THE Uist Collection consists of the works of John Mac Codrum, Archd. MacDonald, and some of the minor Uist bards. Many of these were scattered through various collections such as Mackenzie's, Stewart's, Ranald MacDonald's, and others, while a considerable number were collected by the Editor in South Uist. It is due to the memory of the late Donald Laing, crofter at Howmore to say, that most of the valuable Mac Codrum poems, for which I am indebted to tradition, were taken down from his recitation, the probability being that many of them would otherwise have died with him. He had few equals in his day as a reciter of Gaelic poetry. I have also to express my indebtedness for notes, improved readings, as well as some of the poems, to the Rev. R. MacDonald, South Uist, and I have to express similar obligations to another Son of the Uist soil, the Rev A. J. MacDonald, Killearnan, whose Celtic knowledge and enthusiasm were always stimulating and encouraging. I crave the indulgence of Gaelic readers in regard to the many imperfections with which, notwithstanding the assistance of kind friends, the book I fear must abound.

It is gratifying to know that by this time a handsome memorial, got up by the Glasgow Uist and Barra Association, and supplied by Mr. Robert Gray, Sculptor, Glasgow, has been placed over the ashes of John Mac Codrum in the old Churchyard of Kilmuir. A fine tone block of this monument, re-produced from a photograph, is given as a frontispiece.

INTRODUCTION.

JOHN MACCODRUM.

THE poet may well be called the child of Nature, for he comes from Nature with his mystic powers and goes to her for the machinery of outward expression. As he is indebted to Nature alone for the divine breath which wafts him to the land of visions and of dreams, so he obtains from her the drapery of thought, the images wherein his thoughts may be enshrined. From Nature come the soul and essence of poetic life—"the thoughts that breathe;" from Nature also emanates the accidental form in which the spirit of the bard seeks to utter itself—the local habitation in which his genius folds its wings and rests. The true spirit of song, nature-born, and compelled from the inherent impulse of its being to become articulate, goes forth with the instinct of true filial love to greet its great mother; and she is ever responsive to its call, for, as Wordsworth, her high priest among poets, says, “Nature never betrayed the heart that loved her.” How true, therefore, are the words of our great national poet :—

“ Oh ! Caledonia, stern and wild,
Meet nurse for a poetic child ”— and in what a real sense has the sympathy between that child of song and nature, embodied as it has been in fascinating creations, made our country more than ever Scotland. The natural scenery amid which a poet’s lot is cast does not alter the essential character of his gifts ; but it has a vast influence upon the external form of his verse. They were the surroundings of his rural life which the inspired Ayrshire ploughman glorified by the light of genius ; the marvellous strains of “ Ben Dorain ” are half accounted for when we behold the mountain in whose glens and corries Duncan Bàn Macintyre spent so many of his days ; for him to climb its steeps, to breathe its bracing air and see its soothing visions, was to reach the summit of Parnassus.

It can hardly be denied, even by the most bigoted Saxon, that the Highlanders are a poetic race ; and if they have sung in strains of surpassing tenderness and passionate emotion they have been consciously or unconsciously moved by the soul-inspiring scenery of their land, the “ Land of brown heath and shaggy wood,

Land of the mountain and the flood.”

Yet, even apart from their surroundings, the Highlanders are a race of minstrels ; in circumstances and under conditions where nature is least lavish with her charms they have sung with power and melody. The light that never was on sea or land brightens up the waste and makes the moorland beautiful. Take, for example, that portion of the outer Hebrides which comprises Harris and Uist. In many respects nature has been less kind to these regions than to other favoured islands of the western sea ; yet they have been the nursery and cradle of much of our finest Gaelic poetry. We do not, of course, accept of Professor Blackie's once famous lines, in which he addresses the Long Island thus :—

“O God-forsaken, God-detested land
Of bogs and blasts, and moors, and mists, and rain,”

as a true description, or as anything else than “good-natured banter.” In its unrivalled sunsets, in the ever-shifting scenery of its cloudland, and the grand swell of its unresting sea, the Outer Hebrides possesses unique and striking features of its own. Yet the absence of soft and sylvan beauty is a great defect—looking at that country as a nursing mother of the bards. It is thus the more remarkable that it has produced so many bards who may be placed high upon the roll of fame. That land claims as its children Mary Macleod, the poetess of the Dunvegan Chiefs ; Hector Macleod, the author of some exquisite pastorals ; Archibald MacDonald, the special humourist among the bards ; Nial Mac Mhuirich, the bard and seannachie of the Clanranald ; An Ciaran Mabach, a poet of power and culture ; Iain Gobha, whose works are being so ably edited, and who has the conspicuous distinction of having embodied the evangelical type of theology in ingenious and flowing verse ; and last, but not least, John Mac Codrum, the family bard of the MacDonalds of Sleat. To these, other sweet singers might be added, whose flight was not strong enough to gain for them so high a niche in the temple of fame.

John Mac Codrum, or as it should most probably be spelt, John Mac Odrum, was known to his Countrymen as Iain Mac Fhearchair 'Ic Iamhair. It is stated that on one occasion a Skye bard, Mac-a-Leoir (Maclure)* by name, came all the way to Uist to satirise him, and addressed him thus :—

“ Iain 'Ic Fhearchair Ic Odrum nan ròn
A thòisich air an droch ceàird ;
Ard éisg nan droch filidh,
'S feàrr dhòmhsa do thilleadh tràth.

It has been alleged that the Mac Codrums—a name long extinct—were a sept of the MacDonald clan, but whether this statement is founded on fact it is very difficult to say. There are certain legendary associations connected with the name which probably account for its origin.

It is undoubted that the Norwegian occupation of the Western Isles, which lasted for three hundred years powerfully affected the place-names as well as the folk-lore and

* It was the same Mac-a-Leoir who afterwards, on a particularly cold day, and in remembrance of the bare, shelterless nature of the Uist links, said, “ 'S luath fear na droch mhna air a' machair Uidhisteach,” probably thinking that a man with a thriftless wife would be poorly clad, and to keep warm would walk fast or run.

traditions of the Hebrides. Lochlann, the Gaelic name of ancient Scandinavia—including Norway and Denmark—figures largely in West Highland tales. Mac Codrum's native district bears distinct traces of Norse influence in its legendary lore, and the name of the Scandinavian god, Odin, has left a manifold impression. Caisteal Odair (Odin's castle) is still pointed out on the farm of Griminish. Leum Odair (Odin's leap)—twelve miles long!—has left ineffaceable traces there, for the gigantean marks of the god's heels, penetrating several feet into the hard, rocky ground, are visible to this day. On the same farm also, Ceann Odair (Odin's head) is said to have been buried.

How the Mac Codrums came to be associated with the phoca, as shown in Mac-a-Leoir's satire and the traditions of North Uist—named as they were, Clann 'Ic Odrum nan ròn (The Mac Codrums of the seals)—is certainly a curious enough point. At anyrate it is plain that the seal was, in the legendary lore of the district, connected with the Norse mythology. Griminish, so much associated with Odin, was in olden times entitled to one half of the produce of the seal rock of Haskeir, a valuable property in those bygone times. The natives of the district were wont to make annual excursions to this rock in mid ocean to kill the seals, which they did with their clubs, bearing home with them this oily harvest of the deep. The oil was useful in various ways, the skin was utilised for home-made ploughing harness, and the leanest of the flesh was cooked and eaten. Tha slabhraidh gun fheum an tigh Mhic Uistein was a well-known saying applied to a famous seal-hunter when the chain for hanging the pot over the fire was unused owing to the supply of seal flesh being exhausted. But more interesting still is the mythological phase of this seal-hunting. In Uist legend it was believed that the seals were what was called Clann righ fo gheasan—that is the children of a Scandinavian king under an enchanter's spell—an idea possibly derived from the large, full, soft eye of the seal, with its appealing, semi-human expression. Hence, on one occasion a hunter aiming at a seal with his gun or bow heard the creature begin to sing, in a voice of supernatural beauty, a song lamenting the loss of her dear ones, of which the following are the chorus and a verse :—

 Ho i ho-o ! hi-o-hao !
 Ho i ho-o ! hi-o-hao !
 Cha robh mise m'ónar an raoir.
 'S mise nighean Aoidh Mhic Eoghain
 Gur eolach mi air na sgeirean
 Gur maирg a dheanadh mo bhualadh
 Bean uasal mi a tir eile.”

Upon hearing this the hunter retired, not a little astonished at what he had heard.

It is also said that after a slaughter of seals an old lady seal had been seen at night visiting the place where the slain were deposited, and recognising some of her own family among them she sung with unsurpassable pathos the song, of which this is a part :—

“ Spog Fionghall, spog Fionghall,
 Spog Spaidreig, spog Spaidreig
 Spog mo chuileinn chaoimh chaidrich.”

The connection of the seal with the remains of Norse mythology in Uist is clearly seen in this fact, that at the time of the annual visit to the seal rock—Bualadh na sgeire—a horse racing was held in the district, and there are many still living who remember it, which was called An Odaidh. There can be little doubt that this function was the survival of a Pagan festival in honour of the Scandinavian god Odin, who was so much connected with the district, and that its observance was continued as a propitiation for the slaughter of the seals. Thus do heathen customs and traditions continue after ages of Christian culture, and after they have lost all meaning to those who observe them.

The supposition was that Clann Ic Odrum,* for some reason or another, were of the kith and kin of the phocæ, the children of the Scandinavian king or god, and not improbably they were called originally Clann Odain, afterwards Clann Mhic Odain, which was easily transformed into Mac Odrum. What the reason of this association with the seals can only be a matter for speculation: but it may be accounted for by some old tradition that the Mac Codrums were of Norse extraction.

Mac Codrum's birth-place he has immortalised in a verse of "Smeòrach Chlann Dòmhnuill," a song composed to his favourite clan, the MacDonalds of Sleat.

* It was said that a woman of the same surname, and probably lineage, as the bard, used to be seized with violent pains at the time of the annual seal hunt, out of sympathy, it was supposed, with her suffering relatives.

“ An Cladh Chòthain rugadh mise
'N Aird a Runair chaidh mo thogail
Fradharc a' chuain uaimhrich chuislich
Nan stuadh guanach cluaineach cluicheach.”

The district in which our bard was born and brought up abounds in ecclesiastical names, and was undoubtedly in olden days the seat of Church authority in the island. The church and glebe of the parish are located there, as well as more extensive tracts of kirk lands in pre-Reformation times. The Virgin Mary was the patron saint, for the old name of the parish, as well as the church, was Kilmuir ; there are the penny lands of Mary, adjacent to the glebe, called Peighinn Muire, and it is said that part of the old vicarage teinds of North Uist, prior to commutation, was a young seal, designated Cuilean Muire. Ard-a-Runair, where the poet was brought up, is a promontory jutting out into the Western Sea. The name means the point of the secretary, or clerk, probably applied to the inferior functionary known as fear-sgriobhaidh in the mediaeval church. Cladh Chòthain, where Mac Codrum was born, lies close by Aird-a-Runair, a burying-ground named after a well-known saint, who has also been perpetuated in Kilchoan, Ardnamurchan, and elsewhere. Not far off is Eilean Drostain, called after another saint ; and there is a rock quite near to the poet's birth-place, called Sgeir na Circe,* where there must have been a church at one time—all showing the ecclesiastical character of that region.

Mac Codrum's life was outwardly uneventful. Like many of his poetical compeers, he had the double disadvantage of being poor and illiterate. It is said of this witty votary of the unlettered muse that, on one occasion, Alexander MacDonald, the Ardnamurchan bard, said to him, “’Nam biodh an dà theanga agad ’s tu bàrd a b’fheàrr na mise” (If you had the two tongues you would be a better bard than I). To this John replied, “’Nam biodh na dà chànan ’s an aon teanga dh’ fhoghnad e” (If I had the two languages in the one tongue it would suffice). Mac Codrum knew only his native language, but in his hands, as in those of all the best Gaelic bards, it was a powerful vehicle for expressing the manifold phases of human thought and feeling.

Little is known to us of his life save what is associated with his poems, as well as with those witty impromptu verses and remarks which have more or less survived in the oral tradition of his countrymen. We are not told that he lisped in numbers with the same infantile precocity of Rob Donn. The earliest effort of his muse was Oran na bainnse, a satire composed upon a wedding which, with some other lads, he endeavoured, uninvited, to attend. There were always three social grades on these occasions. The esoteric circle consisting of the immediate friends of the young couple, the schoolmaster, and possibly the officiating minister, occupied the ben: in the other end of the house—the butt—the next grade, with the cattle for their immediate neighbours, were regaled with good cheer; while outside a promiscuous assembly of neighbours received hospitable, though rudely-served, fare. In this crowd young Mac Codrum and his friends appeared, but being regarded as intruders they were debarred from joining in the hospitalities of the festive scene. The young bard resented the treatment, and poured forth his contempt for the bridegroom in vigorous though somewhat broad lines. Like the juvenile efforts of most bards, it adds nothing to its author's fame. Yet it possesses some interest as the first effort of Mac Codrum's muse, and as affording promise of his future style. As might be expected, although the author's name was not divulged, the satire was keenly resented by the bridegroom against whom its shafts of ridicule were directed. Fearchar, the poet's father, who is said to have been a pious man, having discovered that John was the author, advised him seriously not to injure the fair fame of the family by any further exhibitions of levity. It was a hard piece of self-denial to impose upon a mind that was awakening to its poetic power. Yet it is said he obeyed his father, repressed the rising tide of inspiration, and not only refrained from perpetrating offensive satires, but totally abstained from verse. After his father's death Mac Codrum again mounted his Pegasus, and to such purpose that Sir James MacDonald of Sleat, then proprietor of North Uist, made him his family bard, with an annual pension. This gratuity, it is said, took the form of five bolls of meal, and when the bard received intimation of it from the lips of Sir James himself he is reported to have used his poet's license with good effect—"Gu neart-aicheadh Dia sibhse Thighearn," says John, "'s maith an t-aran, ach b' fheàird e 'n t-annlan," whereupon the original order was supplemented to the extent of five stones of cheese.

During his lifetime, which extended from the early years of the 18th century down to somewhere in the eighth decade, five or six of the MacDonalds of Sleat were proprietors of his native island. In his elegy to Sir James, who died at Rome, he mourns their early death, and celebrates their noble qualities :—

“ Sinn ri iargainn nan curaidh
Nach robh 'n iasad ach diombuain
Gun fhear liath a bhi uil' air an làraich.

· · · · ·
Chaill sinn còignear no seisear
De na connspuinn bu treise
Nach robh bed ann am Breatunn an àicheadh.”

They were all men of intelligence, some of them of exceptional intelligence, culture, and ability. Their appreciation of the peasant genius prompted them to deal kindly and generously with him, and the gratitude he expressed in no unstinted measure in many eulogistic strains was the offspring of true attachment.

A Greek poet has remarked that there is no other remedy for love, either in the way of salve or plaster, except the muses. The history of literature shows that the poet, of all mortals, is the most susceptible to love. Love songs constitute no small element in the lyrical department of the poetry of nations. As love has often nerved the warrior's arm to doughty actions, so “in peace love tunes the shepherd's reed." To the poet, keenly alive as he is to all outward influence, in whom the fair aspects of nature stir such profound and genuine emotion ; whose enthusiasm is kindled by heroic deeds ; whose reverence is quickened by goodness, human or divine, female loveliness and grace can hardly fail to be attractive. Nor have the hearts of our Gaelic bards, as a rule, been callous to the claims of beauty. Distinguished and obscure, they have sung of their loves in verses of immortal tenderness. John Mac Codrum is one of the few exceptions. The other strings of the Gaelic lyre have, at his touch, responded with a music that still powerfully moves the hearts of his countrymen. Clio Melpomene and Thalia have not in vain been invoked. He has sung of living goodness and departed worth, and celebrated in warlike measures the heroes of his native land ; he has sung of the uncertainty of life, the evanescence of youth, and the sorrows of old age ; she "in heaven yclept Euphrosyne" has been responsive to his beck, and "laughter, holding both his sides," has not been slow to follow. But if ever he experienced the tender passion he very carefully prevented its appearing in his poetry. Anacreon complains in one of his odes of his own too amorous nature, for whatever theme he wished to celebrate in song, whether the brave deeds of the Atreides, or the exploits of Cadmus, his lyre would ever answer in the strains of love. He and John Mac Codrum were in this respect at the poles of inspiration. The only woman whom Mac Codrum ever praised in song was the celebrated Flora MacDonald, to whom the last two verses of his eulogy to her husband, Captain Allan MacDonald of Kingsburgh, were devoted. But the virtues he reverenced in her were not those of the specially feminine type, but rather the heroic qualities which have given her a name in history :—

“ Thug Dia roghadh céile dhuit
Rinn mais’ us féill ri dàimh,
Rinn an gniomh bu smiorala
Rinn bean a tha no bha ;
Le barrachd uaisl’ us righealachd,
Ghluais i anns na gniomhara,
Thug seanachas buan do linneachan,
Bheir cuimhn’ an déigh a bàis.”

The probability is that John passed through life unscathed by the arrows of the winged god, esteeming the daughters of Eve not even one of nature’s agreeable blunders, and in no sense the special gift of heaven. In classifying his poems, therefore, love-songs are a blank, and the rest may be arranged as Satirical, Patriotic, Ethical, Elegaic.

I.—SATIRICAL SONGS.

Classical Gaelic poetry has not been wont to look at the ludicrous aspects of things. Its humorists have been few and far between, as scarce as roses in December. Generally speaking, the Gaelic bards have been a serious race, whose gravity is not very often relieved by the sunshine of a laugh. They can make us weep and shudder, admire and muse, but they are not fond of tickling our fancy with merry thoughts. They seem to think that the ludicrous aspects of existence are unworthy of the dignity of rhyme. The genius of the people seems to have received a melancholy tinge—perhaps from the frequent wildness of the scenery amid which their lot was cast, perhaps also from the struggle for existence involved in an unproductive soil, and a normal condition of warfare. Their music seems to a stranger to be characterised by sadness, and to be pitched upon a minor key ; the note of the piobmhor—the national instrument—is shrill and wailing. In harmony with this characteristic, the more ancient types of Gaelic poetry, such as we find in the Dean of Lismore's book and other Ossianic collections, as well as the more outstanding Gaelic poetry of the last three hundred years, seem greatly lacking in the spirit of humour. It is only as a comparatively modern development, arising possibly out of closer contact with non-Celtic phases of culture, that a spice of humour has been infused into the literature of the Gael. There is only one Gaelic bard who is distinctly comic—Archibald MacDonald—and even the satires of well-known bards like Iain Lom, MacDonald, Macintyre, and Rob Donn, are not of a kind to make us laugh. They are scurrilous and abusive, hearty earnest and powerful in their expression of dislike, but seldom funny. Mac Codrum may fairly be given the first place among Gaelic satirists. His satires are not merely vituperative—they are always amusing, and at times they abound in most exquisite wit. He generally avoids the coarseness which disfigures the satires of some others of our great bards, and he does not indulge so largely in fierce personalities, he simply revels in the ludicrous aspect which the object of his satire for the moment presents. In one of his fugitive snatches, than which none is more characteristic of his gay and satirical wisdom, he indulges in that tone of railly which was his favourite one towards womankind. It is called “Oran nam bantraichean,” and as only a fragment of it is extant it may be given here. John had buried his second wife, and he more than hints that he, an eligible widower, was the object of embarrassing attentions from the widows of the district. He does not appear to have needed that sovereign cure for gout which Tony Weller “took reg’lar,” and recommended to those similarly afflicted, namely, a widow with a strong voice and a disposition to use it. Whether he succumbed to the charms of one of these experienced sirens in his third matrimonial experiment it is impossible to say. The satire of the verses is directed as much against himself as against the widows, and the subject is disposed of in his light and airy fashion :—

ORAN NAM BANTRAICHEAN.

“ Tha na bantraichean ’g am àrach,
 ‘S gun agam mu dheighinn páirt diubh,
 Och ! Och ! mo chall ’us mo nàire,
 Falbhaidh mi ’s fàgaidh mi ’n tir
 Theireadh iad gur mi ’n coireach,
 Mi ’n coireach, mi ’n coireach,
 Theireadh iadsan gur e mise ’n coireach,
 Ged a theirinn-sa nach mi.

’M Peabuill ’s a’ Sannda ’s a’ Sollas,
 Gu’m bi dream dhiubh anns gach dorus,
 Leis mar a chuir iad ’na m’ bhoil mi,
 Theid mi’ Sgorr am faigh mi sith.

Thuirt té dhiubh le còmhradh caoimhneal ;
 ‘S maith a b’ airidh e air maighdinn
 ‘S maith a cheaunsaicheadh e raoin’ *
 An dorus faing ged bhiodh i stri.’

Thuirt té eile gu ceol spòrs doibh,
 ‘Ciod e ’m fath dhuinn ’bhi ’ga thòrachd ?
 B’ fhearr leis bhi falbh leis na h-brain,
 Na bhi dòrainn ri cois-chruim.’

‘Sin ’nuair thuirt Bàilidh an Tighearn,

Another specimen of the bantering style which Mac Codrum adopted towards women is a series of complaints against his wife, for real or imaginary mismanagement of those domestic matters which directly bore upon his own

* The word raoine is not, we believe, in books or dictionaries. It is, however, quite intelligible in Uist, though not quite so common or current as it was forty years ago. It means a young barren cow that had a calf, or perhaps two; but being barren, and having “cuid a laoigh air a leis,” i.e., the calf’s part or share (of milk) on her thighs, she would be strong and difficult to lay hold of and manage at the time of shipping. Hence the propriety of the supposed compliment to Mac Codrum’s strength.

comfort. It sheds a vivid light upon the social economy of the Highland people in these bygone times. In every well regulated establishment, even of the humbler sort, linen cloth and sewing thread were woven and spun from the home-raised flax; and even now, where the old habits are lingering, the wool of the native sheep is manufactured locally into clò, or Highland tweed, than which none is a better protection from the fierce winter blasts that sweep over the Western Isles. Hence John Mac Codrum was not unreasonable in saying:—

 A cheannach gu léine,
 Dh' aindeoин no dh 'eiginн,
 Ged tha mo bhean beò.
 'S eiginн domh rithist

Mac Codrum composed a satire on the tailors of the district, but only an incomplete version seems to survive. With other Highland bards he shared the Highland prejudice against the members of this most indispensable craft. It is not difficult to trace the origin of this somewhat unreasonable contempt, which still lingers among Mac Codrum's countrymen. In days when war was the normal state of society in the Highlands, and the chase was the chief occupation in times of peace, every man entitled to the name led the life of a hunter and warrior, and the tailor's trade, which demanded no extraordinary muscular development, was relegated to those to whom nature had denied a manly physique. If there chanced to be a sickly, lame, or otherwise deformed lad in a family, to him was committed the task of making the clothes of the community. Hence the tailor became typical of those qualities of physical weakness which the half-civilised man in every country despises, and the traditionary notions which invested the tailor with these undesirable attributes have survived the conditions from which they sprung. The saying is still current in the Highlands :—

“ Cha bu duine tàillear ;
 Cha bu duine dhà dhiubh ;
 Chuireadh am fitheach le creig
 Dà fhichead ’s a dhà dhiubh !”

The composition of “Oran nan Tàillearan” was not, as has been alleged, the cause, but rather the effect of an inconvenient and irksome state of raggedness. Repeated demands upon the services of various sartorial acquaintances had no effect, until at last John, being very much out at elbows, gave vent to his resentment in some satirical verses, of which the following are all that remain :—

“ Saoil sibh fein nach mòralach
 An spòrs a bha ’s na tàillearan ;
 Faire ! faire ! co bhiodh ann,
 ’Na foghnadh danns ’us gàireachdaich :
 Ma bheireas dragh no trilleach orra ;
 Drip le mnaoi no pàisdean,
 ’S ann a chithear feadh na tire iad,
 ’Nan aoidheachdaich ’s nan anrachdaich.*

* “ Nan aoidheachdaich ’s nan anrachdaich.”

Aoidheachdach is derived from aoidh—a guest ; first, of course, in

'M b' aithne dhuibhse mhnathan

a good sense, but a man who taxes too much the hospitality of his friends, becomes contemptible, and is called an aoidheachdach—a “sorner.” Anrachdach probably comes from the word rath—fortune, or luck, or prosperity—with the primitive an prefixed, so that it would first be an-rathach, an adjective; an-rathachd being the noun. With the common termination ach added, the above noun might very easily become anrachdach. It means a miserable wanderer, in fact, a tramp, without the idea of vicious practices. The shorter word, anrach, is in Neil Macleod’s “ Gleann 's a' robh mi og,” in the sense of a wanderer, but does not seem to involve any degradation, but may mean honest poverty, still a state men will look down upon.

† Why this craft were supposed to be exceptionally untruthful it is hard to say.

Dean Swift's description of satire as being a glass in which the beholder saw every man's face but his own, does not hold good of Mac Codrum's, which, like those of other Highland bards, possess the genuine quicksilver of personality. Two companion pieces of this description are "A chòmhstòri" and "Am Frisealach 's am Baideanach." They were composed to two farmers in North Uist, who were near neighbours, but lived on exceedingly bad terms. One of them was called Donald Fraser, and the other was known as Am Baideanach, from his being a native of that district. It appears from Am Frisealach's am Baideanach that Donald Fraser was married to the widow of a son* of

* Probably Raghall Mac Shir Seumas.

Sir James MacDonald of Sleat, and that he succeeded to the M'Queens, in Uist, in the possessson of lands which, tradition says, they had a lease to last “Fhad 's a bhios bainne aig boin duibh, no Cnogaire Mhic Cuinn 'na bhun.” Both were strangers in Uist, and as they were no great favourites the satires were very popular. Their mutual hostility was the scandal of the neighbourhood, and, in the opinion of the bard, the realms of darkness took a deep interest in the contentions of the impious pair:—

“ Bha Uidhist air a nàrachadh,
Bha Iutharn air a fàsachadh,
Le guidheachan na càraig ud ;
Bha ioghnadh air an Abharsair ;
Bu neònach leis nach d' thàinig iad.”

Mac Codrum's satirical vein appears at its best and brightest in “Di-moladh piob Dhòmhuiil bhàin,” which is undoubtedly the best thing of the kind in the language. “Aoir Uisdean Phiobair,” by Macintyre, although possessing a sledge-hammer power of abuse, is coarse in conception, and only contains one verse of genuine humour. It is totally lacking in that lightness of touch, as well as polished wit, that characterise the satire of the Uist bard. Mac Codrum was provoked by an absurdly misdirected eulogy upon the minstrelsy of Dòmhull Bàn, especially when there were illustrious schools of pipers upon whom unstinted praise might be lavished. He records in an imaginative way the history of this discordant instrument. It was in the possession of Tubal Cain, who played Gaelic tunes upon it; it survived the disasters of the deluge; it was damaged by incompetent musicians, until attempts to play it undermined the strength of two noted Fingalian warriors, Diarmad and Gaul. He winds up by an expression of pity for the man who plays it, as you could winnow barley grain with all the wind it needs!

Oran a bhonn-a-sia also abounds in strokes of real and sprightly humour. A Skye farmer, Roderick Macleod, Borlain, a man of some consequence in his own island, had occasion to ferry cattle from Loch Ephort, in North Uist, across the minch to his own lands. Among others, John Mac Codrum, who was vigorous in body as in mind, was called upon to assist in shipping the live stock. After this had been accomplished, and the sails of the smack hoisted to catch the favouring breeze, Mac Codrum received as a fee for his exertions what, in the uncertain light of eve, the poet's exuberant fancy took to be a guinea. In the song he describes the elaborate politeness with which he thanked the generous donor, and how one of the company was despatched to the neighbouring inn to get part of the handsome gift dissolved into mountain dew. When the supposed guinea was presented in payment, the tableau may be imagined. The opportunity afforded by Macleod's apparent niggardliness was too good to be lost, and the bard being carried away by the comic aspect of the incident, Oran a bhonn-a-sia was the result. But John's intention was not really malicious, and he seems to have regretted the offence which the exercise of his wit caused to the hero of the half-penny and his many friends. He was willing to give his butt the benefit of the doubt. On singing the verses afterwards in company, and hearing his audience burst into loud laughter, he added the following supplementary impromptu verse, in which the incident of the famous evening receives two alternative explanations, either of which the charity of his hearers may accept :—

“ Faire ! faire ! dhaoin’ uaisle
C’ uim’ nach gluaiseadh sibh stòlda ?
'S ann tha Ruairi 'na bhantraich
Agus clann air tigh’nn bg air ;
'S gu ’m bi dubhar na h-oidhche
Cur nam miltean gu dòrainn
Cuir nan loingeas gu cladaech
Far nach faic iad an t-seolaid.”

Oran do'n Teasaich is not a satire, strictly speaking, but it is really satirical in its method and style, and may be appropriately referred to here. It is one of the most finished, as well as happiest efforts of the bard—quaint in conception, humorous in expression, faultless in diction, and may fairly be classified with Burns’s “Address to the toothache.” He describes his own wild and fitful fancies while lying sick of a fever, and his forlorn condition during the period of convalescence. The presiding genius of his visions is an imaginary old woman, to whose baneful influence he attributes the disturbing fancies of the sick-bed. She filled his head with mad notions ; he saw dead and living men ; the appearance of great Hector of Troy, and the heroes of ancient Rome—a gloomy, dusky, crooked carlin, full of illusions and falsehoods. The weak and decrepit state to which he was reduced is depicted in lines, every one of which is brimful of humour.

It may not be inappropriate at this stage to refer to some of those sallies of wit and humour of which he was so dexterous a master. His thorough knowledge of his mother-tongue, combined with his quick perception of analogies in sound and sense, enabled him to play upon words in a manner which often produced amusing effects. The typical Highlander is not a punster, nor was punning a form of wit in which Celtic bards appear to have indulged. John Mac Codrum, however, was a punster, and some of his efforts in this, as a rule, somewhat attenuated form of wit, have survived. He was met one day by a man, of whom he asked the question, "Co ás a thàinig thu?" "Thàinig mi," answered the other, "ás an Uachdar.*" "Mata," says John, "'s ann mar sin is dòcha na coin 'ga d' imlich!" (Where did you come from? From Uachdar. Then the dogs will be more likely to lick you). His answer to James Macpherson, of Ossian celebrity, when he was collecting materials for his book, is well known, and, in view of the somewhat clumsy form of the question, rather a good hit. "A bheil dad agad air a Fhéinn?" "Cha 'n 'eil," says John, "'s ged a bhitheadh cha ruiginn a leas iarraidh a nis."

Landing once at Tobermory, along with a boat's crew, he subjected one of the natives to a regular battery of somewhat irritating replies. This party asked him, "Co ás thug sibh an t-ionradh?" "Thug ás na gàirdeanan," was the reply. "'N ann o thuath thàinig sibh?" "Pàirt o thuath 's pàirt o Thighearnan." "Co 's àirde tha 's a' bhàta?" "Tha 'n crann." "S e tha mi faighneachd co 's fear riaghlaidh ?" "Tha 'n stiùir."

*Uachdar, a township in the Island of Benbecula, also the Gaelic word for cream.

It is told of Mac Codrum that he once went on a visit to Kingsburgh, in Skye, and not being known to the domestics, and, not having introduced himself, he was allowed for some time to sit unnoticed in the kitchen. John may have been a little out of humour at the non-recognition ; at any-rate, on one of the servants, knowing that he had come from Uist, and it being reported that the Clanranald of the day was dead, asking him, "Nach do chaochail Mac-Ic-Ailein ?" John replied, "Mar do chaochail rinn iad an eucoir, thiodhlaic iad e." After a while the same servant asked him, "Ciod e cho fad 's a bha e os cionn talmhainn ?" "Bha trì fhichead bliadhna 's a deich." The girl felt insulted—and no wonder—at these answers, and reported to her mistress that the most impertinent man she ever saw was in the kitchen. It was soon discovered that the stranger was MacCodrum and the master and mistress, who were none other than Captain Allan MacDonald and the illustrious Flora, was at once hospitably entertained. John was once enjoying a neighbour's hospitality in the form of the simple but wholesome diet of bread and milk. It seems, however, that the quantity was meagre, and on seeing a fly alight on the milk and getting drowned, the bard, who could not resist a joke even in these circumstances, addressed the ill-fated fly thus :—"A chreutair lepidich a dhol 'ga 'd' bhàthadh fein far a feudadh tu grunnachadh." "Give the man more milk," said his host, "Tha diol an arain a dh' annlan ann," answered John.

In MacCodrum's day sea-weed, in which the Hebridean coasts abound, was a most valuable commodity, and its manufacture into kelp a large source of revenue both to proprietor and tenant. The equinoctial south-west gales drive huge heaps of this once golden harvest upon the western shores ; but sometimes a tempest from an opposite quarter sweeps it away before it is secured. On such an occurrence once taking place, John's wife who was probably the more worldly minded of the two, lamented bitterly and with some vociferation "Dh' fhalbh an fheamain dh' fhalbh an fheamain etc., etc." She went on till John's patience was exhausted and he, dryly, remarked in his own satirical fashion—"Ma dh' fhalbh a bhuidheag dh' fhuirich a ghleadhrach !" *

On another occasion he made a tour through South Uist and called upon the Priest of Stilligarry. John was ushered into his reverence's presence without any formal announcement and found him writing and at the same time enjoying the fragrant weed. On seeing this the bard at once remarked :—

" Dà rud nach faca mi riamh
 'S tha mi liath an déis bhi òg
 Sagart a' cluich air a' phioib
 'S a' sgriobhadh le ite geòidh."

"Mar a meall mo bharail mi 's tu Iain Mac Fhearchair" the priest replied.

Another time he found himself dining in company with a shoemaker and a manufacturer of creels. Knives and forks were not in universal use or requisition in those days and working people contented themselves with those forks which nature provided forc nan cuig mheur. Mac Codrum, who of course must put the situation at once into rhyme said :—

* These being the Uist names for two kinds of sea-weed.

“ ‘Sgian fhada gheur aig a’ ghreusaiche,
 ’S core aig fear dheanamh nan cliabh,
 ’S mise ’n so le m’ dhà laimh loma
 ’S mi ’n comaidh riutha mu ’n bhiadh.”

In MacCodrum’s time there were two Catechists in North Uist one John MacDonald who was blind and well-known as the “Dall Mor” and another known we believe as “An Ceistear Crotach” who was not only lame but otherwise deformed. The “Dall Mor” was always led about by a boy and as he was one day out on a catachetical tour the North Uist bard was seen approaching. Whether it was a case of mistaken identity or a spirit of mischief that possessed the youthful guide he told the “Dall Mor” who was a great rhymster that the “Ceistear Crotach” was at hand. There does not seem to have been much love lost between the professional brethren for the “Dall Mor” thus accosted the supposed Catechist :—

“ Fàillt ort féin a bhràthair ceistear
 Dheanadh an ceasnachadh mìn
 Cha tig an latha gheibh thu leannan
 Leis a’ char a tha ’na’ d’ dhruim
 Mar mheallas am maide ’n cùbair
 ’N àm a’ bhi lùbadh a chinn
 ’S ionnan sin ’s mo bhràthair ceistear
 Toil gun fheasdal aig a mhnaoi.”

Whereupon greatly to the surprise of the author of these somewhat savage lines a voice—not that of the “Céistear Crotach”—was heard in reply:—

“ C’ arson a dh’ aoir thu ’n ceistear crotach
 Duine cho bochd ’s tha ’s tha ’san dùlhaich,
 ’S ged bhiodh e falbh air a’ bhàta
 B’ fhearr e na clraigionn gun sùilean
 Chunnaic mi t’ athair air bàta
 Cha ’n fhaigheadh e gu h-ârd a stilireadh
 Dh’ itheadh e urrad ri dithis
 Mo Righ ! ged theirinn triùir ris.

MacCodrum’s best impromptu and one of the happiest of its kind, shewing real genius and resource was composed on the occasion of draining Loch Asduinn in North Uist. This operation was carried on under the supervision of the factor and the whole country side turned out to take part in the work. John with characteristic indolence did not appear upon the scene till the time for refreshments had arrived. The factor desirous of getting a rise out of him offered the bard a glass of whisky at the same time saying “So Iain sin agad gloine de bhurn Loch-Asdainn.” John took the glass and perceiving an aroma more potent than cold water at once replied:—

“ Gu ’m beannaicheadh Dia burn Loch-Asdainn
 Ge maith fhàileadh ’s feàrr a bhlas,
 ’S ma tha e mar so gu léir
 ’S mòr am beud a leigeil ás.”

I I.—PATRIOTIC SONGS.

We now pass on to a brief review of Mac Codrum's patriotic poems, nearly all of which are composed either to the Clan MacDonald in general, or some of its more noted scions. The bard exulted in the heroic history of his favourite clan, and the great men who gave it lustre, and he lavishes all the wealth of his copious vocabulary in singing their praises. For a man who could neither read nor write—such is the tradition, and most probably the truth—he showed a singular acquaintance—not only with MacDonald history, but that of other clans as well.

A notable poem to an individual MacDonald is that to Captain Allan MacDonald of Kingsburgh whom Dr. Johnson's biographer describes as “the figure of a gallant Highlander exhibiting the graceful mien and manly looks which our popular Scottish song has justly attributed to that character.” Through the strange irony of fortune, it was his destiny to fight for the royal house on behalf of whose foe both his father and wife had risked life and fortune. Owing to the part which old Kingsburgh took in the troubles of '45 and the pecuniary losses he sustained in connection with the movement, Captain Allan and his brave wife and children were compelled to seek a home in the American continent in the month of August, 1774. On the outbreak of the War of Independence which took place shortly after his arrival in the new world, Kingsburgh joined the loyalist cause and received the post of Brigadier-General. On the defeat of the forces of the crown at Moore's Creek he was taken prisoner and for a considerable time was confined in Halifax jail. It is gratifying to think that on peace being concluded he was released from captivity, returned to Scotland, and closed his life where it began at Kingsburgh his ancestral home. It was to the hero of this somewhat eventful career that MacCodrum's poem was composed. It is a fine piece, full of dignity as well as vigour of style and couched in the choicest terms. The two concluding verses beginning "Chuir Dia rogha céile ort," are in praise of Flora and very happily express her connection with those historic events which impart so romantic an interest to the middle of last century.

"Tàladh Iain Mhùideartaich" has been handed down by tradition, rightly or wrongly, as a specimen of the bard's power of extempore versification. It was composed to the son of Clanranald's heir, the grandfather of the present head of the House, Admiral Sir Reginald MacDonald, K.C.B., under circumstances which are still recounted in the traditions of MacCodrum's countrymen. MacCodrum, who seems to have possessed those roving propensities which characterized the bards and minstrels of ancient times, was one day seen approaching Nunton House in Benbecula—then a residence of the Clanranald. Mac' Ic Ailein, who happened to be walking about the premises, leading his heir, Iain Muideartaich by the hand, sent him to meet the bard. With the open-handed generosity which was always characteristic of the Clan Ranald chiefs, Mac' Ic Ailein gave the child a coin to give him. MacCodrum on receiving this substantial greeting asks if that was all the money he had, and on his replying that it was, the bard said, "Well, there is not another heir in the world that would give me all his possessions but yourself." On this he takes the child in his arms and walks to the house, but Iain Müideartach would not be taken from him until he composed a song in his praise. MacCodrum asked to be allowed to walk once round the garden previous to his doing as requested, and the tradition says that on having done so the poem was ready and sung to Iain Müideartach. Probably the poet took his own time to the perambulation as there was no limit as to time imposed on his walk round the large garden at Nunton. The "Tàladh" is a review of the heroic exploits of the boy's ancestors in many a hard fought field. He traces their prowess from the days of Harlaw when Lachann MacMhuirich Albannach stirred up the courage of the MacDonalds with his famous poem:—

"Chlanna Cuinn cuimhnichibh, Cruas an àm na h-iorgaill;"

down through Kinloch Lochy—called Blàr Léine because the Highlanders fought in their shirts when Lord Lovat and the Master of Lovat were slain, and the Fraser Clan almost annihilated—Inverlochy, Killiecrankie, and Sheriffmuir—at all of which the Clan Ranald fought with the traditional heroism of their race. These proud memories were not unmixed with regrets. At the battle of Sheriffmuir the chief of the Clan Ranald met with a soldier's death "Thuit Ailein le neart an teine." Iain dubh Mac Iain 'Ic Ailein, a scion of the same House, laments this chieftain's loss in a very fine elegy:—

“A bhliadhna leuma d' ar milleadh
 An coig ceud 's a mil' eile,
 Chaill sinn ùr ròs na finne,
 'S geur a leus air ar cinneadh ri 'm beò.”

Oran do Mhac 'Ic Ailein, or as it is known in Uist Cuid-eachadh Iain Ghrùdair, was composed to the father of Iain Muideartach, the hero of the foregoing Tàladh shortly after his succeeding to his patrimony. The bard comes to the assistance of a local rhymer who had indulged in some miserable efforts at eulogizing Clan Ranald and composes this fine poem which in purity of diction and sustained rhythm is inferior to few he has composed.

The only other poem to an individual of the MacDonald Clan is that to Sir James MacDonald of Sleat; but it will more conveniently and quite as appropriately be noticed when the elegies come under review.

Of the poems composed in honour of the Clan MacDonald the best known is “Smeòrach Chlann Dòmhnuill.” The mavis of the MacDonalts warbles his native woodnote wild with great melody and power in praise of his native country and his favourite clan. He devotes a number of stanzas to his sea-girt Uist, with its flocks and herds—its fruitful harvest, its flowery meadows, its well clad youths. He could not indeed say of it as Alexander MacDonald did of his own loved Mor-thir:—

“A choill gu h-uile fo làn duillich
 'S i 'na culaidh bainnse.”

for Uist could not—at least in historic times—rejoice in woodland scenery. Indeed MacCodrum is said to have plainly insinuated that the woods of Mor-thir were not of such profuse luxuriance as to justify poetic enthusiasm, and to have addressed the other bard :—

C' arson a mhol thu 'Mhor-thir mhosach
Airson stopan calltann?

The natale solum of the bard may seem bleak to others, but to him it is always beautiful—and, to Mac Codrum, Uist was fairer than any other land beneath the sun, “An tir a's bòidhche ta ri fhaicinn,” because it was the country of his heart, round which the tendrils of his inspired affections clung and wound themselves, and he regarded it with that reverence and love which a true son cherishes for his mother. The “Smeòrach” also tells that he was born among the MacDonalds, and this is the prelude to his launching out into praise of their prowess and their virtues. It has been stated that the superabundance of epithets in which his “Smeòrach” abounds is a literary vice. But if this is so our poet shares it with Alexander MacDonald and other eminent votaries of the Celtic muse—in fact it seems to be almost inseparable from, as it is certainly characteristic of, much of our Gaelic poetry. Moladh Chloinn Dòmhnuill is known to Uist tradition as Cuideachadh Dhòmhail 'Ic Fhionnlaidh. The circumstances of its composition are hinted at in the opening verse. It appears that Mac Codrum and a neighbouring poetaster of the name of Dòmhnull Mac Fhionnlaidh, happened to meet once in the same house in North Uist. Donald repeated some incoherent rhymes that he had perpetrated to some of the MacDonald gentry of the Island, while Mac Codrum lay on a bench half asleep. Wakened from his partial slumbers by the discordant and unpoetic rhapsodies of his companion, Mac Codrum roused himself and, it is said, began to recite or sing in his own masterly style, Moladh Chlann Dòmhnuill. Like the rest of his Clan poems it is full of enthusiasm for the ancient prowess, not only of the MacDonalds, who, of course, occupied the premier position in his affections and respect, but of all the other Highland Clans. It is instinct with the spirit of the fiery cross ; many a brave champion would come to the MacDonalds' banner in the hour of trial and the day of danger. Emigration had done much, even in Mac Codrum's time to depopulate the Highlands. After '45, when heritable jurisdictions were abolished, and the disarming and unclothing Acts were passed, the bonds between the chiefs and their people were sensibly loosened, and the Highlanders began to pour in an unremitting stream, partly to the large towns of the South, and partly to distant parts of our Colonial Empire. This emigration was in part voluntary, but in part involuntary. It would be outwith a literary estimate like this to discuss at length the question of Highland depopulation from a political point of view. But truth belongs to no side of polities, and it cannot be denied that many regrettable and unjustifiable incidents occurred in connection with these events. In one aspect, doubtless, these clearances seemed to have belonged to an inevitable tendency in human affairs. According to the old Celtic tenure the land belonged to the Clan or tribe as a whole, and not to the chief only. But when the system of feudal tenure, which had been imported from Norman England into Scotland, was also introduced into the Highlands, the decay of the patriarchal system was only a matter of time. Under the new regime the chief had the title and of course the ownership of land became a commercial business to be regarded from the point of view of profit and loss. Hence when sheep farming became more remunerative than small tenants, the latter are evicted, and when deer become more profitable than sheep—sheep are evicted. The question is, of course, surrounded by many difficulties. Yet, however much individual wealth may be increased by the system of unlimited ownership, the welfare of the whole community ought not to be sacrificed for the caprices of a few, and although our countrymen across the seas have done so much to build up our Colonial Empire, the primary means by which removals were accomplished were too often cruel and oppressive. It cannot, further, be regarded as righteous or expedient that lands capable of useful cultivation should be devoted to purposes of sport, and such undoubtedly is the case. On the other hand the problem of undoing the past—of re-peopling the waste places—will very probably remain a problem for many a year to come. It is one thing to condemn the actions of past generations—it is another thing to unsettle the social system which rendered these actions possible. The influence of public opinion in our day renders the repetition of such doings morally, if not legally, impossible on anything of a large scale.

In two of his poems John Mac Codrum deplores the depopulation which, in his old age, he saw going on around him. One of these, “Oran do mhuinntir a bha air am fìggradh do dhùthach céin,” laments with some bitterness the folly of the Highland chiefs in parting with their people, and the bard remarks that cheviot sheep would prove indifferent substitutes if an enemy had to be encountered. He contrasts the existing proprietors with those of former days who, in his opinion, would not part with an attached and devoted tenantry for the sake of increased rents, and he winds up by wishing the emigrants God-speed in the new land towards which their course was set.

The other emigration song—called “Oran Fir Ghriminis”—is expressed in language of great pathos and evinces much tenderness of feeling. The tradition is that a number of the tacksmen of North Uist concocted a scheme to get their sub-tenants to emigrate to America. The inducement was that they themselves were to accompany their poor dependants across the Atlantic and under pretence of doing so a large quantity of baggage—really only containing peats—was conveyed to the port of embarkation. Those who were not in the plot—and among them it is said Mr. MacDonald of Griminish, had made genuine preparations to depart, and carried out their intentions even after the conspiracy was discovered with feelings more to be imagined than described; while the rest satisfied probably with their unworthy ruse returned to their respective homes. This poem seems to have been composed before the discovery of the plot as it suggests nothing about the treachery enacted. In lines instinct with mournful recollection and regret does the bard descant upon the ruined abodes which were to take the place of a once prosperous and happy people.

The last of the patriotic poems refers to a subject on which MacCodrum, like all other Highlanders and Highland poets of his time, felt very keenly, namely, the Unclothing Act of 1747. The Government—legislating in a panic—could not possibly have devised a measure more calculated to insult an heroic people and intensify their disloyalty to the throne. The Disarming Act, first passed in 1718, and further confirmed in 1726—from which latter date it was only to remain in force for seven years, does not seem to have been so offensive to the amour propre of the Highlanders as that which deprived them of the national garb. It could be seen, of course, that the Disarming Act was a politic and necessary measure for ensuring the future tranquillity of the country. And, besides, events showed how easily it was evaded. The rusty, superannuated old weapons were given up—all the serviceable ones were secreted, and in 1745, when Charles' standard was unfurled at Glenfinnan, large numbers of well-armed Highlanders gathered around it. The Unclothing Act was different. It was a more direct and hostile stroke against the social system which for centuries prevailed in the Highlands. Every clansman wore his own distinctive tartan, which was the emblem of the solidarity of his race, and their common loyalty to the chief. When the tartan went along with the well loved weapons, and the heritable jurisdictions—which were abolished about the same time—the characteristic accessories of the Clan system disappeared. The penalty for an infringement of this Act was serious. Six month's imprisonment without the option of a fine—and without admission to bail, and for a second conviction, transportation for seven years. There was also a terrible oath imposed in connection with the operation of these Acts. No wonder though Dr. Johnson—who doubtless relished the opportunity of having a dig at the Whigs—said that such an enactment was rather “an ignorant wantoness of power than the proceedings of a wise and beneficent legislature.” The Gaelic bards of the day—speaking with greater freedom because their language was unknown beyond their own land—inveighed against this stupid exercise of power, although, by the way, Highland officers and soldiers under Government received special exemption. Alexander MacDonald in He'n clò dubh b' fheàrr am breacan; Donnachadh Bàn in O tha briogais liathglas am bliadhna cur mulaid oirnn; Rob Donn in Oran nan casagan dubha; all gave voice to the popular resentment. It seemed very hard that there were no exceptions in favour of those chiefs and clans, like the MacDonalds of Sleat and others, who remained loyal to the Government. Mac Codrum—different from his chiefs and patrons—was a staunch Jacobite all through, and probably never ceased to hope for the restoration of the old Stuart line and the expulsion of the Hanoverian dynasty. His devotion to that ill-fated House was intensified by the Acts which in this poem he so strongly condemns, and he winds up with a fervent expression of hope that the old order might again be established—a hope never to be fulfilled.

III.—ETHICAL SONGS.

We must now make a brief reference to those of Mac Codrum's poems which are directly ethical or didactic in their intention, and this class contains three of his ablest compositions—“Caraid 'us nàmhaid an uisge-bheatha,” “Oran na h-dige,” and “Oran na h-aoise.”

“Caraid 'us nàmhaid an uisge-bheatha” is a long metrical dialogue in which the two sides of the question at issue are alternately discussed. From the conduct of the controversy it is evident that, so far as morality is concerned, the “enemy” of whisky is intended by the bard to get the better of the “friend.” The enemy is thoroughly in earnest and gives no quarter to his antagonist. The “Caraid,” on the other hand, scarcely making an effort to strengthen his position by the advocacy of moderation. Conviviality—excess—the power of John Barleycorn to “steep the senses in forgetfulness” are all depicted with zest and glee. The “Nàmhaid” takes the view of a stern, uncompromising ascetic who repudiates and abhors whisky as the accursed thing, while the “Caraid” takes up the nunc est bibendum point of view and seems to cherish the conviction that there is really no pleasure like getting drunk. Yet, although the bard's sympathies as a moralist are with the “enemy,” he is not without a warm side to the “friend,” and seems to enjoy his description of the power of the barley bree in dispelling cold and care—cowardice and sorrow—at least for a time. The author of the blessing on the waters of Asduinn doubtless enjoyed a dram, though he must have seen much of the evils of unrestrained festivity to cause him to take up the cudgels on behalf of temperance. We do not remember any of the older Gaelic bards who have done so with anything like his earnestness and address.

In "Oran na h-éige" human life from infancy to youth is compared to the progress of the Seasons. The characteristics of each of the months, from early Spring to Autumn—as well as their influence upon the different stages of life, are accurately described, till at last, when the poet comes to Summer, he turns to the young man rejoicing in the buoyancy of youth—the summer of life—and puts to him the question, how long does he expect life to last? Even youth when its sun shines fairest must not boast nor glory, for the last stern fact of human existence must some day, perhaps soon, be faced. And so when that dark secret has been disclosed, where is the tongue that uttered guile, and the heart that harboured hatred; where those eyes, the windows through which desire entered; the arm that performed deeds of strength; the body in which dwelt the haughty soul? All these questions Mac Codrum asks with the solemnity of one who has felt the deep mystery of life, and is profoundly conscious that death is the most certain of all facts. He knew and sang in strains of pathos that that shadow spreads its mantle on the brightest lives, and breaks the fairest companionships, and very much in the spirit of the Preacher of old he warns the young man who rejoices in his youth and in the light of his eyes, that for all these things God will bring him to judgment.

“Oran na h-Aoise” is probably, in matter as well as in form, the best of Mac Codrum’s efforts—and one of the most original of Gaelic poems. No bard in any language has given a truer or more graphic picture of that age which slips into the “lean and slippered pantaloon.” If fault can be found with the sentiment, it is that the shadows of the picture are too darkly painted, and that it is unrelieved by the touches of spiritual beauty that often illumine the furrowed cheek and crown the silver locks of age. There is no green old age in Mac Codrum’s poems, but one of ideal decrepitude and feebleness, into which ills and sorrows, more numerous than Egypt’s plagues, are crowded. It is more than likely that it was composed when the bard was tottering down the vale of years and the lengthening shadow had fallen on his path. It has throughout the ring of experience. Hardly any actual instance, of course, could embody the catalogue of ills which the bard enumerates in his vivid description—nor is it likely that the evening of his own life was the mournful, solitary thing he describes, yet some feeling deeper and more personal than mere observation would have suggested the sentiment of the lines:—

Aois ghliogach gun chàil ;
'S tu 's miosa na 'm bàs ;
'S tu 's tric a rinn tràill
Dhe 'n treun-fhear.

IV.—ELEGIES.

We now come to the Elegies of which there are three in existence. One of these was composed to Sir James MacDonald of Sleat, who died in Rome, and to whom Mac Codrum composed an eulogy as well as an elegy. The eulogy may perhaps be regarded like most compositions of the kind as bordering on exaggeration, and yet, in view of the hyperbolical nature of Gaelic poetry, as well as the virtues, talents, and accomplishments of the gifted Sir James, the poet can hardly be said to have gone beyond the truth. The beautiful epitaph, in which his friend, Lord Lyttleton, has enshrined his memory must be known to most readers, and, justifies to the full the praises of his devoted bard. Sir James, alas! was not spared to fulfil the great hopes cherished of him, or to carry out his enlightened schemes for ameliorating the condition of his people. The gods loved him and he died young. In his elegy the bard mourns his loss as the last of six chiefs of Sleat, who, in his own time, died in the vigour of their manhood. Sir James' death was, in the opinion of Mac Codrum, the most deplorable of all, not because it was the last and the wound was fresh, but because he was really the best among the good, and though he had not lived long he had lived well.

Chaill sinn duilleach ar gēige ;
Grāine mullaich ar déise ;
So an turus chuir éis air na h-àrmuinn.

A fine elegy was composed by Mac Codrum to Alexander MacDonald of Kirkibost and Balranald, better known in his day as Alastair Mac Dhòmhnuill. He was the seventh in succession of the MacDonalds of Balranald, of whom Mr. MacDonald of Edenwood is the eleventh and present representative. Alastair Mac Dhòmhnuill was married twice, with issue, and the MacDonalds of Penenurean are the representatives of the younger family. They are all descended from Donald Herrach MacDonald who was a son of Hugh, first of Sleat, brother of John, last Lord of the Isles. Alastair Mac Dhòmhnuill was factor for the Chief of Sleat over his Long Island property, and seems to have been greatly loved in his native land. He was also renowned for his great stature and physical strength. His tragic end is celebrated in the “Marbhramm.” The channel which separates the island of Kirkibost, where he lived, from the main island is fordable at low water, and it is supposed that Mr. MacDonald, while crossing the sands, fell from horseback in a fit, and before regaining consciousness was drowned by the advancing tide.

A shorter elegy but not less finely conceived and hardly inferior in expression was composed to Hugh MacDonald of Baleshear in North Uist who died in 1760. The hero of this poem was a son of Raonall Mac Shir Sheumas, in other words a grandson of Sir James MacDonald of Oronsay. Sir James succeeded his nephew, Sir Donald, who died unmarried. He lived a good deal in Oronsay an island or rather a peninsula in the Sand district of North Uist and his son Ranald was the progenitor of the Baleshear family.

The family possessed the penny lands of Baleshear and the son of the hero of this elegy was called “Tighearn nam peighinnean.” Hugh, of Baleshear, and Captain Donald Roy, his brother, were largely instrumental in assisting the escape of Prince Charles from the Long Island after the disastrous battle of Culloden. A grandson of Hugh MacDonald was Professor of Natural History in St. Andrews and representatives of the family still survive.

We have concluded our review of the poems of John MacCodrum and think we are justified in placing a high estimate on his genius. Critics have with good reason considered that the absence of the tender passion—that warmth of sentiment which glows in the pages of Mac Donald, Macintyre and Ross detracts from the fulness of his poetic gifts. In all other respects he stands high in the front rank of the poets of the last two centuries. If he must needs come after the three just mentioned he does so certainly not longo intervallo. If his flight be not as sustained as MacDonald’s or Macintyre’s and if he be inferior in emotional power to William Ross he is superior to the first in sincerity, to the second in patriotic fervour, to the third in ethical soundness, and to all in humour. If MacDonald’s is the more powerful imagination, if Macintyre’s is a richer descriptive art, and if Ross’s is a wider and more cultured sympathy with nature, MacCodrum has a keener eye for the realities of life and he is more imbued than any of them with that mental shrewdness which inspires the poetry of common sense. Several of his poems entitle him to an undoubted place among the greatest masters of Gaelic verse.

His dust reposes in the churchyard of Kilmuir marked by an amorphous block of gneiss, said to have been selected by himself to be his cara cuimhne. It is gratifying to think that his countrymen in the busy south are contemplating the erection of a fitting memorial of their greatest bard, and that contemporaneously with that movement the writer of these pages is able to give to the world for the first time in a form of more or less completeness that “monument more lasting than brass and more sublime than the regal elevation of Pyramids” which the peasant bard of North Uist—with no culture save that which nature bestowed—has bequeathed as a precious legacy to his compatriots.

 Bu tighearnail an gnìomh
 Ge b'e ghabhadh ròidean
 Gus an còir thoirt far an cinn
 Bu cheart cho dearbh an donus doibh
 'S tha marbh a dol do 'n chill.

* The Frisealach was married to the widow of a son of Sir James MacDonald of Oronsay, probably of Raonall Mac Shir Seumas.

Sin 'nuair thuirt am Bàideanach
 Gu h-àrd air mullach Là,
 'S e 'g éigheach "m' ole air m' fhàgail
 'N uair bhios do ghabh'l ri tuinn :
 Bu tric aig aghaidh Bàilidh sinn ;
 'S ma bha cha b' ann le sith,
 'S bu ghoirt a bha mo chàraig
 An là dh' fhàisg thu air na trì."

Thug mi coig puinnd Albannach,
 'S deich marg dhuit os a chinn,
 Airson siocair aighe,
 Bha an atharrais ba-laoigh :
 Bha mi 'n dùil gu 'm b' ionnan t' uaisle
 'Sa fear ruadh a bha 's a chrìch,
 B'e sud dhomh féin bhi coltachadh
 Dubh°bhrochan ris an fhion.

ORAN 'A BHONN-A-SIA.

Soraidh slan do 'n duin' uasal,
 Thug dhomh an duais nach robh miothar,
 'N deigh do 'n ghrein dol 'na luidhe,
 'S greis air tighinn de 'n oidhche ;
 Gus 'n do rainig mi 'n teine,
 Mo chridhe mire ri m' inntinn,

Ann an duil gur e guinea,
 A rinn an duine dhomh shìneadh.

Haoi o haoiri horo thall,
 &c., &c.,
 Cha cheil mi air cach,
 Nach 'eil am bàidse leam gann.

Rinn mi fichead troidh square,
 Agus barrachd a sgriobadh,
 Urrad eile 's ni 's modha,
 De mhodhanna siobholt' :
 A' faighneachd le onoir,
 Ciòd am moladh a b' fhiach e.
 'N uair a chunncas am baidse,
 'S ann bu nàr e ri' a innse.

B' ann 's an tigh air a' laimhrig,
 Fhuair sinn tearmad na h-oidhche,
 Dh' fhaighneachd Aonghas Mac Aulaidh,
 "Ciòd a th' ann a cheart rìribh?"
 Thuirt mi fhìn gu 'n robh guinea,
 Gun aon sgillin a dhith air.
 Labhair esan gu socair,
 "S còir dhuit botal thoirt dhuinn leth."

Thuirt mi fhìn le guth fosgarr',
 'Uam am botul beag spiocach,
 C' uim' a bhith'mid ri bhochdainn,
 C' uim' nach cosgamaid pìnnt dheth?

Falbh thusa, bi tapaidh,
 Thoir an clachan ud shios ort,
 Gabh rathad na Leacaich,*
 Fàg do chaisbheairt, cuir dhiot e.”

’N uair a ràinig e Teàrlach
 An àraidh nach dolach,
 A bha ’shliochd nan daoin’ uaisle,
 Do’m bu dualach an onair;
 ’N déigh na botail a lìonadh,
 ’S ann bhi trilleadh an donais,
 ’N uair a dh’ sheuchadh am bàidse,
 Bha dà fhàirdein ’s a’ sporan!

’N sin leag Teàrlach a mhala,
 ’S thug e criothnachadh mòr dh’i,
 “Cha robh mise ’m bhall bùirte,
 Bho ’n là ghiùlain mi còta,
 Bonn-a-sia air son guinea
 Cha ghabh duine tha beò e,
 Fhaic thu cùineadh na Ban-righ,
 ’S dealbh na clàrsaich fo th—n air.”

Labhair Aonghas an tràthsa,
 “”S ann tha näire sin dòmhsha,
 Na bi rithist ’ga thumadh,
 ’Sinn ’n ar urrachan còire;

* “Leacaich”—So called from the rocky nature of the land.

Far a faighe' duin' uasal,
 Cha b' e Ruairi an dròbhair,
 'S mar a deachaidh mi mearachd
 Gur a balach gu bhròig e.

“’N uair chluinneas Tormod a Uinis,
 Agus Uilleam a Os e,
 Tormod eile ’s a' Siorram,
 Far an cruinnich iad còmhlath;
 Their iad féin nach duin' uasal,
 A thug uaith as a dhòrn e,
 Ach fior sheamanach balaich, *
 Fear gun aithne gun eòlas.

Their Fear-fearann an Léigh,
 “Tha mi’g éisdeachd ni ’s leòr dheth,
 Thig an gnothach gu solus,
 Le onoir ’s le còmhdach;
 'S maith a dh' aithneadh e 'n copar,
 Air a shocair fo mheòirean,
 Ach chuir an donas glas-làmh air,
 Mar tha meirleach fo chordail.

“’S tim dhuinn nis bhi dol dachaidh
 Gus ar cairtealan còire,

* “Fior sheamanach balaich”—The dictionaries render the word seamanach as meaning “stout, jolly, cheerful.” But the bard makes use of it as signifying a sturdy indifference to the rights or feelings of others. “Seamanach balaich” is a rough, churlish, bullying character.

Sinn gun dram gun tombaca,
 Gun dad againn a dh' òlas ;
 Bonn-a-sia eadar ochdnar,
 Cha bu choltach an lòn e,
 Dh' ith e féin a' mhin choirce,
 'S cha d' thug moisean dad dhòmhsa !”

DUAN NA BAINNSE.

CHAIDH mi sios do Pheabuill
 Ann a' maduinn 's i ro fhuar,
 Chòmhalaich mo ghoistidh mi,
 E féin 'us Lachlann ruadh
 Ghabh sinn chum na tulaich
 Far 'n robh cruinneachadh māith sluaigh ;
 Ma rinn iad dearmad buideil oirnn,
 So m' uirsgeul dhuibh 'ga luaidh.

Shuidh sinn aig an teine
 'S bha na gillean cuide ruinn ;
 Chaidh a' Muillear spreilleasach
 Le gheilleart do 'n taigh shios,
 Ag aibseachadh 'na chunnaic e
 'S nach b' urrainn e 'gan diol ;
 “Gu 'm bheil an sud triùir bhaodhaisteach
 Cho leathunn 's tha 's an tir.”

Thuirt *Dòmhull Mac 'Ille-Mhàirtin
 “Ciod e'n taobh a thàinig sibh?
 'Na 'm b'e so a' banais
 'S ann a b' airidh sibh air brìll ;
 Ged a chuimte falamh sibh
 'Na gearainibh a chaoïdh,
 'Na iomarai'bh air droch fhialachd
 Bho nach daoine dh' iarradh sibh.

Tha rud uam 's cha mhaith leam e
 Na banachaigean 'ga'm' dhìth,
 Bu mhaith an am an earraich iad
 'N uair bu ghainne 'n tìr ;
 Gu liteach, bonnachadh, brochanach,
 Le cosamhlas de dh' im :
 Bhiodh sògh aig daoine slàn an sud,
 'Us àrach dhaoine tinn.

'Se cuis mu 'm bheil mi dearmalach
 Na banachaigean 'g a' m' dhìth ;
 Gheibhinn air an àiridh iad,
 Ri àrach a chrodh-laoigh ;
 Gu h-imeach, gruthach, càiseach,
 Omh'nach dràbhagach lan méig,
 Gu meadrach, poiteach, blàthanach,
 Le plàsdaichean dhe 'n im.

* The Bridegroom.

A nis o'n thug mi cùl ruibh
 Tha mo dhùrachd aig a' chloinn,
 Gheibhinn air a bhailidh iad,
 Ri uallach a chrodh-laoigh :
 Bu chuid dhe ur dibhearsoin
 A bhi mar rium anns an oidhch'
 Mi greis a' luidhe cuide ruibh,
 'S 'n uair dh' fhalbhainn glug 'na'm' bhoirinn !”

(An sin thuirt am bàrd).

“ 'S tim dhuinn bhi dol dachaigh
 'S gun ar cairtealan 'n ar còir,
 Bho nach d' fhuair sinn fiadhachadh
 Gu biadhtachd no gu ceòl
 Ma 's e so a' chuideachd
 A rinn dearmad buideil oirnn
 Fàgaibh far an d' fhuair sibh e
 Fear ruadh a' c——a mhòir.†

† A nickname of the bridegroom.

ORAN DO 'N TEASAICH.

Air fonn—“Daibhidh gròsgach, crom, ciar.”

'S mise chaill air geall na carachd
 Bha eadar mi féin 's a' chailleach,
 Gu 'n d' thug i dhiom brìgh mo bharra
 Cùl mo chinn a chur ri talamh ;
 M' fhuil 'us m' s'heòil thug i dhiom
 Chuir i crònán 'n 'am' chliabh,
 B'e 'n droch còdhail dhomh bhiast,
 Gu 'n robh töireachd 'g a diol.

Chuir i boil 'n a' m' cheann 's bu mhòr i,
 Faicinn dhaoine marbha 's bheòdha,
 Coltas Hector mòr na Tròidhe,
 'S nan gaisgeach a bha 'm feachd na Ròimhe,
 Cailleach dhuathsach chrom chiar,
 Bha làn tuaileis 'us bhreug,
 Chuir mi 'm bruaillean 's gach iall,
 'S chuir i 'm fuadach mo chiall.

'S bochd a fhuair mi uait am foghar,
 'S mi gun luaidh air buain no ceangal ;
 Mo cheann iosal 'us mi m' luidhe,
 Brùite tinn 'us sgios a' m' enamhan.
 Bha mo chamhan cho sgith,
 'S ged a sgathadh iad dhiom,
 Gu 'n robh 'm pathadh 'g a' m' chlaoidh,
 'S gu 'n tràghainn amhainn le mheud.

'S bochd an t-àite leat an fhiabhruis
 Dh' fhàgas duine fada riabhach,
 Glagach lag le fad na h-iargainn,
 Gann de dh' fhalt 'us paitl de dh' fheusaig ;

Paitl de dh' fheusaig gun tlachd
 Chuir am biadh air dhroch dhreach,
 Deoch no biadh théid a steach,
 Tha da thrian inntè stad.

Do chòta fàs 'us e gun lionadh
 T' osan ròcach air dhroch fhiaradh ;
 Caol do choise nochdach pliathach ;
 Iongnan cho fad' ri cat fiadhaich :
 Casan pliathach gun sùgh,
 Fo 'n dà shliasaïd gun lùth ;
 Gur paitl liagh dhoibh na lùnn ;
 Cha bhean feur dhoibh nach lùb.

Bi do mhuinneal fada féitheach
 'S t' asnaichean mar chabar cléibhe ;
 Iosgaidean glagach gun spéirid ;
 Glùinean ri tachas a chéile,
 Glùinean geura gun neart ;
 'S iad cho ciar ris a' chairt :
 Thu cho creubhaidh ri cat,
 B' fheàrr an t-eug 'g a' d' sgath as.

A bhonaid dà uiread 's a b' àbhaist
 Air uachdar currachd nach àluinn :

Cluasan gun uireasbhuidh fàsa :
Ceann cho lom ri crìdh' na deàrna :

Cha bi 'n companach caomh,
Dh' fhàg cho lom mi 's cho maol,
Rinn mo chom mar phreas caoil,
Mar mhac samhuilt do 'n aog.

Bi thu coltach ri fear misge
Gun dad òl gun aon mhìr ithe :
Chionn nach 'eil luths a' d' dha iosgaid
Bi thu null 's a nall mar chlisnich :
Bi thu d' shiochaire lag ;
'S ceann do shithe gun neart,
Ann a' d' ghniomh cha bhi tlachd ;
'N a' d' chùis mhì-loinn air fad.

ORAN DO CHAIPTÉAN AILEAN DOMHNULLACH, FEAR CHINNSEBURGH.

Nìs o 'n tha mi m' ònaran
'S mi m' chomhnuidh anns a' Bhàgh,
'G obair air na h-òrain
'S e 's còire na bhi m' thàmh ;
Tighinn air beus an Dòmhnullaich
Tha fearail treubhach mòralach,
Gur iomadh ceud chuir eolas ort,
'S bu deònach leo thu slàn.

'S e mo run an t-Ailean
 A dh' fhàs gu foinnidh fearail àrd,
 Aon Mhac Dhé 'g a' d' anacladh
 Bho an-shocair 's bho chràdh ;
 Sar chuirtear mùirneach, macnusach,
 A ghiùlain mhuinte mhacanta,
 Tha cruidh gu chùl ach casadh air
 'N uair dhùisgear ascaoin d'a.

Fear eòlach seòlta siobhalta
 Gun tòir air strith gu bràth ;
 'M bheil mais 'us tlachd 'us aoidhealachd
 Cho maith 's a dh' innseadh bàrd :
 Mòralach mor-inntinneach,
 Gun toireachd air a bhribealachd,
 Gun sgòd de Chlann 'Ic Cuibean air
 Gu h-iosal no gu h-àrd.

Fear foinnidh fearail socrach thu,
 'S neo-throicheil am measg chaich ;
 B' acfhuinn fear do choltais
 A chuir mais air cnoc no dhà ;
 Leoghan fearrdha tosgarra ;
 Mòr churaidh calma 'n toirtealachd ;
 'S maирг luchd an-mein chasadhbh ort
 Gun fhosadh air do laimh.

'S maирг luchd an-mein chasadhbh air,
 Gun fhosadh air a laimh,

No thigeadh gearr no toisgeal air
 Gus brosnachadh thoirt dha ;
 Lann sgaiteach de smior cruadhach air,
 'S an truaill bu dreachmhор dualanan ;
 Cha stad e 'm fheoil am buailear e,
 Gu ruig e smuais nan cnàmh.

Cha bhrìdeach air an fhaiche e,
 Ri fhaicinn am measg chàich ;
 Ceann feadhna meaghrach faiceallach,
 'M bheil taitneachdan air blàr ;
 Fear iriosal ciùin céillidh thu,
 Gun easbhuidh smior no treubhantas :
 Gu 'm b' eireachdas fear t' eugais,
 Air cheann daoine 'n taobh so 'n Fhraing.

Dubh 'us dearg 'us gile,
 Dreach an fhir a tha mi 'g ràdh,
 Gu calma fearrdha fireachail,
 Ro chinnedail ri dàimh ;
 'S e ceòl is fhearr 's is binne leam
 Gu 'n d' eug do mhàthair firionnach,
 Gu 'n canar sàr fhear cinnidh riut,
 Gach ionad 'n dean thu tàmh.

Cha b' ioghnadh le luchd t' eolais
 Ge bu deonach leo thu slàn,
 Do dheoiridh 'us do dhilleachdain,
 Gun bhi an teinn no sàs ;

A ghnùis tha flathail éibhinn,
 Fear an luidh thu slan gu 'n eirich,
 Deagh naigheachd fear na féile leat,
 Do chéile bhi ni 's feàrr.

Oighr' air Loinn Mhic Iain thu
 Mac samhuil gach cion-fàth,
 Gu daimhail cairdeal inneachail,
 Ri dhuine bhiodh an sàs ;
 An ceanaltach 's an reusontachd,
 Am fearalachd mar dh' fheumadh tu,
 Gu 'm b' athaireil dhuit na beusan sin,
 Bha léirsinneach do chàch.

Cha bhreac an iomall lònain thu
 Gun neart gun seol air snàmh,
 Cha 'n fhochann brais fòlaich thu,
 Le gaiseadh mor 'na bhàrr ;
 Cuspair cinnteach còmhnard thu,
 Dhe 'n fhinne rioghail Dhòmhnullaich,
 'S maирg a chuireadh còmhstri ort
 'S tu deònach dol 'na phàirt.

'S tu shliochd nan curaidh mileanta
 Nach fuilingeadh spìd fo thàir,
 Nach giulaineadh aim dhiomhaineach,
 'S an tir a' dol fo smàl ;
 Le caithream nam fear mòra sin
 Bhiodh gearradh garbh air spòltaichean,

Bu shalach garbh a' chòcaireachd,
'N am tòiseachadh air àr.

Chuir Dia tagha céile ort
Rinn mais 'us feill ri dàimh ;
Rinn an gniomh bu smiorla
Rinn bean a tha no bha ;
Le barrachd uaisl' 'us rioghalachd
Għluais i anns na gniomharan,
Thug seanachas buan do linneachan
Air chuimhn' an déigh a bàis.

Cha b' ioghnadh leam a h-uaisle
Thoirt dh' i gluasad anns a' chàs,
Bha stoc na craoibh o'n d' bhuaineadh i
Gun ghrod gun ruaidh gun smal ;
Sliochd Aonghais Oig nam brataichean
'Us Raonaill Oig nam feachdana,
B' e'm fortan còir 'n an tachaireadh
Do 'r n-eascairdibh bhi slàn.

MOLADH CHLANN DOMHNUILL.

TAPADH leat a Dhòmh'll 'Ic-Fhionnlaidh
 Dhuisg thu mi le pàirt de d' chòmhradh,
 Air bheagan eolais 's an duthaich
 Tha cunntas gur gille còir thu ;
 Chuir thu do chomaine romhad
 'S feàirde do ghnothuich e'n còmanuidh,
 'S cinnteach gur a leat ar bàidse ;
 'S leat ar cairdeas fhad is beò thu.

Mhol thu ar daoine 's ar fearann
 Ar mnathan baile, 's bu choir dhuit—
 Cha d' rinn thu dì-chuimhn' no mearachd
 Mhol thu gach sean 'us gach òg dhiubh.
 Mhol thu 'n uaislean, mhol thu 'n islean
 Dh' fhàg thu shios air an aon dòigh iad,
 Na bheil de 'n ealaidh ri chluinntinn
 Cha chion dichill a dh' fhàg sgòd orr .

'Teannadh ri moladh ar daoine
 Cha robh e air aon dòigh soirbheach,
 An gleus an gaisge 's an teomachd,
 Air aon aobhar thig 'nan còmhail,
 Nochadh an aodan ri gradan,
 Cha robh gaiseadh anns a' phòr ud :
 Cliù 'us pailteas mais' 'us tàbhachd,
 Ciod e'n càs nach faight' air chòir iad ?

Cha bu mhisid thu mise làimh riut
 'N am a' bhi 'g àireamh nan conspunn
 Gus inns' am maise 's an uaisle,
 An gaisge 's an cruadal 'n am togbhail ;
 B' iad sud na fir a bha fearail,
 'Philleadh an sheasgair an tòireachd,
 'S a dh' fhàgadh salach an àraich
 'N am fanadh an namhaid ri 'n comhrag.

Ach 'na' faiceadh tu na fir ud
 Ri uchd teine 's iad an òrdugh ;
 Coslas fiadhaich a' dol sios orr ;
 Falbh gu dian air bheagan stòldachd ;
 Claidheamh rùisgt' an laimh gach aoin fhir,
 Fearg 'nan aodann 's faobhar gleòis orr',
 Iad cho nimheil ris an iolair,
 'S iad cho frioghal ris na leòghainn.

Cha mhòr a thionnal nan daoin' ud
 Bha ri fhaotainn 's an Ròinn Eòropa,
 Bha iad fearail an am caonnaig,
 Gu fuitteach, faobharrach, stròiceach ;
 'N am faigheadh tu iad an gliocas
 Mar a bha 'm misneachd 's am mòrchuis,
 C' àite 'm facas riamh ri 'n àireamh
 Aon fhine b' fhearr na Clann Dòmhnuill ?

Bha iad treubhach, fearail, foinnidh,
 Gu neo-lomara mu 'n stòras ;

Bha iad cunbhalach 'nan gealladh,
 Gun fheall gun charachd gun ròidean,
 Ged a dh' iarrta nuas an sinnsear,
 O mhullach an cinn gu 'm brògan,
 'N donas cron a bha ri inns' orr'
 Ach an righealachd mar sheòrsa.

Ach ma mhol thu ar daoin' uaisle
 C' uim' nach do luaidh thu Mac-Dhòmhnuill ?
 Aon Mhac Dhé bhi air na bhuaachaill,
 'Ga gleidheadh buan duinn 'n a bheò-shlaint ;
 O'n 's curaiddh a choisneas buaidh e,
 Leanas ri dhualchas an còmhnuidh,
 Nach deachaidh neach riamh 'n a thuasaid
 Rinn dad buannachd air an còmhstri.

C' àit' an d' fhàg thu Mac-Ic-Ailein
 'N uair a thionaileadh e mhor-shluagh ?
 Na fir chròdha bu mhor alla
 Ri linn Alasdair 's Mhontròis ;
 'S mairg a dhùisgeadh ruinn bhur n-aisith
 No thionndadh taobh ascaoin bhur cleòca,
 Ge b' e sùil a bhiodh 'g an amharc
 Cromadh sios gu amhainn Lòchaidh.

Ach ma chaidh thusa 'n an sealbhaibh
 C' uim' nach d' sheanchais thu air chòir iad,
 Teaghlach uasal Ghlinne-garaidh
 'S na fuirain o ghleannaibh Chnòideart ;

'S iomadh curaidh laidir, uaimhreach,
 Sheasaidh cruaidh 's a bhuaileadh stròicean,
 O cheann Loch-Uthairn nam fuar bheann
 Gu bun na Stuaidhe am Mòr-thir.

An d' fhag thu teaghlaich na Ceapach ;
 'S mor a chreach nach 'eil iad còmhslan,
 Dh' éireadh iad leinn suas an aisith,
 Le 'm piob 's le 'm brataichean sròile.
 Mac Iain a Gleanna Cothann,
 Fir-chothanta 'n am na còmhstri,
 Daoine foinnidh fearail, fearrdha,
 Rusgadh arm us fearg 'nan srònaiibh ?

Dh' fhàg thu Mac Dhùghail a Lathurn
 Bu mhùirneach gabhail a' chòmhlain,
 Cuide ri uaislean Chinntire,
 O'n Roinn Ilich 's Maol na h-Odha ;
 Dh' fhag thu Iarl' Antrim a Eirinn,
 Rinn an t-euchd am blar na Bòine,
 'N uair dhluthaicheadh iad ri chéile,
 Co chunntadh féich air Clann-Dòmhnuill ?

Alba, ge bu mhor ri inns' e,
 Roinn iad i o thuinn gu mòintich,
 Fhuair an coir o lamh Chlann-Domhnuill
 Fhuair iad i rithist an Ròta ;
 'S iomadh curaidh mor bha innte
 Cunntaidh Antrim ge bu mhor i,

Sgrios iad as an naimhdean uile
'S thuit Mac Guilbinn 's an tòireachd.

Bhuinig iad baile 's leth Albainn,
'S e'n claidheamh a shealbhaich còir dhoibh ;
Bhuinig iad latha Chath Gairbheach ;
Rinn an argumaid a chòdach.
Air bheagan cònaidh gu trioblaid
Thug iad am bristeadh a mòran ;
Mac Ill' Sheathain ann le chuideachd
'S Lachain cutach Mac-an-Tòisich.

'N an tigeadh feum air Sir Seumas,
Gu 'n éireadh iad uile còmhlaith,
O roinn Ghall-thaobh gu roinn Ile
Gach fear thug a shinnsear còir dha ;
Thigeadh Mac Coinnich a Bràthainn,
Mac Aoidh Strath Nàbhair 's Diùc Gordon' ;
Thigeadh Barraich 's thigeadh Bànach,
Rothaich, 'us Sàilich, 'us Ròsaich.

Ar luchd dàimh 's ar càirdean dileas
Dh' éireadh leinne sios 'an còmhstri
Thigeadh uaislean Chlann-Ill'-Sheathain,
Mu 'n cuairt cho daingean ri d' chòta :
Iad fo ghruaim ri uair a' chatha,
Cruaidh 'nan làmhan sgathadh feòla,
Tarruing spàinteach làidir liobhar ;
Sgoilteadh direach cinn gu brògan.

Buidheann fhuitteach, glan nan geur-lann
 Thigeadh reiseamaid nan Leòdach,
 Thigeadh reiseamaid nan Niallach
 Le loingeas lionmhòr 's le sedltaibh :
 Foirbeisich 's Frisealaich dh' éireadh,
 'S thigeadh Clann-Reubhair an òrdugh :
 'N uair a dhùisgeadh fir na h-Iubhraich,
 Co thigeadh air tùs ach Tòmas !

SMEORACH CHLANN DOMHNUILL.

Holaibh o iriag horoll o,
 Holaibh o iriag horo i ;
 Holaibh o iriag horoll o,
 Smeòrach le Clann Dòmhnuill mi.

Smeòrach mis' air ùrlar Phabuill,
 Crùbadh ann an dùsal cadail,
 Gun deònachd a théid ni 's faide,
 Truimead mo bhròin thoirleum m' aigne.

Smeòrach mis' air mullach beinne,
 'G amharc gréin' 'us speuran soilleir ;
 Thig mi stòlda chòir na coille,
 'S bi mi beò air treòdas eile.

'Smeòrach mis' air bhàrr gach bidein,
 Deanamh mùirn ri driùchd na maidne,
 Bualadh mo chliath luth air m' fheadan,
 Seinn mo chiùil gun smùr gun smodan.

Ma mholas gach eun a thìr féin,
 Ciod am fàth nach moladh mise,
 'Tìr nan curaidh tìr nan cliar,
 An tìr bhiachar, fhialaidh, mheasail.

An tìr nach caol ri cois na mara,
 An tìr ghaolach, chaomhach, chanach,
 An tir laoghach, uanach, mheannach,
 'Tìr an arain, bhainneach, mhealach.

An tìr riabhach, ghrianach, thaitneach,
 An tìr dhionach, sfeurach, fhasgach,
 An tìr lianach, ghiaghach, lachach,
 'N tìr 'm bi biadh gun mhiagh air tacar.

An tìr choirceach, eòrnach, phailte,
 An tìr bhuadhach, chluanach, ghartach ;
 An tìr chruchach, sguapach, ghaisneach,
 Dluth ri cuan gun fhuachd ri sneachda.

'S i 'n tìr sgiamhach tìr na machrach,
 Tir nan dìthean miadar daite ;
 An tìr làireach, aigeach, mhartach,
 Tir an àigh gu bràth'ch nach gaisear.

'N tìr is bòidh'che ta ri fhaicinn,
 'M bi fir òg an còmhach dreachmhor,
 Pailt ni 's leòr le pòr na machrach,
 Spréigh air mòintich ; òr air chlachan.

An Cladh Chòthain rugadh mise,
 'N Aird-a-Runnair chaith mo thogail,
 Fradharc a' chuain uaimhrich chuislich,
 Nan stuadh guanach, cluaineach, cluicheach.

Measg Chlann-Dòmhnuill fhuair mi m' altrum.
 Buidheann nan sròl 's nan seòl daithte',
 Nan long luath air chuantan farsuing,
 Aiteam nach ciùin rùsgadh ghlas-lann.

Na fir eòlach, stòlda, staideil,
 Bha 's a' chòmhstri stròiceach, sgaiteach,
 Fir gun bhròn gun leòn gun airtneul,
 Leanadh tòir 'us toir a chaisgeadh.

Buidheann mo ghaoil nach caoin caitean,
 Buidheann nach gann greann san aisith,
 Buidheann shunntach 'n am bhi aca,
 Rùsgadh lann fo shranntaich bhratach.

Buidheann uallach an uair caismeachd,
 Leanadh ruaig gun luaidh air gealtachd,
 Cinn 'us guaillean cruaidh 'g an spealtadh,
 Aodach ruadh le fuaim 'ga shracadh

Buidheann rioghail 's fior-ghlan alla,
 Buidheann gun fhiamh 's iotadh fal' orr' ;
 Buidheann gun sgàth 'm blàr no 'n deannal,
 Foinnidh, nàrach, làidir, fearail.

Buidheann mòr 's am pòr nach troicheil,
 Dh' fhàs gu meamnach dealbhach toirteil ;
 Fearail fo 'n airm 's maирg d' a nochdad
 Ri uchd stoirm nach leanabail coltas.

Suidheam mu 'n bhòrd stòlda, beachdail,
 'N t-sùil 's an dòrn nach òl a mach i,
 Slàint' Shir Seumas 'se thigh'n dhachaigh,
 Aon Mhac Dhé mar sgéith d' a phearsa.

ORAN

DO SHIR SEUMAS MAC-DHOMHNUILL
SHLEIBHTE.

AIR tuiteam a' m' chadal a nis o chionn fada,
 Gu 'n d' thachair dhomh aiceid a stad ann am bhràghad :
 Tha cneadh air mo ghiùlain tha àmgharrach ciùirte,
 Cha bhi mi 'g a mùchadh gu 'n rùisg mi os àird i ;

Ach Dia bhi 'g a chòmhnad 's a' riaghladh a ròidean,
 An ti 'm bheil mo dhòchas, fo chòmhnad an Ard-righ,
 Lagaich mo dhòruinn, neartaich mo shòlas,
 Chuir mi ann an dòchas bhi ni 's òige na tha mi.

'S iomadach buille so b' éiginn duinn fhlang,
 Bha chuing air ar muineal 's bu truim' i na phràiseach,
 Cho trom ri cloich mhuilinn 'na sìneadh air lunnan,
 Ri iargain nan curaidh 's iad uil' air ar fàgail.
 Greadan a' gheamhraidh a lagaich gu teann sinn,
 'N uair chaill sinn ar ceannard nach robh shamhla measg
 Ghàidheal,
 Connspunn na h-aoidhealachd leòghann na rioghalachd,
 Dòruinn r'a innseadh do 'n linne nach d' thàinig.

Dòruinn r'a innseadh, an dòruinn a chlaoïdh sinn,
 Thòirleum 'n ar inntinn cho iosal ri 'r sailean,
 Ar Ceann-feadhna mòr priseil bu mhòr urram 's an righeachd,
 Gu 'n d' thug an t-eug dhinn e ar mì-fhortan làidir ;
 Fhir a chunnaic ar crualal, leig umainn am fuaradh,
 Bi thusa 'n a' d' bhuachaill, air an uair so 'na àite,
 Cuir dhachaigh Sir Seumas gun aiceid gun éislean,
 Gu chuideachda féin Mhuire 's éibhinn mar thàrsuinn !

Chriosda gléidh dhuinne ar buachaille cliùiteach,
 Ar n-uachdaran dùthcha tha chùram an tràths oirnn ;
 Allail ar fiùran, smiorail 'us grùnnadail,
 Fearail ri 'dhùsgadh 'nan tionndadh a mhànan.

Barant tha mùirneach, carraig ar bùnn-daisid,
 Ar n-aon 's ar cairt dhùbailt 's ar crùn air an tàileasg,
 An ràmh nach 'eil bristeach, ar lann an am trioblaid,
 Ar ceannard 's ar misneachd, fear briseadh a' bhàire.

An dùsgach no 'n cadal duinn, 'n ùrnuigh no 'n athchuing',
 Ar déirce 'g a nasgach thu thigh'n dhachaigh sàbhailt ;
 Müint' ann an cleachdadadh thu, cliùiteach ri d' chluainistinn
 thu,

Mùirneach ri t' fhaicinn, air each no air làr thu.
 Ar n-aighear 's ar sòlas, ar fion air na bòrdaibh,
 Ar mire 's ar ceòl thu, 's ar dòigh air ceòl-gàire ;
 Ar connspunna féile, a dheònaich Mac Dhé dhuinn,
 Gu còir chur air stéidhe, 's gu eucoir a smàladh.

Gur h-innealt' an connspunn Ceann-cinnidh Chlann Dòmh-nuill,

Fear iriosal stòlda gun tòir air an àrdan ;
 Eireachdail, coimhliont, soilleir 'an eòlas,
 Canar 'n am tògbhail ris, bòchdan mo làmhsa ;
 Cùirtear na siobhaltachd, ùrla na h-aoidhealachd,
 Tlusail ri dilleachdain 's cuimhneach air àiridh,
 Aigeannach innsgineach, beachdail air rioghachd,
 Gaisgeach ro mhiltean, 'nan sìneadh e 'n gàirdean.

Mo rùn an sàr ghaisgeach, fear òg a' chùil chleachdaich,
 Fear mòralach gasda, gun ghaisgeadh, gun tàire.
 Curaidh nam brataichean, guineach ri 'm bagairt iad,
 Chuireadh an t-sradag, 'na lasair gun smàladh,

A bhuaileadh a' chollaid mu 'n chluan air an cromadh iad
 Ghluaiseadh neo-shomalt an coinneamh na nàmhaid',
 Le Spàintichean loma le mosgaidean troma,
 Le fùdar caol meallach 'n àm teannadh ri làmhach,

Ge fad' a bha m' aiceid, 'na còmhnuidh fo m' asgail,
 Fògraiddh mi as i, thig aiteas na h-àite.
 Cuiridh mi airtneul air fuadach gu chairteal,
 'N uair chuireas Dia dhachaigh 'na dh' aisig mo shlàinte ;
 Moladh do 'n léigh dh' fhàg fallain mo chreuchdan,
 Tharruing mo spéirid ni 's treine na b' àbhaist ;
 Aghaidh Shir Seumais, aghaidh na féile,
 Taghadh gach speuclair thug an léirsinn ni b' fheàrr dhomh.

Aghaidh na staidealachd, aghaidh na sgaирtealachd,
 Aghaidh na maisealachd, tlachd agus àilleachd ;
 Aghaidh na fearalachd, aghaidh na smioralachd,
 Aghaidh is glaine thug sealladh an sgàthan ;
 Aghaidh na stòldachd, aghaidh na mòrchuis,
 Aghaidh na leòghainn ach tùiseachadh ceàrr air ;
 Buinidh dha 'n òigear bhi currant 'an còmhstrì
 'S gur iomadh laoch dòrn gheal, bheir tùireachd ma's àill leis.

Cha sùgradh ri chlaistinn bhi dùsgadh do chaismeachd,
 Bhi dùsgadh do bhratach, gu h-aigeantach stàdail,
 Piob tholltach 'ga spalpadh sior phronnahd nam bras-phort,
 Fraoch tomach nam badan, ri brat-chrann 'g a chàradh ;

Barant de dh' uaislean a' tarruing mu 'n cuairt d'i;
 Gu 'm b' fhearail an dualchas, 'n am buannachd buaidh-làrach,
 Ceathairne ghruamach gun athadh roimh luaidhe,
 Dh' fhàgadh gun għluasad cuirp fhuar anns an àrfhaich.

Gur h-iomadh sàr-ghaisgeach, tha urranta smachdail,
 A theannadh a steach riut 'n am aisith no cnàmhain ;
 Le 'n Spàintichean sgaiteach cho geur ris an ealtainn,
 'N am bhualadh nan claignean, gu 'n spealtadh iad cnàmhan ;
 Gu fireachail aotrom air mhir' anns a' chaonnaig,
 Bhiodh fuil air na fraochaibh, mu 'n traoghadh an àrdan,
 Le comunn gun chlaonadh gun somaltachd gaoirdean,
 'N am lomadh nam faobhar, ri aodann na nàmhaid.

'N am faicte' Sir Seumas 's gu 'n cuireadh e feum air,
 Gur h-iomadh taobh dh' éireadh leis, réiseamaid làidir,
 An Alba 's an Eirinn cho deònach le chéile,
 O Chluaidh nan long gleusda gu leum e Port-Phàdruig :
 Uaislean Chinntire, bu dual da o shìnnnsir,
 Gu 'n rachadh iad sios leis, gun di-chuimhn' gun fhàilinn,
 Gu 'm bi iad cho tidheach 's gu 'n deanadh iad mì-stath,
 Mar leòghanna miannach 's gun bhiadh aig an àalach.

Dh' éireadh na Leòdaich, dhéireadh 's bu chòir dhoibh,
 Dh' éireadh 's bu deònach thaobh èolais 'us càirdeis,
 Thigeadh am mòr-shluagh, brisg ann an òrdugh,
 Sgiolta na connspuinn an töiseachadh blàir iad ;

Dearbhadh na fearalachd, calma 'n àm tarruing iad,
 An calg mar na nathraighean 's fearann ga réiteach,
 Stròiceach le lannaibh iad, dòrtach air falanan,
 Còcairean ealamh, air cheannaibh 's air chnàmhaibh.

Dhùisgeadh 'n a' d' charraid fir ùr Ghlinne-garaidh,
 B' e 'n dearmad gun ghainne, siol Alain d' a fhàgail,
 Daoine cho fearail cho saoithreach air lannaibh,
 Gu faicte' neul fal' orr' 'g an tarruing a sgàbard ;
 Inntinneach togarrach, impidh cha 'n obadh iad,
 Fior chruaidh gun bhogachadh, 's obair air làraich,
 Calma mar churaidhean, 's maирг air an cuireadh iad ;
 Chuireadh am buillean gu fulang na Spàintich.

Dh' éireadh fir Mhuile, le éibhe nan cluinneadh iad,
 Dh' éireadh iad uile gu h-urranta làidir,
 Dualchas a chumadh iad, guallainn ri uileann iad,
 Bhuaileadh iad buillean, mu 'm fuiling thu tàmait,
 'S cràiteach r'a innseadh, bhi 'g àireamh bhur diobhail,
 Na thuit de 'n dream rioghail am mi-fhortan Theàrlaich,
 Iadsan cho ional fo shàilean nan Duineach,
 Na càirdean cho dileas 's a bha inc ris a phàipeir.

TALADH IAIN MHUIDEARTAICH.

MHUIRE ! 's e mo rùn mo leanabh,
 'S tu mac oighre Mhic-Ic-Ailein,
 Ogha 's iar-ogh nan fear fearail,
 Chaidh 'ur 'n alla fada 'ga cur.

B' fheàrr leam féin gu 'n cinneadh sud dhuit,
 Aois 'us fàs 'us àilleachd 'us cruth,
 Maise 's féile dh' éireadh iad dhuit.

Taing do 'n Ard-rìgh thu bhi firionn,
 Chum 's gu 'm meudaicheadh tu 'n fhinne,
 'S gu 'n biodh tu a' d' spailp air do Chinneadh,
 'S an deagh ionad 's am bheil thu 'n diugh.

Bhi gu siobholt' bhuineadh sud dhuit,
 Garg 'us mìn mar chàirte ri d' uchd,
 Paitl 'us rioghail 's aoidheil mu d' chuid.

B' fheàrr leam fhéin gu 'n cluinneadh càch e
 'N uair nach bithinn fhéin a làthair,
 Iain Muideartach bhi 'na àrmunn,
 Air an làrach am bheil e 'n diugh :

'N a cheann tàmha ri tàrmunn puirt,
 Anns an àros 'n seinnear a' chruit ;
 'S bhiodh do chàirdean mànranach riut.

Thaobh do sheanar 'us do shean-mhàth'r,
 Craobh a b' aithne dhòmhsa 'leanmhuinn,
 Comunn mo rùin a dh' fhàs ainmeil,
 As an ana-meinn cha d' rinn iad bun.

Cha robh mì-run fillte ri 'n cruth ;
 Iochdmhor, fiachail, 's fialaidh mu 'n cuid ;
 Cliù, 'us ciatamh, 's rianadh le guth.

'S iomadh rioghachd agus nàisean,
 'S an do mheudaich sibh 'ur càirdean,
 Mar 'rinn sibh ri prionnsa Teàrlach,
 'N uair 'bha 'ghràisg a' bagairt a mhort.

Lean an dùthchas cluiteach ud riut—
 Dol an cunnart d' anma 's do chuirp ;
 Thaobh an cùil cha tionndadh iad stuth.

Fir Chnoideart 's ann leibh gu 'n druidealbh,
 'Rachadh mar sheabhadh 's na druidibh,
 B' e beachd 'ur naimhdean bu ghlice,
 Thaobh 'ur misnich gu 'm b' fheàrr dhoibh sgur.

Luchd 'ur eucoir gheilleadh iad tur,
 Meud 'ur beuma, 's géiread 'ur luinn,
 'N déigh an léireadh b' éiginn dhoibh sgur.

An fhinne mhòr 's am pòr dh' fhàs ainmeil,
 Domhnullaich, 's Raonullaich chalma,
 Bha gu fulteach, stròiceach, fearrgha,
 'N uair a chàirte 'n arguin ri 'n uchd.

'S e Clann Raonuill bhoillsgeadh mar thuil,
 'N àm na caonnaig chraosgladh iad fuil ;
 Fearn 'nan aodann 's b' aognuidh an cruth.

C' àite an robh iad riamh ri 'n àireamh,
 'S iad 'nan seasamh ri h-uchd nàmhaid,
 H-aon a bhuadhaich air Clann Rà'uill ?
 'S iomadh arfhaich 's an d' rinn iad bruth.
 Le 'n gaoir-chatha farum an uilc ;
 Cinn 'g an sgathadh, snaidheadh air cuirp ;
 Luaidhe treabhadh domhain troimh 'm fuil.

C' àite an cualas riamh ri 'n àireamh,
 'S iad 'nan seasamh air cùl Spàintich,
 H-aon a bhuadhaich air Clann Rà'uill,
 Gníùis gun fhàillinn, stàlin mar stuth ;
 Dream gun eagal, 'sheasadhbh roimh 'n trup ;
 Cruaidh, gu fearail, tarruing air stuic ;
 Stialladh ghearran 's fhear air am muin.

Bha Clann Rà'uill treun aig 'Arla ;
 'N uair 'bhrosnuich Lachlann am bàrd iad,
 Sheas iad dileas mar an stàlinn
 Gus an robh 'n nàmh toileach air sgur.

Na fir àluinn àireamh dhiu thuit,
 'S cha bu nàr dhoibh tràghadh air fuil ;
 'S b' iomadh àrmunn 'bhàsaich le guin.

An cuimhne leibh latha Blàir-Léinne ?
 Bha na Frisealaich 'nan éigin,

Cha d' shàbhail fear as a cheud diu,
 'S ghléidh sibh féin bhur cuid gus an diugh.
 Na fir thaobhgheal 'b' fhaobharach guin,
 Luaidheadh aodach caol agus tiugh ;
 Cloithean màdair 's càrnaid 'nan cur.

Ri linn Alasdair 's Mhontròis,
 Bha sibh 'n 'ur caithream an Lòchaidh ;
 Bu ghleusda, baranta, Dòmhnull,
 Leomhann crò 's an tòrachd a muigh.
 Bha 'ur naimhdean diolta dhe 'r cluich ;
 Thug iad maoim a mach air a' mhuir,
 Broinn air bhroinn a' ruith leis an t-sruth.

B' iomadh fear-cleòc' agus abaid,
 Bha chòta cho fliuch r' a chais'eart,
 Fòghlum an t-snàimh' nach robh aige ;
 Air an aigeal luidh iad air ghur.
 Cha robh daol a' faochnadhan cuirp ;
 Oir bha 'n aodach, caol agus tiugh,
 Ni nach b' ioghnadh, aognuidh 's e fliuch.

Là eil' ann an Coille-chnagaidh,
 Dh' shalbh Mac-Aoidh 's gu 'n dh' fhàg e 'bhaggage,
 B' fheumail an gniomh rinn an t-each dha,
 Air na bh' aige chuir e droch bhuil.
 B' iomadh sonn a b' fhonn-mhoire guth,
 Bh' air Raon-Ruaraidh 's fuanan o'n cuirp,
 Cinn 'us gruagan luaidht' ann am ful.

Là eil' ann an Sliabh an t-Siorraim,
 Cùis an àir a dh' àraich tioma,
 Thuit Ailean an neart an teine ;
 Leomhann smearail 's b' fhearail a chruth.
 'S truagh an tòrachd 'thàinig thar muir,
 Dh' fhàg sud leòinte 'stigh sinn 's a muigh ;
 Nis, sin stòlda 's còir dhuinn bhi sgur.

ORAN DO MHAC-IC-AILEIN

NO

CUIDEACHADH IAIN GHRUDAIR.

MILE beannachd dhuit Iain Ghrùdair
 Dhùisg thu mi le t' uirigleadh,
 B' aisling caillich mar a dùrachd,
 Tha mi 'n dùil a chunna tu ;
 Bha thu dichiollach gu leòr
 Gu meòrachadh ni b' urrainn duit ;
 'S 'na' dh' fhàg thu féin gun chur air dòigh
 Cha bhi an còrr dheth uireasbh'each.

C' uime, 'n deigh 's a dhol 'na' dhàil,
 Nach d' rinn thu pàirt a chumadh dheth ;
 'N am bu bhàrd thu dheanadh dàn,
 Mo làmh gu 'n éireadh luinneag leat,
 Air duine treubhach, euchdach, sàr-mhaith,
 Fialaidh, fàilteach, furanach,

Nach faca nàmhaid, air là blàir,
An sàilean air raon iomanach.

'S e tùs mo sgeòil an Tighearn òg,
'S cha deanadh do ghlòir tuiream dha :
Cha stad an cainnt cha teanga mhall,
A dheanadh rann do 'n duine sin,
Dha 'm bheil na càirdean lionmhòr, làidir,
Anns gach ceàrn an cruinnich iad,
'S tric a thug beàrn as a' nàmhaid,
'S bhiodh an àireamh diombuain dhoibh.

Ma thig air Mac-Ic-Ailein éiginn,
'S eòl domh féin am furan air,
'N a' chaisgeadh fheum 's gach toir 'us déigh,
A chuireadh éis no mulad air :
An Albainn féin tha sluagh nach géill ;
Cunntas cheud a dh' ionadh treubh,
Nach diùltadh éirigh uair na h-eucail
'S thig o Eirinn iomadaidh.

'N uair thogar ri crannaibh do shìoda,
Chluinntear pìob 'us drumaichean ;
Suaicheantas maiseach gu leòr,
Aig Dòmhnullaich, na curaidhean.
Bi fraoch nan garbh-bheann ri mac-meamnach,
Craobh nach searg an duilleach aic' ;
Long 'us bradan 'us làmh dhearg,
'Us leòghann fearrgha furachair.

Ni nach neònach 's leat Chlann Dòmhnuill,
 Na laoich chròdha churanta :
 Théid garbh 's a' chòmhstri, searbhy's an tòrachd,
 Garg mar leòghann chuileanan :
 Ri sgathadh chluas ri spealtadh ghuaillean ;
 Sgoltadh chnuachd 'us mhullaichean ;
 Théid bras 's an ruaig nach tais ach cruidh,
 'Se fear nach buan 'ni fuireach ruibh.

'S cinnteach thig do chinneadh féin leat,
 Làidir, treubhach, curanta ;
 Théid 'nan éideadh bhualadh spéicean,
 'S cruidh am beum 's gur guineach iad.
 An iomairt lann cha 'n 'eil iad mall,
 Gur lionmhor geall a bhuinig iad ;
 A siapadh cheann thar chorpa nan Gall,
 'Us tart an geall air ful orra.

Thig na Leòdaich mar na seabh'ga
 Air am fòghlum tur-bheumach,
 Làidir, eòlach, 's fearg 'n an srònaibh,
 Leònadh iad gu cunnartach.
 Gur nimheil beurtha ni iad creuchdan,
 Cha téid léigh an urras orr',
 Bi caonnag chaoich an gnùis gach laoich,
 Co nàmh a dh' fhaodas fuireach riu ?

Eirigh fiùrain fhlathail, ùra,
 Stiùbhartaich gu dubh-mharbhadh ;

Iarla Bhòid le chòmhlan cliùiteach,
 'N uair a dhùisgear 's duilich e.
 Thig o Atholl na fir bhorba,
 Cholgarra, ro iomairteach,
 Gach aon as an Aipinn an Iar,
 'S an àm dhoibh triall bi bhuinig ac'.

Thig Clann Iain leat an òrdugh,
 'S bòchdain a gheibh urram iad.
 Bi fuil 'ga dòrtadh leis na leòghainn
 'S gu 'm bi feòil na culagan ;
 Le claidheamh cruadhach a' sior bhualadh,
 'S luathaireach na curaidhean,
 Gun leòn gun sgios gu brath'ch cha till iad,
 Gu 'n téid gill a chur leotha.

Thig na Catanaich le cìnnt ;
 Cha 'n ioghnadh iad a chruinneachadh,
 Gus do dhidean o luchd mì-run ;
 'N àm na strì cha chuirear riu.
 Gur làdir treun gach conspunn féille,
 Nach éisd bhi 'g a' d' dhi-moladh ;
 'N uair chruinneacheas iad uile còmhlah
 Bi ni 's leor 's na h-urrad ann.

ORAN DO NA FOGARRAICH.

Togaibh misneachd us sòlas,
 Bithibh inntinneach ceòlmhor,
 'Us cuiribh 'ur dòchas
 Ann an còmhnaidh an Ard-Righ
 Bho 'n is éiginn duibh seòladh,
 'Us nach ann do 'ur deòin e,
 Do 'n righeachd nach eòl duibh,
 Mar a thòisich 'ur càirdean.

Bho nach fuiling iad beò sibh,
 Ann an criochaibh 'ur n-eòlais,
 'S feàrr duibh falbh de 'ur deòin as,
 Na bhi fòdha mar thràillean
 'S iad na h-uachdarain ghòrach,
 A chuir fuaradh fo 'r srònáibh,
 'S a bhris muinneal righ Deòrsa,
 'N uair a dh' fhòg'radh na Gàidheil.

Ma thig cogadh 'us creachadh,
 Mar is minic a thachair,
 'S ann a bhios sibh 'n 'ur starsaich,
 Fo chasaibh bhur làmhaid ;
 Tha sibh soirbh ri bhur casgairt
 Gun neach ann gus a' bhacail,
 Tha bhur guaillean gun tacsa,
 'S na gaisgich 'g 'ur fàgail.

Righ ! gur sgiolta r' am faicinn,
 'N a seasamh air faiche,
 Le 'n aodaichean gasda
 De bhreacanan càrnaid,
 'N a' dh' fhalbh uaibh an ceart uair,
 De dh' òganaich dhreachmhor,
 Gun truailleadh, gun ghaiseadh,
 Gun taise gun taire.

Thug sud sgrios air Mac Dhòmhnuill,
 Thug e spùineadh air mòran,
 Thug e lomadh air Cnòideart,
 Agus leòn air Clann Rànaill ;
 Falbh nam fear mòra
 Falbh nam fear òg',
 Agus falbh nam fear cròdha,
 'N àm tòrachd a phàigheadh.

Bi Cinn-chinnidh 'n an ònar,
 Bi an slinnean gun chòmhach,
 Gun treise gun chòmhnad,
 'N uair thig fòirneart an làthair
 Bi 'ur nàimhdean gu spòrsail,
 'G 'ur stampadh fo 'm brògan,
 Luchd fòirneart gu treòrach',
 Gun neach beò gus an àicheadh.

'S bochd an gnothuich r' a smaointinn
 Gu bheil am fearann 'ga dhaoradh,

'Na' dh' fhalbh dhe 'n cuid dhaoine,
 Thàinig caoirich 'nan aite.
 'S lag an sluagh 's gur a faoin iad,
 Dol an carraid no 'n caonnaig,
 Làn de bhracsaidh 's de chaoile,
 'S iad fo dhraoigh 'Ille Mhàirtin.

Cha dean smiùradh 'ur saoradh,
 'N làthair batail air raontaibh,
 No fead cibeir an aonaich,
 Gur e caochladh 'ur n-ànràidh ;
 'S ged a chruinneacheadh sibh caogad,
 Mholt 'us reithichean maola,
 'S beag a thogadh a h-aon diu,
 Claidheamh faobharrach stàilinn.

Ciod e 'm fàth dhomh bhi 'g innse,
 Gu 'n d' fhàs sibh cho mìothar,
 'S gu 'n spothadh sibh frìde,
 Far an direadh i fàrdain ?
 Dh' fhalbh na ceannardan mìleant',
 'G an robh sannt air an fhìrinn,
 Agus geall air an dillsean,
 Agus cuing air a' nàmhaid.

Air an tuath bha iad cuimhneach,
 'S cha b' ann gus an sgrìobadh,
 Gu 'm biodh bantraichean 's dilleachdain,
 Diolta gu saoibhir ;

Bhiodh gach truaghan gun dìth air,
 Mu 'n cuairt air na suinn ud,
 Cha sealladh iad iosal,
 Bha 'n inntinn robh stàtail.

Dia 'stiùireadh 'ur gnothuich,
 Air gach taobh agus romhaibh,
 A null air chuan domhain,
 Is coimhiche gàire,
 Thugaibh eòlas 'us earail,
 Do 'n ghaoith a bhi tairis,
 Gus an giùlain i thairis,
 'Ur mnathan 's 'ur páisdean.

Biodh an fhairge le mothar,
 Toirt an spid as an reothart,
 Biodh Neptune 'g a clobhadh,
 Gun tomhas ro àrd orr' ;
 Gus an ruig sibh am fearann,
 Gun eagal a ghabhail,
 Dol air tìr mar is maith leibh,
 Ann an calaichean sàbhailt'.

O ! triallaibh nis fheara
 Gu dùthaich gun ghainne,
 Cuiribh cùl ris an fhearann,
 'Chaidh thairis am mèl oirbh,
 Gu dùthaich na meala,
 Gu dùthaich a' bhainne,

Gu dùthaich an ceannaich sibh
Fearann gur n-àilghios.

Gu dùthaich gun ghainne,
Gun chrionadh, gun stannard,
Far an cnuasaich sibh barrachd
'S a mhaireas 'ur làithean,
'S e saighdear glic fearail
'N uair chitheadh e 'm barrachd,
A theicheadh le anam,
'S nach fanadh 's a' làraich.

Seallaibh mu 'n cuairt duibh,
'Us faicibh na h-uaislean,
Gun iochd annt' ri truaghain,
Gun suairceas ri dàimhich ;
'S ann a tha iad am barail,
Nach buin iad do 'n talamh,
'S ged dh 'fhàg iad sibh falamh,
Cha 'n fhaic iad mar chall e.

Chaill iad an sealladh
Air gach reachd agus gealladh,
Bha eadar na fearaibh
Thug am fearann bho lànmhaid ;
Ach innseadh iad dhòmhaisa,
'N uair théid sibh air fògradh,
Mur caill iad an còir air
Gun dòigh air a thearnadh.

ORAN FIR GHRIMINIS.

Moch 's mi 'g éiridh
 Fo sprochd 's fo éislein,
 Gur bochd mo sgeula
 'S cha bhreug mo chainnt,
 Ma 's sgeula fior e,
 'S e sgeula is cianala,
 Chualas riamh
 Ann an Innse-Gall.
 'S e sgeula mór e
 Air bheagan sólais,
 Gun cheòl, gun fhonn ;
 'S e sgeul is truaighe
 Chuala cluas e,
 Air bheagan buannachd
 'S gur buan a chall.

'S e sgeul tha cruidh e
 Gu 'n d' ghabh sibh fuadach,
 Ar sar dhaoin'-uaise
 Gun ghruaim, gun sgraing ;
 Gu 'n d' ghabh sibh fògradh,
 'S cha b' ann 'g 'ur deòin,
 Dha 'n an tir nach b' eòlach
 An seòrs' ud ann.

Bi sinne brònach
 Air cnoc 'nar ònar,
 'S e luchd ar fòirneart
 A bhuinigeas geall,
 Gur éiginn strìochdad
 Do luchd ar mì-run,
 'S ar càirdean dileas
 Dol fad o làimh.

'S e sgeul is cinntiche
 Dhuinn r'a innse,
 Ga 'n d' bhual a chuibhl'* oirnn,
 An tuinnse teann ;
 Gu 'n d' rug beul sios † oirnn,
 Gun dùil ri dìreadh,
 Gu 'n d' luidh am mi-fhortan
 Air ar ceann.

* Ga 'n d' bhual a chuibhl' oirnn
 Le tuinnse teann.

The word "cuibhle" in this connection probably means the wheel of fortune, or Providence. Iain Lom uses the word similarly in his elegy to Alasdair Dubh, Ghlinne-Garaidh—

"Thionndaidh cuibhl' air Clann Domhnuill,
 'N treas a conspunn bhi bhuatha."

"Tuinnse" means the fatal blow which this wheel gave in the course of its revolution.

† "Beul sios" was an old phrase conveying a malediction. "Beul sios ort" was a strong expression of ill-will, and is probably taken from the tendency of the under-lip—especially in children—hanging down when a person is in sorrow.

Mu 'n fhine phriseil
 Bu mhisneachd rìgh sibh,
 An am dol sios duibh
 Sibh cruinn 's a' champ,
 'S a sheasadh làidir
 Ri aodann Spàintich,
 'S nach traoight' 'ur n-àrdan
 Gun bhàs nan Gall.

Gur bochd an sgàthan
 Bhi triall 'g 'ur n-àrdaich,
 Gun ann ach fàsach
 'Us làrach lom,
 Na tighean maiseach
 Am biodh am pailteas,
 An deigh an sgapadh
 Gun chloich, gun chrann.
 Far 'm biodh a' chòisir
 Gu mùirneach, ceòlmhor,
 'S na tighean mòra
 Bu bhòidheach greann ;
 Bi còmhlan ùr ann
 A danns' air ùrlar,
 A' lionadh bùla*
 'S gu 'n chumhn' air dram.

* "Bùla" is probably a corruption of the English word bowl, and refers to the old-fashioned punch-bowl.

Ar daoine fialaidh
 Bha cliuiteach ciatach,
 Nach d' fhuaireadh riamh
 Ann a' fiar no feall,
 Bha fearail fearrgha
 Gun bhleid, gun anbharr,
 Gun tnù, gun fharmad,
 Gun chèalg, gun sannt' ;
 Iad ri falbh uainn
 An dùdlachd aimsreach,
 Le ùprait fairge
 Is aingidh greann,
 'Se smaoint an ànraidih
 Air mnaoi 's air paisdean,
 Is goirt a ràinig
 Gach cridh' an com.

Mar nach b' àbhaist
 Cha chluinn sinn làmhach,
 Bi cadal sàmhach
 Aig damh nan eang,
 Caidhlidh earba
 Bheag nan gearr-chas,
 Cha chluinn i farbas
 No stoirm 's a' ghleann.
 Bho 'n dh' fhalbh Clann Dòmhnuil
 Nam brat 's nan rò-seol,
 An fhine bhòidheach—
 Bu nòs domh 'n dream !

Leis 'na' dh' fhalbh a cheud uair
 'S na bheil gu triall dhiubh,
 Ri ùine bliadhna
 Cha 'n fhiach sinn plang.

Dhubh na speuran,
 Gu 'n d' dhubh na reultan,
 Dh' fhalbh teas na gréine
 Cha 'n 'eil e ann.
 Thig croisean saoghalta
 'S dosgaidh dhaoin' oirnn,
 'S ann their gach aon fhear
 Tha 'n taod cho teann.
 Tha chùis ra 'r n-aodann
 Cho cruaidh 's a dh' fhaodas,
 'S a' fearann daor oirnn
 Gun saorsa plang ;
 Tha 'n t-sid air caochladh,
 Le gaoith 's le caonnaig,
 'S an tuil air aomadh
 Bho thaobh nam beann.

Ar daoine finealta
 Socair, siobhall',
 'N robh pailteas rìomhaidh,
 Gun strì, gun staing ;
 B'e mais' 'ur beusan,
 Bhi sgaipteach gléidhteach,
 Bhi tapaidh, treubhach
 Gu cur 'n a cheann ;

Bhi reic ar n-àirneis
 'S ar n-àite tàimhe,
 'S e dh' fhàg 'ur càirdean
 Gu túrsach trom ;
 'N a' bheil an làrach dhiubh
 Falbh am màireach,
 Gun dad a dhàil
 Ach gu 'n tig an long.

'S i Ghemailt uaimhreach
 A dhearbh 'ur cruadal,
 Rinn Alba chuartach'
 Le cruas 'ur lann ;
 B'e dreag bhur àmhaid
 Sibh sheasamh làidir,
 An cinn bhi gearrta
 'S an cnàmhan pronn.
 'S ma 's e 'n cruadal
 Bha dhuinn an dualchas
 Gu 'n d' leig sinn uainn e
 'S ar guallain fann
 Sinn nis nar tràillean,
 Ma thig a àmhaid
 Gur làg ar páirt dhiubh
 'S ar n-àireamh gann.

Le mheud 's tha mhiann orm,
 'S tha rùn air m' inntinn,
 Cha 'n eòl domh innse'
 Bho cheann gu ceann ;

Gach lascair ùr-ghlan,
 A chaidh an taobh ud,
 Cha 'n eòl domh chùnnatas
 Bho thùs mo rann.
 Ach 's mor an dìth
 Air a' cheàrn so 'n righeachd
 Aig meud na h-ìre,
 'G an d' thug sibh ann,
 'S a nis o thriall sibh
 Le 'r cliù 's le 'r ceutadh
 Biodh beannachd Dhé leibh
 'G 'ur dion gach ball.

ORAN MU 'N EIDEADH GHAILIDHEALACH AN DEIGH BLIADHNA THEARLAICH.

'THA mi cràiteach tinn, 's tha mi sgìth lan dochair ;
 Ceangal air mo bhuill cha dean mi ceum coiseachd ;
 Mallachd air an Righ thug na breachdain dhinn ;
 Guidheam air beul sios bho 'n a shìn e'n t-osan.
 Ged tha 'n stocainn fada 's i 'na cochull farsuing,
 B' annsa 'n t-osan geàrr nach biodh réis o 'n t-sàil an gartan.

Luthaig thu ar còta 'na sgeòd farsuing
 'S luthaig thu ar brògan ni 's leòir phailte ;
 Mheudaich thu ar cìs, 's lughdaich thu ar ni,

'S dh' fhag thu sinn gun phrìs cha 'n 'eil dìreadh againn ;
 Thug thu dhuinn a bhriogais, theannaich thu ar n-easgoid,
 B' annsa 'm breacan sgaoilte 'n t aodach aotrom, sgioibl.

'S olc a chulaidh oidhche bhi 'n luib na casaig,
 Cha 'n fhaigh mi cas a shìneadh cha 'n fhaigh mi cadal ;
 B' fheàrr an sòlas inntinn na deich slatan singilt'

Chuirinn anns an fhéile 'n àm éiridh 's a' mhaduinn ;
 Sud an t-aodach dreachmhòr, chumadh gaoth 'us fras uam ;
 Mallachd an dà shaoghail air aon fhear chuir as e.

Cha 'n 'eil culaidh shamhraidh is feàrr na 'm breacan ;
 Tha e aotrom fonnmhor an àm an t-sneachda,
 Bha e cleacht' r' an cùmhach air na gaisgich lùth'or,

'S aiceid air an giùlain nach 'eil e aca ;
 Chulaidh bha cur fasgaidh air na Gàidheil ghasda,
 Righ ! gur mòr am beud, le pléid a chur a fasan.

Cha 'n fhaca tu mac màthar, air sràid no faiche,
 Is deise na mac Gàidheil le shàr phearsuinn,
 Breacan air am féile, 's a chlaidheamh air chùl sgéithe,

Le dhagaichean cho gleusda, nach éisd iad sradag,
 Sgiath air gual a' ghaisgich claidheamh caol 'na achlais,
 Cha 'n 'eil Gall 's an t-saoghal nach caochladh roimh fhaicinn.

'S maith thig boineid ghorm air chùl borb an cocadh ;
 Cota geàrr 'us féile, air sléisnean nocte,
 Dhol an làthair cruadail, gu fuitteach nimheil buailteach,
 A' leadairt nam fear ruadha, bhiodh smuais 'ga fhosgladh,
 Neart treun nan curaidh, 'cur nan lann gu fulang,
 Bhiodh luchd nan casag millte 's an cinn dheth am muineil.

'N uair chruinnicheas na Gàidheil an làthair troda,
 Le 'n geur lannan Spàinnteach 's an deàrsadh chlogad,
 Pàighidh iad gu daor ann am fuil 's an gaor,
 'S cha bhi bonn gun dioladh de bhlàr Chulfhodair,
 Cha 'n'eil urra chaidh a chreachadh no urra chaidh a għlacadh,
 Nach faigh iad luchd am mì-ruin gu 'n rogha diol thoirt asda.

'N uair chluinneas fir na h-Alba do dhearbh chaismeachd,
 Théid iad gu neo-clearbach fo d' dhealbh bhrataich ;
 Dòmhnullaich bu dual, 's dàine théid 's an ruaig ;
 Tàillearan clo ruaidh ged nach fuaign, ach strachdad,
 Le 'n cruaidh lannan sgaiteach snaitheadh chluas 'us
 chlaigeann,
 'S gu 'm bi àireamh cheann air a' h-uile ball 's a' bhreacan.

Gur h-oil leam ar n-éideadh bhi air chaochladh cumaidh,
 Ach chi mi bhi 'g a dhìoladh mu gheata Lunainn,
 Leis na fleasgaich bhòidheach chluicheas mar na leòghainn,
 Chuireas geilt air Deòrsa 's nach faod e fuireach,
 Théid Righ Deòrsa dhachaigh 's am Prionns' òg a għlacadh,
 'S bi Teàrlach 'na Righ 's feàirde prìs nam breacan.

'S ionann 's a' bhi 'm priosan bhi dhìth a' bhreachdain,
 Deanamaid ùrnuigh dhichiollach 's gheibh sinn taice,
 'N uair thig iad a nall oirnn coig ceud mile Frangach,
 Bi'dh Teàrlach air an ceann, bi am ball fo 'n casan,
 Sud an sluagh beachdail, chuireas an gleo reachd'or,
 Armaileach gu leòir, a luaidheas an clòth Catach,
 'S 'nuair théid a mhuc a dhathadh 's a cuid uircean fhaileadh,
 Air claidheamh no air breacan cha bhi tuilleadh bachdaidh.

ORAN NA H-OIGE.

AN toiseach nam bliadhnaichean ùr',
 Deireadh gheamhraidean ùdlaidh nam fras,
 'N uair is anmoiche dh' éireas a' ghrian,
 'S is lionmhoire 'shileas an sneachd ;
 Bi gach leanabh, gach naoidhean bochd, maoth,
 A' gabhail gu saothair 's gu cnead,
 Aig géiread an fhàillidh 's an fhuachd,
 Nach faodar an gluasad bho nead.

'N toiseach Earraich thig Gearran fluch, garbh,
 Chuireas calluinn gach ainmhidh air ais,
 Thig tein-adhair, thig torrunn 'na déigh,
 Thig gaillionn, thig éireadh nach lag ;
 Bi gach leanabh gach naoidhean bochd maoth,
 Nach urrainn doibh innse 'de 'n staid,
 Gun eirbheirt, gun asdar, gun lùth,
 Gus an teirig an dùdlachd air fad.

Mart tioram ri todhar nan crann,
 A' sùghadh gach allt 'us gach eas,
 Gach luibh bhios an gàradh no 'n coill,
 Gun snodhach, gun duilleach, gun mheas ;
 Bi turadh fuar fionnar gun bhlàths',
 A' crùbadh gach àil a thig ris,
 Bi gach creutair 'n robh aiceid 's a' Mhàrt,
 Tigh'n air éiginn o 'n bhàs, no dol leis.

Mios ghrianach ùr fheurach an àigh,
 'M bi gach luibh a' cur blàth os a cionn,
 Nach bòidheach bhi 'g àrach gach luis,
 Ur àluinn fo ghucaig 's fo dhriùchd !
 Bi gach deòiridh 'n robh aiceid 's a' Mhàrt,
 Fas gu bòidheach snuadhdmhor glan ùr,
 Le eirbheirt, le coiseachd, 's le cainnt,
 'N déigh gach bochdainn 's gach sgraing chur air chùl.

Bailc-Bhealltuinn* nan cuinneag 's nan stòp,
 'S nam measraichean mòra lom-làn,
 Trom torrach, le uibhean, 's le eòin,
 Le bainne, le feòil, 's le gruth bànn ;
 Fàsaidh gillean cho mear ris na féidh,
 Ri mire ri leum 'us ri snàmh,
 Iad gun leth-trom, gun airtneul, gun sgrios,
 Sior ghreasad gu ire 's gu fàs.

Mios dhubharrach, bhruthainneach, bhlàth,
 Bheir sìneadh 'us fàs air a' ghart,

* Bailc-Bhealltuinn.—The word bailc is a good deal out of use in the sense in which the bard uses it in “Oran na h-Oige.” In the Highland Society’s Dictionary the word bailceach is found meaning rainy—pluviosus. Macleod & Dewar’s Dictionary gives bailc among other meanings that of a flood—a mountain torrent. In this sense also it is found in “Mac Mhaighistir Alasdair’s” “Marbhrrann do Pheata Columain,” signifying the flood, in allusion to the service done by the dove to Noah after his long imprisonment in the ark. MacCodrum, in his use of the word, gives the idea of the soft, dewy weather so desirable in May, and so productive of the fertility depicted in “Oran na h-Oige.”

Fàsaidh gillean an iongantas mòr,
 Le iomadaidh bòsd agus beairt ;
 Iad gun stamhnadh gun mhunadh 'nan céill,
 Cuid de 'n nàdur cho fiadhaich ri each,
 'N dùil nach 'eil e 's nach robh e fo 'n ghréin,
 Ni chuireas riu féin aig meud neart.

'N tusa 'n duine 'n robh iomadaidh bòsd,
 C' uim nach d' amhairc thu fòil air gach taobh,
 'N e bhi beairteach seach iomadaidh neach,
 No bhi taitneach mu choinneamh nan sùl ?
 'N tigh creadha so 'm bheil thu 'na d' thàmh,
 Cheis chneadhaig ni cnàmh anns an ùir,
 Ma 's droch dheaghad* a bh' agad 's an fheòil,
 Thig fathast dhuit dòruinn 'g a' chionn.

Cia mar dh' éireas do 'n choluinn 'n robh 'm bosd,
 'N uair a théid i 's a' bhòrd-chiste dhlùth ?
 Cia mar dh' éireas do 'n teanga 'n robh cheilg,
 No do 'n chridhe bha deilbh a mhi-rùn ;
 No do uinneagan buairidh nam miann,
 Dh' fhad bruaillein a' d' inntinn bho thùs ?
 'S grannda 'n sloc anns an robh iad a' d' cheann,
 'N déigh an stopadh le poll 'us le ùir.

* Ma 's droch dheaghad a bh' agad 's an fheòil.

The word deaghad is not uncommonly employed in North Uist in this sense of living, or morals. It appears to be a corruption of the English word diet, though seldom used in Gaelic in the original sense of that word. Duine deaghadach—a well living man.

'N déigh a stopadh le poll 'us le ùir
 Anns a' closaich gun diù is beag toirt,
 'S am beagan a thug thu leat sios,
 Bheirear buileach e dhìot anns an t-sloc ;
 Cia 'n aghaidh bu mhaisiche fiambh,
 Cia do shùilean, cia t'fhiacan, cia t'fhalt,
 Cia na meòirean an glacaibh nan làmh,
 Bha cur seachad gach spàирn a rug ort.

'N uair a dh' fhalbas an Samhradh ciùin blàth,
 Théid gach uamhar 's gach àrdan air chìùl,
 Bi cnuimhean 'g 'ur ithe 's 'g 'ur searg,
 Ris an abair iad farmad 'us tnù ;
 'N uair nach foghainn na dh' fhóghnadh de 'n bhiadh,
 'S nach foghainn na lionas a' bhrù,
 Cha robh bheairteas aig Solamh 's aig Iob,
 'Na thoilicheadh còmhlath do shùil.

Gur e 'n gaisgeach nach gealtach am bàs,
 Leis an coingeis an saoibhir no 'm bochd,
 'N uair a thilgeas e 'n gath nach téid iomrall,
 Cho cuimhseach ri urchair a' mhòisg ;
 Cha 'n amhairc e dh' inbhe no dh' uaisl',
 Ach gach àrdan 's gach uamhar 'na thosd,
 'S ni cinnteach 'shiol Adhamh o thus',
 Bàs nàdurr' 'us cùnnatas 'na chois.

ORAN NA H-AOISE.

AIR FONN—“The pearl of the Irish nation.

CHA tog mise fonn cha 'n éirich e leam,
 Tha m' aigne ro throm fo éislean,
 Tha 'n chridh' tha 'n a m' chom mar chloich 's i 'na deann
 'S i tuiteam le gleann 's cha 'n éirich ;
 Tha 'n gaisgeach nach tiom ruinn 'cogadh 's a strith,
 Cha 'n fhaigh sinn a chaoi dh bhi réidh ris,
 O'n is treis' e na sinn théid leis-san ar claoidh
 'S cha teasaig aon ni fo 'n ghrein sinn.

'S cuis thùrsa gu dearbh, a' bhi 'g ionndainn 'na dh' fhalbh
 Ar cruitheachd, ar dealbh 's ar n-eugasg,
 Ar spionnadadh 's ar neart ar cumadh 's ar dreach,
 Ar cur ann an gleachd 'us streupa.
 Mar a sgaoileas an ceò air aodann an fheòir,
 'S a chaochaileas néoil 's na speuran,
 Tha 'n aois a' teachd oirnn, cumhach, caointeach, lan bròin,
 'S neo-shocrach ri leòn an té ud.

Aois chasadach gharbh cheann-trom chadalach bhalbh,
 Ann an ion 's a' bhi marbh gun spéirid :
 Cha għluais thu ach mall agus cuail ann a' d' laimh,
 Dol mu 'n cuairt air gach allt 'us féithe :
 Cha chuir thu gu bràth 's cha chubhaidh dhuit e,
 Geall ruithe, no snàmh, no leuma.

Ach fiabhras 'us cràdh 'g a' d' iaraidh gu bàs
 Ni 's liomhoir' na plàigh na h-Eiphit.

Aois chianail ro bhochd, ri caoidh 'n a' rug ort
 Neo-bhrigheil gun toirt gun spéis thu ;
 Do luchd comuinn 'us gaoil, fa chomhair an aoig
 Gun chomas a h-aon diubh éirigh :
 Dh' fhalbh t' earnais 's do chuid, dh' fhalbh slàinte do chuirp,
 Thig ort faillingean tuigs' 'us reusoin ;
 Thig di-chuimhn' thig bà'chd thig diomhanas dha
 Thig mi-loinn do chàirdean féin ort.

Aois odhar gun bhrìgh 'g a' d' fhògar gu cill ;
 Dh' fhàgas bodhaig a' chinn ro éitidh :
 Aois bhodhar nach cluinn gun toighe gun suim,
 Gun char foghainteach strì no streupa :
 Aois aiceideach thinn gun taice, gun chli,
 Gun ghaisge, gun spìd, gun spéirid,
 Lan airtneul 'us cràidh gun aidmheil bhi slàn
 Gun neach do 'm bheil càs dheth t' éigginn.

Aois għreannach bhochd thruagh, 's miosa seallaidh 'us tuar
 Maol sgallach gun ghruaig gun deudaich :
 Roc aodannach chruaidh, phreasach, chraicneach, lom, fhuar,
 Chrùbach, chrotach, gun ghluasad ceuma ;
 Aois lobhar nan spioc bheir na subhailean dhinn,
 Cò 's an domhain le 'm binn do shéis-sa ?
 Aois ghliogach gun chàil 's tu 's miosa na 'm bàs,
 'S tu 's tric a rinn tràill dhe 'n treun-fhear.

Aois chiar dhubh a' bhròin, gun riomhachd gun spòrs,
 Gun toil-inntinn ri ceòl do-éisdeachd ;
 Rob fheasagach għlas, air dhroch sheasamh cas,
 Leasg sheotail, neo-ghrad gu éirigh :
 Cha 'n fhuingh thu 'm fuachd ; 's olc an urr' thu 'n càs cruaidh,
 'S e do mhuinghinn an tuath 's an déirce ;
 Cha 'n 'eil neach ort an tòir nach e aidmheil am beòil
 Gur fada leo beò gun fheum thu.

Aois uain' is olc dreach, orm is suarach do theachd,
 Cha 'n 'eil tuairisgeul ceart fo 'n għréin ort :
 Gun mhire gun mhùirn gun spionnadha gun sùgh ;
 Far an cruinnich luchd ciúil cha téid thu.
 Aois chaitidh 's olc greann ; aois aiceideach mhall ;
 Aois phrab-shuileach dhall gun léirsinn ;
 Chas fheargach gun lùth, lan fħarmad us tnù,
 Ri fear meamnach beo, lùghmhor, gleusda.

Faire ! faire ! dhuin' òig cia do bharantas mòr ?
 'Ne do bharail bhi beò 's nach eug thu ?
 Tha 'n saoghal 's an fheòil fior aontach gu leòir
 Air do chlaonadh o choir gu eucoir ;
 Ge fad 's a tha 'n dàil, thig ort teachdair o 'n bhàs
 Na creid idir gur fàisneachd bħréig e :
 Biodh do għeard ort glé chruaidh, tha do nàmhaid mu 'n cuairt,
 Cha tigh cràbhaidh an uaigh do 'n téid thu.

Ach fàrdach gun tuar, bhreun, dhaolagach, fhuar,
 Anns an càraich iad suas leat-féin thu :

Co mor 's tha e d' bheachd ; dheth t' stòr cha téid leat,
 Ach bòrdain bheag shnaighte', 's léine :
 Ach 's e cùram is mò dol a dh' ionnsuidh a' mhòid
 Thoirt cunntas an còir 's air eucoir ;
 Far nach seasadh do nì, dhuit dad dheth t' chuid féich ;
 'S mo an t-eagal bhi 'm priosan péine !

EADAR CARAID AGUS NAMHAID AN UISGE BHEATHA.

CARAID.

Mo ghaol an colgairneach spracail,
 Fear nan gorm-shùilean maiseach,
 Chuireadh foirm fo na macaibh,
 'N uair a thachradh iad ris.
 'N uair a chruinnicheadh do chòisir,
 Cha b'i chuilm gun a còmhradh ;
 Gheibhte' rainn agus òrain,
 'S iomadh stòiri 'nam measg :
 Gille beadarrach sùgach,
 Tha na chleasaiche lùghor ;
 'S ro mhaith 'bhreabadh an t-àrlar,
 Agus 'thionndadh gu briosc.

'S e dhannsadh gu h-uallach,
 Aotrom, abhcaideach, guanach,
 Gun sealltuinn air truaill'eachd,
 Ach uaisl' agus meas.

NAMHAID.

'S maирg a dheanadh an t-òran,
 'S nach deanadh air chòir e ;
 Gun bhi moladh an dò-fhir,
 Bha na rògaire tric.
 Fear a sheargadh an conach,*
 Thionndadh mionach nan sporan
 Dh' fhasgadh leanaban an aimbeairt,
 Ann an carraid 's an drip.
 An struidhear diomhain,
 Tha gu brosgulach breugach ;
 Fear crostada mi-chiallach,
 Gun riaghailt gun mheas.
 Call mor air bheag buinig
 Ann a' sòlas ro dhiombuan ;
 'S e fear stòrais is urrainn
 A bhi 'n cumantas ris.

CARAID.

Mhic-an-Toisich Mhic-bracha,

* Excessive riches, suggesting the miser's mad lust for gold—ignava fames auri.

A chuireadh bòilich 's na claigneann,
 'S a chuireadh casan air chrith.
 Bu tu cleòca na h-aiteimh,
 'N aghaidh reòtachd 'us sneachda,
 Dheanadh notion de fhrasaibh ;
 'S a chuireadh seachad an cuith'.
 Dheanadh dàna fear saidealt' ;
 Dheanadh lag am fear neart'or ;
 Dheanadh daibhir fear beairteach,

 An ceart aghaidh na th' aca,
 De mhùirn, no mheadhail, no mhacnus,
 'S tu raghainn is taitneich',
 De chuis mhacnus air bith.

NAMHAID.

A dhuin' an cual' thu no 'm fac 'thu
 Riamh ni 's miosa chuis mhacnus,
 Na bhi 'n a' d' shineadh 's na claisean
 Gun chlaisteachd gun ruith ?
 Air do mhùichadh le daoraich ;
 'G a' do ghiùlain le daoine ;

 Far nach faodar a chleith
 'S e bhi 'coinneachadh Rati,*
 Ni do lomadh a' d' bheartas.

* Rati, a famous distiller, of whom more than one of the bards make mention.

Luchd a' chomuinn 's a' chaidrimh,
 Ni e 'n creachadh gun fhios
 'S e ciall-sgur a bhios aca,
 'Bhi ri buillean 's ri cnaphadh ;
 Gu 'm bi fuil air an claignean,
 'S bi am batachan brist'

CARAID.

Mo ghaol an lasgaire suairce,
 'Chleachd 'bhi 'n caidreamh nan uaislean ;
 'S iomadh tlachd 'us deagh bhuaidh
 A ta fuaighte ri d' chrios.
 Biorach, gorm-shuileach, meallach,
 Beachdail, colgarra, fallain,
 Làidir caoin air dheagh tharruing,
 Gu fogradh gaillionn a' chuirp.
 Far an cruinnich do phàistean,
 Gu 'm bi mir' agus mÀnran,
 Agus iomadh ceòl gàire ;
 'S iad neo-chràiteach mu 'n cuid.
 Bheir e 'n t-ùmaidh gu sòlas
 Ni e sunndach fear brònach ;
 Ni e glic am fear gòrach,
 'S ni e gòrach fear glic.

NAMHAID.

'M b'e sin raghainn nam macaibh,
 'Bhi gun fhradharc, gun chlaisteachd ?

'N uair bu mhiann leo dol dachaigh,
 'S e ni thachras a's mios'.
 Gur e'n ceann is treas cas doibh,
 Lom-lan mheall, agus chnapan ;
 Gach aon bhall 'g am bi aca,
 Goid a neart uath gun fhios.
 Iad 'nan tamhaisg gun toinisg ;
 Iad a' labhairt an donais ;
 Iad ro lamhach gu conus,
 'Us nach urr' iad cur leis :
 Bi' an aod'nan 'g an sgròbadh,
 Bi' an aodach 'g a shròiceadh ;
 Cha 'n fhaod iad bhi stòlda,
 'S iad an còmhnuidh air mhisg.

CARAID.

Nach bòidheach an spòrs,
 A' bhi suidhe mu bhòrdaibh,
 Le cuideachda chòir,
 A bhios an tòir air an dibh !
 Bi'dh mo bhotal air sgòrnan,
 A' toirt cop air mo stòpan ;
 Noch toirteil an ceòl leam,
 An crònan 's an gliog ?
 Gu 'm bi fear air an daoraich ;
 Gu 'm bi fear dhiubh ri baoireadh ;
 Gu 'm bi fear dhiubh ri caoineadh ;
 Nach beag a shaoileadh tu sud ?

Ni e fosgait' fear dionach ;
 Ni e crosda fear ciallach ;
 Ni e tosdach fear briathrach,
 Ach am blialum nach tuig.

NAMHAID.

Nach dona mar spòrs,
 A' bhi suidhe mu bhòrdaibh :
 'S a' bhi milleadh mo stòrais,
 Le gòraich gun mheas ;
 Le siaraich 's le stàplach ;
 Le briathraig mi ghnàthaicht' ;
 Ri speuradh 's ri sàradh,
 An Abharsair dhuibh.
 Bi'dh an donus 's an dòlas,
 De chonus, 's de chòmhstri ;
 'S de tharruing air dòrnatibh,
 Anns a' chòmhail nach glic ;
 Ri fuathas 's ri sgainneal ;
 Ri gruaidhean 'g an prannadh
 Le gruagan 'g an tarruing,
 Le barrachd de 'n mhisg.

CARAID.

Mo ghaol an gille glan éibhinn,
 Dh' fhàs gu cineadail spéiseil ;
 Dh' fhàs gu spioradail treubhach,
 'N uair a dh' éireadh an drip.

Bhiodh do ghillean ri sòlas,
 Iad gu mireagach bòidheach,
 Iad a' sireadh ni 's leòir,
 'S iad ag òl mar a thig.
 Iad gu h-aighearrach fonnmhor,
 Iad gun athadh, gun lompas ;
 Iad ro mhaith air an rongais,
 'N uair a b' anntlachd an cluich.
 Cuid d' am fasan air uairibh,
 Dùirn 'us bat' agus gruagadh,
 Dh' aithnichte 'dhreach air an spuaicean,
 Gu 'n robh bruaidhlean 's a' mhisg.

NAMHAID.

Bha mhisg deamhnaidh 'na nàdur,
 Lom-lan mòrchuis us àrdain ;
 Lom-lan bòsd agus spàraig,
 Anns gach càs air an tig.
 Tha i uamharra, fiadhaich,
 Tha i murtaidh na h-iarbhail ;
 Tha i dustach, droch-neulach
 Làn de fhiabhrus 's de fhriodh.
 Gu 'm bi fear dhiubh 'na shìneadh
 Gu 'm bi fear 'na chùis mhi-loinn
 Gu 'm bi aithlise lionmhor ;
 'S iad a' maoidheadh a' phluic.
 Tha i tuaireapach foilleil ;
 Iomadh uair air dhroch oilean ;

'S gu 'n do fhuasgladh fa dheireadh,
Ach 's i bu choireach a' mhisg.

CARAID.

Mo ghaol an cleasaiche lùthmhòr,
Fear gun cheasad gun chùmhnnadh ;
Fear gun cheiltinn air cùineadh,
'N am bhi dlùthachadh ris ;

Dheanadh gealtair de 'n diùdhìlach ;
Dheanadh dàn' am fear diùid
 Chum a chùis a dhol leis.
Fear a's feàrr an taigh-òsd thu ;
Fear a's ùr-fhailtich òrain ;
Fear nach fuilingear 'na ònar,
 Ach am bòilich 's an 'driop :
Fear tha mànranach ceòlmhor ;
Cridheil càirdeach le pògan ;
'S a làmh dheas air a phòca,
 Sgapadh stòrais le misg.

NAMHAID.

 Fear ri aithricheas mòr thu ;
 Fear ri carraid, 's ri còmhstri ;
 Fear ri geallam 's cha tòram ;
 Thug sud leònadh do d' mheas.
 Ni thu 'm pòitear 'na striopaich,

Ge b'e thionnsgainn, no dh' innbrig,

 Thug bho aobhar gu siol e ;
 Thug bho bhraich gu ni 's brìgheil' ;
 Thug a prais 'na cheo liath e,
 Mach troimh chliath nan lub tric.
 Thug a buideal gu stòp e,
 Rinn e'n t-susbainte còmhlath,
 Thogadh sligeachan reòta
 Far, fir bhreòite gun sgrid.
 An donus coinneamh no còdhail
 No eireachdas mòr-shluaign,

Gun do cheilearachd bhòidheach,
 Cha bhi sòlas 'na measg.

NAMHAID.

Ge b' e thionnsgainn an aimhlig,
 'S olc an grunnd bha 'na eanchainn,
 'S mòr a dhùisg e de dh-argamaid,
 'S de dhroch sheanchas ma'ris.
 Dheilbh e misg agus daorach,
 Rinn e breisleach 's an t-saoghal ;
 B' fheàrr nach beirte' gu aois e
 Ach bàs na naoideachan beag.
 Dhùisg e trioblaid 'us còmhstri,
 Rùisg e biodaig an dòrnaibh,
 Chuir e *peabar 's an deamhnachd
 Nuair a thòisich a' mhisg.
 Cha chùis buinig ri leanmhuinn,
 Ach cùis guil agus falmachd
 'S a chaoidh cha 'n urr' thu 'g a sheanchas,
 Cia mar dh' fhalbh do chuid leis.

MARBHRANN DO ALASDAIR MACDHOMHNUILL.

Ach ge fada mi m' dhùsgadh,
 Gur a pailte le m' dhùsal no m' thàmh,
 Gu bheil sac air mo ghiùlan,
 Agus aiceid 'ga' m' chiùradh le cràdh ;

 'Na 'bheil a dhìth air a chùnntais,
 Dh' fhàg e sgìth sinn 'ga dhùsgadh gach là.

Gur e fuaradh na Bealltuinn

 Agus Eòin a chùil chleachdaich mo ghràdh !
 Dh' fhàg iad tàirnean 'n ar cridhe
 Chaoidh cha slànuich aon lighich ach bàs.

Fhuair sinn fuaradh 'n a dhéigh,
 'S tric an ruaig ud 'g ar taghal a ghnàth,

Dh' fhàg fiamh gul air ar rosgaibh
 Sinn uile ri acain 's nach nàr ;
 Ar sàr spailp a dhuin' uasal,
 Bu deacair fhaotainn mu 'n cuairt oirnn ni b' fheàrr,
 Duine macanta, suairce,
 Duine tapaidh gun tuaireapachd làmh.

Duine measarra, cliùiteach,
 Bha gu h-aoidheil 'na ghiùlain 's na ghnàths',
 Beul na firinn 's an t-sùgraiddh,
 'S mór an dith air dùthaich do bhàs ;
 'S mór a' bhearn 'n ar daoin' uaisle,
 Chaidh am mànràn 's an uair sin mu làr,
 Dh' fhalbh ar tacsa 's ar réite,
 Cùis is goirte do shèathar bhi fàs.

Duine sgiamhach ri amharc,
 Tha sud cianail 's tu d' luidhe fo 'n fhàd,
 Bu cheann uidhe ro cheud thu,
 'N uair bu mhithich dhoibh triall air an t-sràid :
 Gheibhte slàinteagan dùmhail,
 Agus traghadh air bùlachan làn,
 Urlar farsuing, lom, sguabta,
 Far 'm bu tartarach fuaim bhrògan àrd.

Dol a dh' innse do phearsa,
 Cha bu bhrideach ri t' fhaicinn air blar,
 Cha d' fhuaireadh riamh ort eron cumaidh,
 Ged a dh' iarrt' thu bho d' mhullach gu d' shàil ;

Duine smearail, deas, treubhach,
 Bu sgafanta ceum air an t-sràid,
 Bu cheann feadhna mòr, beachdail,
 Làidir teom thu neo-thais ann a' spàирn.

Tha mi sgìth dhe na ròidean,
 Cheart cho direach, 's cho còmhnard, 's tha 'n tràigh,
 'S ann a dhireas mi mhòinteach,
 Bho nach cuimhneachan sòlais do chàrn :
 Ann a' làrach na coise,
 Far nach d' fhuair thu cur socair air làr,
 Luidh an t-Eug ort a thiota,
 Aig an aon Dia tha fios mar a bha !

Righ ! gur h-oil leam do chéile
 'N am luidh' agus éirigh 'us tàmh,
 I gun sunnd air gàir' éibhinn,
 'S tu gun dùsgadh 's a' léine chaoil bhàin :
 'S lag a guallainn fo 'n eallaich,
 Agus luasgan fo h-anail le cràdh,
 Chionn a fàgail 'n a h-onar,
 Agus fad a' cur feòir ort 's a' chàrn.

Rug an dìl oirnn am bliadhna,
 'S goirt an sgrìob a thug fiaclan an t-sàibh,
 Mar tha fuaradh na bochdainn,
 'S ann tha thuar air a' chnoc a' bhi fàs :
 Mallachd buan air an dosgaidh,
 Thug i uainn na cinn stoca cho tràth,

Mar a bhuaileadh a' chrois oirnn,
 'S ann a fhuaireadh do chorp anns a' bhàgh.

Bu tu beannachd na tuatha,
 'S tu nach teannadh iad cruidh mu 'n a mhàl,
 Ceann diadhaidh nan truaghan,
 'N uair a dh' iarradh iad fuasgladh 'nan càs ;
 Fhir a b' aon-fhillte cridhe,
 'S tu gun chlaonadh gu sligheachan ceàrr,
 'S tu nach buaineadh a bhuinig, . . .
 Air a' chluain sin nach cuireadh am bàrr.

Cha robh ar diobhail gun ghainne,
 'San Di-ciadain mu dheireadh de 'n Mhàrt,
 Ann an iochdar na sgeire,
 Bha ar mì-stath ro shoilleir le càch ;
 Ann an uachdar a' chladaich,
 Far nach d' fhuair thu tigh'nn dhachaigh gu blàths',
 Cas bu luith air an astar,
 Agus guallainn 'n robh neart air an t-snàmh.

Gu 'm b' e imrich an fhuathais

 Gu 'n robh frasan air gruaidhean,
 Agus basan 'g am bualadh le cràdh ;
 Gu 'n robh gruagan 'g an cìreadh,
 Daoine truagħha 'g an spionadh gu lär,
 Mar nach guidheadh neach riamh leat,
 'S ann a dh' uidheamaich Dia dhuit am bàs.

MARBHRANN DO UISDEAN A' BHAILE-SHEAR,
 AN UIDHIST A' CHINN-A-TUATH.

GUR geur an gath gath an Aoig
 'N ar taobh a dh' fholaich a' ghuin,
 'N uair dh' fhuadaich e uainn na suinn,
 'Sgeul is cruidh r'a innse 'n diugh.

'N uair thugadh ar ceann priseil uainn
 Gur mi-fhortan cruidh a th' ann ;
 Càch a bhi tearnadh cho cas
 'S a thearnadh a' chlach leis a' ghleann.

Am fior ghaisgeach air dol fo lic
 Mu 'm b' iargaineach iomadh neach ;
 Sàr churaidh a chaisgeadh tòir,
 'S nach cumadh "ob òb" air ais.

Duine sgairteal tapaidh teòma ;
 Duine saoibhir anns gach beairt,
 Labhradh an fhirinn le grunnd,
 'S cha b'e teanga leam 'us leat.

Gur mise chunnaic an uair,
 Gu 'm b' urramach do shnuadh 's do dhreach ;

Fear fearail bu fhlathail gnùis,
Amharc nan sùl nach robh tais.

Duine fearail a dh' fhàs cruidh ;
Duine 'n robh cruidal 'us smachd ;
Duine 'n robh iochd agus truas,
Gu fuasgladh air fear 'na airc.

Duine 'n robh smior agus sgoinn ;
Duine nach robh foill na bheachd,
Nach buaileadh a bhuille chùil,
'S nach gleidheadh mì-rùn do neach.

Craobh a ruisgeadh air gach taobh sinn :
Craobh nach do ghiùlain a meas ;
Cha 'n fhan ar luchd aoise beò,
'S cha tig ar daoin' òga ris.

Seallamaid a nis rì Dia ;
'S cinnteach a' chrioch dhuinn am bàs :
Ruitheamaid ar cursa réidh,

Thàinig meaghan gu bròn duinn,
 Thàinig aighear gu dòrainn,
 Chaill sinn amharc 'us sòlas ar sgàthain.

'S e'n Tì priseil thug uainn e,
 Chum na righeachd is buaine ;
 O Chriosda, cum suas duinn na bràithrean.

ARCHIBALD MACDONALD, OR GILLE NA CIOTAIG.

A NOTHER distinguished Hebridean singer was Archibald Macdonald, known to his countrymen as "Gille na Ciotaig." He was born at Paible, in North Uist, where MacCodrum composed the "Smeorach," probably about the middle of the 18th century. He received all the education he ever got in the parochial school of that parish, the only school there at the time. When the gifted and amiable Sir James Macdonald was, with a number of Uist and Skye gentlemen, deer-stalking in the hills there, they came upon a sheiling or àiridh, where the parents of the bard were residing for a few weeks, with their cattle and sheep, as was the custom in these good old times; and, the goodwife having shown her hospitality by offering them a drink of the milk of her heather-fed cows, which all Highlanders know to have a peculiar sweetness of its own—"bainne air àiridh"—Sir James, who added to his other extensive and wonderful accomplishments a good knowledge of the mountain tongue, entered into conversation with her, asking her about the welfare of her family, and so forth. She told him, among other things, that her two boys were at the west side in school, and that one of them had been born with a defective arm, short and with only rudimentary fingers. Sir James asked his name, and when told that he was baptized by the name of "Gilleasbuig," he answered, "It was a pity that they did not call him Coll, so that there would be another 'Colla Ciotaig' in the Macdonald clan." Before leaving, Sir James gave her money to aid in the prosecution of her sons' education. Luckily the sound arm was the right one, so that he was able to use it in various ways; and, being an expert writer, he was employed by Alex. Macdonald, the "bàillidh breac"—a son of "Alastair Mac Dhomhnuill," to whom MacCodrum composed the elegy—as clerk, whilst he held the factorship of the Clanranald estate of South Uist. Mention having been made of Sir James Macdonald, it may be added that during that shooting excursion the gun of Macleod of Tallisker went off accidentally, and the shot lodged in Sir James' leg, and that it was with difficulty the crofters of North Uist were kept from laying violent hands on the offender. It was said his fine frame never recovered the shock from the accident. It was then that his kinsman, Macdonald of Vallay, composed the well-known piobaireachd "Cumha na Coise." "Gilleasbuig na Ciotaig," like all true bards, had an ambition to immortalize himself, by having his bardic effusions perpetuated in a book; and, with this purpose, he started for Inverness, the town with which the Western Isles had most frequent communication and easy access in those days, He only reached as far as Fort-Augustus, where he died and was buried ; and, if the spot could be identified, which is very unlikely, it would be well on the part of his countrymen to erect a monument to the memory of one who has justly been called the finest and cleverest of all the Gaelic comic bards. It is said that while at Fort-Augustus he met with Alexander Stewart, who had been parochial schoolmaster of North Uist —the author of “A Mhàiri bhòidheach, ’s a Mhàiri ghaolach” and that his manuscripts, having fallen into Stewart’s hands after MacDonald’s death, formed the foundation of that excellent volume of Gaelic poems, called “Stewart’s Collection.” MacDonald is essentially the bard of humour and satire, and his only serious production, his eulogy of Lochiel, is much inferior to his livelier poems. One of his most amusing songs is his lampoon on the “Doctair Leòdach,” published in Mackenzie’s collection. This “Doctair Leodach” was a favourite mark with Macdonald at which to aim his shafts of ridicule. Macleod was born in St. Kilda, and seems to have returned there on a visit once at least in the course of his life. Hence Macdonald nicknamed him the “Giobain Hirteach” in a sprightly effusion, of which I have picked up the following. The hero seems to have been a great fop, who went about arrayed in full Highland dress:—

Gu seinn mi 'n Giobain Hirteach dhuit
 'S e nis a tigh'n do 'n dùthaich,
 Cha dean mi di-chnuimhn' idir air,
 'S ann bheir mi tiotal ùr dha ;

Ma dh' fhalbh e uainn gu briogaiseach,
 Gu 'n d' thàinig e gu biodagach,
 'S cha 'n fhaigh e 'n àite bhrioscaidean,
 Ach iseanaan an t-sùlair.

'N uair chunnaic iad an Lunnain thu,
 Bha h-uile fear a feòrach,
 Co as thàinig an lunnaiche,
 'S am buimealair 's an t-blach,
 Ma 's maraich e gur culach e,
 'S gur leathunn tiugh a phullet e,
 'S tha watch urrad ri turnip
 Aig a' lunnaiche 'n a phòcaid.

An ghille bh' aig na doctairean,
 Gur iomadh poit a sgùr e,
 Gu 'm b' olc gu reefadh topsail,
 'N uair bu chaise thigeadh cùis e ;
 'N uair chunnaic an long Spàinteach e,
 Gu 'm b' àrd a chluinnte ràinich e,
 Cha saighdear am fear spàirtealach,
 Cha seas e guard no duty.

Another poem by Macdonald is in the form of a sgiobair-eachd, in which a most amusing description is given of a tempestuous voyage in an ill-found craft, from Lochmaddy, the principal harbour in North Uist, to some other port of the Western Isles. It is printed here along with his other poems. Many of his satires and lampoons, of which there must have been a goodly number, have been lost, but one hears snatches of them now and then in his native Uist. For example, it is still remembered how his horse was pin-folded for straying on to the farm of an ill-tempered old gentleman at Bernisdale, in Skye. A poet's license, in Skye, did not extend to the appropriation of grazing by a poet's horse—at anyrate, in those days. But “Gille na Ciotaig” lampooned the inhospitable farmer, and thus had his revenge. He gave him the horrible description of being the ugliest man in the sheriffdom, and predicted that there were terrible things in store for him.

Bodach Bhearnasdail a Uinnis ;
 Duine 's grainnde tha 's an t-Siorrachd ;
 Bodach Bhearnasdail a Uinnis
 Ceann Cinnidh gach déistinn.
 Amhuich fhada corra gridhich,
 Ni thu fhathast cainb a ruidheadh :
 Amhuich fhada corra gridhich,
 Ni na fithich feusd ort !

His satire on the Abigail at Dunvegan Inn was very good, though characterized by breadth of expression. She turned him out of his bed, saying that the Uist packet, by which he was to leave, had arrived, and gave the bard's room to a belated friend of her own. It was a false alarm and she regretted it when he launched forth to the air of Ben Dorain :—

Cha do chuir mi úigh 's an te sgeòdalaich
 Ged chuireadh i gùntanan sròil orra
 Rannsaichidh mi thu bho d' aghaidh gu d' chùl
 O d' mhullach gu úrlar do bhrògan.

A favourite butt with “Gille na Ciotaig” was a South Uist man whose name was patronimically “Aonghas Mac Callum,” and who went under the nickname of the famhair, meaning literally, the giant, but conveying also the signification of a certain intellectual obtuseness—body without mind. The famhair was an old soldier who appears to have seen service in the Duke of Cumberland's army, but apparently the bard had no high opinion of his courage or patriotism. He probably won MacDonald's antipathy from his having been in the Government army—that being, of course, the unpopular cause in the Highlands in those days—and “Gille na Ciotaig,” like all other Highland bards, being a Jacobite at heart. He composed two lampoons to this veteran, and one of them is printed here. It contains some very peculiar, perhaps unintelligible words. The other satire on the famhair was composed in consequence of that worthy, appearing uninvited, at certain wedding festivities. It is well known in the Western Isles that the penalty consequent on such a breach of good manners was somewhat serious to the offender. When the famhair's presence was observed :—

“ Thuirt Nic Rob ris na gillean
 Bithibh innich 's an am ;
 Thainig bodach 'n ar ceann
 Nach buin dùinn O !
 Ma 'se famhair a' ghlinn' e
 Cuiribh filleag gu teamn air ;
 Cha 'n fhuiling sinn anntlachd
 Ni 's mò O ! ”

The famhair is then disposed of according to use and wont, and the poet puts in his mouth the following complaint, as well as a resolution to hide himself from human vision.

“ Cha taghail mi baile,
 Cha taghail mi buaile

'S ann theid mi do 'n uaimh'
 Am bi smùid O !
 Cha taobh mi ri duine
 Leis gach diombrigh a fhuair mi,
 'S ann rinn iad gu truagh dhiom,
 Ball-bùrsd O !

'S e tota Mhic Ascuill
 'Us cleasachd a' cheàird
 A chuir saighead mo bhàis
 Air mo ghiùlan
 Bho 'n thachair an tuiteamas
 Tubaisteàch dhòmhhsa,
 Mo chur ann am ònar
 Am pùnn O !"

Then a friend and kinsman who was present expresses himself sympathetically thus :—

" Thuirt M'Cellaig 's e 'g osnaich
 'S leam is bochd mar a tha thu,
 'S tu chinneadh mo mhàthar
 O thùs O !
 Gun bhotal gun ghloine,
 Gun aran gun chàise,
 Gun fhuran, gun fhàilte,
 Gun diù O !"

Then the famhair is supposed to conclude his plaint in the following two verses :—

" Bha mi uair dhe mo shaoghal
 'S cha b'e 'm baoghal tigh'mn ceàrr orm,
 'N uair dh' éirich mi 'm fàbhar
 A' Phrionns' O !

Gu foghainmteach sgariteal,
 Lan tapachd 'us cruadail ;
 A Mhuire ! bu ghuadha
 Mo shùil O !

Thuirt Aonghas Mac Calum
 Bheir mi ceannach gu 'r miann duibh,
 Ma cheileas sibh diamhair
 A' chùis O !
 Cha téid mi ri m' mhaireann
 Gu banais gun iarraidh,
 Gun cuirear mi sios
 Anns an tìr O !"

"Gille na Ciotaig's" humour is generally, though not always, at its best. An exception is "Oran an fhamhair" which abounds in scurrilous vituperation rather than in those sportive sallies which characterize the happiest of his efforts. "Marbh-rann do Iain Ruadh Piobair," and its companion song the "Aiseirigh" are masterpieces of wit. The measured movement; the dignity of expression; the mournful sentiment of the "Marbh-rann," with an under current of fun running through, arising from the consciousness that the rumour of the piper's death was untrue; all this, followed by the brisk measure and lively strains of the "Aiseirigh" are extremely clever and amusing. It is said that Iain Ruadh, the hero of both poems, was well pleased with the joke, and paid the bard a sum of money for them.

ORAN DO LOCHIALL.

Air fonn.—Tweedside.

O THAINIG mi dhùthaich Lochiall,
 Cha robh iad rium spiocach, no bochd.
 Fhuair mi uil' iad 'nan comunn gun ghiomh,
 Làn fial'achd, gun chrìne, gun sprochd,
 Muinntir ghasda dha'n dùthchas deagh aimm,
 Buidheann shealbhach fudh 'n aimr air gach cnoc.
 Bha sud ann an dùthchas duibh riamh,
 'S mòr cliùiteach am bliadhna' ar ceann stoc.

'Dhòmhnuill òig, o na fhuair thu do chòir,
 Lean am biùthas bu nòs, 'us cha'n olc,
 Bi gu furanach, farasda, fòil,
 Ris na daoine nach deònaich do lochd,
 Ni éirigh gu d'chuideachadh suas,
 'Nam faiceadh iad tuasaid teachd ort,
 Rachadh ullamh gu rusgadh nan lann,
 'S iad 'chaisgeadh an nàmhaid le toirt.

'S tu 'n gasan, tha eireachdail àrd,
 'S tu macant' gun àrdan, gun mhoit,
 'S tu 'n curaidh gun ghaise, gun fhiamh,
 'S tu 'n gallan dh' fhàs sgiamhach le toirt,

Gu deas dìreach o d' mhullach gu d' bhonn,
 'S deagh spiorad neo throm ann a' d' chorp,
 Aghaidh shoilleir tha seirc ann do ghnùis,
 Sùil smiorail an diunlaoich fo d' roisg.

Aghaidh shuilbhear a's taitniche snuadh,
 Aghaidh fhlathail, neo-ghruamach nach tais,
 Aghaidh smachdail am bheil buirb', agus cruas,
 Mu nithear do ghluasad gu brais ;
 Tha thu siobholt', lan iochd, agus truais,
 Tha thu measail air sluagh anns gach staid,
 Sàr cheannard nan gaisgeach bheir buaidh,
 Thog thu suas iad gu cruadal gle mhoch.

Sàr cheannard 's ann duit-sa bu dual,
 Bhi gu fuasgailteach, cruadalach, glic,
 Fhir a ghineadh, 'sa bhuaineadh o'n dream,
 Fhuair urram 's na streupan gu tric,
 Buidheann fhuilteach nach géilleadh san strì,
 Buidheann chunnbhalach, innleachdach, chlis,
 Buidheann aigeantach, lùthmhòr gun fhoill,
 Buidheann uabh'rach le sgòinn a ghléidh meas.

Cha 'n e fochan an fhòlaich an sonn,
 Ach an t' abhall dh' fhàs trom anns an lios,
 Dh' aindeoin doinionnan faoillich, na màirt,
 Cha chrion i, cha searg, 'us cha bhris ;
 'S ann a bhitheas i fo dhuilleach a ghnàth,
 'S i cinntinn gu h-àrd le mòr theas,

Fo a sgàile bithidh fasga, 'us blàs,
Aig gach géig, bhitheas ag àrach deagh mheas.

Cha chraobh mhosgain, no chrionaich a th'ann,
Ach an cuileann 's gach am a bhitheas gorm,
Cha ghais sneachda, no gliobhaid an crann,
No flichne, no geamhradh, no stoirm,
Slat dhe 'n fhion fhuil dha 'n dligheach bhi ann,
'S a thàinig gun ghanntar le foirm,
Cha bhi Camronaich tuille gun cheann,
'S ann a philleas an campar gu toirm.

Cha 'n ioghna leam idir an uaill,
Déigh 's na fhuair iad de chruas, a's de chlaoidh,
Ri iargan nan gaisgeach bha uath,
B' shearr alla, 'us luadh anns an t-saoghal,
'N uair bha iad air fògradh, 's air chall,
'S an cuid fearainn san am sin 'gan dith,
Gus an tàinig reachd rioghail an àigh,
Chur dhachaidh gach àrmunn gu thìr.

'N uair a theid Achncaraidh air dòigh,
'S a ni Dòmhnull ann còmhnuidh le sìth,
Thig cleachdan a shinsireachd beò,
'S freag'raidh creagan na mòintich do 'n phìob ;
Bithidh toil-inntinn aig d' uaislean, 'us spòrs,
Theid mi-ghean air fògradh, 'us sgios,
Bithidh fùdar ga losgadh gu leòir,
'S daimh chròic air an leònadh 'san fhrìth.

Gu meal thu nis d' fhearrann, a's d' inbhe,
 Gach urram, gach briogh, a's gach àgh,
 'S do phòsadhbh ri maighdean dheas ghrinn
 Dha 'm bi' maise le aoidh, 'us le gràdh,
 Dha 'm bi' gliocas le fiosrach, 's le céill,
 Dha 'm bi' càirdean bhitheas treun an deagh ainm,
 Dha 'm bi' urram gach subhailc, 'us beus,
 Dha 'm bi' fòghlum le ceutaidh gun mheang.

Leat a dh' éireas do chinnidh nach gann,
 Gach meanglan gu ceannsgalach cruidh,
 'N uair a thogar do bhratach ri crann,
 Chithear darach san am ga chuir suas,
 Bithidh gach treun-fhear, 's gach fuiribi gun mheang,
 Gu tartrach, neo-fhann, dol 'nan gluas'd,
 Neal frioghaile ro ghuineach na 'n deann,
 Grad tharruing nan lann as an truaill.

Thig Gleann-aibheais a stuirt, as a ceò,
 Thig Calldaird gu stròiceach le fhuirt,
 Thig an teaghlach dha 'm buineadh an t-Sron,
 Ni iad reubadh, 'us leònadh air chuirp,
 Leiter-fhiunnlaidh, 's Loch-airceag gu dian,
 Gleann-laoigh nach 'eil fiambach 'san troid,
 Thig Ceann-loch leat, Lòchaiddh, 's Lochiall,
 'S thig o Shuaineard gun giomh thugad cus.

'S ioma caraid tha agad mu 'n cuairt,
 A deas, 'us a tuath, thig gu d' fheachd,

'S leat na Caimbeulaich cinnteach gu leòir,
 Tha do cheangal ri 'n cleith, 's bithidh iad leat,
 Loch nan Eala dhuit dileas gu leòir,
 Teaghlaich faramach, cròdha, 'm bheil neart,
 'S am Barrabreac cha diobair thu beò,
 Bithidh e seasmhach an còmhnuidh le neart.

Bha Clann Dòmhnuill co-aontach dhuit riamh,
 'S ann a' d' chomunn a dh' iarradh iad stad :
 'S gach làraich 'n am tagraigdh, no stri,
 Bhiodh an claidhe gu dileas cuir leat,
 'S gach aon tha de Stiubhartaich beò,
 Bithidh iadsan gu deònach 'n a' d' thaic,
 Cha 'n 'eil finneadh feadh Alba 'm bheil buaidh
 Nach 'eil Camaronaitch fuaight' riu gu beachd,

Tha do chàirdeas ri iomadach dream,
 Nach eòl domh 'san am thoirt a steach,
 Ged bu mhiann leam do leantainn 'san rann,
 Tha m' fhiosracha gann air do neart,
 Le sin ni mi t' fhàgail san ani,
 Ann an urram, an gràdh, 'us am meas,
 Le guidhe deagh chliù, agus slàint',
 Bhi 'ga' d' leantainn mar chàirdean am feasd.

MARBHRANN DO IAIN RUADH PIOBAIR.

FHUAIR mi sgeula bho 'n ghobha,
 Cha 'n aobhar meoghail ach gruaim ;
 E fein fo mhi-ghean 's fo thrioblaid
 Ri iarrunn cist' do dh' Iain Ruadh ;
 Saoir a' locradh 's a' sàbhadh,
 'S a' chulaidh bhàis 'g a cur suas,
 Sàmhach eadal na curra,
 Cha chluinnear tuilleadh a fuaim.

Chaidh na maidean a òrdugh
 Cha 'n aithne dhomhs' an cur suas,
 Tha 'n gaothair air stopadh,
 Tha 'n dà dhos 'n an trom shuain,
 Chaill an seannsaир a chlaisteachd ;
 Tha 'n gleus air a ghrad leigeil suas,
 Bho 'n tric a thainig ceol taitneach,
 Rogha caismeachd mo chluais.

Ceol bu bhlaisd' 'us bu bhinne,
 Dhùisgeadh Spiorad do 'n t-sluagh ;
 Ceol bu tartaraich' siubhal,
 Thionndadh tioma gu cruas :
 Ceol mar smeorach a' ghlinne ;
 Ceol a's binne na cuach ;

Meoir gun bhraise gun ghiorradh,
Dionach, ruith-leumnach, luath.

Bu sgiolta sealladh do sheannsair
Air port 's air crunn-luath 's air cuairt,
Pronnadh cnaparra, lùghmhòr,
Caismeachd shùnnntach 's an ruaig ;
Dheanadh gaisgeach de 'n sgliùraich,
Chuireadh diùnlach 'n a luaths ;
Claidhmhnean glasa 'g an rùsgadh ;
Claigneann bruit' aig luchd fuath.

O'n dh' fhalbh an companach sàr mhaith,
Dh' fhalbh an ràbhart 's an spòrs,
Dh' fhalbh beannachd na cloinne,
'S e sheinneadh an ceòl ;
Nis o rinneadh do chàradh,
An ciste chlàraich nam bòrd,
'S mor is misd iad am Phàro
Gun fhear do ghnàis a' bhi beò.

Dh' fhalbh an deagh ghille cuideachd,
Nach robh sgrubail 's an òsd :
Dh' fhalbh fear tràghadh nan searrag,
Chosgadh barrachd air stòp :
Dh' fhalbh fear deanamh nan duanag,
Leis an luaichte' gach clò ;
Cha b'e ghnàs a' bhi gearan,
Ge iomadh gloin thug dha pòg.

'S beag mo shùnn ri la féile ;
 'S beag mo spéis dheth gach ceòl ;
 'S beag mo thlachd a' bhi 'g éisdeachd,
 Gaoir theud fir nan cròc* :
 Leam a b' annsa do bhruidheann,
 An am suidhe mu 'n bhòrd,
 Na droch dhreochdan air fidhill,
 Mar fhuaim snidh ann a' lòn.

Bha thu d' dhannsair air ùrlar ;
 Bha thu siùbhlach air snàmh ;
 Bha thu d' charaiche lùghmhor,
 Cha bhiodh tu d' lùirich fo chàch
 Urram leum agus ruithe,
 Glac threun a ruitheadh an ràmh,
 'S an am caithe' na cloiche
 Bu leat an toiseach air càch.

'S iomadh aon tha 'g a' d' ionndrain
 O'n chaideh ùir ort 's an uaigh ;
 An toiseach labhair an spliùcan
 Bhiodh tu giùlan gach uair,
 "Tha mi fein gun tombaca
 Cha b'e sud cleachdad a fhuair
 'S tric chuir Iain fo m' achlais
 Greim 'us cairteal 'us cuach."

* Fear nan cròc was a nickname applied to a blind fiddler of the name of Donald Macaulay, Domhal Ruadh Dall, owing to his long, luxurious locks resembling, it was said, the antlers of a deer.

Thuirt a ghloine bha 'n Asdain
 "Mo sgeul chraiteach ro chruaidh ;
 Dh' fhalbh mo shùgradh 's mo mhàran
 Thug am bàs leis Iain Ruadh
 Fear a chluicheadh a' chlàrsach,
 Dheanadh dàn agus duan
 Cha b'e Caluinn a' chrampaidh
 Fonn a b' fhearr leis 'g a luaidh."

Thuirt am pige bha làmh ris
 "Faigh an t-àrca gu luath
 Cuir am chlaigeann-sa spàirt e,
 Tha tart 's gach àite mu 'n cuairt :
 Thainig con-traigh na plàighe,
 Tha nithe gnàthaichte bhuainn,
 Cha bhi reothart gu bràth ann,
 'S ann a thràigheas an cuan,"

Thuirt am buideal 's am botal
 Thuirt an goc ris an stòp
 Thuirt an copan 's an t-slige
 "'S mor an sgrios th' air tigh'n òirnn
 Tha gach sruth air a dhunadh
 Bha cur a dh' ionnsuidh nan lòn,
 Cha 'n fhaighear drap air an ùrlar
 A fhliuchas brù Dhòmhnuill òig."

Thoir mo shoiridh-sa thairis
 Dh' ionnsuidh 'n fhearrann ud thall ;

O nach faod mi bhi ma'ruibh,
 'S leibh mo bheannachd 's an am ;
 Biodh an uaigh air a treachaid
 Ann a' fasan nach gann,
 Buideal rùm aig a chasan,
 'S rol thombac aig a cheann.

AISEIRIGH IAIN RUAIKH.

SEISD—Horo gu 'm b' éibhinn leam
 A chluinntiinn gu 'n do dh' éirich thu,
 'S ann leam is ait an sgeula sin,
 Gu 'n deach' an t-Eug cho teann ort.

Chuala mi gu 'n d' chailleadh thu
 'S gu 'n do rinneadh t' fhalaire,
 'S e cuis mu 'n robh mi gearanach,
 Do bhean a bhi 'n a bantraich.

Thug iad bho na h-òsdairean
 Buideal am bun tòrraidh dhuit,
 Ma bheireas mi gun òl air,
 'S ann a ni sinn seòrsa bainnse.

O'n tha 'n giuthas sàibht' agad,
 'S gu 'n d' rinn an gobha tàirnean dhuit,

'S ann theannas sinn ri bàta
Theid gu Phàro dh' iarraidh Brànnndai.

Cha bhi dad a dh' éis orra
Gheibh i gach ni dh' fheumas i,
Ni 'n lion aodach seol meadhoin d' i
'S gu 'n dean na spéicean crann d' i.

Cha 'n easbhuidh nach bi ballaibh ann,
Gu cuplaichean 's gu tarruinnean,
Tha ròpaichean gun ghainn' agaínn,
'S gu 'n ceangail sinn gu teann iad.

Cha 'n 'eil m' inntinn gearanach,
O 'n chuir thu dhiot an galair ud,
'S ann tha do phiob 'na deannal,
A' toirt caithream air ceol dannsa.

'N uair bha thu 's an réiseamaid,
Bu sgairteal tapaidh treubhach thu,
Na h-uile fear a leumadh ort,
Ghréidheadh tu gun taing e.

'N uair bha thu 'n a' t' òganach
Bu lionmhor àit' am b' eòlach thu
Chunna' mis' an clòsaidean
Ag òl an *Amsterdam thu.

* Amsterdam was a name given to the inn at Asduinn, in N. Uist; the reason being that, on one occasion, a vessel from that continental port was wrecked upon the coast, and a quantity of liquor belonging to the ship fell into possession of the innkeeper.

BANAIS CHIOSTAL-ODHAIR.*

A' BHAN AIS a bha 'n Ciostal Odhar,
 Ann an Ciostal Odhar, odhar,
 A' banais a bha 'n Ciostal Odhar,
 Cha robh fothail chòir orra.

Thainig fear a stigh 'g a' m' ghriobadh,
 Dh' innse' gu 'n d' thainig am pige,
 Fhuaras botal, lionadh slige,
 Bu bhinn gliog 'us crònan.

Thainig fear a nuas le mì-mhodh
 Gus e fein a chur an ire
 Thoisich e air bleith nan iongnan,
 Gu mi fein a sgròbadh.

Ach labhair mise gu fiadhaich,
 "Ma 's e mi-stàth tha thu 'g iarraidh,
 Gur dòcha gu 'n cuir mi 'n fhiacail,
 Air iochdar do sgòrnain !"

Smaointich mi éirigh 'nam sheasamh,
 O'n bu ghnàth leam a bhi 'g eadradh,

* Ciostal, the name of a place in Skye, the scene of the riotous wedding festivities here immortalized.

Olc no dh' éiginn fhuair mi 'leagail,
'S bhual mi breab 's an tòin air !

'N uair a chaidh na fir gu riasladh,
Gu 'n robh ceathrar dhiu 's a' ghriosaich ;
'M fear bu laige bha e 'n iochdar,
'S thug iad mirean beò as.

'N uair a thòisich iad ri buillean,
Cha robh mi fein a' cur cuir dhiom,
Gus 'n do mhùigh iad air mo mhuinneal,
'S air duilleag mo shròine.

A sin 'n uair dh' eirich an trioblaid,
Thainig iad far an robh mise,
Thog iad mi mach thun na sitig,
Theap gu 'n ithte' beò mi.

Thug iad a mach thun nan raointean,
Mar gu 'n rachadh cù ri caoich,
'S am fear nach do sgròb iad aodann,
Bha aodach 'na shròicean.

'N uair thòisich iad air a chéile,
Sradadh na fol' anns na speuran ;
Bha mis' an aite 'g an éisdeachd,
'S gu 'm b' éibhinn an spòrs iad.

Bhuail iad air a chéile chnagadh,
Leag iad air a chéile shadadh,

Shin iad air aithris na braide,
 'S air cagnadh nan òrdag.

Fear ri caoineadh, fear ri aighear,
 Fear 'n a sheasamh, fear 'n a luidhe,
 Fear a' pògadh bean an taighe,
 Fear a' gabhail òrain !

Cha robh ann ach beagan dibhe,
 Leig iad a dh' ionnsuidh an cridhe,
 Bha fear 'us fear aca rithist,
 Gun bhruidhinn gun chòmhradh.

Sin 'n uair a labhair am fidhleir
 Chuir sibh mo phuirt feadh na fidhle
 'S mise 'm fear gu 'n tig an dilinn,
 Nach toir sgriob air ceòl duibh.

SGIOBAIREACHD.

A' falbh a Loch-na-mada dhuinn
 Le sgriob do ghaoith an Iar,
 A' togail a cuid aodaich ri'
 Cha 'n fhacas aogas riamh :
 Bu lionmhoire dhuit sracadh ann,
 Na cunntas shlat an cliabh,
 'S thoir leam fein gu 'm b' amadan,
 Thug anam innte sios.

Sgiobair làidir aineolach
 Ro bharaileach mu ghniomh,
 Gu 'm b' olc gu cunntas fearainn i *
 'S i an-sheasgair 'na gniomh ;
 Da thota 's dh' ith na giùrain iad,
 Na cruinn air an cul sios,
 B'e cuid de 'n fhasan ùr,
 An cur an taobh nach robh iad riamh.

B'e sud na crainn 's bu neònach iad
 Gun dad ach seòrsa ràmh,
 Gun dad a snaidheadh orr'
 Ach an liadh thoirt dhiubh le tàl ;
 Spreod de bhun slait-iasgaich,
 Mar a thogas fiannuis chàich ;
 'S gur iomadh uair a shìola'mid
 Mur bhitheadh Dia nan gràs !

Na cuplaichean† 's gun sùghadh ann't
 'S an stagh 's a dhùil ri falbh,
 Na crainn a bagairt-lùbadh
 'N uair a thigeadh tùirling gharbh
 Deich laimhrigean a chùnnat mi
 'S mi 'na m' chrùban air a calg ‡

* Cunntas fearainn. A phrase applied to the progress of a boat as it skirts along the coast.

† Cuplaichean. The shrouds.

‡ Calg. Questionable whether this is the proper reading. More probably it should be balg which signifies, in some districts, the convexity of a ship.

'S mi greimeachadh le m' iongnan,
Ann an ait' nach direadh sgarbh.

'S e mo run an Dòmhnullach
Bha comhlath rium 's a' bhàt,
'N robh spionnadhan agus crualal
Air a guallainn leis a' ràmh :
Dol sios gu Rudha Lirinis *
Gu tit Mhic Raonaill Bhàin
Bha fear an sin 'na éiginn,
'S gun air fein ach an aon làmh.†

Bu chruaidh eadar dà Eigneig ‡ i,
'S a muir ag éirigh searbh,
'S a ghaoth a bha 's na speuraibh,
Cuir an céill gu 'n robh i garbh :
'N uair raing sinn Ruadh' Eubhadh §
'S a bha h-uile beud air falbh,
Gu 'n d' fhuair sinn lan na gloine
Chuireadh anam a fear marbh.

* "Rudha Lirinis" is a well-known point on the Minch, where crofters used to live, previous to the absorption of those pendicles on the east coast into larger grazings. Mac Raonaill Bhain was one of the largest tenants on that part of the sea coast.

† This is, of course, a reference to his own deformity.

‡ "Dà Eigneig." Two rocks, somewhat similar to the Scylla and Charybdis of the ancients, and very dangerous to the smaller boats which had to keep near the shore.

§ "Rudh' Eubhadh," a point opposite the south end of Beinn Eubhall, the highest hill in North Uist. There is a harbour there,

Dh' fhalbh sinn agus fras ann
 Cha bu stad dhuinn 's cha bu tàmh,
 Gus 'n do rainig sinn an cladach,
 'S an robh acarsaid an àigh ;
 Sean teadhair a bh' air capull,
 Chuir iad orr' i air son càbull :
 Fullag airson acair,
 Cha robh a casan ni b' fhèarr.

ORAN FOCHAID DO 'N DOTAIR LEODACH.

Thugaibh thugaibh òb òb,
 An Dotair Leòdach 's biodag air,
 Faicill oirbh an taobh sin thall,
 Mu 'n toir e 'n ceann a thiota dhibh.

'N uair bha thu a' d' fhleasgach òg
 Bu mhòrchchuisseach le claidheamh thu,
 Chaidh Ailean muillear riut a chòmhrag,
 'S leon e le bloigh speala thu.

Scolaid Ru' Eubhadh, where there was a small inn, at one time, for the convenience of callers, and where MacDonald got the potent and reviving glass of whisky to which he makes such feeling reference. Near Ru' Eubhadh Mac Codrum, the bard, lived during a good part of his life, and probably died there, though tradition is not very clear upon the point.

Bha thu 'na' do bhasbair còrr,
 'S claidheamh mòr an tarruing ort,
 An saighdear is mios' aig Righ Deòrsa
 Chomhraigeadh e Alasdair.

Gu 'm biodh sud ort air do thaobh
 Claidheamh caol 's a' ghliocartaich :
 Cha 'n 'eil falcag thig o'n tràigh,
 Nach cuir thu bàrr nan itean d'i.

Biodag 's an deach an gath-seirg,
 An crios seilg an luidealaich ;
 Bha seachd òirlich orra mheirg,
 'S gur maирg an rachadh bruideadh dh' i.

A bhiodag is miosa 'san tìr
 'S a bheairt-chinn air chrith orra,
 Chnàmh a faobhar leis an t-sùith,
 'S cha ghearr i dh' im na dh' itheadh tu.

Claidheamh agus sgàbard dearg,
 'S clearbach sud air amadan,
 'Ghearradh amhaichean nan sgarbh,
 A dh' fhàgadh marbh gun anail iad.

Cha 'n e deoch bhainne no mhéig
 'S cinnteach mi rinn ucsa dhiot,
 Ach biadh bu doch a leat na 'n t-im,
 Globainean nan gugachan.

'S iomadh farspag rinn thu mharbhadh,
 'S sùlair garbh a rug thu air,
 A bhliadhna sin mu 'n deach thu 'n arm,
 Chuir uibhean sgarbh cioch-shlugain ort.

'N uair théid thu do 'n chreig gu h-àrd,
 Cluinnear gàir nan iseanan ;
 'S ma thig am fulmair a' d' dhàil
 Sàthaidh tu do bhiodag ann.

'N uair a theid thu 'n chreig tha shuas
 Fuadaicheadh tu chlisgeadh iad,
 Le deàrsa do bhutain ruadh,
 'S do bhucaill chruadh'ch 's a' ghliogartaich.

'N uair a theid thu 's a' chreig-bhàin
 Cha mhor do stath 's na sgorrachan ;
 Cha tig an eunlaith a' d' dhàil
 Le fàileadh do chuid dhrogaichean.

'N uair a theid thu air an ròp,
 A righ ! bu mhor do chudthrom air ;
 Ma thig an cipean as a' ghrùnnnd,
 Cluinnear plumb nuair thuiteas tu.

Bu tu theannaicheadh an t-sreang,
 Cha bhi i fann mur bris thu i,
 Direadh 's na h-iseanan a' d' sgéith,
 Thoir leam gu 'm feum thu cuideachadh.

Cha mharbh thu urrad ri càch,
 Ge leathunn làidir mogur thu ;
 'S t' airm cha dean a bheag a stàth,
 Mur sgriobar clàr no praisean leo.

ALEXANDER MACDONALD.

(AN DALL MOR).

A HEBRIDEAN singer, well known in his day, but of very much inferior powers to either of the foregoing, was Alexander MacDonald. He was contemporary with John MacCodrum. He was called the “Dall Muileach,” from the fact of his father having resided for a number of years in the island of Mull, where the bard was probably born. His father, however, like a true Highlander—who is beyond all others “faoileag an droch cladaich”—migrated back to Uist, and his posterity are still called the “Muilich,” from their ancestor having sojourned in “Muile nam Mor-bheann” for a time. He was a man of fine presence, a splendid specimen of a stalwart Highlander. He went about always dressed in the garb of Old Gaul, and from his great size, as well as the fact of there being in the same locality another blind man of diminutive stature, he was called the “Dall Mor.” He lost his eyesight in early youth in consequence of a virulent attack of smallpox. The “Dall Mor” was a great rhymester, but not many of his effusions have been preserved. Being a man of great powers of memory, and being thus able to repeat the whole of the Shorter Catechism and large portions of the Bible, he was appointed catechist for the parish of North Uist, through which he travelled summer and winter, and it is said did a lot of good by teaching the youth of his day to learn by heart the Catechism, a number of Psalms, and other portions of holy writ. We are not aware that any of his poems are to the fore, except the three short pieces printed here. The first was composed to Ewen MacDonald, Vallay, not the author of "Cumha na Coise, Sir James' friend, but his grandson who lived at Griminish. The second was addressed to Ewen's brother, Major Alexander MacDonald, fourth of Vallay, on the occasion of his return from the south, where he had been in quest of health. The last was to Robert MacDonald Macintyre, Clanranald's piper, and was composed at Nunton, in Benecula, where the chief occasionally resided.

DONALD MACLEAN.

A BARD of local celebrity in his day and who possessed a large fund of humour was Donald Maclean, or as he was known among his compeers, "Dòmhnull Mac Eóghain," or from the name of the croft he occupied, "Dòmhnull Bàn na Camairt." He was born at Griminish in North Uist, during the last quarter of last century and obtained the elements of an English education in the parish school. He could speak English well—an uncommon accomplishment for a Highland peasant in those days, but accounted for in his case by his having been sent as a youth to learn the cooper trade in Greenock, a lucrative occupation in the palmy days of sugar refining. Donald, however, did not long continue to work at the coopering. He pined to exchange the bustling energy of Sugaropolis for the more leisurely life of his beloved island, "far amid the melancholy main," where time need not be measured by the clock, but by those chronometers of nature's provision which the old Highlander preferred to artificial aids "Mo shùil, mo bhrù, 's an coileach."* Indeed, in those days, the means of intercourse between remote Highland districts and the south were so inexpeditious and rare, that the journey from Uist to Greenock was far more formidable than that to America

* My eye, my stomach, and the cock.

in our day, and the Lowlands were generally regarded as terribly far away. This intensified the Scottish Highlander's affection for his native strath, or glen, or moorland, and the attachment was in direct ratio to the remoteness and barrenness of the natal soil. Only by bearing this in mind can we understand the strong desire expressed by a native of Mòinteach an Iochdair in South Uist when home-sick and far away from his native bog:—

'Na faighinn mo leud ann a Mòinteach an Iochdair
'S cuideachadh slot buntàta !

This of course would be the acme of bliss.

Donald Maclean left Greenock for North Uist, and took up his residence on the croft of Camairt,* where he reared a large family of sons and daughters. To his crofting avocations he added the employment of gamekeeper and kelp-officer, and latterly of auctioneer. His wife was a Roman Catholic, and a daughter of "Fear an Dun-Ghaineachaidh," in Benbecula, but notwithstanding the difference of faith, they lived happily together. They first met under circumstances illustrative of how times have changed. Before the days of the prevention of cruelty to animals, it was the custom to have a cock-fighting, "Cath Choileach," in connection with every school, about the Candlemas season. The boys scoured the country in search of the conquering rooster, and the possessor of the victorious bird was king for the nonce. It was on one of these barn-door excursions that Donald first saw his wife. In after years he came back and married her ; and, as her voice finds utterance in one of her husband's songs, and she is referred to in another, it is desirable that she should be mentioned here. Humour, which is sometimes fantastic, characterizes "Oran na Camairt," but it is apt and clever, and the language is pure and idiomatic. It was composed in dispraise of "Camairt," and the difficulties which its sterility and unproductiveness presented in the support of a large family, are graphically told. In the very first verse he breathes an imprecation on the land whose nakedness he exposes, and he refers to periodical expeditions in search of the necessities of life. His journey to Paible to purchase meal ; the niggardliness of the Macaulay from whom it was bought ; the indifferent quality of the meal, and the gigantic size of the mites in which it abounded ; Donald's altercation with the old wife, and, finally, their mutual pledging of one another in mogan, and the discovery of third cousinship under its mellowing influence, are all told. It is sung to the same melody as Mac Codrum's "Oran a Bhonn-a-sia."

* From Cam Aird—the crooked headland or point.

In his song to "Iain Ruadh Bhàllagui" Donald still complains of the Camairt but hopes for better times. His senior in estate management might drop off and Donald would succeed him in office. But the proverb about dead men's shoes proved true here also. Maclean Bhàllagui was a man of education and intelligence, and had a good deal to do with the management of the North Uist estate. His subordinate, our bard, a namesake and distant relative, presuming on the other's good nature, exercised his wit sometimes at the worthy man's expense. How he expected the demise of the man who stood in the way of his promotion, how he feared that even death could not prevent such a wordly man from visiting the glimpses of the moon, and disturbing Donald in the enjoyment of his newly acquired possessions and position—all this with the anticipation of coming disappointment—the necessity of scattering the family among the friends, and of sending his wife to the Pope, where she would add no more to the population, comes out in the song. Donald was not always, however, in the humour to run down Camairt. Once in a way, when his wife seems to have been discontented with the change from the fine fertile fields of her native “Dun-Gaineachaidh” to the rugged lands about Lochmaddy, he assumes the role of admirer of the Camairt and in a metrical dialogue they support opposite sides of the question. The bard gives himself the last word in the controversy—not a universal experience in matrimonial arguments—but apart from that it may be questioned whether he acts the part of apologist for Camairt with the same zest and success as he plays the part of critic in other efforts. Doubtless in the last case his task was more difficult.

ORAN DO 'N CHAMAIRT.

MILE molachd do 'Chamairt
 Seach aon fhearann an Alba !
 'S ann a dh' fhàg i mi direach,
 'Na mo shìneadh an ainmheach.

Ged a dheanainn a churachd,
 Cha 'n fhàs ach buinteag 'us sealbhag :
 'S bi mo bhàrr air an t-Samhuinn
 Air uiread caillich a dh' arbhar.*

Chorus— Haoi o-haoiri, horo-hall,
 Haoi-o-haoiri, horo-hall,
 Haoi-o-haoiri, horo-hall,
 'S maирg a thachair 's an àite.
 Far nach àraichear clann.

Tigh'nn as aonais na mine,
 Cha 'n fhaod gillean bhi meamnach ;
 Ann a' freasdal bhuntàta,
 'S gun 's a' bhlàr dheth ach meanbhlach :
 Ged a rachainn do 'n tràigh dhoibh,
 Ni na bàirnich am marbhadh ;
 'S a dhol 'g am ghearin ri Bàilidh,
 Gur beag stàth tha 'n a' m' sheanchas.

Haoi-o, &c.

Tha mo cheann-sa air liathadh
 'S gur e 'm biadh a dh' fhàg ann e ;
 'S iomadh taigh 'n dean mi, “ Dia so ! ”
 Dol 'ga' iarraidh 's an t-Sàmhradh ;
 'N uair a leumas an t-Samhuinn,
 A falbh gu baile Chlann-Aulaidh :

* The harvest maiden.

Iad dhomhsa ruladh a bharraich,
 'S iad féin ag àrach air cabhraich !

Sud na fir a bhios moiteal
 Ni iad fortan am bliadhna ;
 Ma 's e èòrma no coirce
 Gheibh iad ochd sgillinn deug air :
 Bi na bodaich ri mogan,*
 'S cha bhi sogan 'ga dheanamh ;
 'S far an càirear am pige,
 Cha tig driog as le fialachd.

Turus thug mi do Pheabuill,
 Gu h-airtneulach clearbach,
 Dol a dh' iarraidh na ceannachd,
 Ann a meadhoin na h-aimsreach ;
 Poc' a dh' fhianagan lachdunn !
 Mi féin a's m' each air ar marbhadh,
 Mi gan iomain le bata,
 Chuid nach fanadh 's a' bhalg dhiubh.

Mile molachd do Ruairi,
 'S gu 'm a buan sud mu 'shealbhan ;
 Ged a gheibhte' rud uaithe,
 Righ ! bu chruaidh e mu bhargan :

* Mogan was the name that the Outer Hebrideans had for home distilled spirits. This illicit trade was largely carried on a hundred years ago.

Boineid għlas air a fiaradh,
 Air de cheud bħadhar Fhearchair,
 'S gu 'm bi 'n cùineadh 'g a fhaighneachd,
 Air neo line Ailein Chamshroin.†

'N am bhi tomhas bhuntàta,
 Mu 'n robh làn anns a' chliabh dheth,
 'S ann a labhair a' chailleach,
 Aig an teine gu fiadhaich,
 "Tha thu nis air fàs gòrach,
 'N uair bu chòir dhuit bhi crionna,
 Toirt do chodach do Dhòmhnull,
 'S e cheart cho seòlta ri Iamhar."

"Eisd a bhorrasach shalach,
 'S maith a b' aithne dhomh riamh thu,
 C' uim' nach fanadh tu sàmhach,
 'S gu 'n do phàigh mi 'na' dh' iarr mi ?
 Ach chuir an donas glas làmh ort,
 Mar bhios meairleach an iarrunn ;
 'S ged a tha thu 'shiol Adhamh,
 Tha thu grànnnd air do dheanamh."

"Cum fo riaghailt do theanga
 'S gheibh thu barrachd 's a dh' iarr thu ;"
 Fhuair i botal 'us gloine,
 'S bha i ealamh 'g an iarraigdh :

† This was Lord MacDonald's factor for North Uist. He lived in his latter days in Mull.

Dh' òl i sud air mo shlàinte,
 Lom-làn gus an iochdar,
 'S nuair a shloinneadh an cairdeas,
 B' i féin 's mo mhathair an t-iar-ogh' !

ORAN DO IAIN RUADH BHALEGUIL

'S MAIRG a thachair anns an àite
 Far nach fas an t-eòrna :
 Gearradh feamain gu buntàta
 Dh' fhàisginn roimh mo mheòirean :
 'G obair daonnan leis a' chliabh,
 A feuch am beathaichinn an triall,*
 'S le fianuis chàich ge b' oil le m' bhian,
 Cha chuir mi siol am feòirling.†

Ach tha mi 'n dùil 'nuair thig am Bàilidh
 Gur e fàbhar dhòmh's e ;
 'N uair gheibh Iain Ruadh Mac Eachain bàs,
 Bi Bhalegui fo m' spògan :
 'S leam an Ruchdi, 's leam a Phàirce,
 'S leam a machair mar a tha e ;

* Triall, prov. for an array or troop—a humorous allusion to his large family.

† A minute portion of land—farthing lands—a relic of Scandinavian times.

'S leam a h-uile dad a dh' fhàg e,
 'S geàrrachan Ath-leodair.

Gur e mise bhios gu h-uallach,
 Le mo chruachan mòra,
 H-uile a h-aon a thig mu 'n cuairt,
 "Bhuainn e, Bhuainn e, Dhomhnui!"
 Cha bhi punndadh cha bhi fangadh :
 Cha bhi sion air bith de aimhreit :
 H-uile duine riamh an Sannda,
 Tigh'nn a nall 'ga' m' chòmhradh

Ach fear tha riutsa cho gàbhadh
 Cha chum bàs fo 'n fhòd e,
 Ged a thiodhlaicinn thu màireach,
 Dh' fheumainn geard an còmhnuidh :
 Thigeadh tu thugam 's a' spàgail,
 Le d' chùl buidhe mar a b' àbhaist,
 'S chuireadh tu mise 's mo phàisdean,
 Mach air èarr a' Chrògair.

Ach na faighinn gillean tapaidh
 'N am bhi pasgadh t'òrdag,
 Cheangladh do làmhan 's do chasan,
 Le buill ghasda chòcraich ;
 Chum 's gu 'n aithnichinn thu 'n am éirigh,
 A' tigh'nn a nuas Lon a' Chléirich,
 Mar gu 'm biodh each 'us di-leum air,
 'S theichinn féin do 'n mhòintich.

Sguiridh mi nis dhe mo ràbhard,
 Cha 'n 'eìl stàth 'na' m' stòiri,
 Roinnidh mi chlann air na càirdean
 Bho nach fàs am pòr dhoibh ;
 Cuiridh mi bhean thun a Phàpa,
 Far nach beir i tuilleadh gràisge,
 'S gabhaidh mi féin le mo mhàthair,
 Bho 'n 's i dh' àraich òg mi.

 Ma 's fear bhios bëò mi cha bhi mi dòlum,

 A' moladh aonaich nach fhiach an t-saothair,
 'S gun neach 's an t-saoghal a dh' fhanadh ann,
 Le slocan rògach, 's le grobain chòintich,
 Cha 'n fhalbh mi còmhnard gun bhat a' m' laimh :
 'S gu 'm b' shearr leam seoladh gu Pàp' na Ròimhe,
 'N a' fuireach còmhlaith riut anns an am.

ESAN.

Ma ghabh thu 'n t-àrdan 's nach fan thu làmh rinn,
 Bi falbh a màireach 'us gheibh thu taing,
 'Us ruig am Pàpa sin tha thu 'g ràdh,
 'S a dh' aindeoin cràbhaidh cha 'n fhan thu ann ;
 Bi mi 's mo phàisdean 'n am mhonadh àghmhòr,
 Le bainne 's blàthaich 'us càise 's meang,
 'S bheir mi discharge dhuit air do dhèarna,
 'S le beannachd Phàdruig na till a nall.

NEIL MACVICAR.

A BARD, of whose compositions the song that follows alone is extant, was Neil MacVicar, or as he was known locally, "Niall Ruadh Mòr." He lived at Vallay, and emigrated to Cape Breton upwards of 60 years ago, where he continued to woo the muses. The humour of "Oran nan Cat" leads us to think that his trans-Atlantic verses must have also been worth preserving, but whether they live in the memory of the generation that followed is more than doubtful. As to "Oran nan Cat," the story was that on the night of a certain fiddler's wedding, and after the close of the festivities, a number of the neighbouring cats congregated to where the bagpipes had been deposited, to whose strains the merrymakers had tripped the "light fantastic toe," and greedily devoured the sheep-skin bag, so essential a part of the national instrument. We do not know whether, like the fox, they congratulated themselves on the combination of meat and music; but they fought and lacerated one another over the division of the spoil, each endeavouring to get the lion's share. But as they did not go the length of the Kilkenny cats, they were able afterwards to moralise on the situation. When the period of reflection came, they were sadder and wiser cats, and their reminiscences of their destructive conviviality seem to have been somewhat mingled. The piper, in the first verse, refers to the tragic fate of the instrument, and thereafter the different cats express their opinions.

ORAN NAN CAT.

OIDHCHE banais an fhidhleir
 Bha mi inntinneach eutrom,
 Mo chridhe mire ri 'm inntinn,
 'S bha gach ni leam a' géilltinn ;
 Piob nan dos 's i fo m' achlais,
 'S dheanainn caismeachd do cheudan :
 Mu 'n d' thàinig deireadh na h-oidhchc
 Cha robh mir dh' i ri chéile.

Seisde—Bheir mi o raill òho
 Agus o raill éile,
 Bheir mi o raiil òho
 Agus o raill éile ;
 Bheir mi o raill òho
 Agus o raill éile,
 Gur e mis' tha gu tùrsach,
 'S mo chruit-chiùil air mo thréigsinn.

Thuirt an cat a bha 'n Langais,
 “Tha mo cheann air dhroch cìreadh,
 'S tim dhomh féin a bhi sealltuinn,
 Ciod e'n t-am tha e dh' oidhche ;
 'S mòr gu 'm b' fheàrr leam bhi 'n còs,
 Aig amhuinn Lònaidh 'n am shìneadh
 No na fhuair mi 'phìob Dhòmhnuill,
 'S chaidh an ceòl feadh na fidhle.”
 Bheir mi o raill òho, &c.

Thuirt an cat a bha 'n Cirean,
 "S tim dhomh féin bhi dol dachaigh,
 Ma 's a maith cath nan iongnan
 Tha mi sgìth dhe 'r cuid sabaid."
 Thuirt cat mor Bun-na-dìge,
 "Mo chluasan féin air an sracadh :
 'S mòr gu 'm b' shearr leam i Dhòmhnuill,
 A' bhi gu ceòlmhor fo d' achlais."
 Bheir mi, etc.

Thuirt an clot-cheannach duaichnidh
 An cat ruadh a bh' aig Dòmhnuill,
 'S a dhà thaobh air an gualladh,
 Mar chaidh fuachd ann le reòtachd ;
 "S fad o'n chaill thu na cluasan
 Mu 'n an truailleachd a' d' òige,
 Bhiodh tu crògnadh an uachdair
 A muigh aig buailtean na mòintich."
 Bheir mi, etc.

"Eisd a shiongaire lachduinn
 Mu 'n cuir mi asad an t-eanchainn ;
 'De chuir thusa gu baile,
 Chur na h-athais sin ormsa ?
 Ma chaill mise na cluasan,
 Cha b' ann mu 'n truailleachd a dh' fhalbh iad,
 Ach droch easlaint a bhuail mi
 'S thug iad 'uam gus mo theannacs' iad."
 Bheir mi, etc.

Thuirt cat Dhòmhnuill na Camairt—
 “B’ fhearr domh fantail ’s a’ mhòintich ;
 ’S daor a phàigh mi mo shuipeir
 No na dh’ith mi no dh’òl mi.
 ’S ann a chaill mi mo shùilean
 Ge b’ e’n cù bha ’g an sgròbadh
 Air son craicionn seann rùda
 ’S gur e mùn thug a chlòimh dheth !
 Bheir mi, etc.

Thuirt cat Thormoid* ’s e labhairt
 “Théid bhur sparradh am priosan
 Bho ’n tha mise ’n a’ m’ Earaid
 ’S duine daingean bho ’n Rìgh mi ;
 Théid bhur glacadh mar mheirlich
 Bho nach tàmh sibh an oidhche,
 ’S dòch’ gu ’m faic mi ’n glas-làmh
 Gu tigh guard am Port-righ sibh.”
 Bheir mi, etc.

* Norman was a messenger at arms and his cat naturally assumed official airs.

DONALD MACLELLAN

A BARD of local fame was Donald Maclellan, or as he was called Dòmhnall Ruadh nan Oran. He was the author of several fugitive humorous productions, but the song which follows "Maighdean Bhòidheach Mhic Fhearghuis," seems alone to have survived. This "Mhaighdean" was really a ship of that name, the property of one John Ferguson, and on board of which Donald sailed as a hand. Like most other bards, Donald was a gay Lothario, who dearly loved the lassses; but this maiden whose praises he celebrates was more constant and worthy of his attachment than all the other fair ones on the country side. It is a fine breezy effusion, though marred in one or two passages by the introduction of English words.

MAIGHDEAN BHOIDHEACH MHIC FHEARGHUIS.

Seisde—Faill illirinn oho

Faill illirinn oho
Hug 'us ohoro éile
Faill illirinn oho

Maighdean Bhòidheach Mhic Fhearghui-
Gur tric a dh' fhalbh sinn le chéile.

Tha mo chion air a' Mhaighdin
Gheibhinn caoimhneas 'na 'd' achlaic

'S tu bu bhòidh'che dreach léine,
 'Nam éirigh 's a' mhaduinn :
 Do shlios mar chanach an t-sléibhe,
 'S gaoth a' séideadh 'na d' bhadan,
 'S tu nach innseadh na breugan,
 'S nach cuireadh sgeul orm le magadh.

'S tric a chaithris mi 'n oidhche,
 Cur na maighdinn an òrdugh,
 Mu 'm faigheadh iad beum dh'i,
 Latha Féille no Dòmhnuich ;
 Cha robh riobain mu 'n cuairt d'i
 Ach buill chruidh dhe 'n a' chorcach,
 'S i bu bhòidh'che dhe cinneadh,
 A' dol an ionad a seòlaidh.

Fhuair mi loineachan pòsaidh,
 Leat bho Steòrnabhagh Chaisteil ;
 Bha do ghealladh ro dhearbhata,
 Bha thu carbsach 'n a d' fhacal ;
 'S mi gu 'n ceannachadh an gùn dhuit,
 Ged bhiodh crùn air an t-slat dheth,
 Agus riobainean còrcaich,
 Chum do sheòladh bhi aithghearr.

Cuid de bheusan mo leannain
 A bhi cathranach faoilidh ;
 Gabhail fàileadh na mara,
 Bho 'n a chleachd i mar cheaird e ;
 Bheirinn dram dha cuid lamhan,
 'S rud a bharrachd 'nam faodadh,

'S b'e mo rogha dibhearsain,
A' bhi a' pasgadh a h-aodaich.

Tha clann-nighean an taobh so
'S beag tha m' ùigh ann am pàirt diubh,
'G am bheil crodh agus caoirich,
'S cha ghabh mi h-aon diubh 'n a' d' àite :
'S mi nach iarradh leat tochradh,
Ach jib, a's topsail, a's mainsail,
Agus foresail maith ùr,
Bhi as do chionn air a bhendadh.

'S iomadh latha cas gailbheach,
A rinn mi 'n soirbheas a dhìobradh,
Ann a' Maighdean Mhic Fhearghuis
'S cha chuireadh soirbheas gu dith i:
Cha robh mis' am bhall fanoid,
Dh' aindeoin cantanas nigh'nag,
Dheanainn feum fir an tighe
Dhoibh a latha 's a dh' oidhche.

'S iomadh oidhche fhliuch, fhuaraidh,
Eadar Tuath agus Manainn,
Bha mi muigh leis a' Ghruagaich,
Leis nach b' fhuathach mo leantuinn,
Ise ruith air an fhuaradh,
'S muir a' bualadh mu darach,
Mi féin 's mo làmh air a guallainn,
'S bha cuisle fuathasach fallain.

RACHEL MACDONALD.

RACHEL MACDONALD, or Raonaid Nighean Mhic Neil, a distinguished poetess in her day, (a native of North Uist,) flourished towards the close of last century. It is said that this Hebridean Sappho was once in the Isle of Skye, wind-bound and waiting for a boat and a favouring breeze to take her across the Minch. She happened one day to beguile the tedium of waiting by gathering shell-fish along with other women on the shore of Loch Dunvegan, when raising her head and looking westward, she saw a tall handsome man passing by. To the astonishment of the rest this gentleman, splendidly dressed and wearing a gold ring, accosted Raonaid, and, finding out that she was waiting to cross to Uist offered her a passage. This turned out to be young Maclean of Heiskir, an island otherwise known as Monach, lying westward of North Uist. In praise of "Fear Heisgir" and his Birlinn the following stirring verses were composed, which are all that remain of her poetry.

ORAN FIR HEISGIR.

Gur e mis' tha fo mhìghean
'S mi leam féin air a' chnoc,
Fada fada bho m' chàirdean
Ann an àite ri port

Gus a faca mi 'm bàta
 Le siùil àrda ri dos
 'Tigh' nn bho Rudha na h-Airde
 'S mac an àrmuinn ri stoc.

Mac an àrmuinn ri stiùireadh,
 A' tigh' nn a dh' ionnsuidh an t-Snoid
 Steach troimh chaolas a' beucadh
 'S muir ag éirigh ri stoc
 'Tha do làmhsa cho gleusda,
 'S cha do thréig thu do neart,
 Ged a thigeadh muir dù-ghorm,
 Chuireadh srùladh a steach.

Bu tu sgiobair na fairge,
 'S tu fear falmadair grinn,
 'S tu gu 'n deanadh a stiùireadh,
 'Nuair a dhiùltadh cach i,
 'Nuair a bheireadh iad thairis,
 'S iad nan luidhe 's an tuim,
 Chuireadh tus' i cho gàireach,
 Gus an tàradh i tìr.

Cha bu għlas bho 'n a' chuan thu,
 Cha bu duaichnidh do dhreach,
 Ged a dh' eireadh muir tuaireap,
 Agus stuadhana cas,
 Bagradh reef orr le soibheas,
 Le stoirm 'us droch fhras,
 Bha do mhisneach cho làidir,
 'S bha do làmhsa cho maith.

Cha robh do leithid ri fhaighinn,
 Eadar so 's a Chaoir dhearg,
 Eadar Lite no Barraidh,
 'N dean iad taghal no falbh,
 Cha robh maighistear soithich,
 Chuala gliocas do làmh,
 Nach bi faighneachd am b'fhiorsach,
 C' àite 'm faicte do bhàt.

Ged bhiodh ciosanaich mhar' ann,
 A bhuaileadh barraibh a crann,
 Chuireadh fodh' i gu slataibh,
 'S luaithe h-astar na long,
 Tha i aotrom aigeanneach,
 'G éirigh eadar gach gleann,
 Muir a bualadh mu darach,
 A' fuasgladh reangan 'us lann.

An iùrach àluinn aighearrach,
 'S i ri gabhail a' chuain,
 I ruith cho direach ri saighead,
 'S gaoth na h-aghaidh gu cruidh ;
 Ged bhiodh stoirm chlachan-meallainn
 Ann's an cathadh a tuath,
 Ni fear Heisgit a gabhail
 Làmh nach athadh roimh stuaidh,

ANGUS CAMPBELL.

ANGUS CAMPBELL, patronymically Aonghas Mac Dhòmhuiill' Ic Eoghainn, or as he was also known in his own day "Am Bard Sgallach," flourished between eighty and a hundred years ago. He was a native of Benbecula, where he followed the tailoring trade. He was well known in his time as a rhymster of sarcastic humour whose wit was as keen and incisive as his shears. He was a practical joker from his youth and dearly loved a butt. In his time it was the custom in his native island to give a stated salary to a tailor for doing all the work in one or more townships. When Angus started business on his own account he happened to be working in a house the mistress of which doubted his honesty. Tailors were sometimes suspected of appropriating the sewing thread with which their employers always supplied them and was, invariably, of native manufacture, and the good wife finding she had to go from home and harbouring the suspicions referred to, thought it was a very brilliant idea to lock the ball of thread in her principal chest, leaving the end out through the keyhole for the tailor's requirements. The precaution was obviously no check, but Angus, who was as honest as the seven locks, was very much annoyed at being treated as a thief and resolved to have his revenge. As soon as the good wife left he broke the thread and let it slip back through the keyhole. Having a shrewd suspicion of what the chest contained he tilted it up on one end, then on the other, placed it upside down, and in all sorts of positions as if it were to get the thread back through the keyhole. Finally he walked out of the house. Shortly after the mistress of the house returned. Angus on meeting her explained how the sewing thread had broken and slipped through, and though he had placed the chest in all sorts of positions he failed to get hold of it. The woman was in despair. She raised her hands in horror and dismay and said "Angus you have ruined me. My meal, my butter, my eggs, my cream, my milk, my best dishes, were all in that chest. I'll never get over this day's loss"! Yes, that was all very true, but Angus had his revenge for her unfounded suspicions.

Angus, as stated, dearly loved a butt and he found one in a neighbour who on account of his height was known as "Dòmhnull Ard" and at whom he directed all manner of squibs and lampoons. "Dòmhnull Ard" was inclined to be penurious and close fisted and, therefore, indisposed to participate in the convivial meetings of the district. The bard twitted him on his sordid and ungenerous disposition in a song composed to a lively measure :—

Cha toireadh tu Dhòmhnuill Aird
 Cha toireadh tu da sgillin,
 Cha toireadh tu Dhòmhnuill Aird
 Dad am bàids' na cloinn nighean.

This was a reference to the custom of subscribing for an entertainment to which the young men invited the fair maidens in whom they felt a special interest. Dòmhnull Ard also receives special mention in another song by the "Bard

Sgallach" of which I regret to say I have only two or three verses. At certain seasons of the year a large quantity of fish principally the species known in the Western Islands as mucan ruadha, a species of perch, used to be washed ashore in tempestuous weather. In those days food supplies were not too plentiful in the Highlands, at all times, and the people used to turn out in force to gather this harvest of the sea. The appearance presented by the people of the township of Aird, lining the curved sea-shore and intently occupied in the search for stranded perch was, from one aspect of it sufficiently pathetic, but the poet seizes on the humorous side of the scene.

SEISD :—Tha na fir mhòra, mhòra, mhòra,
 Tha na fir mhòra falbh ri oirthir,
 Tha na fir mhòra siubhal ri stoirm,
 'S ann orra tha 'n colg a' falbh ri oirthir.

Mnathan cho miannach, mucan cho lionmhor,
 'S milis am biadh, gu siorr' cha teirig e,
 Gillean cho luath ri iomall a' chuain
 'S 'n uair 'chi iad muc ruadh 's a' stuaign gu 'm beir iad orr'
 Tha na fir mhòra, &c.

Uilleam Mac Iain am breabadair òg,
 'S ann air a bha 'n còta 's mor a thoilleadh ann,
 Le truimead an eallaich cha togadh e cheann,
 'S ann air a bha 'n call 's an am 'n do theirig iad.
 Tha na fir mhòra, &c.

Onfha na mara am bliadhna 'g ar dùsgadh,
 'S ann orra bha sùrd air chùl nan sgeirean ;
 Cha robh easgann an càrn nach d' thàinig gu tràigh
 'S gu 'n d' fhuair Dòmhnull Ard na dhà mu dheireadh dhiubh.

Tha na fir mhòra, &c.

The “Bard Sgallach” was however capable of more serious efforts than those referred to and the two following poems, one an eulogy and another an elegy on Captain Angus MacDonald, Milton, a nephew of the celebrated Flora, testify to the more solemn vein. The elegy was composed on the tragic occasion of Captain MacDonald’s death by drowning in 1809.

ORAN DO FHEAR AIRIDH-MHUILINN.

Slàn iomradh do 'n ghaisgeach
 A chunnaic mi seachad an dé,
 Mac ud Aonghais Oig bheachdaidh
 Cha b'e 'n t-iomrall leam tachairt riut féin.
 Fear gun iomluaisg 'na aigne,
 Bha gu siobhalta, staideil an céill :
 Aig a' mheud 's a bha thlachd ort,
 Cha d' fhuaradh dhuit masladh no beum.

Slàn o chunnart sud dhàsan,
 Cha téid duine 'ga àicheadh nach fior

O 'n si 'n fhirinn a b' shearr leat,
 'S o'n 's i 'n acfhuinn a ghnàthaich thu riamh,
 Mheud 's a fhuair mi dhe d' chòiread
 Ann an comain an eòlais nach b' fhiach,
 Ni mi 'n urrads' a' d' chòmhnhadh
 Fhad 's is urrainn do m' chòta 'ga dhiol.

Gheibhte sud am beul feasgair

 'Us an àirneis bu deis' os an cionn :
 Bhiodh na deochanna brasa
 'G am brosnacha seachad air thùs,
 Annas na cupanna breaca ;
 'Us fir òga 'g an aiseag gu dlùth.

Gheibhte' sud ann a' d' fhàrdaich
 Ceòl fidhl' agus dàna 'cur leis ;
 Tigh nan uinneagan clàraighean,

 Gu 'm b' e sud mo cheòl gàire car greis,
 Cha bhiodh cuideachd mar dhàimh ort,
 Bhiodh tu fèin 'na' d' cheòl-gàire 'nam measg.

'S mòr do bhiùthas aig Gallaibh
 'N uair a bhiodh iad air allaban cian,
 Meud do mhùirn 'n a' do bhaile,
 'S cha bu chòirt leat bhi malairt am bìdh :

'S tric a thug thu uat deannal,
 Fhir nach sgrubail a shealladh am prib,
 'S mò do dhùil ann an onair,
 Na bonn dheth bhi d' sporan 'g a dhìol.

'S iomadh sruthan de 'n fhior-fhuil,
 Tha ruith ann an sioladh do bhall,
 Sliochd ud Raonuill mhòir phriseil,
 Nach d' fhòghlum bhi miòthar no gann,
 Agus deagh Mac 'Illeathain,
 'S gun a theaghlach ri fhaigheil an tràths ;
 Cur le chéil' ann an cruadal
 'S tric a bhuidhinn iad buaidh anns na blàir.

Da chraobh anns a' ghàradh
 Cha 'n ionnan cur fàis dhoibh 'nan dith's,
 Craobh a shiolaich 's a dh' fhàsas,
 Craobh a thuiteas le pràmh 'us le aois,
 'S ionnan sud 's mar a ta sinn,

MARBHRANN DO FHEAR AIRIDH MHUILINN.

Aonghais Oig riomhaich
 Gu 'n seinneadh piob leat 'us bratach,
 Air each aigeannach cruidheach
 A ghearradh dìreach an t-astar :
 'S e mo chràdh do chorp cùbhraidh
 'N a luidhe dlùth ris an aigeal,
 Gu 'n deach d' anam do Phàrras :
 Na h-ostail chàirich do leaba.

Dia a ghleidheadh an céille
 Do na dilleachdain uasal,
 A dh' fhàg thu a' d' dhéigh,
 'S e so am foghar a ghuail iad :
 Cha robh leithid an athar
 Ann an cliù no maitheas mu 'n cuairt doibh
 An treas pears' 's an Ròinn Eòrpa
 'N a shuidh an còmhlan dhaoin uaisle,

Thuit a' chraobh leis an duilleach,
 Chròn am bun 's gu 'n do chrion e :
 An latha rinneadh do bhàthadh
 Gu 'n robh an t-Ard Righ 's an fhanuis :
 Gu 'n robh an uair air a cumadh,
 Gaoth 'us sruth mar an ceudna ;
 Chuir sud thairis an t-eathár
 Mo chreach ! mu leitheach an lionaidh.

Thug thu ràimh do na gillean,
 Cha robh tuilleadh a dhith ort ;
 Bha thu 'n dùil mar a b' àbhaist
 Gu 'n robh do shnàmh mar an fhaoileag,
 Gu 'n robh do shnàmh mar an eala,
 A dh' fhalbhadh aigeannach aotrom ;
 Pearsa dhireach, dheas, dhealbhach,
 'S bochd a dh' fhalbh thu gun aois uainn.

Bu tu sealgair a' mhonaidh
 Leis a' ghunna nach diùltadh,
 Air damh cròcach nan cabar,
 A leumadh aigeannach sùnnach ;
 'N an leumadh gu marbhadh ;
 Bha thu d' shealgair bho dhùthchas ;
 Ròn, eala, 'us earbag
 Nan gearra-chasa lùth'or.

'N uair a chruinnicheadh an camp
 Bu tusa ceannard nan daoine ;
 An rud a theireadh tu dheant' e,
 No dh' fheuchadh tu faobhar.
 C' àite 'n robh ann an Alba,
 Tràth sheasadh tu calma fo d' aodach,
 A h-aon a labhradh riut càna ?
 B 'e 'n t-eun a b' àirde 's a' chraoibh thu !

MALCOLM MACLEOD.

THE author of the following song was Captain Malcolm Macleod, a well known and much esteemed man in his day, who lived at Lochmaddy, and died there some thirty years ago. Donald Munro, the hero of the song, was a half witted giant of great strength, but greater indolence, who for years made his home with the Captain, sometimes working and sometimes not, just as the spirit moved him. He went under the nickname of the "Speireag," and when so addressed his wrath knew no bounds. The "Speireag" loved the short winter days, limiting, as they did, the time of labour, but when Spring brought longer hours and better weather his countenance fell and he was wont to express his regret at the vanished storms of winter thus, "Tha chron sin air a' là Earraich bi 'n dara ceann dheth tioram." Like most creatures of low intellect, Donald sometimes took a wandering fit. He once came back after a long absence, to his patron's house, and was welcomed by Malcolm who was a ready-witted rhymester thus :—

I)h 'fhalbh an Speireag air iteig do 'n iarmailt
 'S thug i 'n taobh siar oirre dh' iarraidh a lòin,
 Tillidh i rithist mar shneachda gun iarraidh
 'S gabhaidh i sios gu Calum Macleòid.

Donald's natural gloom deepened on hearing this and he vowed he would never do a turn for Malcolm any more ;

but his humour was restored on Malcolm saying—" Hoots Donald that was not what I meant at all but this :—

'S maith thu féin a Dhòmhnuill mhòir
 As do léine, as do léine,
 'S maith thu féin a Dhòmhnuill mhòir
 As do léine phlangaid.

Donald, like many a wiser man, was very fond of tobacco. Captain Macleod on one occasion came home from a long sea voyage, and Donald's first salutation on meeting him at the door was " Have you got any tobacco for me Malcolm?" The honest Captain had a pound of the strongest twist in his hand and threw it at him, whereupon Donald, overcome with emotion, sunk on the floor simulating death. The Captain at once launched forth in the following mock-heroic " marbhrann," in which he enlarges upon the virtues of the departed hero. It may be stated that poor Donald afterwards met his death under circumstances which caused a great sensation at the time, and were the occasion of a memorable criminal action. Captain Macleod composed other songs not so well known, or meritorious, as that which follows.

 Bhiodh mo thigh air dheadh chòmhdaich,
 Air dheagh ghréidheadh mo mhòine,
 'S mòr an call a th' ann dhòmhsa,
 Gu 'n deach am fòd air do cheann.

JOHN MACDONALD,

OR

IAIN MAC DHUGHAILL 'IC LACHLAINN.

THE author of the following song was a native of Benbecula, who flourished at the time of the first Pretender. He composed it in praise of Allan MacDonald of Clanranald, shortly before the rising of 1715. The hero of the song was a man of great culture as well as military courage, and his fall at the battle of Sheriffmuir was much lamented in the Highlands. The desire so deeply seated in the Highland breast to rise for the restoration of the Stewart dynasty is well expressed in the chorus “Tha tigh’nn fodham éiridh.”

THA TIGH'NN FODHAM EIRIDH.

ORAN DO THIGHEARN CHLANN-RAONAILL.

SEISD :— Tha tigh’nn fodham, fodham, fodham,
 Tha tigh’nn fodham, fodham, fodham,
 Tha tigh’nn fodham, fodham, fodham,
 Tha tigh’nn fodham éiridh

Sud an t-slàinte chùramach,
 Olamaid gu sùnntach i,
 Deoch-slàint’ an Ailein Mhùideartaich,
 Mo dhùrachd dhuit gu ’n éirich.
 Tha tigh’nn fodham, &c.

Ged a bhiodh tu fada bh' uainn,
 Dh' éireadh sunnd 'us aigne orm ;
 'N uair chluinninn sgeul a b' aite leam,
 Air gaisgeach nan gniomh euchdach.
 Tha tigh'nn fodham, &c.

'S iomadh maighdean bharrasach,
 Dha maith a thg an earrasaid,
 Eadar Baile-Mhanaich,*
 'S Caolas Bharraidh a tha'n déigh ort.
 Tha tigh'nn fodham, &c.

Tha pàirt an Eilean Bheagram † dhiubh,
 Taa cuid 's an Fhraing 's 's an Eadailt dhiubh,
 'S cha 'n 'eil latha teagaisg
 Nach bi 'n Cille-Pheadair ‡ treud dhiubh.
 Tha tigh'nn fodham, &c.

* Baile-Mhanaich. The monk's town, a township in Benbecula, where there was once a monastery with a grant of lands from one of the Lords of the Isles.

† A small island upon a loch on the farm of Drimsdale. It contains the ruins of a fort and the remains of a dwelling house, and was a place of strength in the days of the old Clanranald chiefs.

‡ Cille-Pheadair; the church of the old parish of Kilpeter in the south end of South Uist.

'N uair chruinnicheas am bannal ud,
 Bréid caol an càradh crannaig orr'
 Bi'dh fallus air am malaidhhean,
 A' danns' air ùrlar déile.

Tha tigh'nn fodham, &c.

'N uair chiaradh air an s̄heasgar
 Gu'm bu bheadarach do fhleasgaichean :
 Bhiodh pioban mòr 'g an spreigeadh ann,
 'Us feadanan 'g an gleusadh.

Tha tigh'nn fodham, &c.

Sgiobair ri là gaillinn thu,
 A' sheòladh cuan nam marannan,
 A bheireadh long gu calachan,
 Le spionnadhl̄ glac do threun fhear.

Tha tigh'nn fodham, &c.

Sgeul beag eile dhearbhadh leat,
 Gur sealgair sìthne 'n garbhlàich thu,
 Le d' chuilbheir caol nach dearmadach,
 Air dearg-ghreidh nan ceann eutrom.

Tha tigh'nn fodham, &c.

B'e sud an leòghann aigeannach,
 'N uair nochdadhdh tu do bhaidealan,
 Làmh dhearg 'us long 'us bradan,
 'N uair lasadh meamna t' eudainn.

Tha tigh'nn fodham, &c.

ALEXANDER STEWART.

THE author of the following song was Alex. Stewart, the editor of a well-known collection of Gaelic poetry, who was for some time a schoolmaster in North Uist. The lady to whom it was composed was Miss Maria Macqueen, daughter of the Rev. Allan Macqueen, minister of North Uist. Her mother was a daughter of William MacDonald, III of Vallay. It is said that his passion for the young lady whose praises he here celebrates, brought him to a premature grave. At anyrate, the song breathes throughout the most devoted attachment, and bears traces of a refined, as well as poetic soul. He flourished upwards of a hundred years ago.

A MHÀIRI BHOIDHEACH.

A Mhàiri bhòidheach 's a Mhàiri ghaolach,
 A Mhàiri bhòidheach gur mòr mo ghaol ort,
 A Mhàiri bhòidheach gur tu a chlaoidh mi,
 'S a dh' fhàg mi brònach gun dòigh air t'fhaotainn.

A Mhàiri bhòidheach gur mòr mo ghaol ort,
 Gur tric mi cuimhneachadh ort 's mi m' aonar,
 Ged a shiùblainn gach ceum de 'n t-saoghal,
 Bi 'dh t' iomhaigh bhòidheach tigh'nn beò gach taobh dhiom.

'S truagh nach robh mi 's mo Mhàiri bhòidheach
 Ann an gleannan faoin 'us ceò air,
 'S ged bu rìgh mi 'san Roinn-Eòrpa,
 Cha 'n iarainn pòg ach bho Mhàiri bhòidheach.

Ach chithear féidh air sgéith 's na speuran ;
 'S chithear iasg air àird nan sléibhteann,
 Chithear sneachda dubh air gheugan,
 Mu 'm faicear caochladh tigh'nn air mo spéis dhuit.

O ! Mhàiri lughdaich thu mo chiall domh,
 Tha mo chrìdh' le do ghaoil air lionadh ;
 Tha gach là dhomh cho fad ri bliadhna,
 Mur faic mi t' aodann, a tha mar ghrian domh.

Do shùilean meallach fo d' mhala bhòidheach,
 Do bhilean tana air dhath nan ròsan,
 Slios mar chanach an gleannan mòintich,
 'S do ghruaidh mar ròsan fo sgéith nam mòr-bheann.

Fhir a shiùbhlas thar thonnan uaibhreach,
 A dh' ionnsuidh Innseachan cian nan cuantan,
 Thoir gach siod' agus nì tha luachmhor,
 A dh' ionnsuidh Màiri a rinn mo bhuaireadh.

Eoin a 's moiche a théid air sgiathan,
 'S a dhìreas suas ann an àird na h-iarmailt,
 'N a bitheadh latha 'thig fad na bliadhna
 Nach seinn sibh ceòl do mo Mhàiri chiataich.

Ach cha dean eala air slios nam mòr-thonn,
 Cha dean smeòrach am badan bòidheach,
 Cha dean gach inneal-ciùil ach crònan,
 'N uair a sheinneas mo Mhàiri bhòidheach.

Ged a bhithinn gu tùrsach cianail,
 'S mi le cùram air mo lionadh,
 Ni do ghnùis-sa tha mar ghrian domh,
 Mo chridhe sunntach 'n uair thig thu m' fhanuis.

Gu 'm bu slàn do mo Mhàiri bhòidheach,
 Ge b'e àite 's am bi i 'chòmhnuidh,
 'S e mo dhùrachd-sa 'm fad 's is beò mi
 Gu 'm bi gach sòlas aig Màiri bhòidheach.

NA TRI EOIN.

THE following stanzas were recited to the editor as a song, of which the first verse “Na tri eòin” was the chorus. The story was that the woman to whom they were composed was a second wife, of evil temper and harsh conduct, who was especially unkind, after the proverbial manner of stepmothers, to the children of the first wife, who are characterized as na tri eoin (the three fledgelings). Part of it, stanzas 5 and 6, has appeared in Nicolson’s Proverbs. I cannot say whether the rest ever appeared in print.

RANN DO DHROCH MHNAOI.

Na tri eoin fhionn-gheal dhonn,
 Fhionn-gheal dhonn, fhionn-gheal dhonn ;
 Na tri eoin fhionn-gheal dhonn,
 B’ e sud na tri eoin.

Mi leam fhéin so ’s mi leam fhéin,
 Chaidh mi butarscionn ’s mo bhean,
 ’N uair their mise “’s dubh am fitheach”
 ’S e their is’ “tha ’m fitheach geal.”

Chuir mi mo làmh anns a chliabh,
 ’S fiosrach Dia na thug mi ás,
 Bean gun ghaol, gun cheòl, gun rian,
 Chum mi fo riasladh so fo airc.

Dheanainn tigh air làrach lom,
 Chuirinn bonn ri maide cas,
 Their i, agus car 'na ceann,
 "S maирg a rachadh ann a steach."

Teine 'ga fhadadh an loch,
 'Bhi tiormachadh cloich an cuan,
 Teagasg 'g a thoirt do mhnaoi bhuirb,
 Mar bhuil ùird air iarrunn fuar.

Cha chudthrom air locha lach,
 Cha chudthrom air each an t-srian,
 Cha chudthrom air caora h-olann,
 Cha chudthrom air coluinn ciall.

Dheanainn cur 'us dheanainn buain,
 Dheanainn cruach mar fhear a chàch,
 Their ise ma robh i beò,
 "Mar bi i 'na tàrr air làr."

'S ann agam fhéin a tha phiob,
 'S i is finealta ni ceòl,
 Gun aon ghlaodh a chur 'na màl,
 Cumaidh i 'n aon ràn 's i beò !

Bean is caise na tom fheanntag,
 'S ni 's aimhreite na tom dhrisean,
 Bean is teodha na seachd teinntean,
 Bean chruaidh chrainntidh, chràidh i mise.

A' CHRIODH.
