of history, and an unmatched example of perfidy, treachery, and dissimulation on the part of Elizabeth!

In 1588 the marriage of James with the Princess of Denmark was revived and again counteracted by the plans of Elizabeth. The ambassadors had scarcely sailed for Denmark when she started a new match for him with the Princess of Navarre, through the medium of Monsieur Bartas, and some delay having occurred in consequence of an error in the commission of the ambassadors, "the K. of Denmark thocht nathing of ther commission, bot feeles dealing and dryuvng of type and faire langage, without any power to conclud." In the meantime the eldest daughter married the Duke of Brunswick, but matters having been explained to the satisfaction of the king, he expressed his wish that James should marry his second daughter, and the ambassadors returned with her picture; and almost at the same time the ambassadors arrived from Navarre with the picture of their Princess. During the delays caused by these interferences the King of Denmark died, but so intent was he upon the marriage that he left instructions with his council on the subject. James decided on marrying the Princess Anne of Denmark, and in order to prevent all further interruptions, in June 1589 sent off his ambassadors, the Earl Marshall and others, to carry the business through; but they had a long voyage, by tempestuous and contrary winds, and when they did arrive another defect was discovered in their commission, which forced them to wait until one of their number was sent back to Edinburgh to get it corrected.

The marriage was entered into by proxy in August, and the young Queen sailed for Scotland, but encountered very severe weather, and was driven into Norway, where she was long detained. As every storm in these days had a cause, so it was easily accounted for by witchcraft, called forth by "a kuff or a blaw, quhilk the admyrall of Denmark gane to ane of the Bailyeis of Copenhouen, whais wyfe consulting with hir associatis in that art, raised the said storm, to be renengit vpon the said admyrall." The witches in Scotland also combined with them, and raised continued storms, and many vessels perished in the Frith of Forth. They had nightly meetings and plots matured at Prestonpans, and even in the kirk at North Berwick, where the devil presided in the pulpit, and John Fean or Cunningham, who acted as secretary, called the roll, and gave the witches their instructions. Many a night, it appears from the Criminal Record, they went sailing in seives upon the Frith of Forth—many a black cat, with its claws taken off, was flung into the sea, with incantations,—and the devil himself went rolling over the waves, in shape of a hav-rick. At one of their meetings, held "be night in the kirk of Northberwick, wher the deuell, cled in a black goun with a blak hat vpon his head, preachit vnto a gret number of them out of the pulpit, having lyk leicht candelis rond about him," &c.—" Then dyvers among them enterit in a raisonyng. maruelling that all ther deuellerie culd do no harm to the K. as it did till others dyuers." The deuell answerit, "Il est vn home de Dieu." The devil's "body was hard lik vrn, as they thocht that handled him: his face was terrible, his noise lyk the bek of an egle, gret bournyng eyn; his handis and legis wer herry, with clawes upon his handis and feit lyk the griffon, and spak with a how voice." Fean the secretary, and a number of the poor wretches were tried before the Court of Justiciary, and. being convicted, were burned, or "worried at a stake," (strangled,) conform to the sentence of Court, upon the Castle-hill at Edinburgh.

The King's patience being worn out at Craigmillar Castle, where he staid during the expectation of the Queen's arrival, on the 23d October 1589, suddenly announced his determination to go in person for her, by issuing a Proclamation and Declaration, the former stating in part the reasons of his intention, and containing instructions and power for the conducting the affairs of the country, in case his stay should be prolonged beyond the twenty days he calculated upon to return to Scotland.

The Declaration is a singular document, and particularly interesting, because it was drawn up by himself, and is in his own handwriting.

" In respect I knaw that the motion of my voyage at this tyme wilbe diverslie skansit upoun, the interpreting quhairof may tend alsweill to my grite dishonnour as to the wrangous blame of Innocentis, I have thairupour bene moved to sett down this present Declaration with my awne hand, heirby to resolve all gude subjectis: First of all, the causes breiflie that move me to tak this purpois in heid, and nixt in quhat fassioun I resolved myselff thairof. As to the causes, I doubt noeht it is manifestlie knawne to all how far I wes generallie found fault with be all men for the delaying salang of my mariage; the ressonis wer, that I was allane. without fader or moder, bruthir or sister, King of this realme, and air appeirand of England: this my naikatnes maid me to be waik and my Inemyis stark, ane man wes as na man, and the want of hoip of successionn bread disdayne; yea my lang delay bred in the breistis of mony a grite jealosie of my inhabilitie, as gif I wer a barrane stok: Thir ressonis, and innumerable otheris, hourly objected, moved me to haisten the treaty of my mariage; for as to my awne nature, God is my witnes, I could have abstenit langair nor the weill of my patric could have permitted—I am knawne, God be praised, not to be very intemperatly rashe nor eoneety in my wechtiest effairis, nather use I to be sa caryed away with passioun as I refuse to heir reasoun: This treaty then being perfyted, and the Quene my bedfallow cuming on hir jornay, how the contrarious wyndis stayed hir, and quhair sho wes drevin, it is mair nor notorious to all men: And that it wes necessarlie concludit be the Esteatis that it behuifit necessarlie to be performed this yeir, I remittit to thame selffis quha concludit the same in the spring, at the Erll Mairshallis directing; the worde then cuming to me that sho wes stayed from cuming thrugh be the contrarious tempestis of windis, and that hir shippis wer not able to perfyte hir voyage this yeir, thruch the grite hurte that had ressaved; remembering myselff of hir inhabilitie on the ane part to cum, and of the foirsaid resolutioun of the Esteatis on the uther, the like quhairof I had oft solempnitlie avowit, I upoun the instant, yea very moment, resolvit to mak possible on my part that quhilk wes impossible on hirs. The place that I resolvit this in wes Craigmillair, not ane of the haill Counsall being present ther: And as I tuke this resolutioun onlie of myselff, as I am a trew Prince, sa advised with myselff onlie quhat way to follow furth the same: Quhairupoun I thocht first to have had the cullour of the Erll Bothuillis parting, quhome first I employed to have maid this voyage, alsweill in respect of his office, as likeuise the rest of the Counsale being absent all that haill day; efter I come to Edinburgh, the Chancellair and the Justice Clerk being yit unreturned oute of Lauder, and the haill rest of the Officiaris of Estate being all at ther awne houssis, the Clerk of Register onlie excepted. Bot fra I saw this voyage impossible to be perfyted be the Erll Bothuill, in respect of the coistis he had bestowed upoun the preparatiounis of my marriage, quhairby he wes unable to mak it with sic expedition and honnour as the estate of that affair and his persone did require, I wes then forceid to seik sum other way, and to abyde the Counsallis assembling; quha being convenit, fand sic difficulties in reiking out a nowmer of shippis for hir convoy, for sa I gaif it oute quha suld be the personis of the Ambassade, as I wes compelled (to mak thame the mair cirnist) to avow in grite vehemencie, that giff thay could be gottin na other to gang, I suld ga myselff allane, gif it wer bot in ane ship: Bot giff all men (said I) had bene als weill willit as become thame, I neidit nocht be in that strait. Thir speiches moved the Chancellair upoun three respectis to mak his offir of going: ffirst, taking these speiches of evill will unto him, because all men

knawis how he hes bene this lang tyme sklanderit for over grite slawnes in the mater of my mariage; nixt, his zeale to my service, seing me sa eirnist; and last, the feir he had that I suld have performed my speiches, giff na better culd have bene. Fra the tyme of the making of this offer, I have evir kepit my intentioun of my going als elois as possible I could frome all men, becaus I thocht ay it was aneuch for me to putt my fute in the schip, quhen all thinges wer redy, without speiring of furthir, as I kepit it generallie clois fra all men; sa I say upoun my honnour, I kepit it sa frome the Chancellair, as I was nevir wount to do ony secreitis of my wechtyest effearis: twa ressonis moving me thairto, first, becaus I knew that giff I had maid him on the counsaill thairof, he had bene blameit of putting it in my heid, quhilk had not bene his dewitie, for it becumis na subjectis to giff Princes advise in sic materis; and thairfoir remembering quhat invyous and unjust burding he dalie beiris, for leiding me be the nose, as it wer, to all his appetytis, as giff I wer an unressonable creature, or a bairne that could do nathing of myselff, I thocht pitie then, to be the occasioun of the heaping of further unjust sklander uponn his heade. The other reasonn wes, that as I perceaved it was for staying of me that he maid the offer of his ganging, sa was I assured that upoun knawledge of my ganging he wald ather altegether have staved himselff, or at leist lingered als lang as he could, thinking it over grite a burding to him to undertak my convoy, as I knew, upoun the rumouris of my ganging, he has said na les to sindrie of his freindis. This far I speik for his parte, alsweill for my awne hounouris saik, that I be not unjustlie sklanderit as ane irresolute asse, quha can do nathing of himselff: as also that the honnestie and innocencie of that man be not unjustlie and untreulie reproched. And as for my pairt. quhat moved me, ye may juge be that quhilk I have alreddy said, besydis the schortenes of the way, the suretie of the passage, being clene of all sandes, foirlandis, or siclike dangeiris, the harboreyis in these partis sa suir, and na forreyne fleetis resorting upoun these seis. It is my plesure then, that na man grudge or murmour at thir my proceedingis, bot latt every man leave a peaceable and quiet lyffe, without offending of any: and that all man conforme himselff to the directionis in my proclamatioun quhill my returne, quhilk I promeis salbe, God willing, within the space of twentie dayes, wind and wethir serving: Latt all men assuir thameselffis that quhasoever contravenis my directionis in my absence, I will think it a sufficient pruiff that he beris na luif in his hairt towardis me; and be the contrair, thais will I onlie have respect to at my returne, that reverencis my commandiment and will in my absence. Fairweill."

These events are thus described by the author of "The Life of King James the Sext."

" In the moneth of August of the nixt yeir, 1589, Queyne Anne, doghter to Frederic King of Denmarc, was mareit in Denmarc to King James the 6. of Scotland, be his ambassador the Erle Marshall, wha was directit thair for for that effect.

"In the end of that yeir the tempest of storme bayth be sea and land, was sa vehement that many ships pereishit upoun the sea, sa that the passage for Queyne Anne was verie difficill to cum in Scotland; and the King abayd daylie fra the moneth of August, luiking for her arryvall, whill, at last, upon the 22 day of October, without lang deliberation, he embarkit himself, with his Chanceller Maitland, and certayne utheris of his officiers and courteors, at the port of Leyth, and saillit to Opsló, whare Queyne Anne was attending upoun fayre wother, and litill luiking for his Majesteis cuming to hir at sik a tempestuous tyme of the yeir."

The king appears to have been very expeditious in his movements, for, it was only upon 11th October he issued his letter, declaring his intention to bring home the Queen in Scot's ships, and calling upon the mariners in the Frith of Forth to repair to Leith for the purpose of manning them. The city of Edinburgh readily contributed their aid, and entered into an engagement with "David Hutchesoun, maister and skipper of the ship called the Ayngell of Kirkcaldy,"—" who sall furneis his said ship with all necessars requisit in sic ane voyage, and specially with the number of twentyfoure personis, guid and habill and weill expert maryners, quhair of thair sall be sex at the leist habill and qualifeit to be pylats upoun ony sey-coast of this realme, and with pulder bullat and munitioun in sic number and quantitie as sall effeir for the honour of this burgh."

The following notice appears in the books of sederunt of the Lords of Council and Session, "The King shippit at Leith to pas to Norrovay on Wadinsday betwix xij and ane houris efter midnight, quhilk was the xxij day of October 1589."

Sir James Melville, in his Memoirs, says, "Thre vther schippis sailed with his Maieste, wherin was the Justice Clark, Carmychell, the pronest of Linclowden, Willyem Keith, George Hum, James Sandilandis, and his mester almowser, with all his hynes ordinary seruandis. The wether was rough aneugh, for it was in the beginning of wynter, bot the last day was sa extream stormy that they wer all in gret danger. Bot his Maiestie landit that sam nycht at in Noroway, wher the Quen was abyding the wynd."

The MS. quoted in "the Documents relative to the Reception at Edinburgh of the Kings and Queens of Scotland" adds, "Upon the 28 day of the said moneth of October the Kingis Majestie landit at Slaikray on the coast of Norroway, quhair his Majestie remaining a great space, went up to Upslo, quhaire the Queine his bedfallow wes for the tyme, and come with great travell, baith upon sea and land, upon the 19 day of November therafter. And immediathe at his coming past in quietlie with buites and all to hir hienes. The rest of his company went to his awin ludging, takin aganis his coming. His Majestie myndit to giue the Queine a kiss efter the Scotis faschioun at meiting, quhilk sho refusit, as not being the forme of hir cuntrie. Efter a few wordis prively spokin betuix his Majestie and hir, thair past familiaritie and kisses.

"Upon the 23 day of November 1589 the King and Queine wer meried in Upslo be Mr. David Lyndsay, minister at Leithe. The Bancket wes maid efter the best forme they could for the tyme."

The King's intention of returning so soon to Scotland, as held out in his Declaration, was disappointed, for he "culd not be persuadit to retourn to Scotland that winter, be raisoun of the raging sees and storme that he had susteanit a little of before.

"The Quen and consaill of Denmark being advertist that his Maieste was to abyd all that winter at send and requested him to com to Denmark. Wher he past be land with the Quen his new bryd; and behaued him self honorably and liberally be the way, and at the court of Denmark sa lang as he taried ther."

A number of other Scots appear to have found their way to Norway besides those who accompanied the King, as above mentioned, and whose conduct led to much inconvenience, as witnesseth Sir James Melville. "Bot the company that wer with his Maiestie held him in gret fascherie, to agre ther continuall stryf, pryd, and partialites. The Erle Marchall, be raisoun that he was ane ancien erle, and had bene employed in that honorable commission, thocht to have the first place nyxt vnto his Maieste sa lang as he was ther. The chancelair, be raisoun of his office, wald nedis haue the preeminence; lykwayes betwen the constable of Dunde and my L. Dinguall, for the first place; between the chancelar and the Justice Clark. Bot George Hum schot out quyetly Willyem Keith, fra his office of master of At lenth the hail wair denydit into twa factions; the the garderob. ane for the Erle Marchall and thother for the chanceler, wha was the starker, because the King tok his part. Sa that the chancelair tryumphed, and deuysed, being yet in Denmark, many refourmations to be maid, and new fourmes and fassions to be set fordwart at his Majesties hamecommyng."

Amidst all these tourmoils incident to royalty, however, the merry monarch had his fun, and he writes Alexander, Lord of Spynie, addressed " Mr. Alexander Lyndsay, vice Chalmerlane to oure Soverane Lord," as follows:

"Sandie, quhill youre goode happe furneis me sum bettir occasion to recompence youre honest and faithfull service utterid be youre diligente and cairfull attendance upon me, speciallie at this tyme, lett this assure in the inviolabill worde of youre awin prince and maister, that quhen Godd randeris me in Skotlande I sall irrevocablie and with consent of parliament erect you the temporalitie of murraye in a temporall lordshipp with all honouris thairto apparteining and lett this serve for cure to youre present disease, from the castell of croneburg quhaire we are drinking and drywing our in the aulde maner.

J. R."

When the King of Denmark visited King James in 1606, the "drinking and driving our" was carried on to an extent beyond all precedent. The exercises and amusements of the Kings during the day were, says Howes, the continuator of Stow's Chronicle, "eyther to hunt, hawke, play at tenis, see wrestling, or the manly play of the English fencers, six of the best being selected, and played three against three with foyls, at sundry weapons, according to the manner of fight: there was also the like play betweene a skilful Scot and a Germeane, or running at Tilt," &c. But as to the drinking part of it in the evening, the King of Denmark appears, from Sir Edward Peyton's account, to have been a real sandbag, and too much for King James, "who got so drunk with him at Theobald's, that he was obliged to be carried to bed." And Sir John Harrington, in writing to Mr. Secretary Barlow, says, "I came here (Theobald's) a day or two before the Danish King came; and from the day he did come until this time, I have been well nigh overwhelmed with carousal and sports of all kinds. The sports began each day in such a manner and such sorte as well nigh persuaded me of Mahomet's Paradise. We had women, and indeed wine too of such plenty as would have astonished each sober be-

Our feasts were magnificent, and the two Royal Guests did most lovingly entertain each other at table. I think the Dane hath strangely wrought in our good English Nobles, for those whom I never could get to taste good liquor now follow the fashion and wallow in brutish delights." Sir John makes a great deal of fun in this letter at the expense of his betters, but of course exaggerated. "The Entertainment and show went forward, and most of the Presenters went backward or fell down, wine did so occupy their upper chambers. Now did appear in rich dress Hope, Faith and Charity; Hope did assay to speak, but wine rendered her endeavours so feeble, that she withdrew, and hoped the King would excuse her brevity. Faith was then all alone, for I am certain she was not joyned with Good Works, and left the Court in a staggering condition. Charity came to the King's feet, and seemed to cover the multitude of sins her sisters had committed; in some sorte she made obeysance and brought giftes, but said she would return home again, as there was no gift which Heaven had not already given his Majesty. She then returned to Hope and Faith, who were both sick and spewing in the lower hall." So much for a Danish feast!"

In the meantime great preparations were making at Edinburgh and Leith for receiving the King and Queen in a suitable manner, and amongst others is the following curious specimen of the customs of these days, and the state of his Majesty's finances. The Lord Provost and Magistrates and Council resolved, that "forswamekill as it is requisite for the honour of the toun, that sum honourabill propyne be maid and gevin to the Queynis Grace at hir entrie, and knawand that the toun hes ane Jowell of the Kingis Majesties quhich is an taiblett of gold in ane caise with ane dyomond and an emmerawld, lyand in the hands of Alexander Clerk of Balbyrnie, to the toun's behuif, in plege of foure thowsand pund; as alswa understands that his Majestie, for to plesure the toun, is content that thai propyne hir Grace with the said Jowell: Thairfore thai haif thocht expedient to reteir the said Jowell furth of the hands of the said

Alexander Clerk, and he delyverand the samin to gif ane sufficient discharge thairof. And therafter to propyne the samin to his Majestie, and to repose thameselffis upour his Gracis guid will for the payment of the said sowme, for the quhilk the samen is layet in plege."

Their arrival is thus noticed by David Moysie in his Memoirs:—" His Majestie with the Quenis Grace arryvit at Leithe upone the morne at nicht, being the first of Maij 1590, and remainit in the Kingis work* theare, till the sext day of the samyn monethe, that the palace of Halyrudhous wes maid redy. They wer met command out of the boit be the Duik of Lenox, Lord Hammiltoun, Erle Bothuell, and a great number of the nobilitie, with sum honest† men of Edenburgh.

"There come with the King and Quenis Majesties, the Admirall of Denmark Calipeir, Monke the Captoune of Elsinburgh, with sundrie utheris noblemen of the realme, and besydis that a xxx or fourtie personis in goldin chenyeis of guid faschioun. The number of the haill trayne wes ijexxiij personis, quhilkis wer all interteined be the King and noblemen of Scotland, and bancketted daylie. They were j^m and twa e merkis everie day for ther furnischingis during the tyme of thair remaining."

The ceremony of the royal reception was attended with all the state and pageantry usual on such occasions, and has been particularly described in various works at the time, both in prose and verse. This was followed by a coronation, with much feasting, banqueting, hunting and other amusements in different parts of the country.

The King's amusements seem to have been chiefly directed to hunting, riding, "schuting at the buttis," and "playing at cairts." Hunting was his great delight, and in that the Queen occasionally partook, at least in shooting and hawking, but the King's passion for hunting was so strong as to lead him sometimes even to forget affairs of state for it, and his enemies to lampoon and scoff at him; as an illustration of that, may be here noticed a very good piece of wit played off against him after his progress to London. It is told in a letter from Edmond Lascelles to the Earl of Shrewsbury, dated November 7, 1604. "Thear is no newes heare but a reasonable preaty jeast is spoken that happened at Royston. Theare was one of the King's speciall hounds caled Jowler missing one day. The King was much displeased that he was wanted; notwithstanding went a-hunting. The next day, when they weare on the feild, Jowler came in amongst the rest of the hounds; the King was told of him, and was very glad, and loking on him, spied a paper about his neck, and in the paper was written "Good Mr. Jowler, we pray you speake to the King (for he hears you every day, and so doth he not us) that it will please his Majestie to go back to London, for els the country wilbe undoon: all our provition is spent already, and we are not able to intertayne him longer."

^{*} The Old Custom House in after times, situate in Berners Street.

[†] The term used for citizens or corporation men.

With reference to the Queen's hunting and shooting, several of her letters to the King speak of her deers being preserved, of wishing to see her jerfalcons fly, &c.; and on 1st August 1613 Mr. Chamberlain writes Sir Dudley Carleton:—" The King is in progress, and the Queen gone, or going after. At their last being at Theobald's, which was about a fortnight since, the Queen, shooting a deer, mistook her mark, and killed Jewel, the King's most special and favourite hound: at which he stormed exceedingly awhile; but after he knew who did it he was soon pacified, and with much kindness wished her not to be troubled with it, for he should love her never the worse, and the next day sent her a diamond worth L.2000 as a legacy from his dead dog."—(Jewell.)

In the King's progress to London he hunted at various of the seats he visited, and used to complain when interrupted by the crowd or the persons of high rank and of office who paid their respects to him, that he would have more pleasure in hunting if they would only cease to hunt him. The

Londoners were so anxious to humour his Majesty's love for the chase, that Saville, in his account of the King's progress, says, "From Stamford Hill to London was made a traine with a tame deare, with such twinings and doubles that the hounds could not take it faster than his Majestie proceeded: yet still, by the industrie of the huntsman and the subtiltie of him that made the traine in a full-mouthed crie all the way, neuer farther distant than one close from the highway whereby his Highnesse rid, and for the most part directly against his Majestie, whom, together with the whole companie, had the lee winde from the hounds, to the end they might the better perceue and judge of the vniformitie in the cries."

The King was very fond of archery, in which art, and in golf, he caused his sons the Princes to be practised as soon as they were of suitable age for it. The cards were also much played at by the King and Queen, in which "Sandie Maeulloch" seems to have been the favourite companion, and many an entry appears in the treasury accounts for money lost by the King to Sandie, when "schuting at the buttis," and for sums lost both by the King and Queen to him when "playing at the cairtis."

One of the most whimsical amusements of the King is described by Sir Anthony Weldon after his arrival in London:—" After the King supped he would come forth to see pastimes and fooleries, in which Sir Edward Zouch, Sir George Goring, and Sir John Finit were the cheife and Master Fools, (and surely the fooling got them more than any other's wisdome) sometimes presenting David Droman and Archer Armstrong the King's foole, on the back of other fools, to tilt one another till they fell together by the cares; sometimes they performed antick-dances. But Sir John Millicent, (who was never known before) was commended for notable fooling, and was indeed the best extempore foole of them all."

These pastimes or fooleries were the taste of the times, and probably an introduction from France, where one of the chief amusements at the solemnization of royal visits, or such like occasions, was a tilting in boats, where the tilters were continually getting knocked off the high prow into the water by the wooden spears with which they were armed.

Whether the Queen joined in seeing these sports, is not said, but she was particularly fond of all sorts of dancing, of music, and stage representations, and she, with the ladies of her court, and afterwards with the addition of the Prince and Princess, often figured in masques, as they called them, which were got up at a very considerable expense.

Upon this subject Lady Arabella Stuart, in a letter to Earl Shrewsbury, dated from the Queen's Court at Fulston 8th December 1603, after noticing the arrival of a number of ambassadors, says:—"But out of this confusion of imbassages, will you know how we spend our time on the Queen side? Whilst I was at Winehester theare weare certaine childplayes remembered by the fayre Ladies, viz. 'I pray, my Lord, give me a course in your park,'—'Rise, pig, and go,'—'One penny, follow me,'&c. And when I came to Court they were as highly in request as ever cracking of nuts was. So I was by the Mistress of the Revelles not only compelled to play at I know not what, (for till that day I never heard of a play called Fier) but even persuaded by the princely example to play the childe againe. This exercise is mostly used from ten of the clock at night to two or three in the morning; but that day I made one it began at twilight and ended at supper-time. Theare was an interlude, but not so rediculous (rediculous as it was) as my letter, which I heare conclude."

The play upon words which the King continually practised, was also the custom of the time, and if not introduced, was at any rate kept alive by Ben Jonson. Even when the King grieved for the loss of his dog, as is before mentioned, he could not forego the pun of sending the present of a diamond as the legacy of his dead dog Jewel. At that period this acquirement was a sure step to preferment both at the courts of Elizabeth and of James, and my Lord Herbert, who is described as "the very picture and viva effigies of nobility," is complimented because "he leapes, he daunces, he singes, he gives counterbusses," &c. "Pun and quibble were then in high vogue, and a man was to expect no preferment in that age, either in church or state, who was not a proficient in that kind of wit." Mr. Toby Mathew, dean of Christ Church, was an adept in that way. He left Durham for a benefice of less income "for lack of Grace," as he said, and afterwards became Vice Chancellor of Oxford. A person who had a case before him was very anxious to delay the court for his counsel. "Who is your counsel?" says the Vice Chancellor, "Mr. Leesteed," answers the man; "alas," replied the Vice Chancellor, "no man can stand you in less stead."—" No remedy," adds the other, "necessity has no law." -" Indeed," quoth he, " no more I think has your Chancellor." A man came in great haste to sign a bond very like to be forfeited, saving, "he would be bound if he might be taken in."—" Yes," says the Judge, " I think you will be taken in."—" What is your name?"—" Cox," said the party; "Make him room there," said the Chancellor, "let that Cox come in." The private history of the court abounds with these, one of which, in verse, is not undeserving of notice, which was given to the King when the infant daughter of Lady Pope was presented to him at Halstead on 25th June 1618, holding in her hand, says Dr. Fuller, "this paper of verses:---

" OF THE LADYE POPE'S DAUGHTER, PRESENTED TO THE KING ATT HALSTEED 25TH JUNII 1618.

" Sir, this my litle Mistris here Did nere ascend to Peter's chaire, Nor anye triple Crowne did weare, And yett she is a Pope.

Noe benefice she ever solde

Nor pardon, nor dispenst for golde;

She scarcely is a quarter olde,

And yett she is a Pope.

Noe King her feete did ever kisse,

Nor had worse looke from her then this;

Nor doth she hope

To Saint men with a rope;

And yett she is a Pope.

A female Pope, you'll say, a second Joane,
But sure this is Pope Innocent, or none!"

Proceeding, however, to the subject more immediately connected with these letters, "Quene Anne, oure noble Princes, bure her first sone in the castell of Sterling upon Tyisday the 19th day of Februar (1594) and (he) was baptesit in Sterling be the naymis of Henrie Frederik, and installit Prince of Carrick."

"The 15 day of August (1596) the Queyne was delyverit of a ladie in Falkland, and baptesit be the nayme of Elizabeth."

"Duc Charlis, the King's sone, was borne the 20th day of November (1600), and was baytesit the 23 of December, and installit Duc of Albanie, Marquise of Ormont, and Erle of Rosse."

The notice of the other children is not called for, the letters now presented being those of the above three, and chiefly during the time of their education. Vast ceremonies and expenses attended the occasions of births and baptisms, of which Sir Dudley Carleton's letter to Mr. Winwood is a true picture, and as afterwards appears in the treasurer's books. "Here is much adoe about the Queen's lying down, and great suit made for offices, of carrying the white staff, holding the back of the chair, door-keeping, cradle-rocking, and such like gossip's tricks, which you should understand much better than I." And Mr. Samuel Calvert writes, "The Queen expects delivery within a month. There is great preparation of nurses, midwives, rockers, and other officers, to the number of forty or more."

The baptism of Prince Henry Frederick was solemnized with the greatest pomp at Stirling Castle, at which ambassadors attended from almost.

all the courts of Europe, the particulars of which have been given in a publication of the time. The invitations to the nobility and gentry were signed by the King, and the parties are respectively desired also "to haist in sic quick stuff as ye haif in reddines and may spair to the support of the charges, that the venneson and wyld foull, as it may be haill callour about the day of the solempnitie." There are also preserved in the accounts of the Lords High Treasurers of Scotland a variety of warrants and precepts of payment for furnishings upon this as well as other occasions, obligingly communicated to me by Mr. Macdonald, a member of the Club, and which are given as an appendix to this prefatory notice.

The death of Queen Elizabeth, which took place on the 24th March 1603, led to many important changes. King James had kept up a private correspondence with several persons at the Court of Elizabeth, and amongst these was Lady Scroope, to whom he sent a sapphire ring by Sir James Fullerton, which it was agreed she was to return by a special messenger, as the token by which the King would know that the Queen had certainly expired. Lady Scroope was the sister of Sir Robert Carey, who became himself the messenger, and travelled on horseback with extraordinary speed. The Queen died on Thursday morning, he reached Berwick on Saturday, and the same evening arrived at Holyroodhouse, and thus describes his reception:—

"The King was newly gone to bed by the time I knocked at the Gate. I was quickly let in and carried up to the King's Chamber. I kneeled by him and saluted him by his title of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland. Hee gave mee his hand to kisse, and bade me welcome. After he had long discoursed of the manner of the Queen's sicknesse and of her death, he asked what Letters I had from the Councill? I told him none, and acquainted him how narrowly I escaped from them. And yet I had brought him a blue Ring from a faire Lady that I hoped would give him assurance of the truth that I had reported. He tooke it, and looked upon it, and said 'It is enough, I know by this you are a true messenger.' The Lords of the Council sent off their despatch on 25th March intimating the Queen's death, and requesting his Majesty's presence in London."

The King made great despatch in complying with this call. He was proclaimed at Edinburgh on 31st March, and upon Sunday 3d April went to church, and after sermon addressed the people, who were much moved at his leaving them, and told them that though he was now constrained to do so, he would shortly return and do all he could to serve them. On 5th April the King left Edinburgh, which is thus noticed in Dugdale's Time Triumphant, "let me tell you, by the way, the joy was not so great in England by the English to fetch him as the sorrow was in Scotland of the Scots to leave him, and that was more confounding to their joyes then the rest, the parting betwixt the Queene and him in the open streete, in the full eye of all his subjects, who spent teares in aboundance to behold it."

His departure was so sudden, and his hurry so great, that he had no opportunity of seeing his sons the Princes, and in consequence he wrote to Prince Henry, (who was then in his tenth year) the following letter, the original of which is preserved in the British Museum, Harl. MS. 6986.

"My Sonne, That I see you not before my pairting impute it to this great occasion, quhairin tyme is sa preciouse, but that shall, by Goddis grace, be recompencid by youre cumming to me shortlie, and continuall residence with me ever after; let not this newis make you proude or insolent, a King's sonne and heire was ye before, and na maire are ye yett; the augmentation that is heirby lyke to fall unto you, is but in eaires and heavie burthens; be thairfore merric but not insolent; keepe a greatnes but sine fastu; be resolute, but not willfull; keepe youre kyndnes, but in honorable sorte; choose nane to be your playe fellowis but thaime that are well borne; and, above all things, give never good countenance to any but according as ye shall be informed that they are in estimation with me; looke upon all Englishemen that shall cum to visite you as upon voure loving subjectis, not with that ceremonie as towardis straingeris, and yett with suche hartines as at this tyme they deserve: this Gentleman outloon this bearare accompanies is worthie and of guide ranke, and nou my familiare servitoure; use him thairfore in a maire hamelie louing sorte nor otheris. I sende you herewith my booke laitlie prentid, studdie and profite in it as ye wolde deserve my blessing, and as thaire can na thing happen unto you quhairof ve will not finde the generall grounde thairin, if not the nerrie particulaire pointe touched, sa mon ye levell euerie mannis opinions or aduyses unto you as ye finde thaime agree or discorde with the reulis thaire sett down, allowing and following thaire aduyses that agrees with the same, mistrusting and frowning upon theime that aduyses you to the contraire; be diligent and earnist in youre studdies, that at your meeting with me, I maye praise you for your progresse in learning. Be obedient to youre maister for youre awin weill, and to procure my thankis, for in reverencing him ye obeye me and honoure yourself. Fairwell. Your louing Father,

JAMES R.

The expenses of the King's journey to London appears, from an authenticated document to have amounted to L.10,752. The expenses of Queen Elizabeth's funeral, were L.17,498.

The King had given the charge of Prince Henry to the Earl of Mar, which was afterwards the cause of some disquietude between the King and Queen, and incensed her greatly against the Earl. The King's letter bears, "Because in the surety of my son consisteth my surety, and I have concredited to yow the charge of his keeping upon the trust I have of your honesty: this I command you out of my own mouth, being in the company of those I like otherwise, for any charge or necessity that can come from me, you shall not deliver him. And in case God call me at any time, see that neither for the Queen nor Estates their pleasure, you deliuer him till he be eighteen, and that he command you himself. This from your assured friend, Striveling, 24th July 1595."

In 1603, when Lord Mar accompanied the King to London, the Prince and Princess were placed under the care of his Countess, with similar instructions. The King had desired the Queen to follow him within twenty days, and the Prince to remain in the meantime at Stirling. The Queen accordingly went there for the Prince, but the Countess refused to deliver him up, which so incensed and distressed the Queen, that she was seized with a fever. The Duke of Lennox was sent from London with a warrant to receive the Prince, and give him to the Queen; but still the Queen was not satisfied, and wrote in very strong terms to the King of the dishonour done to her, and insisted upon public reparation, by the punishment of the Earl of Mar and his servants. The King, in reply, informed her by the messenger "that she would act wisely to forget the resentment she nourished against the Earl, and thank God for the peaceable possession which they had obtained of these kingdoms, which, next to God's goodness, he ascribed to the last negotiation of his Lordship in England." The Queen, however, afforded a specimen of her temper on this occasion, and with the utmost fury replied, "she could rather have wished never to see England than to be obliged for it to the Earl."

Connected with this subject, and showing the continuation of the Queen's bad temper, are the two following letters, which, although printed by Lord Hailes, seem deserving of being here added. The first is a superscribed letter of the King's to the Earl of Mar, Lord High Treasurer of Scotland.

"Right Trusty, and well-beloved Cousin and Counsellor, we greet you right hartely well. Having understood as well by your awin declaration made to the Counsell, which yee desyred should by them be signified unto us as by your owne letter, upon your dewty and allegeance that some of our subjects had an intention to have taken our dearest Son the Prince, if he had come from Sterling to the Torwood, and considering the same to be a purpose of no little consequence, that it cannot be let pass, but meryting deu tryall and condigne punishment, which cannot be well prosequited except yee come hither in personne to give us up the names of the persons who should have been of the said consperacy, that we may thereafter proceed in their tryall. It is therefore our will that yee faill not all excuses sette aside to addresse yourself hither in all possible diligence to the effect foresaid; for seeing yee have sette downe the accusation so clearly, wee intend to proceede with no less care in the tryall and punishment thereof.

As for our letter sent by you to our dearest Bed-fellow, although you have done nothing in the not delyvery thereof but according to our direction; yet, since the contents thereof are not of so great consequence as they are particulare and not fitte to come in every man's hands, it is our will that, for the better satisfaction, ye delyver the same to any of the Counsell to be given to her, and disposed upon as she pleaseth, in ease she continew in that wilfulness, as she will not heare your credite, nor receive the same from your own handes.

In all other things concerning the transporting of our Sone, yee shall dispose yourself (according as our Cousin the Duke of Lennox will particularly acquaint you) to that which is our leasure, and advise with him earefully upon our honour and his surety, to whose sufficiency we committing the rest, and looking for yourself in all haste, we bid you farewell. From our Palace at Greenwich, the 13th of May 1603."

The following letter to the Queen is without date—it is holograph of the King, and must be the one alluded to in the above letter to the Earlof Mar.

[&]quot; MY HAIRTE,

[&]quot;Immediatelie before the resaite of your lettir I was purposed to have written unto you, and that without any greate occasion except for freeing myself at your handis from the imputation of seveareness, but now youre lettir has gevin more maitter to wryte, although I take small delyte to meddle in so unpleasant a proces. I wonder that nather your long knowledge of my nature, nor my laite earniste purgation unto you can cure you of that rooted erroure that any living darre speak or inform me in any wayes to your prejudice, or yett that ye can think thaire youre unfriendis that are true-servantis to me. I can say no more but proteste upon the peril of my salvation and damnation, that nather the Erle of Marr nor any flesh living ever informed me that ye was upon any Papish or Spanish course, or that ye hadde any other thouchtes but a wrong conceaved opinion that he had more interest in youre Sone, or wolde not deliver him unto you, nather does he farther charge the Noblemen that was with you thaire, but that he was informed that some of thaime thocht by force to have assisted you in the taking my Sonne out of his handis; but as for any other Papiste or forrine practise, by God he doeth not so much as alleadge it: thairefore he says he never will presume to accuse them, since it may happen well to importe your offence; and thairfore I say over agane, leave these froward womanlie apprehensions, for, I thank God, I carrie that love and respecte unto you quhich by the law of God and nature I ought to do to my wyfe and mother of my children, but not for that ye are a King's dauchter, for quhither ye waire a King's or a cook's dauchter ye must be all alike to me, being once my wyfe. For the respect of your honorable birthe and decente I married you, but the love and respecte I now beare you is because that ye are my married wyfe, and so partaker of my honoure as of my other fortunes. I beseache you excuse my rude plainness in this; for casting up of your birthe is a needless impertinent argument to me. God is my witness, I ever preferred you to all my bairnes, much more then to any subjecte; but if you will ever give place to the reports of everie flattering sicophant that will perswade you that when I account well of an honest and wise servant for his true faithful service to me, that it is to compare or prefere him to you, then will nather ye or I be ever at reste or peace. I have, according to my promise, coppied so much of that plotte quhairof I wrote unto you in my last, as did concern my Sonne and you, quhich herein is inclosed, that ye may see I wrote it not without cause, but I desyre it not to have any Secretarys than your self. As for your dool made concerning it, it is utterlie impertinent at this time, for sic reasons as the bearer will show unto you, quhom I have likewise commandit to impairte dyvers other points unto you, which, for fear of wearieing your eyes with my rugged hande, I have herein omitted praying God, my hairte, to preserve you and all the bairnes, and sende me a blythe meeting with you, and a couple of thaime. Your awin

xxxiii

The Queen almost immediately set off to London with the children, and was afterwards reconciled to the Earl on their arrival at Windsor; an act of Council approved of his conduct, and discharged him from his trust, as no longer necessary, with many thanks and compliments, and various honours were conferred upon him for his services.

Prince Charles was entrusted to the care of the Lord President Fyvie, and was of a very weakly constitution. Sir Robert Carey says in his narrative, "When I was at Norham God put it into my mind to go to Dunfermling to see the King's second son. I found him a very weak child." And upon 30th May 1603 Lord Fyvie writes, "Your Sacred Majesteis maist nobill sone, Duke Chairles continewis (praisit be God) in guid health, guid courage, and loftic minde, althoght zit weake in bodic, is beginnand to speik sum wordis far better as yet off his minde and tongue nor off his bodic and feite. Bot I hope in God he sall be all weill and Prencelie, wordie of your Majestie as his Grace is jugit be all werye like in lineamentis to your Royall person."

Sir Robert Carey adds the following in his memoirs—" The Duke was past four years old when he was first delinered to my wife; he was not able to go, nor scant stand alone, he was so weak in his joints, and especially his ankles, insomuch as many feared they were out of joint; yet God so blessed him both with health and strength, that he proved daily stronger and stronger. Many a battle my wife had with the King, but she still prevailed. The King was desirons that the string under his tongue should be cut, for he was so long beginning to speak, as he thought he would never have spoke. Then he would have him put in iron boots, to strengthen his sinews and joints; but my wife protested so much against them both, as she got the victory, and the King was fain to yield. My wife had the charge of him from a little past four till he was almost eleven years old, in all which time he daily grew more and more in health and strength, both in body and mind, to the amazement of many that knew his weakness when she first took charge of him."

The King's rule seems to have been to require occasional specimens of his children's progress in their education by letters, (especially about the new year), written in the languages they were studying at the time; and accordingly most of the letters that form the bulk of the facsimiles, are of that description. No one can look on these without satisfaction, although the Prince only tells us, "I learne to decline substantiues and adjectives," and the grandson, that "I can say Nominativo hie, hee, hoe, and all 5 declensions, and a part of pronomen and a part of verbum. I have two horses alive that can goe up my staires, a black horse and a Chesnut horse." Those of the Princess Elizabeth, afterwards Queen of Bohemia, are not less interesting, and those of the Elector become so merely from his having been her husband, for otherwise they are of little importance. In her Italian letters the Princess has successfully imitated the Italian hand, and one of them in particular is quite beautiful both for the hand writing and the eloquence of the style and the language in which her grateful sentiments towards her father are conveyed.

These letters were not passed over by the King as mere matter of form, of which one very good example may be observed in regard to a letter of Prinee Henry addressed to the King on 1st January 1603-4, which is certainly a very pretty specimen of his writing, and evinees a most remarkable progress in penmanship from his previous half printed half written one signed Henry Stewart. It did not escape the King's penetration, and his letter of chastisement, which is printed in Nichol's Progresses, will better speak the King's mind than any other words can express.

"My Sonne, I am glad that by youre letter I may persave that ve make some progresse in learning, althoch I suspecte ye have rather written than dyted it, for I longe to rassaue a letter from you that mave be quhollie yours, as well maitter as forme, as wellformid by youre minde as drawin by youre fingers, for ye maye remember that in my Booke to you I warne you to bewaire with that kynde of witte that mave flye out at the end of youre fingers, not that I comende not a faire hande wrytting, sed hoc facito illud non omittito, and the other is multo magis præcipuum; but nothing will be impossible for you if ye will onlie remember two rewils, the one ande semper in all vertuouse actions; truste a litle more to your owin strenth, and awaye with childish bashfullnes audaces fortuna jurat timidosque repellit; the other is my old ofte-repeatid rewle unto you, quhat ever ye are about hoe age. I am also glaide of the discouerie of youe litle counterfitte wenche. I praye God ye maye be my aire in suche discoueries; ye have ofte hearde me saye that most miracles nou-a-dayes proues but illusions, and ye maye see by this hou waire Judgis should be in trusting accusations without an exacte tryall, and lykewayes hou easiele people are inducid to truste wonders; lett her be kept fast tell my commyng, and thus God blesse you, my Sonne."

Henry was a Prince of the highest promise; he was the idol of the nation, and his death was received as the announcement of a national misfortune. Various authors have recorded his qualities by histories of his life, and by lamentations upon his death, and his letters, published and unpublished, are so numerous as to make it endless to allude to them. His studies were various and comprehensive, and his athletic exercises not less so. In some of the last he indulged to excess, and of this Sir Charles Cornwallis, in "A Discourse of the Most Illustrious Prince Henry, written in 1626," pointedly complains. "His other exercises were dancing, leaping, and, in times of yeare fit for it, learning to swimme, at sometimes walking fast and farre, to accustome and enable himselfe to make a long march when time should require it; but most of all at Tennis play, wherein, to speake the truth, which in all things I especially affect, he neither observed moderation nor what appertained to his dignity and person, continuing oftimes his play for the space of three or foure houres, and the same in his shirt, rather becoming an artesau than a Prince, who in things of that nature are onely to affect comelinesse, or rather a kinde of carelessnesse in shew, to make their activities seeme the more naturall, then a laborious and toiling industry."

In Strutt's sports the following anecdote is told of him. "While the Prince was playing at Goff, his Schoolmaster (whose ferula had likely been in contact with the royal palm) stood talking with another, and marking not his Highmess, warning him to stand further off; the Prince, thinking he had gone aside, lifted up his Goff Club to strike the Ball: mean time one standing bye said to him, "Beware that you hit not Master Newton," wherewith he, drawing back his hand, said, "Had I done so I had but paid my debts."

Master Newton was very much esteemed by the Prince, as the following letter, dated Richmond, Jan. 23, 1605-6, shows:—"Sir, Your Majestie commanded me to wryte to you when any fitt occasion were offred, and now hearing that upon the death of the Archbishop of Yorke there are many sutars for preferment I have taken the boldnesse to be a suter also for my Master. Not because I doubt that your Majestie is unmynd-

xxxvii

full of your promesse made at Hampton Court, that if he should stay so long as till the Archbishop were dead, he should have the Deanry of Durham; but to shew the desyre I have to do good to my Master, I have learned, among other good lessons, this out of Pibrae:

Tu ne scaurois d'assez ample salaire Recompenser celny qui t'a soignè En ton enfance et qui t'a enseignè A bien parler et sur tout à bien faire.

and I know perfytely that my master's hope these two yeeres past hath rested altogether upon the expectation of this Deanry; and so hoping that your Majestie will both accept of my humble sute, and excuse my boldnesse, I kisse your Majesties hands. Your Majestie's most dutifull and obedient sone,

HENRY."

This application could not be resisted, and Master Newton was installed Dean of Durham on 27th September 1606. Having acquired a fortune he afterwards resigned the Church, and was created a baronet on 2d April 1620.

Another specimen of his kind consideration and zeal for investigation is to be found in a letter to "his dear freind Sir John Harrington in 1609:

—My Good Fellow,—I have here sent you certaine matters of anciente sorte, which I gained by searche in a musty vellome booke in my Father's closet, and as it hathe great mentione of youre ancestry, I hope it will not, meet your displeasure. It gave me some paines to reade, and some to write also, but I have a pleasure in over-reaching difficult matters. When I see you (and let that be shortlie) you will find me your better at Tennis and Pike. Good Fellow, I write your friend, Henry. Your Latin Epistle I much esteem, and will at leisure give answer to." The book here alluded to was "An account of the Barons of Harrington alias Havrington."

The two brothers had a strong attachment to each other, of which their letters, published by Birch, Ellis, and others, are the best indications. None of these are in Sir James Balfour's collection, which is confined to those addressed to the King. Two letters from Prince Charles to Prince Henry may be very appropriately given here out of numbers of others which there is pleasure to dwell on if it was not for swelling this introduction to too great an extent with articles that have been already printed. The first of these is probably even earlier than the one of which there is a facsimile given, beginning "Sweet, Sweet Father." They are both signed York, and he was created to that title when he was only four years old. The letter to the King above alluded to was to appearance the first specimen of his penmanship, and cost him so much labour, that the following letter to his brother is only signed by him:—

"Sweet, sweet Brother, I thank you for your Letter, I will keep it better than all my graith; and I will send my pistolles by Maister Newton. I will give anie thing I have to yow, both horss and my bookes, and my pieces and my cross bowes, or anie thing that you would haive. Good Brother, loove me, and I shall ever loove and serve yow. Your looving Brother to be commanded,

The next is entirely his handwriting, and follows various letters about his amusements, horses, dogs, hunting, &c.

"Sir, Pleas your H. I doe keep your haires in breath, (and I have very good sport). I doe wish the King and you might see it. So, longing to see you, I kisse your hand, and rest yours to be commanded,

YORK.

" My Mayde's service to you. To his Hienesse."

The brothers and sister were equally attached to each other, and when the Palsgrave arrived, and the arrangements were proceeding for the marriage of Princess Elizabeth, Prince Henry evinced the utmost kindness upon all occasions, and though then in a dving state, exerted himself over much in his attentions to one whom he wished but never lived to see married to his sister, "Yet was he wonderfully busic in providing and giving order for every thing belonging to his care for his Sister's Marriage, advancing the same by all meanes possible, keeping also his Highnesse the Palsgrave company as much as conveniently he could, together with Count Henrie his Excellencie Grave Maurice his brother whom he also much honoured and esteemed." The Mouday of the week in which he died, when intermission of his pain allowed him, he "did rise and put on his cloaths, playing at eards that day and the next also with his brother the Duke of Yorke and Count Henry." On Thursday evening," says Sir Charles Cornwallis, "appeared a fatall signe about two hours or more within the night, bearing the colours and show of a rainbow, which hung directly crosse over Saint James's House. It was first perceived about seven a clocke at night. which I myselfe did see, which divers others looking thereupon with admiration, continuing untill past bed-time, being no more seene. This night was unquiet, and he rested ill."

"To tell you that our Rising Sun is set," writes the Earl of Dorset to Sir Thomas Edmonds (23d November 1612) "ere searce he had shone, and that all our glory lies buried, you know and lament as well as we, and more truly, or else you were not a man and sensible of this Kingdom's loss." He frequently called David! David! but when Sir David Murray came he was unable to speak to him. Mr. Chamberlain writes Sir Dudley Carleton (12th November) "The Lady Elizabeth is much afflicted with this loss, and not without good cause; for he did extraordinarily affect her, and during his sickness enquired after her, and the last words he spake in good sense, they say, were "Where is my dear sister?" She was desirous to visit him, and went once or twice in the evening disguised for that purpose, but could not be admitted, because his disease was doubted to be contagious. He meant to have conducted her on her way into Germany, to the uttermost bounds of the States dominions, which purpose he kept very secret; and it came abroad but since his death."

No less than thirty-two publications came out upon the death of this amiable and accomplished Prince, under all sorts of names, in prose and verse, from the simple Elegy and Lamentation to the "Lachrymæ Lachrymarum, or the Spirit of Teares distilled for the on-tymely death of the incomparable Prince, Panaretus."

Prince Charles officiated as chief mourner, and the obsequies were attended by "Prince Frederick, Count Palatine of the Rhein," (as he was now called) "Count Henry de Nassaw," and all their attendants.

Time would not stop, and the Palsgrave could not tarry, therefore the arrangements for the marriage of the Princess Elizabeth followed very shortly. The Queen had been, at first, very averse to the match, although it was fixed that the Palsgrave was soon to be made King of Bohemia. Amidst the gossip of the day "an idle story asserts that she used to call her daughter, in disdain of so inferior an alliance, "Goody Palsgrave." However the Queen's opinion underwent a great change, for, according to a letter in Birch's MSS. "the Queen doth discover her liking of this match over all others; and for the more honouring of it she exceedeth the King in new liveries that she giveth to her servants, and caresseth the Palsgrave whensoever he cometh to her, as if he were her own son." Mr. Chamberlain writes his opinion on the subject to Mrs. Alice Carleton. "On Tuesday I took occasion to go to Court because I had never seen the Palsgrave, nor the Lady Elizabeth near hand for a long time. I had my full view of them both, but will not tell you all I think, but only this, that he owes his Mistress nothing if he were a King's son, as she is a King's Daughter. The worst is, methinks he is much too young and small-timbered to undertake such a task."

Great spectacles, fireworks, with numerous masks, public feasts and rejoicings preceded and followed the solemnity of the marriage, which are described in eleven publications of the time. The bride and bridegroom after the ceremony proceeded to dine in state at the new banqueting house, with the prince, the ambassadors, and all the lords and ladies; "and then fell to dancing, masking, and revelling, according to the custome of such assemblies, which continued all the day, and part of the night in great pleasure." And it appears that "the ringers of St. Margaret's were paid 2s. 6d. at the Lady Elizabeth her Grace's marriage." Her portion paid to the Palsgrave was L.40,000, and the expense, including her transport to Flushing was L.53,294. Of this there was no less than L.4800 "paid to the treasurer of the Navie, for the Navall fight performed on the Thames, and L.2880 for the fireworks on the Thames,"

Pienics have been claimed as a recent introduction, but these would appear to have been in ordinary practice during the reign of King James. One of these is described in a letter by Sir Philip Manwaring from Newmarket to the Earl of Arundel:—" The Prince his birth-day hathe beene solemnized heare by those few Marquises and Lords which found themselves heare; and to supplie the want of the Lords, Knights and Squires were admitted to a consultation, wherein it was resolved that such a number should meate at Gameges, and bring every man his dish of meate. It was left to their owne choyces what to bring; some strove to be substantiall, some curios, and some extravagant. Sir George Goring's invention bore away the bell; and that was foure huge brawny piggs, pipeinge hott, bitted and harnised with ropes of sarsiges, all tyed to a monstrous bag-pudding."

Neither the King nor the Queen appear to have been at this party, though the humour of it accords very much with the Queen's taste. She used to go to see the bears and lions baited in the tower, with the Prince, the Duke of Brunswick, and others, whether the King was present or not; and the King, who, by the bye introduced horse-racing into England also used occasionally to attend the cock-pit, for all these sort of things received his countenance.

Amidst all her gaities the Queen never lost sight of her own interest, and other specimens of her temper, than that she exhibited against the Earl of Mar, occasionally occur. James was always attentive to her, and sometimes gave her pretty pointed lectures about checking her temper, and the jealousies she was seized with against the most faithful of his servants, in viewing any particular attention paid to them by the King as indicating a preference to herself. James had recourse to a very effectual remedy, as appears by the pen of Archbishop Abbot, who says, "King James had a fashion that he would never admit any to nearness about himself, but such ane one as the Queen should commend unto him, and make some suit on his behalf; that if the Queen afterwards being ill-treated, should complain of this dear one, he might make his answer: 'It is long of yourself, for you were the party that commended him unto me.' Our old Master took delight in things of this nature."

When on his progress to London from Edinburgh, he wrote the Privy Council, 12 April, 1603; "As we do intend to bring into this Realme as soone as possibly we can, both the Queene our Wyfe, and our two elder Children, which be able to abyde the travaill, we must recommend to your consideration the sending hither of such Jewells and other furnyture, which did appertaine to the late Queene, as you shall thinke to be meet for her estate; and also coaches, horses, litters, and whatsoever els you shall thinke meet." And in another letter from Topeliff, on 15 April, he says: "Touching the Jewells to be sent for our Wyfe, our meaning is not to have any of the principal Jewells of State to be sent so soone nor so farre of, but only such as by the opynion of the Ladyes attendant about the late Queene, our Syster, you shall fynde to be meet for the ordynarie apparelling and ornament of her; the rest may come after, when shee shall be nearer hand."

One of the Queen's letters acknowledges the receipt of jewells before leaving Scotland.

Immediately upon Queen Ann's arrival at Edinburgh, "Upone the xij day of Maij, the Admirall, accumpanied with sundrie Denssis, passed to Falkland, Dumfermling, and Linlithgow, to tak seasing of the thrie lordschipis for the Quenis dowrie," and no sooner did she reach London than the subject was also taken into consideration, for, Sir Thomas Edmonds writes: "The Queene's joynture is nowe allso passing, weh, as I understand. amounteth in land to the vallue of L.5000 yearelie, weh is sayd to be as much, or rather more than hath been grawnted to anie former Kinges Wief, and yett it is meant to enlarge the same pentions and other commendams." And Mr. Crewe writes—" There is a joynture now agreed upon hear for the Queene, ready for the seale, of L.5000 land by yeare of ould rented Crown land, chosen by her Auditor and Officers in advantageable land for her with little exception; and a provision in the booke inabling her to make leases for 21 yeares; and this joynture to be confirmed at the next Parliament." Lodge, by way of comparison, has given the particulars of "The jointure of Queen Katherine, daughter of Spain, wife to Henry the Eighth, King of England," and the following memoranda from a rough copy in the hand-writing of Lord Cecil:-

- "The jbincture between James, K. of Scotland, and Cicely, d. to Ed. IV., —Dutchy of Rochsey,—Erle of Carvill.—The K. gave with his daughter 20,000 marks.
- "Q. Marie's joincture with Phi. K. of Spain, was 60,000 livres of France. (Every livre is 20 stivers, every stiver is a peny; 40 gros to the pound.)
- "Ch. K. of Sp. Emp., and Mary, daghter to K. Henry VII. He gave 250,000.
- "Charles the VI. had a wyfe called Isabell, who had for her dower 12,000 franks.

"Catherin wyfe to H. the Vth had but 10,000 pownds Tournois."

The amount was considered satisfactory at the time it was granted, but afterwards Sir Ralph Winwood, dated London, February 13, writes Mr. Chamberlain: "She (the Queen) hath been somewhat melancholy of late, about her joynture that was not fully to her liking; whereupon, to give her contentment, there is L.300 a-year added to it out of the Customes, with a donative of L.20,000 to pay her debts.

Ann entered very readily into King James' whims, and various of her letters regard hunting. She says in one of those now given in facsimile: "I am glayd of soe good appearance of my roes ofspring." In another: "My heart, I desyre your Ma^{tie} to pardon that I have not answered your Ma^{tie} sooner vpon your letters, because I would knowe the truth of the park of Ottelands, as I vnderstand there is niere fortie grossi beastiami of diuers kindes that denours my deere, as I wyll tell your Ma^{tie} at mieting." And in a third: "My heart, I crane pardon that I have not sooner answered your M. letter, you shall not feare the paine in my fingers, you shall finde them will enough for you when you come home. I think it long to see my gerfaulkon flie, which I hope to see when I shall have the honore to kisse your M. handes."

Her great delight was performing in masks and balls with her family and favourite attendants, although circumstances and dress were sometimes whispered about court to be "too much courtezan-like for a Queen." The following letter to the King displays a good deal of humour, and if I am right in the parties and occurrence to which it alludes, (of which I have not the least doubt, as I shall immediately shew,) it is evident she enjoyed a little light talk. The letter is without date, and is one of those of which a facsimile is given.

The Queen writes the King, "Your Maiesteis letter was wellcome to me. I have bin as glad of the faire weather as yourself, and the last parte of your letter yow have guessed right, that I wold laugh—Who wold not laugh—both at the persons and the subject, but more at so well a chosen Mercuric betweene Mars and Venus? You knowe that women can hardly keepe counsell. I humbly desire your M. to tell me how it is possible that I should keepe this secret, that have alreadic tolde it, and shall tell it to as manic as I speake with, and if I were a poete I wold make a song of it, and sing it to the tune of Three fooles well mett."

This letter must have been written in September 1603, and certainly alludes to the Earl of Nottingham, the Lord High Admiral, and the Lady Margaret Stuart as the Mars and Venus, and the King as the Mercury, who took a great interest in these parties. This marriage afforded a great deal of amusement at Court, and was the theme of many of the letters from persons about Court to their friends at a distance. Thus Lady Arabella Stuart writes the Earl of Shrewsbury on 16th September 1603. "My Lo. Admirall is returned from the Prince and Princesse, and either is or wilbe my cousin before incredulous you will believe such incongruities in a Councellour as love maketh no miracles in his subjectes of what degree or age whatsoever."

On 11th September 1603, Sir Thomas Edmonds writes the Earl of Shrewsbury, "Since the tyme that yor L. left us we have whollie spent our tyme in that exercise, (hunting is alluded to) but the Queene remayned at Basing till the King's coming hither, and hath as well entertayned herself with good dansing, which hath brought forth the effectes of a marriage betweene my Lord Admyrall and the Lady Margaret Stuart."

This also gives the probable date and place of the letter to the King, wherein she turns the tables on his Majesty—"As for the blame you charge me with, of lasie writing, I think it rather rests on your self, because you be as sloe in writing as my self," and adds, "I can write of no mirth but of practise of tilting, of riding, of drumming, and of musike, which is all wherewith I am not a little pleased."

The marriage had not then been known, otherwise it would have been too good a joke for her Majesty not to notice. Lord Cecil, however, writes Earl Shrewsbury: "the Earl of Nottingham hath begonn ye Union, for he hath married the Lady Margett Stwart and came up ye morning after to tell ye K. he had wedded his Cosen." And on 24th September 1603 the Earl Worcester also writes the Earl of Shrewsbury. "And now my good Lord, you shall not thinke butt that wee have gallants of 70 yeres that in one night cowld dance himself into a fayr Ladye's favor, for my Lord Admirall is marryed, and greatly bostethe of his acts the first nyght; but the next day he was sike of the ague, but now howlds out very well, saving that my Lady singethe the greateset part of the nyght, whether to bring him asleepe or to keepe him awake, I leave to your Lo. jndgement, that ar cuninger then I in those matters."

Another marriage of two favorites, that of Sir Philip Herbert with the Lady Susan Vere, engaged the particular attention of the Court. It took place on St. John's day, the new year 1604-5, and the Queen's Mask was given on Twelfth-night, in which the Queen and her attendants performed, and for which L.3000 had been advanced by the Exchequer.

Although it is evident this was not the "three fools well met," alluded to in the Queen's letter, yet the account of it, and the Mask, as extracted from a letter of Sir Dudley Carleton to Mr. Winwood, deserves to be added. He writes in the beginning of January 1604-5, "On St. John's day we had the marriage of Sir Philip Herbert and the Lady Susan performed at Whitehall with all the honour could be done a great favourite. The Court was great, and for that day, put on the best bravery. The Prince and Duke of Holst led the bride to church; the Queen followed her from thence. The King gave her; and she, in her tresses and trinkets, brided and bridled it so handsomely, and indeed became herself so well, that the King said "if he were unmarried he would not give her, but keep her himself." The marriage dinner was kept in the great chamber, where the Prince and the Duke of Holst, and the great Lords and Ladies accompanied the bride. The ambassador of Venice was the only bidden guest of strangers, and he had a place above the Duke of Holst, which the Duke took not well. But after dinner he was as little pleased himself, for, being brought into the closet to retire himself, he was then suffered to walk out his supper unthought of. At night there was a Mask in the hall, which, for conceit and fashion was suitable to the occasion. The actors were the Earl of Pembroke, the Lord Willoughby, Sir Samuel Hays, Sir Thomas Germain, Sir Robert Carey, Sir John Lee, Sir Richard Preston, and Sir Thomas Bager. There was no small loss that night of chaines and jewells, and many great Ladies were made shorter by the skirts, and were very well served that they could keep cut no better. The presents of plate and other things given by the noblemen were valued at 1.2500; but that which made it a good marriage was a gift of the King's of L.500 land for the bride's jointure. They were lodged in the Council Chamber, where the King, in his shirt and night-gown, gave them a reveille matin before they were up, and spent a good time in or upon the bed, chuse which you will believe. No ceremony was omitted of bridecakes, points, garters, and gloves, which have been ever since the livery of the Conrt; and at night there was sewing into the sheet, casting off the bride's left hose, with many other petty sorceries.

New-year's day passed without any solemnity, and the exorbitant Gifts that were wont to be used at that time are so far laid by, that the accustomed present of the purse and gold was hard to be had without asking. The next day the King plaied in the Presence; and as good or ill luck seldom comes alone, the Bridegroom that threw for the king had the good fortune to win L.1000, which he had for his pains; the greatest part was lost by my lord of Cranborne.

"On Twelfth-day we had the Creation of Duke Charles, now Duke of York. The interim was entertained with making Knights of the Bath which was three days' work. They were Eleven in number, besides the little Duke, all of the King's choice. The solemnity of the Creation was kept in the Hall, where first the Duke was brought in, accompanyed with his Knights; then earried out againe, and brought back by Earles in their Robes of the Garter. My Lord Admiral bare him, two others went as Supporters, and six marched before with the ornaments. The patent was read by my Lord Cranborne, and drawn in most eloquent law Latin by Mr. Attorney; but so we have a Duke of York in title but not in substance.

"There was a publick dinner in the Great chamber, where there was one table for the Duke and his Earl's assistants, another for his fellow Knights of the Bath.

"At night we had the Queen's Maske in the Banquetting house, or rather her Pagent. There was a great engine at the lower end of the room, which had motion, and in it were the images of sea-horses, with other terrible fishes, which were ridden by the Moors; the indecorum was, that there was all fish and no water.

"At the further end was a great shell in the form of a skallop, wherein were four seats: on the lowest sat the Queen, with my Lady Bedford, on the rest were placed the Ladies Suffolk, Darby, Rich, Effingham, Ann Herbert, Susan Herbert, Elizabeth Howard, Walsingham and Bevil. Their apparell was rich, but too light and curtezan-like for such great ones. Instead of vizzards, their faces and arms up to their elbows were painted black, which was disguise sufficient, for they were hard to be known: but it became them nothing so well as their own red and white, and you cannot imagine a more ugly sight then a troop of lean-cheeked Moors. The Spanish and Venetian ambassadors were both present, and sate by the King in state; at which Monsieur Beaumont quarrels so extreamly, that he saith the whole Court is Spanish. But by his favour he should fall out with none but himself, for they were all indifferently invited to come as private men to a private sport; which he refusing, the Spanish ambassador willingly accepted, and being there, seeing no cause to the contrary, he put off Don Taxis and took upon him El Senor Embaxadour, wherein he outstript our little Monsieur. He was privately at the first Mask, and sat amongst his men disguised; at this he was taken out to dance, and footed it like a lusty old gallant with his country-woman. He took out the Queen, and forgot not to kiss her hand, though there was danger it would have left a mark on his lips. The night's work was concluded with a Banquet in the Great chamber, which was so furiously assaulted, that down went table and tresses before one bit was touched! They say the Duke of Holst will come upon us with an after-reckoning, and that we shall see him on Candlemas-night in a Mask, as he hath shewed himself a lusty reveller all this Christmas."

The King, when on a visit to Lord St. John, at Bletsoe, 5th August 1608, writes the following extraordinary letter, partly in cipher, to the newly made Lord Treasurer the Earl of Salisbury. The original is in the British Museum, and begins in the usual familiar way in which both the King and Queen used to address him :- "MY LITTIL BEAGILL, Ye and youre fellowis thaire are so proude nou that ye have gottin the gyding againe of a Feminine Conrte in the olde fashon, as I know not hou to deale uith you: ye sitte at youre case and directis all; the newis from all the pairtis of the worlde comes to you in youre chamber, the King's owin resolutions dependis upon youre posting dispatches, and quhen ye list, ye can (sitting on youre bedde-sydes) uith one call or quhisling in youre fist, make him to poste nicte and daye till he come to youre presence. Uell, I know Suffoke is married, and bath also his handis full nou in harbouring that great littell proude man that comes in his chaire; but for youre pairt, maister 10. gho is wanton and uyfeles, I can not but be ialous of youre greatnes with my uyfe; but most of all ame I suspicious of 3, quho is so laitelie fallen in acquaintance uith my uyfe; for besydes that the verrie number of 3 is well liked of by weomen, his face is so amiabill as it is able to intyse, and his fortune hath ever bene to be great with Sho-saintis; but his pairte is foule in this, that never having taken a nyfe to himself in his youth, he cannot nou be content with his graye haires to forbeare ane other mannis nyfe. But for expiation of this sinne, I hoape that ye have all three with the rest of youre societie, taken this daye ane eucharistike cuppe of thankefulnes for the occasion, quhiche fell out at a time quhen ye durst not avon me. And heir hath beene this daye kept the Feaste of King James' deliverie at Saint Johnstonne in S^t Jon's house. All other maitters I referre to the old knave the bearar's reporte. And so faire ye nell."

Whether the King was in joke or earnest is not easy to ascertain, but if the Laird of Dundas had an opinion to give, he probably would have favoured the last, notwithstanding of the lady being so coy to James at the time he past in quietlie with buites and all to her at Upslo, "and myndet to give the Queine a kiss, quhilk she refusit." The causa scientize of Dundas occurred when he was in attendance upon the King and Queen in the Palace at Linlithgow, and really will not tell in print. Suffice it to say, that meeting a female in a dark stair, which was the private access to the King's chamber, something took place that his risible qualities had not been able to subdue by the time he entered, but that the King observed it, and insisted to know the cause and partake in the joke. The laird, thus compelled, told his story, during which both laughed immoderately, but at the concluding description "Our own Ann, by the living God," exclaimed the King, "Dundas, we must have no more of you by that stair again."

All these, however, may be mere jest, for she was at all times attentive to James, and when he had a fall from his horse hunting, or was ill and at a distance, various of her letters show anxiety about him, and a desire to come to visit him. These stories, had there been real impropriety in them, would have prevented Arthur Wilson from giving her the following character.—" She was in her great condition a good woman, not tempted from that height she stood on to embroil her spirit much with things below her, as some busic-bodies do: only giving herself content in her own house, with such recreations as might not make time tedious to her. And though great persons' actions are often pried into, and make envy's mark, yet nothing could be fixed upon her that left any great impression but that she may have engraven upon her monument a character of virtue."

The prejudices of the English against the Scotch were very great at that time, (as in truth they are at the present day), which gave rise to many very gross and scurrilous publications, quite unworthy of notice; but the following poem, published by Ritson in his North Country Chorister. partakes so little of that character, and is withal a fair and clever pasquinade, as to entitle it to notice here.

"Bonny Scot, we all witness can, That England hath made thee a gentleman.

Thy blue bonnet, when thou came hither, Could scarce keep out the wind and weather, But now it is turned to a hat and feather, Thy bonnet is blown the devil knows whither.

Thy shoes on thy feet, when thou eamest from plough, Were made of the hide of an old Scot's cow, But now they are turned to a rare Spanish leather, And decked with roses altogether.

Thy sword at thy —— was a great black blade,
With a great basket hilt of iron made,
But now a long rapier doth hang by his side,
And huffingly doth this bonny Scot ride.
Bonny Scot, we all witness can,
That England hath made thee a gentleman."

The above, though sufficiently pointed, is almost a solitary exception to the discreditable character of the other publications of the day, whose merit were decided by their extent of grossness and of falsehood. This conduct was not confined to the men, for it was both practised and encouraged by the women, and even by ladies of rank, and about Court, of which Lady Clifford affords a specimen in her Diary 1603, "We all went to Tibbald's to se the King, who used my mother and my aunt very graciouslie; but we all saw a great chaunge between the fashion of the Court as it was now and yt in the Queenes, for we were all louzy by sittinge in Sir Thomas Erskine's chamber." Constant quarrels were the consequence, and it was probably one of these that occurred in the Queen's presence, to which she alludes in one of the facsimile letters sent to the King by Sir Roger Aston, wherein she says, "What I have said to Sr Roger is trew: I could not but think it strange that any about your ma^{tic} durst presume to bring neer where your ma^{tic} is, on that had offered me such a publicke scorne, for honore gois befor lyfe." And the postscript adds. "I refarre the rest to S. Roger."

There is no date, but Sir Dudley Carleton's letter to Sir Thomas Parry, 3d July 1603, probably explains what is alluded to, "Here was some squaring at first between our English and Scottish Lords for lodging, and such other petty quarrels, but all is past over in peace. The Lords of Southampton and Grey the first night the Q. came hither, renewed old quarrels, and fell flatly out in her presence. She was in discourse with L. Southampton touching the L. of Essex action, and wondered, as she said, so many great men did so little for themselves; to which L^d Southampton answered, that the Q. being made a party agst them, they were forced to yeald; but if that course had not been taken, there was none of theyr private ennemys with whom only their quarrel was that durst have opposed themselves. This being heard by the L. Grey, he would mantain the contrary party durst have done more than they, upon which he had the lie erebled at him. The Q. bad them remember where they were, and soon after sent them to their lodgings, to which they were committed, with guard upon them. They next day were brought and heard before the Council and condemned to be sent back to the Tower. But soon after the King sent for them, and taking the quarrel upon him, and the wrong and disgrace done to her Majesty, and not exchanged betwixt them, forgave it to make them friends: which was accordingly effected, and they presently set at liberty."

I have found it difficult to confine this introduction to shorter bounds. owing to the vast quantity of curious matter, printed and unprinted, that has come into my view in this investigation; and in order to set limits to it, it becomes necessary to leave out all the correspondence of the King. the Prince Charles, Steenie, and other curious matter connected with the Prince's romantic expedition to Madrid, and his intended marriage with the Infanta, and also the letters between the King and Prince Charles about the right to the Queen's Jewels, &c. In short, I propose to conclude with the King's Progress to Scotland, where, by the introduction of Parish Schools and Parish Registers, he conferred the greatest obligation a country ever lay under to a Sovereign. These were his individual doing. and though they have been the theme of admiration even in the present times, it seems never to have been known to whom the credit of them was due! This introduction will, therefore, close with the 1617; but whilst speaking of the Queen, one other anecdote deserves to be mentioned in justice to her, which occurred in 1618, although it may be considered by the arrangement both out of place and date.

Sir Walter Raleigh presented a petition to the Queen, and it did not pass unattended to by her. His poetical address is of some length, of which the following may be considered sufficient extracts and a fair specimen. In the introductory part,

> O had truth power, the guiltlesse could not fall, Malice winne glorie, or revenge triumphe,— But truth alone can not encounter all.

Mercie is fled to God which mercie made Companion dead, Faith turn'd to pollicye; Friends know not those who site in Sorrow's shade."

He then makes the following pathetic address:-

"Cold walls, to you I speake, but you are senselesse," &c.

"Then unto whom shall I unfold my wrong, Cast doune my teares, or hold up folded hands? To Her to whom remorse does most belong.

To Her who is the first, and maye alone Be justly called the Empresse of the Britannes? Who should have mercye if a Queen have none?

Save those that would have died for your defence! Save him whose thoughts no treason ever tainted!

The Queen interceded strenuously for mercy, as appears by the following letter to the Marquis of Buckingham, published in Hailes Memorials of James I. It is without date.

" Anna R.

"My Kind Dog, If I have any power or credit with you, I pray let me haue a trial of it at this time, in dealing sincerely and earnestly with the King, that Sir Walter Raleigh's life may not be called in question. If you do it, so that the success answer my expectation, assure yourself that I will take it extraordinary kindly at your hands; and rest one that wisheth you well, and desires you to continue still, as you have been, a true servant to your Master."

The Queen's application was not successful, and Sir Walter was beheaded on 29th October 1618, which Aubrey says "was contrived to be on my Lord Mayor's day, (the day after St. Simon and St. Jude) that the pageants and fine shows might avocate and draw away the people from beholding the Tragedic of the gallantest Worthie that England ever bred."

King James had been strongly impressed with the propriety and advantage of an Union between Scotland and England previous to his succession to the latter kingdom, for it was amongst the first of his thoughts after that event. His desire was, to apply a favourite phrase of his, "most vehement" "to sie thame joyne and coalesce togidder in a sinceir and perfyte vnioun, and as two twynis bred in ane bellie love ane another, as no moir twa bot ane estate," as he expresses himself in the following curious letter, addressed to the Lords of the Privy Council of Scotland, never before printed.

"Right trustie and weil-belouit cosinis and counsellouris, We grete you hairtelie wele, whairas it hes now pleasit the gracious goodnes of our God to settle us in peceable and full possessioun of our right to the inheritance of this crowne, preordinat be his goode providence to fall to us in his dew tyme be blude and lineall discent, and that nixt to the solempnitie and ordour of our coronatioun, it has bene alwayes oure intent, according to the custome of this land, to convocat our three esteatis in parliament. boith for establisheing of oure successioun to this imperiall kingdome, and for accomplisheing of sindrie otheris wechtiest affairis necessair for our estate, and necessair at the inauguratioun of princes heir, whilk nochttheles be the prevailing of this infective plague within oure Citie of Lundoun, and the dispersing thairof through a greate parte of this realme, we haif bene forceit to intermitt till now that it hes pleasit God to quenche it in his merey, and be removing of that latt to oppin to us agane the oportunitie to prosequute our first intent sasone as possibillie we can, and for that oure equall ryght to boith the crownes mon neidis affect us with an equall cair to boith thair weillis, and that being now joyned togidder and under ane head, as thay haif bene of lang tyme past in ane religioun and language, and ane commoun habitatioun in ane He disioinit fra the greate continent of the world, Oure princelie cair mon be extendit to sie thame jovne and coalesce togidder in a sinceir and perfyte vnioun, and as two twynis bred in ane bellie, love ane another as no moir twa bot ane estate.

We haif to this effect affixt a parliament within this realme, to convene aboute the tuentie day of Marche nixt, whilk for that it sittis vsuallie a moneth at the least, we think it meitest and will desire you most effectuuslie to lett preceptis be directit in our name for convening of a parliament thair about the tent day of Aprile thairefter, Quhairin it is our expres will that thair be no thing motioned nor treated saulfing the mater of the vnioun allanarlie, quhairof the generall mon be first and putt through, To the whilk we can not well beleve that ony estate or subject of that land can with reasonn refuse his respecting quhat greatnes it importis to our esteate, quhat honour and reputatioun to our name to haif it affected in oure tyme and quhat greate benefeit and perpetuall peace and tranquillitie it mon neidis earie with it to oure haill kingdomes and dominionis, and nixt vnto the voting of the generall, mon follow the chuseing of oure commissionaris for treating and capitulating vpoun the headis of the said vnioun with pouer onlie to reporte to the nixt parliamentis. Quhilkis Commissionaris for that thay mon be mett with equall nomber frome this parliament quhair thay mon be first chosin be reasoun of the prioritie of thair convening, Tharfoir sasone as thay ar nominat yow may expect thair names and styllis tobe send to yow befoir the day of your convening, That yow matche thame for your parte with personis of lyke qualitic and rank, whome we desire tobe directit to come heir to us for keiping of thair meiting in our presence, and consulting with our advise in suche difficulteis and doubtis as may occur during that treaty, disposit to attend vpoun that eirand till suche headis be aggreit vpoun be oure advise, as being putt in forme may be presentit as worthie groundis to boith the parliamentis, and for that boith the parliamentis being affixed at ane tyme it is not possible to us to honnour thame both with oure personall and Royall presence, and that we ar informed that both be practise in our darrest moderis tyme of worthie memorie and be the vse and consuctude of other Cristeane Kingdomis the princes absence at sie tymes hes evir bene suppleit be thair commissioun to some speciall nobleman, for representing of their place and persone induring that solempnitie, and having in our choise preferrit yow oure Chancellir to that effect, as we haif ordanit you oure President, to represent our chanceller during the tyme of our said parliament, we mon desire you thairfoir tobe cairfull to seeke oute the antient recordis of formar parliamentis, and according to the practize you find to haif bene vsed in the lyke, forme your commissioun with warrandis and instructionis necessair for suche ane eirand and send thame heir tobe exped and directit bak to you in tyme for the authorising of quhatsomeuir salbe accordit to and voted in that parliament, be this point of the vnionn our fame and reputationn through the world, oure honnour tobe the workair of it in our tyme, and the vnspeakable benefeit that mon redound thairof to this haill Ile, gois so deiplie in oure consait as in the greatest subject we can putt in our handis, and quhairin our expectationn is, you will extend your greatest cair to do us most memorable and worthie seruice, Sua to your nixt occasioun We committ you to God, frome oure Honnour of Hamptoun courte, this xij of Januair 1604."

The King had very frequently expressed his desire to visit Scotland, and in the course of 1616 that subject became seriously talked of; but there was great difficulty of finding the ways and means of defraying the expenses attendant upon so extensive a Progress, and probably the English jealousy did not incline to its encouragement, as may be fairly concluded from the illiberal and unbecoming insinuations thrown out in the various letters from the English Court and from the officials at the time. Then, as now, the English had no regard for Scotland, further than as it tended to strengthen or benefit themselves; and then, as now, all the money that could be drawn out of Scotland was considered a highly proper thing, whilst every penny expended there was accounted so much thrown away.

The King's letter to the Privy Council of Scotland, in contemplation of his intended visit, for which he has (as he descriptively enough calls it) a " salmonlyke instinct," I formerly printed in the "Documents relative to the Reception at Edinburgh of the Kings and Queens of Scotland," but still, the following extract from it may be very properly introduced here, in order to connect the arrangements for his visit. In stating his inducements, he says,-" Wee ar not aschamed to confesse that we have had theise many yeiris a great and naturall longing to see our native soyle and place of our birth and breeding, and this salmonlyke instinct of ours hes restleslie, both when wee wer awake, and manie tymes in our sleip, so stirred up our thoghtis and bended our desyris to make a Jornay thither, that wee can never rest satisfied till it sall pleas God that wee may accomplish it; and this we do upour our honour declair to be the maine and principall motive of our intended Jorney:" and in conclusion he adds,— "wee pray you to rest assured that our intentioun is to behave our selfe the tyme of our being there, as everie one sall see that our care sall not be wanting to do as muche goode as wee can, and yet so to carie our selfe as our actions salbe accompanied with the applause and heartie consent of all our goode people." This assurance he most honourably fulfilled, as all who read Lord Dumfermline's letter, which concludes this introduction, must admit.

James wrote various other letters connected with this expedition highly creditable to his feelings, and confirmatory of his regard for Scotland, and his desire to promote a reciprocal kind feeling between the people of both kingdoms. The general purport of these, and in particular his Directions to the Magistrates of Edinburgh, is to recommend the goodly arrangement of all things, becawse, he says, "the strangeris and otheris that ar to accompany his Majestie will be so much the more carefull narrowlie to remark upoun and espy the carriage and conversation of the inhabitants of the said Toun, forme of thair interteynment and ludgeing, and gif thair houses be and thair bedding and napric clene and neate, and according as they sall find they will mak reporte outher to the credite and or to the reproche and scandall of this Burgh."

The utmost care was also taken to inculcate upon the minds of the people a spirit of kindly feeling, and a suppression of all former animosities towards the English who might accompany the King. This wish was rigidly and honourably fulfilled by the people of Scotland, notwithstanding of the great and daily provocation received by them; for in place of meeting with a grateful return, the English lampooned them, as inferior people, who had not the courage nor the power to break their heads in return for the insolencies they committed. Amongst these none made himself more prominent than that scullion Sir Anthony Weldon, who thought it great preferment when he rose to be Clerk of the Kitchen, and who, when he acquired greater honours by his appointment to the Board of Green Cloth, accompanied the King to Edinburgh, gave vent to his early acquired language and sentiments in his vituperations against Scotland, which were pretended not to be intended for publication, and yet all he wrote appeared in print, according to his account, from accidental circumstances. This libel upon Scotland was found wrapt up in a record of the Board of Green Cloth, to which he had been promoted, and being ascertained to be his handwriting, "he was deservedly removed from his place, as unworthy to eat his bread, whose birth-right he had defamed."

The King borrowed L100,000 from the City of London, to pay the expenses of the journey, but the whole expense of the King and his Court during his abode in Scotland was defrayed from the Scottish Treasury, the entire direction of which was under the charge of Sir Gideon Murray, the Treasurer Depute,—" where his Majesty appeared with as much splendour as in England."

In the contemplation of this expedition, Mr. Charledon writes to Sir

Dudley Carleton, 4th January, 1616-17. "The Queen removed yesterday to Whitehall from Somerset House, where she had lain this fortnight sick of the gout or somewhat else, it being suspected she dreams and aims at a Regency during the King's absence in Scotland." In this project she was disappointed; and by a letter from the same to the same, dated 8th March, 1616-17, we are told—"The King's Journey into Scotland holds on this day se'ennight, though money comes slowly in; and much ado there is and will be to get the L100,000 in this toun. Yet there is much urging, and in the end it must be done, though men be never so much discouraged."

The King entered Scotland on the 13th May, and on the 15th arrived at Seton, the seat of the Earl of Wigton, where he was received with speeches, poems, &c. The King went to the church of Seaton, where a curious sermon was preached to him from as curious a text, James I. and 6. "But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering; for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea, driven with the wind and tossed." The above is not recorded or authenticated in writing, but has been handed down as a church tradition, through which channel I received it, and I could not withhold so characteristic an anecdote.

1

Upon the 28th May Charles writes the King, in one of the letters given in facsimile,—" I am soric for nothing but that I cannot be with your Majestie at this tyme both because I would be glad to wait upon you and also to see the Cuntrie whair I was borne and the customes of it."

The following are the Documents alluded to at p. liii of this introductory notice. The Letters are printed from the originals, the first of which is preserved in the General Register House, the other is taken from Sir James Balfour's Collection in the Advocates' Library, and the Acts from the Registers of the Privy Council of Scotland.

" LETTER FROM THE KING TO THE PRIVY COUNCIL OF SCOTLAND, Nov. 2, 1616.

James

"Righte trustic and righte welbeloued cosen and counsellour And righte trustie and welbeloued counsellouris Wee greett yow well, Whereas it is necessarie for the better establishing of true religion that childrein be catechised and educated in the knowledge of the groundes thereof frome their tender yeares. And whereas manie parentes are so negligent and careles in that point as their childrene being eyther altogether ignorant or careleslie instructed are when they come to age easilie peruerted and drawen to Poperie. It is therefor our pleasour that yee cause make and publishe an acte commaunding all parentes to use the ordinarie meanes of instructing their young childrene to presente thame to their ordinarie pastour at all usuall times of catechising and examination and to bring thame to the bishoppe of the diocese at cuerie visitatioun to be tried and confirmed by him, with certification that such parentes as shall neglecte these meanes shall pay according to their qualitie a pecuniall summe withoute anic remission, And this recommending to your speciall care, Wee bid yow farewell. At our pallace of Whitehalle the secunde of Nouember 1616."

" Act of the Privy Council of Scotland appointing a Scoole to be in euery parroche, Dec. 10, 1616.

"Forsameikle as the Kingis Majestie haueing a speciall care and regaird that the trew religion be advanceit and establisheit in all the places of this kingdome, and that all his Majesties subjectis especially the youth be exercised and trayned up in civilitie godlines knawledge and leirning That the vulgar Inglish toung be universallie plantit and the Irische language which is one of the cheif and principall causis of the continewance of barbaritie and incivilitie amangis the inhabitantis of the His and hevlandis, may be abolisheit and removit And quhairas thair is no meane more powerfull to further this his Majesteis princelie regaird and purpois than the establishing of Scooles in the particular parocheis of this kingdome whair the youth may be taught at the least to wreit and reid and be catechised and instructed in the groundis of religioun. Thairfoir the Kingis Majestie with aduise of the Lordis of his secreit Counsall hes thocht it necessar and expedient that in euerie parroche of this kingdome whair convenient meanes may be had for interteyning a scoole That a scoole salbe estableishit and a fitt persone appointit to teach the same upoun the expensis of the parrochinaris according to the quantitie and qualitie of the parroche at the sight and be the aduise of the Bishop of the diocie in his visitatioun Commanding heirby all the Bishoppis within this kingdome That thay and everie ane of thame within thair severall dioceis deale and travell with the parrochinaris of the particular parrocheis within thair saidis dioceis to condescend and aggree upone some certane solide and sure course how and by quhat meanes the said scoole may be enterteyned And gif ony difficulteis arryse amongis thame concerning this mater That the said Bishop reporte the same to the saidis Lordis to the effect they may take suche ordour heiranent as they sall think expedient And that letteris be direct to mak publicatioun heirof quhairthrow nane pretend ignorance of the same."

[&]quot;Ane Act of the Privy Council of Scotland anent the Catechesine of Childrene. Dec. 10, 1616.

[&]quot; Forsameikle as the Kingis Majestie with the aduise of the Lordis of his Secreit Counsale hes found it verie necessar and expedient for the better establischeing of the trew religioun that childrene be catechesed and educate in the knowledge of the groundis therof from their tender veiris And seeing mony parentis ar so careles and negligent in that point as thair childrene being aither altogidder ignorant or cairleslie instructed ar gulien thay come to aige easilie pervertit and drawne to Poperie Thairfore his Majestie with aduise foirsaid hes commandit and ordanit and be thir present is straitlie commandis chairges and ordanes all and sindrie parentes to use the ordinar meanes of instructing thair young childreen, to present them to thair ordinar pastour at all usuall tymes of catechising and examination and to bring thame to the Bischop of the dyocie at everie visitatioun within the parroche to be tryed and confirmed be him under the paynes particularlie underwrittin to be incurrit totics quoties be eueric persone failzeing to present thair children to the Bishop at his visitatioun as said is That is to say be euerie nobilman fourtie pundis be euerie Barone fourty merkis and be euery inferiour persone twenty merkis or lesse according to the meanes [of ilk] persone And that letteris be direct to mak publication heirof that nane pretend ignorance of the same."

"LETTER FROM ALEXANDER EARL OF DUNFERMLING, LORD HIGH CHANCEL-LAR OF SCOTLAND, ADDRESSED 'TO THE KING HIS MOST SACRED MAJESTY.'

"This yeare (maist Sacred Soueraine) almaist now worne to end, hes bene unto this land and kingdome a yeare of jubile and a yeare of singulair joye this kingdome being this yeare nocht onlie illustrat as all other yeares be your Royall and famous actiouns, but also marvelouslie decored and inritched be your Prencelie and glorious presence and Majestie Hes furneist greate confort vigour and strenthe to this haille estaitt all members and pairtis thairof.

"The particular successe of special actions I shall heir breiffic according to my bund deutic and cuistum tuitche unto your Majestic That ye may have a present view and jouissance of the froots of your happic and good governament owir this peopill.

"The end of the last yeare and first entric to this your Counsall in this Estaitt be your ordonance bestoued on the consideration and approbation of certane articles concludit at ane generall assemblie of the kirk keeped at Aberdene in August before Thir speciall Articles war approxin That thair sould be ane generall Catechis formed to be universalic teatched to all the youthis in this Countric That in cucric Parische thair sould be ane Schoole and in everic Parische ane register of the naymes of all borne and babtized and of all died.

"The Marqueis of Huntlie and Erle of Erroll be your sacred Majesties good meanes intreatie argumentis persuasiouns and mediation hes bene at last reduced to conformitie in all necessair poynts and articles of relligioun and fullie reconciliat withe the kirk of this kingdome Lykeas your Sacred Majestie hes also agreed the saidis tua nobill men and thair freindis in a particular perrollus deadlie feade was fallin out amongs thameselfis and lykelie to haue maide great truble betuix thame for slauchter and bloode betuix Laird of Gight Gordoun and ane brother of the Erle of Errolls and some others his freindis.

"The questioun of bloode, slauchter and all criminal or civil actions betuix the saidis pairteis being remitted and compromitted to your maist Royall Majesties personn and arbitrall decreit was be your Highnes maist circumspectlie wyslie and amicablic composed and decydit to baithe the pairteis ease and contentment sua that thaj war baithe by your prenedic command before your Counsall in September last broght to full reconciliation and amitie.

"Ane other truble appeirand to have fallin out betuix the Erle of Perthe and Lord Lewingstoun for questions of maintchis in thair wooddis forrests and hountings be your sacred Majesties wyse commandement and directioun was submitted to freindis of thair awin and is finalic weell composed.

"The Erle of Mar ane auld trustie and familiar serwand to your Majestie from your infancie be your prencelie ordonance installed in the full plaice dignitie and administration of the office of Threasaurarie in this kingdome with greatte applause and allowance of all.

"In Januar It pleased your Highnes be your fauourabill letter to signific unto your Counsaill your full resolution to honour this Countrie withe your Royall presence, In May efter declairing thairwithe the reasons mowed your Sacred Majestie to this determination reasons full of wisdome lowe and kyndnes to this your natiwe soylle, The letter was found sua woorthic and was sua acceptabill to the haill Counsall as that thocht fitt copies of the same sould be dispersed to all schyres and dioceses to make all your good subjects acquent with this your Highnes fauorabill disseynge whilk rejoyced the hairtis of all good pepill in the land.

"Ane Conventioun of the Estaittis was drawin togither onder your Highnes authoritie to mak all deu preparatioun for honnourabill ressaitt of your Royall persoun and all your nobill companie. The Estaitts maist willinglie granted ane subsidie of Twa hundrethe thowsand pundis to supplie the necessair chairgis of sic ane extraordinair and maist honorabill erand.

"Directiouns war gevin for reparation of all hie wayes parfyting of all your Sacred Majesties houses Palices and Castells, innumerabill craftismen of all sortis entered to all warkis, all be cair and diligence maide readie in den tyme above all exspectation; for the lyke was newir seene in this land of before; greatte ordour tayne for abundance and store of all prouisiouns and viures for horse or men and for honest ludgeings to all your Majesties traine and companies in entire pairt, where yee war to resort.

"Your Majestics Chappell in Halyroodhous builde up of new with all ornamentis and deu furnitour micht be requyred in any Royall Chappell and maist magnificklie dekt and sett furthe, "Furnitour of silwer wark and Plaitte Tapesserie ritehe Beddis and bedding and all sie necessaires for ane Royall house send for be your Sacred Majesties awin direction and prowydit in greatte store from all pairtis, whilkis still remaynis in your Wairdroppes and Paliees, may serue for many aiges as the same scrued your Sacred Majestie at this tyme maist honorablic and plentifullie.

"About the middis of Maij your Highnes entered in this kingdome, accompanyed withe good number of your Highnes Nobilitie Prelatts Officers and Counsallours of Ingland and good number also of Nobill men Officers and Counsallouris of this Estaite, sic as your Majestie had ordoured and commanded to meet you at Barwicke.

"Your Sacred Majestie honored first My Lord Erle of Hoomes house of Dunglas with your maist gracious presence And nixt the Erle of Vintouns house of Setoun, was in baithe the saidis Nobill mens houses with all your Nobills, ressaued and intertenyed to thair powar, althoc far onder your dew, yitt to your contentment and all your companies honorablic and magnifieklie.

"Then came your Majestie to your awin Palice of Halyeroodhouse, making your entrie throw your good Toun of Edenburght, where ye war maiste joyfullie ressaued, and visited that kirk, hard preatching, and was conwoyed be the haill toun, in honorabill equippage to your Palice.

"Thair was your Majestics maist ordinair residence Maij Junij and Julij, visitting alwayes be tymes, Fyffe, Angus, Perthe, Sterlingschyre, and other pairtis aboutt baithe your awin Palices and Nobill menns houssis in the Countrie, Till in August Your Highnes retired be the wast countrie from Glasgow, Paslay, Hammiltoun, Sanquhar, Drumlaynrig, and Lyncluden to Cairleill in Ingland, and from that fordwart to your ordinair Royall saitte at Londoun.

"It wald require a greate volume to recompt the greatte benefitts and commodities baithe the Nationns Inglische and Scottis, hes had in this your Majesties jornay and sejorne in Scotland; all manifesting your Majesties incomparabill wisdome in that interpryse.

"Since your Sacred Majestie attayned to the Croun of Ingland thair has nothing bene done, nor meaned to, could advance and furder, a perfytte unioun of the twa nationns, sua far as this hes done.

"Your Majestie had heir in your train and companie a number of Inglische Prelatts, maist joyse, learned and grave, Nobills that merited justlie the honour and title of nobilitie and wald have kyithed sua abowe others, in any civill corner of the warld, courtesse, honorabill, amiabill, tractabill, circumspect, euer readie to all woorthie actions, mowed be thair good behaviour all men in Scotland, to honour, reverence, and admire baithe thame and thair vertuis.

"Lykeas on the other syde be your Majesties prencelle directionns your Counsall in Scotland ordened all sua, as nayne of your trayne or Court could see or fynd anye thing in this land, might gif him any distaiste, or occasionn of miscontentment.

"Plentie of all to all sorts of men, All used be all possibill ciuilitie, good ordour and discretioun, sua that thaj granted and affermed all, thai fand, where ewir thai war in this land, all the good treatment could be wisched in any good Countrie, and all far from that barbaritie thai war almaist persuadit before did regnne in thir northerne pairts. This maide a greate unioun of the hairtis, betuix baithe Natiouns, the ane fynding all honour and courtessie sua frilie offered to thame and the others finding all sua weell and thankfullie accepted and sua weill thocht off and acknauledgitt.

"In all the tyme of your Majesties remayning in this kingdome (a mater maruellous and to be admired) in sua greatte companies, and sua many nobill men and great personages off tua Natiouns conveyned, neuir any actioun, woord or appeirance of any discord variance or offence betuix anye of the Natiouns withe other, for whatsumewir cause, I doubt giff ener the lyke has bene sene, at sic occasioun off sua frequent a meiting of men, Strayngers and onknowen to other.

"To augment and strenthen this amitie and kyndnes your Majestie maist wyslie and prencelie admitted sworne on your Priuey Counsall and Counsall of Estaitt in Scotland good number of your Nobles Officears and Prelattis off Ingland was heir withe yow in companie, was all maist willinglie ressaued, maide priuey and acquent withe all our proceedings, and alwayes honored to our powers.

"Your Majestie had thame also all withe yow, In our Counsall house and Sessioun or Souerane Court of Justice in this kingdome, where in your Sacred Majesties presence was syndric actions according to our ordinair formis baithe disputed and decydit, The ordour and fassion whereoff thaj werie weill allowed and commendit, albeit in dyners poyntis different and disconforme from thairis.

"In the tyme of your Sacred Majesteis aboade in this kingdome was also ane Parliament haldin in the monethe of Junij, illustrat be greatter concurse and nombir of the Nobilitie and all Estaitts, nor hes bene seene before in our aige, ciuilie and weill ordered in all respectis daylie honored be your Highnes Royall Presence, directed and gydit be your wisdome.

"Many notable good Actis estableist in this Parliament, for better ordour of Parliament in all tymes to cuim; ffor restauration of the decayed Churche estaitt; for mantenance of peace and justice amongs all subjectis, ffor cleiring of rightis and tytills and awoyding of pleas for all good ordour in the Countrie.

"And in consideration the tyme was schorte nocht ansuerable to your prencelie yealle and ernest desyre to liwe all heir at parfytte ordour; The maist important affairis of your Estaitts baithe at hayme and withe forrayne Princes, drawing yow to Ingland agayne, for remeid to the greatte inconvenient hes bene persawed and heavilie complained on, thir many yeares, off the ponertie of the estaitt of the Ministers of the kirk, Preatcheours and Teatcheouris of Goddis holie woord, and Ministers of the sacramentis of our Saluatioun.

"In your heiche judgement hes this Parliament furneist withe sufficient commission the number of 33 mixt of all the Estaitts to conveyne at certane tymes and to prowyde as maist commodiouslie may be, to ewirie kirk sufficient stipend for ane minister, out of the readdiest of the teynds of the saidis kirkis; withe reasonable consideration of recompence to the possessours of the teyndis; ane Commission the maist solemne and best adwysed on, and whilk is hoped shall produce als greatte and goode effectis, as any les euer bene in this land.

"At your Majesties going furthe of this Countrie einen on the mairtchis betuix Ingland and Scotland It pleased yow direct command to your Counsall to call all the Landslords and Cheiffis of Clannis or other principal Commanders in the Middleschyres, and make thame all renew the generall band, baithe onder thair aithe and subscriptioun, for manteyning of the peace, Ansuering for all thair men, tenents, serwandis and dependars, and to enter ewirie ane of thame, as they sall be called in justice. This is the key of all good ordour, and obedience in theese pairtis hes bene preceislie obserwed and put to execution, be the Counsall in all poyntis, conforme to your prencelie ordonance.

"In this last November onder your Highnes authoritie and withe assistance of Commissioners appoynted be your sacred Majestie did conweyne in the Cittie of St. Androis ane Generall Assemblie of the haill kirk of this kingdome; Agreed amongs thame on syndric poyntis and articles, importing to the policie and good ordour in Godds service, and for uniformitie in administration of the sacramentis,

"This same monethe of Nouember war the Commissioners appoynted be the last Parliament to attend on the plantation of the Kirks and promisioners for Ministers stipends, conveyed werie ordourlie, and entered to thair warke, proceeds werie weill and circumspectlie in the same, and ar lyke to bring that to good perfection.

The haill Cuistuims of this kingdome upon syndric good reasons and respectis weell weyed and considered be your Officears and Commissioners appoynted for manageing of your rentis layed down before your Royall Majestie and be your Royall command, ar this yeare ondertayne onder your Majesties awin nayme, to be collected on all hazards to your behowe utilitie and proffcitt: And be the directioun of your Highnes Commissioners, who daylie bestowes sum tyme on the consideration of theese affairis ar maist cairfullie attendit upon Wee hope shall turne to naa loise to your coffers in end, will alwayes make your Officears and Counsall privey to the haill estaitt of theese affairis.

"This yeare hes bene unto your Sacred Majestie glorious, in sua far as it hes furneist unto yow subject to actiouns will be of memorable honour and admiratioun to all posteriteis; hes bene also to this kingdome, happie and fortunat, be the fauour and schyning of your maist gracious presence upon ws and be rair and manye good ordours in governament. Your Majestie hes brocht in, maid ws to sie and satled amang ws, baithe in ciuill and Ecclesiasticall estaitt.

"I man heir make end, because my Ingyne nor penne is nocht habill to furneische me woords I may onywyse esteeme ansuerabill, to the greatte obligatiouns all this Countrie and Natioun hes, to the honouris fauors and infinit good your Majestie hes done unto ws: Taking thairfore my leive, withe the maist humbill and reuerend kisse of your Royall hand; Wisches unto your Sacred Majestie from the greate King of all, All happiness, grandeur, prosperitie and contentment,

5our maist sacred Majesties maist humbill affectionat and obedient

From Edinburgh 23 December

Subject and Seruitour,

1617."

DUNFERMLINE.

"In a word," as Weldon says in his character of King James, "he was (take him altogether, and not in peeces) such a king I wish this kingdome have never any worse on the condition, not any better; for he lived in peace, dyed in peace, and left all his kingdomes in a peaceable condition, with his oune motto,

"BEATI PACIFICI."

APPENDIX.

EXTRACTS FROM THE ACCOUNTS OF THE LORDS HIGH TREASURERS OF SCOTLAND, FROM THE YEAR MOXCHI, TO THE YEAR MOCHI.

Feb. 1593. Item be his Majesteis precept to certane pure strangeris Vngarianis captives to the Turk ij the tight is the tight in the tight is the tight in the ti

Maii 1594. Item be his Majefteis precept to Helene Lytill his hienes awin nureis and to Griffell and Sara Grayis hir dochteris for thair aparralling agane the baptifine of his hienes darreft fone the Prince vje lxvj t. xiij š. iiij đ.

Jun. Item be his hienes precept to Dauid Moyfie depute to my Lord Secretare for bying to him of elaithis the tyme of the folempnitie of the baptifine of his Majesteis darrest sone the Prince ijct.

Item payit for fyve tymmer beddis maid for his Majefteis chalmers in the Caftell of Striveling togidder with irne wark thairto agane the tyme of the folemnization of the baptifine j° t.

Aug. Item delyverit be commandiment of his Majeftie and speciall direction to Dame Annas Murray Countes of Mar the furneffing following for the use of the Prince again the tyme of his baptisme.

Item thrie fteikis of lane contenand in length xxiiij elnis thrie quarteris &c. &c. lxxxxi f.

Item be his Majefteis command for transporting of the Lyoun fra Haly-ruidhous to Striveling and thairfra bak agane &c. &c. ij^clvij t. xvj š,

Item payed be the Quenis Majesties missive for the furnitour of ten greit Deir houndis appoynted to pas in Denmark ijc xxviijt. xvš. ijd.

Item to James Lennox meffinger accumpaneit with thrie heranldis and thair coittis difplayit and tua trumpetouris paffand to the mercat croce of Striveling with letteris chargeing all and fundrie our foverane Lordis leiges of quhait eftait qualitie or degrie fa ever thei be of To fet apairt thair particular feidis quarrellis and gruges and keip gude peace during the tyme of the baptifine as thai tender his Majesteis honour and estimation of thair native cuntrie vt.

Jan. 1595. Item to Elizabeth Monereif Lavender to the Prince his grace for faip feiffing utheris necessarily and wesching of his claithis fra the moneth of Februar 1593 to the moneth of Januar 1595 &c. ijc lxxvj t.

Apr. 1596. Item be his Majefteis fpeciall direction to ane pure woman callet Jonet Michaell being greit with barne in name of almous and lyand at the yett of Halyrudhous vt.

Nov. Item be the Lordis of Secret Counfall and Chakkeris ordinancis &c. agane the tyme of the baptifme of the Princes as follows:

Item in the first fourescore three elnis and ane half of reid skarlot Loundoun claith to be everie ane of the pages and Lakayis cloik coit and breikis being xviij persones in nomber viije lxxviij t.

Item to ane uther boy paffand of Edinburgh with clois letteris to the Erle of Rothes Lordis Lindfay Gray Conftable of Dundy Lairdis of Balwerie Lundy Eifter and Wester Weymis Torrie and Bonyntoun for wyld meit and veniesoun to the baptisme of the Princes and to cum and tak part thairof thameselssis the xxviij of this instant vt.

Dec. Item to the Violaris Taburrers and Suefchearis at the Princes baptifine conforme to the Lordis of Chekkaris warrand xxx t.

Item be his Majefteis command to ane boy of the laird of Craigiehallis that prefentit ane pacock and paa hen to Barqaneis mariage xx š.

lxxiii

Item conforme to the Lordis ordinance for fuefchearis and ane pepherare that playit at Barganeis mariage x t.
Mar. Item be his Majesteis speciall directioun out of his awin mouth to four Inglis Violaris in Haliruidhous xxxij t.
Item the xxvij day being Sunday to the brode of the kirk dure of Dum-freis iij t. Apr. 1597. Item to James Murray wrycht conforme to his Majefteis

Apr. 1597. Item to James Murray wrycht conforme to his Majetteis precept for transporting of xxviij deir that came fra England fra Leyth to the park of Falkland in cairtis

11. xix s. viij d.

Jun. Item in drink fylver to ane man that brocht ftray berreis to his Majeftie fra Alloway vt.

Item to ane boy paffand with clois letteris to the Proveft and Baillies of Dundie and Sanctandrois for reiking out twa Barkis to await upoun the King of Denmarkis cuming xxxiij š. iiij đ.

Jul. Item to William Murray verlot for bying twa pair filk fchankis twa beltis and twa dageris to the Prince Grace xxij t.

Jan. Item the furneffing following maid to his hienes darrest sone the Prince as the particular subscrivit be Sir Patrick Murray of Ganes Master of the Prince his gardrop &c. beiris

Item v ell and ane half of blak velvet to be ane coit &c. &c. lxxxviij t. Sept. 1598. Item be his hienes speciall command to ane Inglis sportour that come down upour ane tow fra the cok of the stepill of Edinburgh xxt. Item to his Majesteis self twa syve pund peces to play at schule the burd, xt.

Item be his Majefteis fpeciall direction to the Sweffouris of Edinburgh that past throw the toun for ane of his Majefteis hound is was tint vt.

Item be his hienes precept the furnitour following maid to the use of his darrest bedsallow the tyme of hir birth be the direction of William Schaw Master of Wark &c.

 Item for ane cradill to the bairne
 xvj f.

 Item for ane tymmer bed to fet the fame
 xviij f.

lxxiv

Item for ane chayare to the Maistres nureis iiij t.
Item for the feat of the feit iiij t.
Item foure fluillis to the rokkeris liij š. iiij d.
Item to the wrichtis expensis in passing to Dalkeith to set up this wark xl s̃.
Item to the wrichtis childer in drinkfilver xx s.
Maii. 1599. Item payit to Peter Sanderfoun tailyeour for certane furnitour maid be him to thair Majesteis twa dochteris agane the tyme of the baptifme of Ladie Margaret iiij°t.
Jun. Item be his Majesteis speciall direction the furnitour following for the use of his darrest dochter Ladie Princes Elizabeth Item fex lane mutchis contenand ane ell and thrie quarteris viij t. xv s.
Item for pearling to put about the famin xxxiij \(\text{\tilde{s}} \).
Julij. Item be command of his Majesteis preceptis the furnitour following for thair Majesteis ancht Laqueyis and ane of the Prince his thair darreft sone
Item xlv elnis reid fkarlet Londoun clayth to be the faidis Laquayis cloikis cottis and breikis iij°l†.
Aug. Item to be ane gowne to Princes Elizabeth velne and thrie quarteris yallow fatine xlvj t.
Sept. Item to ane boy paffand of Linlythqw to Falkland to caus Robein the hounter meit his Majestie in Stirling with the houndis xx §.
Oct. Item for the use of the Prince nyne elnis of weildaris velvet to be him clok coit and breikis of colour de roy $j^c xx t$.
Item half ane unce of filver pafmentis to be his belt and loupis to his powche and theis of the breikis liij š. iiij d.
Item delyverit to his hienes felff to be gevin to the Inglis Commedianis xiij crownes of the fone at iij t. vj š. viij đ. the pece xliij t. vj š. viij đ.
Nov. Item be his hienes speciall direction for fax elnis and ane half grene Lundoun clayth to cover the Bilyard burde lviij \mathfrak{k} , x $\tilde{\mathfrak{s}}$.

Item be his Majesteis direction given to Sir George Elphingstoun to be delyverit to the Inglis Commedianis to by tymber for the preparation of ane hous to thair pastyme xlt.

Item to William Forfyth meffinger paffand to the mercate croce of Edinburgh chairging the eldaris and deaconis of the haill four feffionis of Edinburgh to annull thair act maid for the difcharge of certane *Inglis Commedianis*x \cdots, viii d.

Item to the faid William paffand with utheris letteris to the faid mercat croce and thairefter found of trumpet notefying his Majefteis plefure to all his liegis that the faidis Commedianis mycht ufe thair playis in Edinburgh xxj \(\text{$\section} \), iiij \(\text{$\dagger} \).

Dec. Item lykwayis delyverit be his hienes directioun to Sir George Elphingftoun of Blythifwood Knycht to be diftributit amang certane Inglis Commedianis iij°xxxiij†. vj š. viij d.

Item payit to Alexander Barclay ypothegar for certane oylis vntmentis and emplafteris delyverit to Johnne Nafmyth chirurgiane for the ufe of the Princes xxx t. viij š.

Jan. 1600. Item for the use of his Majesteis starrest dochter Princes Elizabeth thrie elnis of syne broun spanis freis to be hir a goune xxij t. x š. Item sewin quarteris cramosie satyn to lay it out upoun and to lyne the syd slevis thairof xvt. xv š.

Item delyverit be commandment of his hienes precept to Sir George Home of Spot Knycht Mafter of his Majefteis gardrop the Jowellis for his darrest bed-fallowis New Yeir giftis this present yeir as followis To wit Ane Jowell with ane gret Emerod set about with dyamontis pryce thair-of vjc crownis of the sone Ane Jowell contening tuentie nyne dyamontis &c. &c.

Feb. Item delyverit be commandiment of his Majesteis precept to Sir George Home of Spot Knycht Master of the gardrop twa goldin cheinyeis and cheinyie beltis with twa pair of garnessingis bak and soir

lxxvi

To be delyverit as his hienes propyne to the Countes of Sutherland an Maistres of Forbes the day of thair mariage j ^m iij ^c xxxiij t. vj z. viij e Mar. Item for the pryce of tua pair of filk fchankis to his darred dochter Princes Elizabeth xx Apr. Item the furnefling delyverit to his hienes darrest fone the Princes	đ. It I.
ufe as followis
	t.
Item for ane dozen of arrowis	Ι.
Item ane fehuting gluif wrocht with velvet and pafmentis of gold
iij t. x
Item ane quarter of velvet to be tua handis to the faidis bowis and	to lyne the brais iij t. vj š. viij
Item for ane quarter unce of palmentis of gold to the hand of the	ıe
bowis xxvj š. viij	đ.
Item gevin in drink filver of the foirfaid geir xx	ŝ.
Item to his awin purfe fix crownis Inde xx	t.
July. Item for the use of Princes Elizabeth—ane craip to hir of fy	ve ŝ.
Item for the use of Ladie Margaret—fix quarteris of laine to be hir for	ex.
mutches vij t. x
Item delyverit to his Majesteis felff to play at the cairtis in the mone of Februar 1600 the tyme his Majestie wes in the Cunyiehous of Edi burgh at the mariages of the Erle of Sutherland and Mafter of Forbes fe
fyve pund peces being omittit in the preceiding compt lxxxij
Aug. Item the furnitour following delywerit for the inbauming of Lad
Margaret fecund dochter of Scotland eftir hir deceis And that be the d	li-rection of Mr. Martene Scheues mediciner and Johne Nafmith chirurgian
Item ten quarteris lain at iij t. x s. the eln viij t. x
Item fex quarteris finall Lining to be a fchew claith xxx
Item fex quarteris cramafie fpanis taffatie at viij t. ye eln Inde xij

lxxvii

XXX ŝ.

XX S.

vj t.

vj t.

Item viij ell florence ribbonis

Item half ane vnce cramafie filk

hir Majefteis birth in Drumfermeling moneth price of ilk bed nichtlie ij s.

during the faid fpace

item and kill of leid xij i. x s.
Item for carrying the faid kift frome Edinburgh to Linlythqw XX s.
Item to Alex. Barclay ypothecar for certane oyles vnguentis and medi-camentis furnift be him the tyme of hir difeafe and for hir imbauming as his particular compt prefent to fchaw beiris xij t.
Item furneift be Alexander Barclay ypothecar and fend to Mr. Martene Scheues mediciner to his maiestie certane drogis medicamentis and uther geir for the vfe of Lady Margaret during the tyme of hir feiknes And alfo for fyne poulderis and vtheris necessaris for hir inbowelling As the particular compt Subferiuit be the faid Doctor Mairtene producit beris xlt. x 3.
Sept. Item for the use of the Prince—vehis of purpour sating to be him dowblet and breikis of the frenche fafchioun xlij t. x š.
Item for twa golf clubbis twa ftalffis and four rakkettis iiij t.
Item ane half quarter and ane naill velvet to the handis of the rakkettis
and club fehaftis
Item ane greit Lantroun bowet xx s̄.
Item ane hat of orenge colour lynit with dowbill fpanis taffatie and ftring of gold about the lippis thairof viij t.
Item for the use of the Princes Elizabeth—sewin elnis figorit velvet blak upoun reid to be hir ane goun lix t. x s̃.
Nov. Item to his Majesties selfs and gevin out of his awin hand to Jonet Kinloch meidwyff of hir Majefteis laft delyverie of hir birth xxvj t. xiij š. iiij đ.

Item payit for the bedding of the perfones following the tyme of

Item for twa beddis to Doctour Mairtene and his man the space of ane

Item payit for twa beddis to Jonet Kinloch and Jerie Boweis wyffe

lxxviii

Item for a bed to Elizabeth Abercrumbie be the faid space

oulkis

Item for twa beddis to the Maistres and rokker be the space of fex ix t.

iiij t.

Item for ane bed to the Dutche woman be the space of ten oulkis viij t. x s.
Item two beddis nichtlie to the four brodinfteris that wrocht hir
Majefteis bed in Drumfermeling vij t. x š.
Item be his Majesteis speciall command gevin to Johnne Murray for bringing the first newis of hir Majesteis delyverie xvi t.
Item to Abraham Abircrumbie faidler for certane extraordinar fadill geir maid to ferve Monfieur du Ruthanis gentilmenis hacknayis that wer borrowit to ferve thame during thair remaning in this cuntrie viij t. xviij s.
Dec. Item for boffis to beir drink to his Majestie at his pastyme in the feildis and stringis thairto vjt.
Item gevin to the Herauldis to be caffin furth in figne of larges at the baptifme of the Duik of Albanie lxvj t. xiij š. iiij đ.
Item to Abraham Abircrumby faidler for repairing of her Majefteis Litter geir the tyme that the Duke of Albanie wes transportit fra Dum-fermling to Halierudhous xiij t. iij š. iiij d.
Item for certane fadill geir to the Prince his twa horfis furnifit be the faid Abraham xj t. iiij š.
Jan. 1601. Item payit be commandiment of his Majesteis precept to George Heriot gold/myth for ane Jowell quhairwith his hienes propynit his darreft bedfallow in one new yeir gift j ^m iij ^c xxxiij t.
Feb. Item be his Majesteis speciall command to gif in drinkfilver to ane boy that brocht hame ane French naig to the Prince and delyverit to Thomas Pott for that effect xxj t. vj š. viij d.
Mar. Item payit be his Majesteis command to Williame Mayne bowar for twa dofand of fpeiris for the ring and gluiff xxxvij t.
Item be his Majefteis precept to Helene Creichtoun Maiftres nureis to umquhile Ladie Margaret his hienes fecund dochter of Scotland to be hir ane abulyement as followis &c.

lxxix

Maii Item to Alexander Barclay ypothegar for certane drogis medicamentis and uther geir furnishit for hir Majesteis use and hir sone the Duik of Albanie As alsua for certane emplaisteris oylis and liniamentis for his Majesteis awin persone the tyme of the hurt of his arme jexxij t. x s.

Junij. Item nyne elnis and ane half purpour grograne taffatie to be the Prince ane uther ftand cloik dowblet and breikis lxvij†. x š.

Item gevin for ane bybill doubill overgilt and for ftringis thairto xt.

Item to Patrick Creichtoun meffinger paffand of Edinburgh with letteris to charge the baillies of Sanquhar to bring to his Majeftie the bigill and hir quhelpis that he wrait for to thame or ellis that thai within thrie dayis enter thair perfonis in waird within the caftell of Edinburgh under the pane of rebellioun yjt. xiij š. iiij đ.

Item delyverit to James Murray mafter wricht in tyme of my Lord Lowdounes erection to be faittis and fkaffellis within the palice of Halierudhous ane hundreth daillis xxxiij t. vj š. viij d.

Aug. Item payit to Finlay Tailyeour to by fpeiris for the ryng and glove at his Majefteis being in Perth ix t. xiij š. iiij đ.

Sept. Item the furnifling following delyverit to Abraham Abercrumbie faidler for outred of four faidillis quhairof twa of the Scottis faffioun with reid velvet and pafmentis of gold and filver and the uther twa of the Frenche faffioun with marikin and blak velvet fend with the Princis four naigis to France with Thomas Pott &c.

Item lykwayis payit be the Compter to George Heriot younger goldfinith for his expensis in passing to Londoun to bring hame the copburde that was propynit to Munsour Vaton Frenche Ambassadour as his Majesteis warrand direct to that effect to the Lordis Auditouris proportis iijexxxiij t. vj š. viiij đ.

Item to Johne Purdie Meffinger paffand with letteris to the marcat eroce of Striviling and thair efter found of trumpet commandit that nane fuld follow his Majestie to the Park to the hunting bot sa mony as are contenit in the roll under the pane of deid xxj s. iiij d.

l_{XXX}

Dec. Item the furnitour following deliverit to Alexander Wilfoun tailyeour for the use of the Prince
Item threttie ellis finall lyning to be him farkis at xxxij s. the ell Inde xlvij t.
Item fewin ellis finall plaiding to be wylie coittis at xx s. Inde vijt.
Item ane dozen of golf ballis xl s̃.
Item tua golff clobbis xv s̃.
Item four pellattis xx s̃.
Item ij dozen elekan vj š. viij đ.
Item ane dozen of ftaffis xxx 3.
Item tua pellok bow ftringis xxxij š.
Item tua fchammoy fkinis xxxij š.
Item iij Inglis kames xxiiij š.
Item be his hienes fpeciall command and directioun the furnitour following deliverit to Peter Sanderfoun tailzeour for the eleithing of Princes Elizabeth as followis
Item four ellis Spanis taffatie to be hir ane goun at viij t. the ell xxxij t.
Item viij ellis plufehe to lyne the famin at xij t. the ell lxxxxyj t.
Item iij ellis and ane half purpour ferge thairto at vij t. v s. the ell xxv t. vij š. vj d.
Item xvj unce and xv drop wecht gold and filver pafmentis to hir twa gownis at vt. x s. the unce Inde lxxxxiijt. iij s. ij d.
Item viij ell of ribbanis of colouris to the fleiffis of hir nicht goun xxvj š. viij đ.
Item iij quarteris and ane half ftaming to be hir fehankis iij t. j š. iij đ.
Item fex ellis buckorie to lyne hir wafkene bodeis and fleiffis iiij t.
Item iij ellis plaiding x15.
Item for ane ell and ane quarter orange craip and ane ell and ane quarter pepingo craip with tua elnis of gold and filver freinyeis thairto to be put about hir craig xj t.

lxxxi

Feb. 1602. Item delyverit to Peter Sanderfoun nyne el	nie fignrit vol-vote to be ane goun to his Majefteis darreft dochter the Pr	-
Item ane elne and ane half quhyte fatyne upone incarr	0 0
to hir goun	xiij t. x š.
Item aucht elnis and ane half plaiding to lyne the vafi
ane wyliecoit for the nicht	v t. ij š.
Item be speciall command and direction the furnessing	0
to Dumfermling to Maistres Jeane Drummond for the use	of his hienes
fone Duik Charles
Item ten quarteris fwall wirfettis to be him Juppis	iiij l . x ŝ.
Item gevin for ane cradill belt	xvj š.
Item ane unce and fex drop wecht quhyte filk paimentis to	the Jupis lv s̃.
Item ane tymber ftule with rynand quheillis to gang in	xxxvij š. iiij đ.
Item ane fwafche and ane velvote belt with ane dager qu	philk wes fend
to him with Johne Nafinyth iiij t.	xviij š. viij đ.
Item payit be command of his Majesteis precept to	Mr. Mairtene
Schoner Mediciner and Johnne Nafmyth Chirurgiane In	recompanse of thair panis and travellis for onwaitting upone the Quenis I	Majeftie at hir
lait berth vjc lxvj	t. xiij š. iiij đ.
Apr. Item to be ane counterclaith to the Prince and to ga	rneis his chyre and to be ane cuscheoun fourtene elnis grene velvote at xv t.	the elne ij°x t .
Item the furnitour following maid at his hienes special	command for the use of his Majesteis darrest sone Duik Robert befoir his	baptifme
Item fex elnis quhyte fatyne to be him ane coit and to b
uther coit of yallow fatyne quhilk Duik Charlis gat &c.	xlviij t.
Item fex quarteris of fyne lane to be ane aipprone ar	ie mutche ane
ovirlayer and ane pair of handis all frettit with gold	viii t. v š.
Item ten quarteris purpour velvote to be ane cod to bein	Duik Robert
to the kirk to be baptifit	xxxvj t. v š.
Item tua pund of hair thairto &c.	xl ŝ.

lxxxii

Item delyverit to Iffobel Colt Maiftres nureis to the faid Duik Robert x elnis half elne fyne Touris taffatie to be hir ane gowne j ^c v t.
Item four elnis and ane half blak velvote to be hir fkirt and to lay out the breiftis of hir gowne lxv t. v s.
Item ane quarter blak velvote to be ane mutche for hir heid iij t. xij s. vjd.
Item delyverit to Johne Arnote mercheant burges of Edinburgh quhilk wes fend to Dunfermeling for the ufe of his hienes darreft fone Duik Robert ane filver plait and ane filver fpune xxxvt. jš. ijj d.
Item for ane flickit mat to Marioun Hepburne rokker to Duik Charlis vj t. xiij š. iiij d.
May. Item for the price of ane pointit diamont quhilk his Majeftie gaif to his darreft bedfallow the Quene befoir the baptifme of Duik Robert ij¢lxvj†. xiij š. iiij d.
Item to his Majestie to play at the cairtis in Falkland with George Nicolfoun fextene fex pund peices lxxxxyj t.
Item cassin amangis the pepill the day of the baptisme of Duik Robert in name of Lairges lxvj t. xiij š. iiij d.
Item to ane honeft man in Dumfermling for reparatioun of the skaith quhilk he fuftenit in his cornes at the rinninge of the rigne efter the baptifme of his Majefteis fone Duik Robert xij t.
Item payit to Thomas Weir pewderar for ane laid kift and for his and his fervandis expensis in ryding to Dumfermling and for ane kift of aikin tymber to lay Duik Robert in efter his death xvj t. xviij š.
Item iiij elnis blak velvote to be ane mort elaith &c. lix t. vj š.
Julij. Item delvverit to Alexander Wilfoun tailyeour the furnitour following to be an garmont of hunting elaithis to the Prince his grace Item four elnis thrie quarteris grene fatyne xxxviij t.
Item delyverit to Elizabeth Hay for the Princes use ane birse to straikhir hair viij š.
Item ane quarter of fatyne to be hir ane mask xl š. viij d.
1

lxxxiii

Item tua pair of doubill gluvis pafmentit and tua babeis to play hir liij \tilde{s} . iiij \tilde{d} .

Item delyverit lykwayis be his hienes fpeciall direction to the faid Elizabeth Hay fifter to Alefoun Hay the Princes Maiftres Nurice for thair claithing ten elnis ferge of florence lxxv t.

Aug. Item payit to Francis Manfioun wricht for ane pulpett of Eiftland buird to the kirk of Falkland with the furneffing of Irne wark thairto and for his expensis with his fervandis in cuming and ganging to fet up the famin lxxij t.

Item to James Warkman painter for painting of thair Majesteis armes to be patrone to the armes of some claithis that wes to be maid iij t. vj š.

Oct. Item the furnitour following delyverit be his hienes speciall command and direction to be an goun and vaskene to his Majesteis dochter Princes Elizabeth

Item four elnis and ane quarter broune frenche fteming xxxj t. xvij š.

Item four elnis reid cramafie taffatie to be ane Vafkene xxxij t.

Item thrie elnis buckrum to be ane Vardegaird and to band the goun with x1s.

Item xiij drop weicht reid walting pa
fmentis to the taill of the Vafkene xxvj $\tilde{\mathbf{s}}.$

Item iij quarteris reid fkarlot frenche ftaming to be hir ane pair of hois v t. xij š. vj d.

Item be his Majefteis speciall direction for payment of the Fute gaird that accumpanyit his Majeftie of Edinburgh to the raid of Drumfreis deliverit to Capitain James Huntar jelxxxxij t.

Item to the Herauldis and Purfewantis for thair fervice in onwayting the tyme of the baptifue of Duik Robert xlt.

Nov. Item the furnefling following delyverit be his hienes directioun for the cleithing of his Majesteis sone Duik Charlis

Item iij elnis and ane half reid frenche fkarlot ferge to be him ane coit and hois &c. xxyj t. v s.

lxxxiv

Item for certane drogis oylis unguentis medicamentis and emplaifteris maid and furniffit be Alexander Barclay ypothecar To thair Majefteis and thair bairnes uses As the particular comptis subscryvit be Mr. Mairtene Schoneir Mediciner John Nafmyth and Gilbert Prymrois chirurgianes producit upon compt beires iije xxxviij t. xvj š.

Dec. Item ane kame caife to the Prince of grene velvote with the haill furniffing thairin iij t. x š.
Item ane fyne brodderit belt iiij t.
Item ane hat of colour de roy vij t.
Item tua fehammeaux fkinis to weir under his fehankis xxvj š. viij đ.
Item gevin for mending of his Montour xxvj \(\tilde{\mathbf{s}}\), viij \(\dd{\mathbf{d}}\).
Item ane fpounge xxvj š. viiij đ.
Item fex elnis Cambrige to be him apprones mutcheis and ovirleyeris xxiiij t.
Jan. 1603. Item be his hienes speciall command delyverit to Elizabeth Hay to the Princes use ane fair kaife of kames coverit with velvote vt.
Item twa elnis Cambrige to be ane kaming claith viij t.
Item twa babeis to be plaives xiij š. iiij d.
Item payit be his hienes fpeciall command and directioun to William Vans armorar for certain fwordis and dagaris quhilkis wer preparit for the Vtaliane (Daniell Archdeacon) and Frances Mowbray aganis the day of thair combat lxvjt. xiijš. iiijđ.
Item payit to Alexander Wilfoun tailycour to the Prince to be gevin for the fraucht and uther neceffar expensis maid be him upone fum geir that cum fra Ingland to thair Majesteis use viijt

ltem be fpeciall command and directioun foirfaid to James Murray maifter wricht for tymber daillis naillis and for his workmanfchip in making of the barier quhairin the faidis Italiane and Francis Mowbray fuld have fouchin the fingill combat jclxxix t. viij š. vj d.

Majestie to the Prince and Princes

Item payit for ane horse hyre to carie certane new yeir giftes fra his iij t.

lxxxv

Item for graving of his Majesteis armes in tymber for his hienes kirk iij t. fterling Inde xxx t.
Item for uther twa hattis to his hienes use ane thairof broderit with gold and the uther with filver with ftringis and fedderis thairto vt. fter-ling Summa in Scottis money Item for ane bybill to the Prince xxvj s. viij d. ftarling extending to xiij t. vj s. viij d.
Item for baggis of fweit powder xvij t.
Item for ane pund of powder to lay amang his Majefteis claithis xt.
Item for ane bottell of fweet water vt.
Item for ane box of mulk and fevat vt.
Item for fex tyres dreffingis for hir Majesteis heid
Feb. Item be his Majefteis speciall command and directioun delyverit to Mr. Cobler and uther thrie commedianis to be ilk ane of thame coit and breikis viij elnis fkarlot claith lxxvj t.
Mar. Item payit to James Murray younger for making of daskis and faittis about the pulpet in the chapell of Halierudhous xxxiiij t. iiij š.
Item to Johne Fairny keeper of the Princes chalmer dure at Linlith-gow 1t.
Item payit for poulder to fehut the ordinance of the Caftell of Edinburgh quhen his Majestie wes proclamet King of Ingland xxxvt. xvs.
Item to the ordinaris of the Castell in drink filver vjt.
Item to Charlis Fortay Laquey to the Prince grace for his liveray claithis xij t.
Apr. Item to the Prince grace tua pair of fyne gartanis with fair freinyeis of gold ane pair for to be ane hingar to his dager and the uther for his leggis xvjt.
Item payit be command of his hienes to Robert Lyle fervitour to the Erle of Argyle for inbringing of thrie notorius theifis of the name of the barbarous Clangregour iijc xxxiij t. vj š. viij d.
-9

lyyyvi

Item payit and delyverit be his hienes fpeciall command and direction to James Murray younger for certane bilyardis and bilyard bowles furnifit be him to his hienes awne use lxxx t.

Item to William Mayne bower for certane fpeiris and golf clubbis furnifit be him to his Majesteis use jot.

Item for certane plaiges babeis and uther fmall necessiaris for the use of his hienes sone Duik Charlis vj t. xviij š.

Item payit to Richart Lawfoun buikfeller for certain buikis delyverit to Mr. Adam Newtoun for the use of the Prince grace xxj t.

Item for carying of the greit balhuiff with his Majesteis filver work out of the abbay of Halyruidhous to the Castell of Edinburgh iij t. vj š. viij d.

Item to ane Inglis post that brocht from Berwick ane packet that wes directit frome his Majestie at Newcastell the tent of Aprile and delyverit heir the ellevint thairof at nicht contening certane directiones for the convoy of the Quenis Majestie

vj t.

Maj. The furneffing following delyverit be the directioun of the Lordis of Secret Counfall for the use and cleithing of the Quenis Majestie the Prince grace and Princes thair Paigis and Laqueyis and certane utheris quha wes appointit be direction foirfaid to attend upon thair service at thair removing heirfra towardis Ingland

Item nyntene elnis figurit taffetie to be hir Majeftie ane goun lxxxxv t.

Item four elnis and ane half quhyte fatin to be bodeis and flevis thairto xxxviij t. v š.

Item tua elnis and ane half quhyte fatyne to help to mak up ane goun of hir grace awin quhilk wes all oppinit up and maid of ane uther new faffoun xxj t. v s.

Item payit to George Hendrie wricht in the Cannogait for tymber to be ane cheriote and for making of the famin and to pay for fum Irne work thairto xxxix t.

lxxxvii

Item the furnefling following delyverit to be ane fut mantill to the Quenis grace &c.

Item threttene elnis purpour velvote to be the bodie of the futmantill and half ane ell to covir the fute brod and to put upone the fute mantill to keip it unworn fornent the brode ijexxij t. xv s.

Item for the ufe of the Prinees thre elnis reid fpanis taffetie to be hir ane wyliccoit narreft hir fark xxiiij t.

Item thrie elnis ane quarter and ane half rounge broun fatyne to be ane tolheidelaith and ane pook to put hir nicht geir in xxviij t. xiij s. iiij d.

Item four elnis and ane half grein claith to be ane coit to Thomas Durie hir Majesteis fule xxxiij t. x s.

Item be fpeciall command and direction foirfaid the furniffing following was delyverit to the Prince his grace that paiges of honour viz. the young Laird of Mellerstanis and Dik Doddiswode &c. &c.

Item for the eleithing of Johne Fell and Arthour Kilbowie Laqueys to the Prince his grace &c. &c.

Item payit for aneht stane wecht of powder quhilk wes schot in the Castell of Edinburgh at hir Majesteis and the Prince his grace euming from Striviling to Halyruidhous lxxxx t. xiij 5. iiij d.

Item payit to Johne Norlie muficiane for his allowance of this moneth of Maij lxvi t. xiij š. iiij d.

Item payit for aucht stane wecht of powder to be schot at hir Majesteis removing heirfra toward Ingland lxxxx t. xiij š. iiij d.

Julij. Item to the Herauldis upoun the day his Majeftie was erownit King of Ingland &c. paffand to the croce of Edinburgh and thair eftir found of trumpet and difplaying of thair coitis of armes publifehit the treasonabill practife intendit aganis his Majefties facreit persone And thairwith chargeing all his hienes loving subjectis to be earifull to apprehend sik as wer fugitive gif thai come in this cuntrey vjt.

Item to the trumpetouris

iiij t. xiij š. iiij đ.

lxxxviii

Dec. Item be command of the Lordis of Counfall to Margaret Ladic Uchiltrie in rememberance of the travell and panis tane be hir in onwaiting on thair Majefteis bairnis being knawin to the faid Lordis that it wes his Majefteis will the famin fuld be gevin to her

Item to Marion Hepburne maiftres Rokkar to Duik Chairles be command of the Counfell in confideration of hir panis and faythfull fervice je lxvj t. xiij s. iiij d.

EDINBURGH: PRINTED BY T. CONSTABLE.
M.DCCC.XXXV.

from O2 heine Ama prince Henrey prince Charbs The King &. Orneine of Bohemia

Prince Choctor

Fredrick Henrey 10. K. Ja: 6.

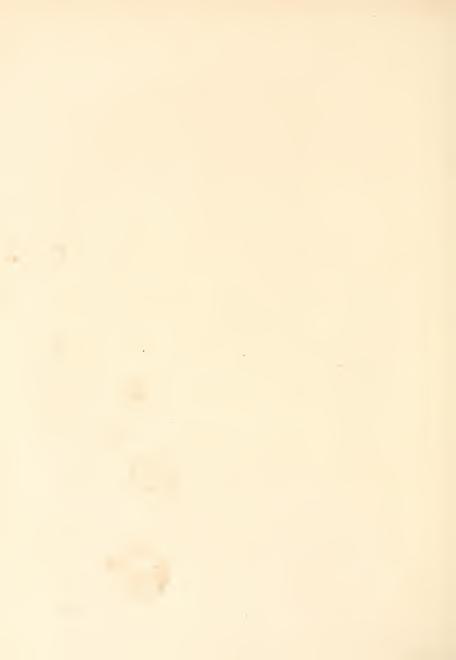

pence poure honest & faithfull service interial be voure diligente wir full attendance upon me specialite at this tyme let this afait in the inmountil words of your earning prince & maister that gulon godd tandenis me in a cotlande I sak in rewording & into consent of parmament breek you the temporalitie of numare in a composition wordshipp with all honouris thair to apparteining & let this serve for cure to source present disease, from the astell of conselving guhame we are dronking & drywing our in the audie maner.

ونقر. ك

Sir

your "Letter bellcome to me Thank bin as glad of the faire weather as your self , the last parte of vour letter, you have mosted right that I wold laugh Who Wold not laugh both at the persons and the subject, but more at so well a chosen Mercuric betweene Mars and Nenusa pow knowe that Women can hardly feepe Counsellass I humbly destre your Mitotell me how it is possible that & I should keepe this secret that have at readic tolde it, and had tell it to as munie as I speake With and if I cocrea poete 1 wold make a song of it and sing it to the tune of Three fooles well met g

Mo heazit Jum glad that, haddington hath. tolde me of your, min good health' which of wish to Continue or As for the blame von charge me with of lasie Writing of think of it rather rests on wour self because von be as flor in giring as my self / can write of no s much but of practise of tilting of riding of drumming and of mustre- Which is all, wherwith from not a Litle pleased & So trishing pour, At the perpetuale happines 1 kiss your. Al , hands and rest

S21 , What I have faid to . SiRger, is trew of tould not but think it strange that any about vour mutaturst prefume to tring neer, matte is, on that had offered me such a publice Scorne, for trongre gois. humble kissing your mater, hands frest ever I refarre the rest

My heart & 1 defore your matre to pordon, that I have not answered your Ma Corner upon your tetters / braufe 1 revult, knowe the truth of the park of Ottelands, as I under -stand there is niere fortie großi bastume, of divers kindes that decome denours my dure, as with tell you Ma at meeting + Where as your, ma wolde have me to meete your all Withall I am Content but I feare form inCommunions in my leggs wh which I have not fell hier , so pissen your Ma hands frest A. Ima. R.

My heart. of france answered vour. M. Letiers you feath not feare & the paine in not Tengers 1 you Inall finde them with enough for you when you Come home think it tong to see my & Gerfaulkon flie which Thope to see, When I shall have the honore to kisse worker ne hundes \ £.11111.2.

My harte give you many thanks for the diverse remembrances & have had from you our parting, when soener your sport and other occasions will suffer you come hither you Thalbe very welcome. I am glayd of soe good appearance of my roes ofspring Sir Thomas Somerfelt hath earnestly defyred me to recomend a petition he is to prefer to you, which if your path find it reasonable yee will pleas graunte or at least refer it to the counsell. Soe desyreing to be excused for thus troubling of you in tyme of your port, Still conteneu

Jours £nma.R.

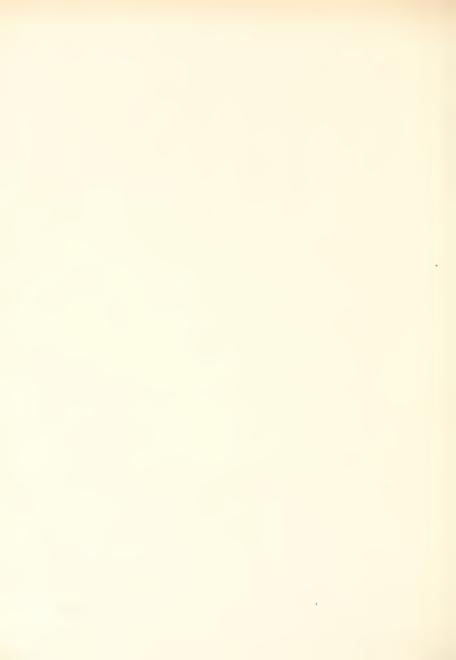

Rex Seremsime et amantissime pater, postquam iam septimum excessi annum aty ab afate crescente Fludiorum quoq incrementum expectatur, putuni esse officij mei quantum hactenius profecer... in litteris Maiestati tua indicare. Vo... etiam re prastare quod præceptor..
nomine verbo promiserat. Quod si in 1º Deo bonam acceperis partem me ad prosequen innante dum Frudia alacrius animabis. Quam precor ut Maistatem tuam diutissime mihi seru et incolumem.

> Maiestati tua obsequentis simus filius,

Regi Serenissimo, Henricus Stell.

Patri suo honoratissimo.

Rex Ser: & amantissime Pater

Cum et publico Strenarum boc anni tempore metten Errum exemplo, et privatim annua mea consuetudine monitus necessitutem muloi impositam animaduerterem, sacram Newstatem Tuam aliquo literario munere salutandi, nullum occurrebat aut concementius tempori, aut studijs meis accommodatius, aut IV La: Tilot ego. quidom existimabam) acceptius futurum, guam si carmine, nouo Cilicet scriptisms genere, ipsam donarem. Et quamquam re Seme l'atg iterum tentata parum abfuerit quin onert succum begen: tamen me, tum parentis amanti fsimi, tam Regio bumanis simi . cogitatio tandem sustentanit Dudineramenim parentes suorum liberorum nauos non solum excusare, sed interdum etiom exosculari: La Deas ipsos minutifsimia teninarum dana abanimo grato profecta non aspernari. Atg duplici bac fiducia fretus existimani Ma. T. & patrem mitissimum, O divinam in terris imaginem referentum, bac qualiacum Alsusa mea primordia born consulturam, et carmina non omnino bona, venigna interpretane meliora facturams.

The pater, & sacra Rex maiestate verende,

Qua pater amnipotens, & celsi rector Olympi,

Fronte solet micamue sales, weltburis odorem,

Aut mulsum & violas, inopis libamina dextre

Accipere, ac locupletum ippis præferre becatombis:

Hac cape fronte med tenuis primordu Meusa.

Tota guibus fundo ad DOMINUM, wt FRIITER annus

Incipiat; multo forficivs exeat; buncy.

Continua seri: FORCICIA sæcla seguentur.

Mai. T. absequentiss. filius,

H.cnricus.

Nihil mihi unguam fuit, Pater amantische, tam grutum, guin gud T. Mem sammo Dei benefico pristune et prospera va = letudini restitutam intellexerim: hu; ut guam antissime fruaris, et nos salvo, at incolumi te, guam dintissime grudeamus, Denm rogare, indesimenter pergan. Vale

Tue Mis filius diservantis =
simus
(aidis)

Regi et Patri Dotimo

(um J. M. ad nos reditum breui nune speremus, med un serbendo brevitatem Pater a mantissima facile execusa turum ti, non dissido presertim verò calo Eorfii gido En nevoso, quodetsi studgis quam ve nationi magis idoneum videatur, tamen in seribendo brevitatem potrui quam prolexitatem comendat. Vale

T. M tis filius observanus=

Carolus

Dat Ad D: Inc. 12 Feb. 1612

> Regi Optino & Paní a mantifsimo

Sine Ayant entenduque la langui grançoisi est fort necessair pour bien converser auce les nations estrangeres les jelus civiles/et sackant bien que D. Ma grande envie que i'employe brea mon temps enla langue Latine, Te fais résolu dores comant de vous éscrire tantobt en lune tantost en laure languela fir que ranssiez appercenoir le progres que un pourray faire entouies les deux. Et si jet troune que. D. M. air ceste mienne resolution pour aggreable fie m'efforceray d'autant plus pour vous faire paroistre que ie surs & Jeray tousiours

Sirco

Dostre tresaffectionne fils & tres oberfant ferunteur Challs

SJagues & Fenner.

De ex Sorenjumi et Pater anantificne,

Sort tude Majestatis hine abitum and malimenti calo hie usi famus, ut ne in campos prodice proporungum la tuerit. E adem si apud Neomertianos aeris inclementia fuerit, non me panitebis et hor Er hibernum religium tempus in tronarum artium studis, et sireralibus cortoris exercitis hie colorasse. Vinicam est quod in omni rerum Eronorum affluentia male mi habet, quod jucundissimo T. Majestasis constectu frui non licent verum cum coram non sicerat, T. Mem strens cum mai ofrervantia et obfeguio remper veneravor et colum: Vale. Dat. ad D. Gacobi 14e Novemb. 1614

TM roblequentificious filius

Regi Optimo et Patri

Sur

8. Lot wiling to omit anseoccation to wry or unto your M'in I could not chuse but fake hould of this occasion by the going of S" Len: Rich to prie-Sent my humble feruice unto your Mr Jam Soru for nothing but that I cannot be with your More at this tyme both breause I would be glad to wait upon you and also to fee cuntric wheer I was bone and the customes of it so francinge to truble your Moutoomuche with my ydel Setter Jeest

Down Mores most hamble and obvident

Some and scrudent

Green wiche the 28 of Mar (Narles)

1617

To the Banes most Excellent Magestic

Jun Pater amantifine, audia T. M. Trequentiones expecture ame literas, commodum putani Eis literis significare me efse & semper fore paratissimum tibi morem gerae in omnibus interim dabo operanotu-djis, ut T. M. Jeruire diseam guando adolene

Dat Ad (D. Jacobi r. Decemb. 1611 TM Germantis

remas films,

ANOLUS.

Regi Optimo & F Patri amantisrimo. Z

& Mist worther Musters feing can not have the narrines to a your. H. gue ne lead to declare by the Synes the dien Er Loue Tower to you with makes me Long to fee you I wishe grom my hairt that I might not regind i remedic to your disease the with must war the more patiethe breads it is the signe of a long Set but I must for many causes be jorie Er specialité venus is is troublesom & to you and zes deprined me of your most comfortable sight Enot manie good dinners the we oft. Inope by Jode grace hortled to injoye & when it hall pleas you to que me le to fee you're may is that que you fome good Receipe w arker hull heale you make you I angre the w wishing . I man obtaine by your. Majestres mest gracious sanor rifsing in the humilitie your most sacred rails & graying for your health & Long prosperiore l'end

Most worther Mustres

To my most worther and theoliens servant

(Malls

Sur

If the jundane news of your ellow had not con accumpanied we assurance of your ellows healthe John de not have been been shown to have known who truthe but shall have been one first hostor my self this boarer will signific as I have most just cause my ernest differe roanors of your nerves ohis Juffers me not to make long discours So the my most humble and hartie brayers or God far your faftee I end

Your Minsmost number and obedient some (MUNOS

5 James 20 of November 15:4

To his most Esquellent Magestic

H in

A Levant entenda de none Medeci. La tresconnes nouvelles de fon portenent de MM de colar point failly de cendre gruces a Dieu duse pricos tres are loste pour source longue en here as ente hans laquelle vien au monde me peut estre agressie. Ce que massir anna yac Me correctors formation de le neuver a reelle

Sin

Most gratious sonerayon and dear father
this gentleman M Harmotons returne to the court gave mee a well pleasing a portunity to present yo T
May we this paper the messenger of my most humble duty to your highness thinking it frontesse infinitelye long since F was so hippie as to enjoy your presence
we though f dare not presume to desire f know nothing f would so glassly obtaine and so humbly crawing yo Ma Steffing f will ever continue

Jour Ma most obedient daughter

Elizabeth

Tothe kynges most eccessent Maiefy

Son

This bearer your M. Ambalsalour coming this way I could not lett pals so good an occasion without troubling your M. with these ill lines which are btill to be sach your M. to continue me in your gracious faciour and remerance ther being nothing in this world I take so much comfort in as to be assured of it, Ir sulley Cartton will informe your M. of all that passes heere and therefore I will onelie afsure your. M. of the Princes healthand the little black babies veric will, and I besuch God that I may ever peers the happie news of M. health, which I pray dayle, it me continue, and that I may ever be wo the title of form passeud d'una fromunza die que sta inditura deglia haudse pur fatta per petua pace co fuere pient di cessi. ma interi poi con grandifs. mio cordoglio che non era steta di una corta gregua, et che di nuovo le havieva dati li crudeli afsalti, che mi fono stati tante ferite al curre, et an=cora mi tengono in forse, si o sia vina o morta, sin che questo latore col desatto requiglio della sua perfetta con ualesconza raunimi i mici tramortiti feiriti, che mentre vegeto runno cotesto corpo, efferiranno fempire cal·li preghi à Dio per la prosperita di V.M. sommo bone tempo=rale della

C. Lu Roy

Sua humilifs figla

Ewzalth

AL Re

Sire

The vant trouve la commodité qui s'est presenté par ce portrur le Sieur de Puckring qui m'estant venu voir en passant par ce lieu et seachant qu'il auxit l'evur de voir Viel mon debuoir ma obligée à ne nepliger voie se bonne occasion sans l'importaner de celles, tant pour afseuver Viell de la continuation de ma deuction à son service que de la supplier treshamelement de me continuer de ces bonne gra ces, comme la pius grande continueur de ces bonne gra ces, comme la pius grande continueur de ces bonne qua celle qui démeure à immais

5. DM

La tressleifant et treshumble fille Er sernante

Ja Zy.

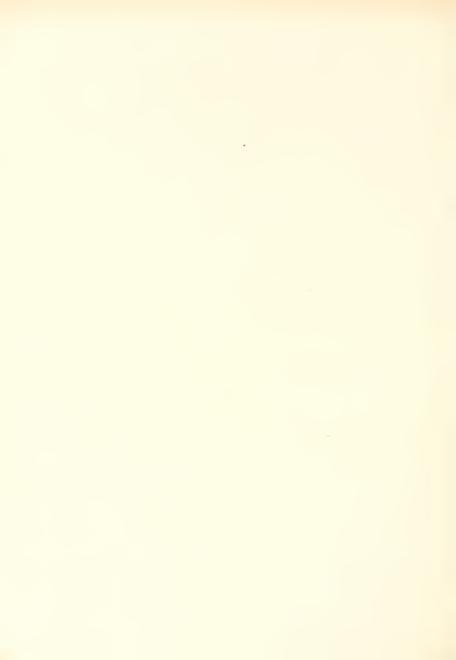

Le demande treshamble pardon a V. M. Le ce que re ne ay pas escript tout ce temps ey, mais reyant esti pour ces o sepmaines a la chafse, et che Madame L'É ucorie Sounirier, et le suc des denipons ie n'en ay point ou de temps, mais estant de retour ie n'ey rus voule manque pur cestor de vaisser bien hunviement les mains de la L. et la supplier de me continuer toustrais l'nonneur de ces bonne graces quest la plus grande contentement que me pourout arthur, et ainly prient bren continuellement pour sa prosperité et santi, ce la supplie de me tenir tourious pour alle qui a inmais

De V.M Treshumble Et tresolei fanter. fille et fernante

Hidleberg at de Septembre.

Au Roy

Being deserves by all the meanes I an to keepe my self still in your M. remembrance, I would not lett pufs so good an organien as this leaver nturning for England to present my most humble dutie and service to your Al. by these, be seeching our. M. to continue me otill in your gratious favour, it being the greatest comfort I have to think that your M. doth vonehout tolone and facour, which To hall even to descrue, in obeging with all humbleness whatsoener your M.is pleased to command her who chall ever pray to God with all hor have for yourell happiness undthat she may be our worthy the title · of your M. Reidleberg this 20 of October

Au Ro

Sinc

Il desiderio E' la memoria che lo tengo di riuerir M. M. non mei concedono pure vi minimo spatio di tempo di essercitarmi in altro, ma vogliono che lo le mandi questa lettera, come vina picciola dimostratione della mui continua ubidienza. Il fin d'ogni augua è covrere al mare. Il fin dello naui cante e condurva al perto. Na ulmio fine e solo di princere a mostra. Il ta Non ho desiderio à altro che di servirle, su riguando ad altro che a non offenderle, ne più licituaine ad altro ese a achirirle i honore et aiustione, chi io le debbo, per eper decorcia del magnifico Es gloropostitolo di.

Sua humilissima figliuola et liuotissima feruitrici

Firabetha.

ARI

Ayant pormis a mon escusior daller en Engleterre pour quelque siens affaires ie Par voully changer auce cester pour bails en tout humilité les muins de VM. La sunpliant treshumblement de me conse tours en ces bonnes graces jestant la chose du monde que il desire le plus, a perteur pourin assenier ? It que trut le monde se porte bien ions ie ne Pint portuneray plus ance men vilain escriture, et priant Dren pour sa prosperate ie demeure a iamais Reidelborg cest de Tansin

Toute fois qu'il ny a pas long temps que l'ay escrit a VM, encorr ne me puisse pas empesder, par cestey de las dire l'extreme continent que l'as d'auoir our par mes deux gentilhommes, l'aggriable nouvelle de sa bonne santé laquelle ie supplie l'Éternelle de continuez et parce que V. M. a our dire l'indisposition de Monts TE lecteur, it n'ay voulu manquer a lay mander qu'a cestheur bien mercie il se porter fort bien & est alle voir sa mere, il retournem en peu de iours. Il ne se fiit rien de nouveau in qui merite que l'en aluertise V.M. ie finiear donc le suppliant de me continuer tousiours l'honneur de ces bonne graces comme estant la plus grande contentement que sauroit auoir celle qui seru a iamaes

Sine de VM

Studleborg a 10 de Muembre. Treshumble fille et besobeisante seritante.

Au Ry.

se nes Trij de parresse d'y avoir ou blie mon devoir n'i moins faitse de restant treshumble et perpetuel relouvenir car je luis tro hoblige hur fant de oruces et bien faits que de hecher jamais par ce la ou ausreenvers I'M stamais la cause de ma silence es Fore 121 tous jours attendu le gentel homme que javois emp a Ateidelberg hour me horter que enole digne d'éscritt à V.M. stell es soien arrive hier mais il ne horte rien de nouveau, Jennoje et joint unelopie extract le soue de Henburg continue et le montre trop chand au fait de l'Administration et source fait on juge men resour a propos le plus sos f le meilleur Formee Annala na/cen envoyer tout/pre/ente. ment il a despei he un ese pres a Vienne Siour parficullierement il es pere bon e hangement en ce lier mongrandmaistre le Conted ofms ou Se Colonel Schooloung hoursons faire rapport a V. Mite on getour ou il lui hluist que le Grandmaistre mienne trouver V. M. hayer la sett ie du Prince de Anhale qu'il a encores Ce siendant sem sloveray mon temps.

à monter a chevalet dancer de main siray avec mon
trescher Prince a Hamtencourt suyvant se consente, ment et commandemant de V M. sequel me servina
tous jours de soy inviolable Sessette que brow me stora la grace de me vien faim cog nois tre et sans excep.

tion n'y reserve faire es timer et es t re

De Postre Majerte

steshumble tresobeilsant fils et son klustidele servitent

Frileric Electour Sulatin

An Roy de In Grand Bretaigne

de Withelce wan.

que te en aye en un ter mon cher Trince et mon a vons en hier et aujourchay tant avec des servier quavec des afres difnernous tha serons encore loir a Withat et faire rapport de nos avantures et hlofirs a matreschere Dame laguelle reg tune de nen avoir este har ficipant en depuis a ue une nouve. oncen wright Elson toute mane, insty Hamtencourt ce zof anvier 1613

TITUS assen Einstinen ethallas commande at losones Sonons un Ban Semesoll! Te Seron Tertaringhon Vistence explication The ny nay rien autre chose digne descrire a VIII as jes noins quil fair a fleu me donne; utte marrie

Jennije le Barra de sonamonk og keilherne & Hill: 2011 Sui representer de makaro Les far desaglaires de Boheme Je lajuhlu done treshumblement hij vouloir avaneracces et ouj's benignement et me deffartis puraeforfrudens -Confril eloniques se mereglirai tousjours en toutes mes setions Jems from to celade Safferbion de DM. enzers movet phosperite cela sugmentera Les grandes obligations que se liva jet les espréedus renere toutemunie toute et obei sance deme fre affection Tresotissant fils et forviseur brief Ifleidelverg ce 4 Decembre 16'18 Au Poj de La Grand Bretnique

5/ I kike 1 our hand. I would fine lee 162 Ma Jean fay Hominetius hie, hae, hoe, and all 5 decensons, and a part of pronomen and a part of verbum. Thave two borses alive, that can goe up my staires, a blacke horse, and a Chefnut horse. I pray (jud to ble se I four Matie 16? Maties obedient Grand-child Friderick J-tenry To the King.

I could not omit by this good occasion of M sposley to remember my dutie and humble ferrice to you Main and to assure You, that I doe day: by may to God for Your Mais happie long life and prosperitie Your Ma: ties most dutifull Grandchild and most humble Lervant From Honsholreduck the = of Nov. Srederik Henry.

To the King.

Sweete Father i learne to decline substantines and adjectives/give me your blessing/
i thank you for my best man

Your lowing some

To my Father the

