PREFACE.

THE following pages have been compiled by Mr. THOMAS KEITH. The original intention was to give a mere list of the principal inhabitants in alphabetical order; with a few subordinate lists and tables connected with the trade of the place. It was thought that this might be accomplished without adding materially to the size or price of former publications of the same description. A very little experience led to a contrary conviction. After the utmost pains had been bestowed in preparing the alphabetical list of names, it was suggested that the occupations and places of residence of many individuals might be inaccurately given; and that it would be proper to leave slips at the houses of the inhabitants, inviting them to write upon them their names, occupations, and places of abode, as they wished these to appear in the Directory. By this means upwards of 1500 corrections were made on the list as it was originally prepared; and had it not been for neglect on the part of some persons to furnish the requisite information, very few errors would have remained. As it stands, however, the present Directory will be found a considerable improvement on previous attempts. An additional sheet will be published in July, in which such errors as may be discovered will be corrected,—names omitted will be added, and removals at the term of Whitsunday next inserted. The supplement, with the present publication, will supply a tolerably complete Directory from Whitsunday 1834 to Whitsunday 1835. The supplement will be sold to purchasers of this compilation for the price of the paper.

It will be seen that the Alphabetical list forms but a small part of the Directory. A mass of information connected with the town has been brought together, and arranged in such a way as, it is hoped, will render it useful. Every endeavour has been used to secure accuracy, though this important object may not, in every instance, have been attained.

With regard to the historical sketch, it is very far from being complete even as a Sketch, and has, indeed, been abruptly terminated from want both of time and space. The notices which have been presented may serve, however, to convince some individual competent to the task, that a good history of Dundee, and of its trade and manufactures, is now a great desideratum. The subject is not without some pretension to dignity, and it is of the utmost practical importance. It would make a considerable octavo volume; and, if to it were added, a few of the more important mercantile tables, and a summary of the existing Acts of Parliament, so far as applicable to the trade of Dundee, its value would be greatly enhanced. We recommend these suggestions to the consideration of the Chamber of Commerce, under whose auspices they could be easily carried into effect—to the individual benefit of the members as well as that of the community.

Should sufficient encouragement be afforded, the Directory, with such of the lists and tables as require annual correction, will be reprinted in July each year. Suggestions for its improvement will be thankfully received by the publisher.

DUNDEE, January, 1834.

SKETCH

HISTORY OF DUNDEE.

INTRODUCTION.

DUNDEE is a royal borough, situated upon the north bank of the river Tay, about twelve miles from its confluence with the German ocean, in latitude $56^{\circ} 27' 23''$ north, and in longitude $3^{\circ} 2' 55''$ west. It is north of Edinburgh forty-two miles by the direct road through Fife: having Perth at the distance of twenty-two miles on the west—the turnpike betwixt the two places passing through the rich agricultural district of Carse of Gowrie; Forfar, the county town, in the centre of the valley of Strathmore, at the distance of fourteen miles on the north; and Arbroath, on the confines of terra firma, eighteen miles to the eastward. Dundee now extends nearly three miles along the margin of the river Tay; and by the Municipal Act 1 and 2 William IV. the space comprehended within the Royalty is as follows:—A line commencing on the east at the river Tay, and running northwards in the line of the east march of Mayfield on the lands of Craigie, to the southern extremity of that march; thence along that march to the turnpike-road leading from Dundee to Arbroath; thence eastward along that turnpike-road until its junction with the old Craigie road; northwards along that road to the Stobsmuir turnpike-road; across that road, and from it along the old road by the the back of Stobsmuir and Clepington, till it reaches the east road to the Fair-Muir; around the march of the Fair-Muir, so as to include it, until it joins the Strathmartine turnpike-road; southwards along the Strathmartine turnpike-road until its junction with the road which leads by the back of the Law of Dundee from the Strathmartine turnpike-road to the Coupar and Meigle turnpike-road; along the northern boundary of that road to the Lochee toll-bar, on the turnpike-road from Dundee to Coupar and Meigle; from that toll-bar westwards along the road until it reaches the stone wall which runs on the west side of the houses and garden-ground known by the name of Lark or Lerrick Hall; across from the turnpike-road to the march between the estate of Logie and the estate of Balgay; from the turnpike-road southwards along that stone wall to the said march; thence along the march southwards to the extremity of Logie; thence southwards to the Blackness road, along the dike and hedge which form the present boundary between Blackness and Balgay; thence along the northern boundary of the Blackness road westwards to the line of the march which is on the south side of that road, between Blackness and Balgay; and southwards along that march down to the river Tay.

The population, from the great increase in it during the last two years, is somewhat uncertain; but looking at the number of public works at present erecting—all of which will be in operation within six months from the present time—it is beyond doubt that, before the termination of 1834, the number of the inhabitants will be, at least, sixty thousand. The staple trade of the place is the linen manufacture.

SECTION FIRST.

ANCIENT HISTORY.

THE early history of Dundee is involved in much obscurity. The name under which it appears in any credible history is that of Alec, which signifies, in Gaelic, pleasant or beautiful. Boethius, the historian and poet, who flourished about the end of the fifteenth century, called it Alectum. In old writings and charters the name is written two ways—Dondé and Dondie. In Queen Mary's charter, the words Donum Dei—the gift of God—are introduced; whilst Buchanan calls Dundee Taodanum, or Hill of the Tay. Of these derivations, it is probable the first—Donum Dei—is the more correct; as the latter appellation would have been pronounced in Gaelic Duntaw. It harmonises better too with the ancient tradition regarding David Earl of Huntingdon; who, having experienced a dreadful storm at sea in returning from the Holy Wars, gave, on his landing at the place now called Dundee, the name of Donum Dei to it,—as an expression of gratitude to Divine Providence for his deliverance. It is farther related, that William the Lion having, from various causes, entertained much fear for the safety of his favourite brother the Earl, and his brave followers; and having, in fulfilment of a vow, made a gift to the Earl of the ground on which Dundee stands, and where he had effected a landing, the latter, as an additional testimony of gratitude for his signal escape from the perils of the sea, erected the present parish-church and its magnificent Gothic tower.

The ancient town is said to have been situated close to the sea-shore, between Balgay stream (which, running from the westward, crosses the narrow of the Murraygate in the direction of the harbour) and Wallace-burn from the northward, which falls into the river at the east end of the Seagate. It thus occupied a space from east to west not exceeding a quarter of a mile. It seems to have consisted of two parallel streets—the Seagate and the Cowgate. In the broadest part of the former street remains of the ancient cross were to be seen about the close of the last century; and its situation might still be pointed out to the curious. Immediately to the westward of the ancient boundary were several towering rocks, upon one of which the ancient castle stood. The area of Castle Street was once the site, and takes its name from the ancient fortress. When the great church was built by the Earl of Huntingdon, a considerable portion of the land around it was probably under cultivation, the church having been designated the kirk in the field. A great proportion of the modern town surrounds the place where the kirk stands. From Castle Street, in a westerly direction, the ground continues to rise till it reaches Balgay-hill, forming a sort of ridge, bounded on the south by the Tay, and on the north by Balgay stream. The valley through which the stream runs is exceedingly beautiful; and few situations can be conceived more delightful than those of Dudhope and Logie on the north—Balgay at its western extremity—and Blackness on the south. On this ridge, diverging to the north and south, a considerable part of the recent additions to the town have been made; and the buildings now extend as far west as Blackness itself. The size of the town has also been very considerably augmented in other quarters; particularly to the eastward of the ancient royalty beyond the low grounds, on the north of it, and to the eastward of the Hilltown.

After the period of the grant to the Earl of Huntingdon, Dundee became a place of great importance. The ancient castle, which stood considerably to the eastward of the church, was occasionally used as a royal residence, and gave ample protection to the inhabitants in its vicinity. In the course of years, walls were constructed around the town, and gates placed at the entrances to it. Thus defended, and with the ready means of escape which the harbour afforded in troublesome times, the possession of the town became of great consequence in the contests to which reference will immediately be made.

During the protracted struggle for the crown of Scotland between Edward the First and Robert Bruce, Dundee was twice taken by the English, and as often retaken by the patriots Wallace and Bruce. The castle, however, became at length a place of so much security for the enemies of the kingdom—subjecting the inhabitants of the surrounding district to so much oppression and annoyance—that it was judged prudent by Robert Bruce to demolish it. On occasion of the various conflicts, the inhabitants suffered most severely for the dauntless bravery which they displayed. The town was frequently committed to the flames; its sanctuaries violated; and many of its inhabitants—men, women, and children—consumed at the altar. Its churches were desecrated, and some of them thrown down, and the public records destroyed or carried away. The town was reduced to ashes by the English both in the reign of Richard the Second and Edward the Sixth, the latter of whom had at the same period possession of Broughty Castle.—At the period of the Reformation in Scotland, Dundee became noted for its enthusiasm in the cause of the new faith. In 1559, when the cause of the reformers appeared to be in a desperate state, the Provost, accompanied by his townsmen, proceeded to Edinburgh, and assisted the party who were besieging the French troops in Leith.—A century of comparative peace and prosperity, from the time at which Dundee had been burned down, tended much to increase the number of its inhabitants and augment its wealth. In 1639, it was characterised in a public paper as “the biggest town in Scotland.” But this very circumstance seems to have been the cause of bringing upon it more than its full share of the evils of the civil war. The daring Marquis of Montrose having conceived the design of pillaging the town, which he supposed was left unprotected by the march of General Baillie into the low countries, suddenly appeared before it on the morning of the 3d April 1645, at the head of a hundred and fifty horse, and six hundred picked musketeers. Dundee had at various times given much offence to Montrose; and, on the present occasion, his indignation was roused to more than its ordinary pitch against its devoted citizens, in consequence of their having imprisoned the drummer whom he sent to summon them to surrender. He allowed his soldiers to storm the town; and they inflicted upon it the utmost evils of military execution. Although the inhabitants distinguished themselves by their usual bravery, nothing could withstand the furious assault of their antagonists. An indiscriminate plunder and carnage ensued, which lasted till afternoon—Montrose on the top of the Law calmly enjoying the progress of the butchery below—when a report that General Baillie was marching hastily from the westward upon the town induced him to retreat with his men to Arbroath; but not before fire had been set to the east and north quarters of the place, and a great portion of it, including the Hilltown, reduced to ashes.

The last and most destructive calamity suffered by Dundee was in 1651, when the battle of Worcester threw Scotland open to the victorious arms of Cromwell. Besides the garrison, there was at that time a number of strangers in the town from the south, and a great many devout clergymen, who had fled thither for refuge. General Monk having invested the town, carried it by assault after a siege of nearly six weeks. The inhabitants and troops fought nobly on this occasion; and it was owing to a circumstance, by no means derogatory to their valour, which led to the capture of the place. According to the custom of the times, the garrison were reposing after their morning draught, served up at nine o'clock; which consisted of beer—more potent and palatable, no doubt, than the ordinary “cut-throat” of these days. A boy belonging to the besiegers, who had been incautiously allowed to gambol about the ramparts, having noticed the effects produced on the soldiers by these morning potations, communicated the intelligence to the enemy, who were thus enabled very easily to take possession of the town. The carnage at this time was dreadful—about a sixth part of the inhabitants having fallen. Nor did the slaughter stop till the third day, when it is said to have been arrested by the horrible spectacle of a child sucking its murdered mother in the Thor-ter-row. The booty obtained by the English soldiers was immense—each common soldier’s share being about £60 sterling. Not fewer than sixty vessels were seized in the harbour, and loaded and sent away, chiefly with plate and money; but, says an old author, as a punishment for the sacrilegious pillage, the whole was lost in crossing the bar of the river. Lumsden, the governor, after having made every exertion for the defence of the town, took refuge, with part of his troops, in the old steeple; but want of provisions soon obliged him to surrender. He and his valorous little band were immediately massacred on the spot, and their bodies thrown promiscuously into pits dug to receive them. On opening up the ground a few years ago, for the purpose of making some improvements, the bones of the murdered patriots were found crowded together. The head of the governor was placed on one of the abutments of the tower; and the stone to which it had been fixed, falling down a number of years ago, exhibited one of the bones on the iron pike. Part of Lord Duffus’s regiment shared the fate of Lumsden’s corps on the same spot; and a similar scene of cold-blooded slaughter occurred in the present Greenmarket square.

The oldest charter which Dundee possesses is one granted by Robert Bruce, which recognises the burgal privileges that had been conferred on the town by William the Lion, about the middle of the twelfth century. Charters were granted, with additional privileges, by Robert Bruce, James the Second, James the Fourth, Queen Mary, James the Sixth, and, finally, in 1641, by Charles the First, in which all the preceding grants are confirmed. These extensive and valuable privileges were often encroached upon by the once powerful family of the Serymgeours of Dudhope, constables of Dundee. In 1643 the existing differences betwixt that family and the inhabitants were settled in part, by mutual agreement, under the direction of the Lords of Session. Still, many of the acknowledged powers of the Constable were vexatious and humiliating to the citizens, and continued in force until they were swept away by the act abolishing heritable jurisdictions in Scotland.

Dundee does not retain any of those warlike features by which it was distinguished in former times. Its strong built castle no more exists, and its walls (save a solitary relic) have long since vanished before the hand of improvement. The gates are now only remembered as part of the name of the four streets diverging from the four corners of the High Street to the extremities of the town. But these changes have been succeeded by a course of prosperity and improvement wholly unexampled in the history of the empire—a course which, if steadily pursued, as there is every reason to hope it will be, by our intelligent and enterprising merchants, may at no distant period enable them to refer to Dundee as the first commercial place in Scotland.

SECTION SECOND.

MODERN HISTORY.

TILL within the last half century Dundee consisted principally of the High Street, or Market-place, and of four streets, which, branching off from it in different directions, are called the Nether-gate, Over-gate, Murray-gate, and Sea-gate.

It is a trite remark, that the native of any town, however insignificant it may be, on returning to it after a few years' absence, is invariably struck with the number and the extent of changes on it which have taken place. But so great and rapid has been the increase of Dundee, and its progress in the career of improvement, that the very inhabitants, who seldom go beyond the precincts of the town, are continually witnessing with surprise that increase and those improvements. The most remarkable feature in all these changes is the pulling down of several old houses on the north side of the High Street, and the erection of a range of superb buildings in the direction of the new Seminaries. The High Street itself is an oblong square 360 feet long by 100 feet broad. On the south side of this square stands the Town-House, a splendid Roman building, with a spire designed by the celebrated architect William Adam,—the top of the spire being, as appears from his Vitruvius Scoticus, 132 feet above the floor of the piazza. It was erected in 1733, on the site of St. Clement's Church. The front of the building is much decayed; but it is understood that the Magistrates and Council have it in contemplation to restore it in all its original grandeur. The ground floor was formerly occupied as shops, for which it was not well adapted; but the greater part has now been converted by the Council to public purposes. The middle flat contains two large public halls—the Town-hall, in which the Council meetings are held; and the Guild-hall, where the Guildry have their meetings, and where the Sheriff, Justices, and Bailies, hold courts; besides chambers for the Town-clerks and public record rooms. In the third floor is the jail, an ill-aired and inconvenient place of confinement. The three front apartments, which are lighted by small oval windows, are occupied by debtors; and the two back apartments, or rather cells, are used for the confinement of male criminals, who are huddled together, young and old, indiscriminately. The turnkey occupies part of the attic rooms; and the remainder of the attics is appropriated to female debtors and criminals, who are obliged to mix together without classification. It is, however, satisfactory to learn, that a proper site has been selected, at the south-west corner of the town's gardens, for the erection of a jail, bridewell, and police-office, suitable to the wants of the community.

Reform Street, judging from the plans, and the portion of the street which has been erected, will embrace a range of street architecture unequalled by any thing of the kind in Scotland. It does honour to the liberality and commercial enterprise of the place. The style of the architecture is pure and chaste. The details are principally taken from the celebrated Ionic temple of the Ilissus.

At the distance of about 340 yards from the Town-hall, and forming the northern termination of Reform Street, stands the building for the public seminaries. It is in the Doric style of Greek architecture. The portico is composed of eight columns, resembling those of the Parthenon at Athens, but only two-thirds the size. The architectural details of the building are taken from the same example, and according to the best authorities, such as Stuart, Cockerell, Kinnaid, &c. The floor of the portico is elevated three feet nine inches above the finished level of the play-ground, and the latter about twelve feet above what will be the level of the High Street, when it shall have been lowered and repaired, in terms of the joint resolutions of the Town-council and Commissioners of Police.

The designs of the Seminaries, and of Reform Street, were furnished by Mr. George Angus of Edinburgh, an architect of high acquirements, and who is rapidly advancing to distinguished eminence.

At the east end of the High Street stands the Trades' Hall, a plain edifice with pilasters of the Ionic order. The principal apartment is used as a public reading-room; but there are also separate apartments, in which the Nine Incorporated Trades hold their meetings. The west side of the square is bounded by a structure of nearly the same size; and as both these buildings are situated at the junction of the two principal thoroughfares (the Murraygate and the Nethergate,) with the great square, the communication is much hampered and obstructed.

Although the High Street lies within a short distance of the Shore, it possessed no communication with it until within the last fifty years, except by the Vault, and other narrow lanes. This great defect has been remedied by the opening up of several streets leading from north to south, with houses built in the modern style. Castle Street, Crichton Street, Union Street, and Trades' Lane, now afford easy means of communication between the harbour and all parts of the town. Castle Street, which leads from the south-east side of the High Street to the middle of the harbour, contains, among other neat buildings, an elegant Scots Episcopal chapel, and a theatre.

At the south-east corner, and forming the west end of Dock Street, stands the Exchange Coffee-room, fronting the spacious opening to the westward. The style of the architecture above the cellars is Grecian. The ground storey of this building consists of a range of cellars, the greater number of which are arched. The next storey has been laid out for shops. The west front of the basement storey is composed of Doric columns and pilasters, boldly relieved by the deep recesses of the doors and windows. The same front of the coffee-room storey is of the Ionic order, and taken from the temple of Erectheus at Athens. This example of the Ionic style has received more decoration than the one commonly used. The north front is of plain ashlar; but it is well connected by the horizontal line of the cornice and string course, which are carried round the three fronts. The reading-room (exclusive of the space allowed for the orchestra) is 73 feet by 38, and is 30 feet in height. The building was erected by a body of subscribers, from a plan by Mr. George Smith of Edinburgh, at the cost of £9000.—Crichton Street runs off at right angles from the High Street at the south-west corner of it, and passing into the Greenmarket leads to Earl Grey's Dock.

Union Street was opened only a few years ago, and has not yet been completed. It is a fine street, and just now the shops are the most elegant in town; but they will probably be surpassed by those in Reform Street. Union Street forms a communication between the Nethergate, opposite the churches, and Earl Grey's Dock and the Craig Pier, and will, in a short time, become a very great thoroughfare.

The Nethergate runs westward from the south-west corner of the High Street by the south side of the building referred to, which was formerly the English chapel. It is the most spacious and airy street in the town, and contains the residences of a number of the principal inhabitants. The Perth Road and Magdalen-yard Road are a continuation of the Nethergate; the former leading onwards through the fertile Carse of Gowrie, and the latter terminating in that beautiful and healthy promenade the Magdalen-yard. A great proportion of the houses in this quarter are on a large scale; and, as a whole, it is entitled to the reputation of being—as it has of late been in the practice of calling itself—the most genteel part of the town.

On the north side of the Nethergate, and nearly opposite Union Street, stand the four parish churches, partly composed of the remains of the splendid old Cathedral, originally built by the Earl of Huntingdon. The East Church, which is the most entire, is built in the finest Gothic style,—the groining of the arches, in particular, being much admired. The finest ancient ornament of the town is the magnificent Gothic tower, which stands at the west end of these churches. It is one hundred and fifty-six feet high; and its proportions are well preserved. On the outside, half way up, is a gallery or bartizan; and at the top a battlemented stone rail. The appearance of this noble specimen of Gothic architecture is somewhat injured in consequence of a small edifice resembling a cottage, with a double slanting roof, having been pitched as it were by chance upon its summit. In this street, a little to the westward of the High Street, stood a building called Whitehall, in which some of the kings of Scotland occasionally resided, and where parliaments, conventions, and general assemblies of the Church of Scotland were sometimes held. A narrow close running south to Fish Street still retains the name, and several stones of the old ruins have been preserved in the modern buildings. Over the entry of the close may still be seen the name and arms of Charles the Second, who lodged at Whitehall previous to his expedition to Worcester. Here was also, at no remote period, an ancient chimney-piece, bearing the name and arms of James the Sixth, with the date 1588. A little to the westward of Whitehall-close, and nearly opposite to the churches, stood the residence of the Earls of Crauford, by far the most ancient and extensive in Dundee—the house and grounds having occupied the whole space between the street and the river. These buildings must have been erected in the 13th century: parts of them were standing little more than fifty years ago—the word “Lindsay” being observable and embossed in a kind of battlement. The house was then in the possession of Andrew Laird, Esq. father of the late Admiral Laird and great-grandfather of the present David Laird, Esq. of Strathmartine. It was in this house also that Archibald Earl of Angus, otherwise called Bell-the-cat, was married to Maude Lindsay, the Earl of Crauford’s daughter—the marriage ceremony having been conducted with a degree of pomp and splendour which had never before been witnessed in Scotland. Considerably farther westward, and opposite to the foot of Tay Street, stands the dilapidated remains of the Hospital which has been long occupied as an academy. It is very unsuitable for the purpose, and will be abandoned as soon as the new seminaries are ready for the reception of classes.—The Hospital was originally founded by the Earl of Crauford and Lindsay, who bequeathed certain lands and buildings for the maintenance of the “poor citizens of Dundee.” Its funds were afterwards much augmented by donations from other benevolent individuals; and at the Reformation it became possessed of part of the properties of the suppressed monasteries. Somewhat more than half a century ago, those receiving relief from the Hospital resided in the building,—the minister of the Cross Church officiating as chaplain, and receiving part of his stipend from the funds. Upwards of £500 is now expended annually on the objects of the charity. The chief sources of income arise from the burying-ground dues, and the rents and feus of the Hospital ward and grounds to the westward.

The Overgate, diverging from the north-west corner of the High Street, runs to the westward, branching out at the West Port into two divisions, named the Hawkhill and Scouringburn, which lead to the extremity of the town. The Blackness Road forms an opening also to the westward between these streets, dividing nearly into two equal parts the angle made by them. The buildings in the whole range of the Overgate and its branches present rather an irregular and crowded appearance. The principal communication which the Overgate has with the Nethergate is Tay Street, an elegant cross street containing fine houses, and possessing the only ornamental square which the town can boast of. Tally Street, the Thorter Row, the School Wynd, and the Long Wynd, also open narrow communications with the Overgate; and Small’s Wynd, and a number of lanes to the westward, form inconvenient thoroughfares between the Perth Road and Hawkhill. The Overgate communicates with the northern parts of the town by means of North Tay Street, Lindsay Street, and Barrack Street—the latter, in continuation, leading to the barracks, which occupy one of the finest situations about the town. The most prominent building of these, which is now used for the reception of soldiers, was once the famous castle of Dudhope, the seat of the Scrymgeours, constables of Dundee. The Chapelshade, a populous portion of the town, containing a number of fine houses, lies to the eastward of the Barrack Roads, and on the north side the Meadows, on which the public seminaries have lately been erected. The south side of the entrance to the Overgate from the High Street is named the Luckenbooths, at the east corner of which, and fronting the great square, stands a building eminent for its historical character. It is said to be the house in which General Monk resided after obtaining possession of the town; and it is also mentioned as the birth-place of Anne Scott, the celebrated Duchess of Monmouth, ancestress of the Buccleugh family,—her parents having been among those who had taken refuge in Dundee from the arms of Cromwell. It is also farther celebrated as being the residence of the Pretender in 1715, during his sojourn in the town.

A great number of spinning-mills have been erected along the course of Balgay stream, which runs along the northern boundary of the Scouringburn and Overgate. The thrice twenty-times heated waters of this stream cross the narrow of the Murraygate to the river.—Between this stream and the Overgate, bounded on the west by Barrack Street, is situated the Howff or burying-ground of the town and parish, which was once the site of the Grey Friars Cordelier's monastery. The place having become by far too limited for the extent of the population, the magistrates and council have fixed upon the eastern portion of the Lower Chapelshade gardens as an additional burying-ground; which consists of about four acres, and is bounded on the south by Bell Street, (not yet extended so far west;) on the west by the line of railway; on the east by Constitution Road; and on the north by the road to Dudhope Barracks. The ground is to be laid out according to a most elegant and appropriate plan by Mr. James R. Findlater, land-surveyor, Dundee.

Immediately to the northward of this ground lies the new bleaching-green, occupying an area of nearly five acres. When the plan has been executed, the ground, which is to be laid out in walks and embellished with shrubbery, will combine all the requisites of a fine airy promenade, with ample accommodation for the purposes of bleaching.

Proceeding from the great square, on the north side of the Trades' Hall, the Murraygate runs in a north-east direction—narrow and even dangerous at the entrance, but soon increasing into considerable width, and presenting a spacious appearance. In this street, and the Cowgate adjoining, the greater part of the business of Dundee with foreign countries is transacted. Mostly all the banking establishments and insurance companies have their offices in this quarter; and here also the carriers from the east and north parts of the country have their quarters. Peter Street, the Horse Wynd and the Mason Lodge Close, run between the Murraygate and Seagate; and Meadow Entry, and various narrow closes present openings on the north side of the Murraygate, which communicate with the Meadow Road, leading to the pleasant walks about the high grounds to the north.

At the east end of the Murraygate the street branches off into two divisions—the Cowgate leading to the eastward; and the Wellgate, which, rising gently from the Murraygate, connects that street with the Bonnet Hill or Hilltown, the latter stretching, in a bold line, over a steep ascent, as far north as the lands of Clepington. The Wellgate, on market days, is a busy business street. The irregular and dilapidated appearance of the Hilltown scarcely harmonizes with the fact, that the trade of manufacturing cloth is carried on to a great extent in the shabby-looking structures on both sides of it.

At the head of the Wellgate the Bucklemaker Wynd goes off at right angles, and runs eastward as far as Wallace Burn. The extensive bank which lies to the northward of this wynd, and to the eastward of the Hilltown, is denominated Forebank, and contains a number of fine villas and houses; but as the grounds have been laid out without any regard to a general plan (a fault which attaches to most parts of the modern town) the fine appearance which such a situation might have presented, is much destroyed. Immediately to the northward of Forebank, and bounding the limits of the town in that direction, Maxwelltown has lately been built upon the grounds lying between the Hilltown and the villa of Hillbank. Nearly opposite to the Bucklemaker Wynd, Dudhope Wynd forms the northern boundary of the Chapelshade, and runs westward as far as the Barracks. The celebrated Ladywell, which at present supplies the town with water, is situated at the south-east corner of the Chapelshade, at the mouth of a lane which leads from the bottom of the Hilltown to the road around the Meadows. The Wellgate has two excellent communications with the same road,—namely Meadow Street and Baltic Street; the former of which contains a range of genteel houses; but the latter is chiefly composed of warehouses and offices. The Cowgate runs from the east end of the Murraygate to the eastward—King Street breaking off on its north side at a very acute angle; and both streets pursuing an easterly direction, terminate at Wallace Burn. St. Andrew's Church, an elegant building, with a beautiful spire, stands on an eminence to the north of the junction of these streets, and fronting St. Andrew's Street, which runs south, crossing the Seagate; and opening up, by means of Trades' Lane, a communication with the eastern part of the harbour. Immediately to the east of St. Andrew's church, and at the commencement of King Street, stands the Glassite Meeting-house;* and a little farther east, the Royal Infirmary—an institution which has been of incalculable benefit to the community. It was erected chiefly by subscription, and is supported by the same means, and by fees payable by students of medicine and surgeons' apprentices. The western portion of this street, which was garden-ground not many years ago, contains some of the finest buildings in the town. Queen Street, St. Roque's Lane, and the Sugar-house Wynd, are the only other openings between the Cowgate and Seagate. At the east end of the former stands a solitary archway across the street—the only relic which time has spared of the ancient walls of the town. It has been allowed to survive from gratitude to the memory of the martyr George Wishart, who preached from it during the plague in 1544, keeping the infected on the one side, and the healthy on the other. An application, which was recently made to the Magistrates by certain individuals in the quarter where it is situated, praying to have this “hoary relic of a long past time” removed, met with the fate it merited, having been sternly and instantly rejected. At its east end, it communicates with the Cowgate and Seagate by means of St. Roque's Lane; and with the Bucklemaker Wynd by Denbrae Lane. On the Wallace-burn, at its eastern termination, a number of extensive spinning-mills have been built; and the grounds of Wallace Craigie, to the westward, having recently been feued, an extensive suburb, named Wallace Feus, has been reared, with a street named Prince's Street running through it, in continuation of King Street, to the north-east. This entrance to the town is the principal thoroughfare. It concentrates the communication with Arbroath and other places on the coast to the northward, and with Forfar, Kirriemuir, Brechin, and Glamis, and the districts in which these towns are situated.—A little to the northward of Wallace Feus, and on the east side of the public road, possessing a fine situation, stands the Lunatic Asylum—a splendid building, whose superior accommodation and excellent management render it one of the first places of the kind in Scotland.

* It appears that the Town-council had conferred the freedom of the burgh upon Mr. Glass, the founder of the religious sect which bears his name. The following extract on the subject is from the record of burgess' entries:—“25th September, 1753—Mr. John Glass, minister of the Gospel, being a free burgher, in terms of an act of council the first of August, 1753. Mr. Thomas Glass, merchant in Dundee, by the privilege of the above Mr. John Glass, his father.”

From the High Street, on the south side of the Trades' Hall, the Seagate, one of the ancient streets of the town, runs to the eastward as far as the Wallace-burn, which bounded the ancient royalty. The line of street is then continued to the eastward along Blackcroft and by Carolina Port, till it finally terminates at Broughty Ferry—a much frequented watering-place four miles distant. The Seagate was in former times the abode of the principal families of the county, and there are still several genteel residences in it. A spot is still shewn where Grizzel Jeffrey was burnt for a witch.

Dock Street, which commences at the south-west point of the Exchange Buildings, runs eastward along the north side of the Wet Dock till it joins Trades' Lane. This street is not yet nearly completed; but the houses already built are of an elegant description. It is supposed that a new Custom-house will, in the course of the next generation, be erected here: The want of it is exceedingly felt by the present; but it does not appear to be any part of the system of expenditure adopted by his Majesty's government to sanction the payment of moderate sums for really useful purposes.—Commercial Street, which has been recently opened, and is situated nearly at the centre of Dock Street, runs northward from the quay of the Wet Dock by the Burnhead, and joins the Seagate a little to the eastward of the High Street. Exchange Street runs eastward, from the foot of Castle Street, parallel with Dock Street, and terminates at Commercial Street.

The Sailors' Hall, a plain building in a very indifferent situation, stands a little to the westward of Union Street, on the south side of the Yeaman Shore—a narrow street which strikes off from the Nethergate by the Sea Wynd, and running westward, communicates with the Craig Pier and the harbour.

Between the Craig Pier and the ship-building yards to the south of Trades' Lane, and bounded on the north by the spacious opening stretching from Union Street, on the west, to the eastern extremity of Dock Street, lies the noble harbour, of which the town has so much reason to be proud. The accommodation afforded to the shipping was very inadequate till the management of the harbour was taken from the Magistrates in 1815, and placed in the hands of commissioners, appointed annually under an Act of Parliament. Improvements on a large scale were then projected, and carried into execution with great rapidity and success. During the period from 1815 to 1830 the immense sum of £162,800 was expended on the harbour, principally in constructing a wet dock—a graving dock attached to it—extending the tide harbour—building additional quays, sea walls, &c. A few years ago, therefore, the harbour consisted of William the Fourth's magnificent wet dock, containing an area of nearly eight eres, with an extensive graving-dock, and a capacious tide harbour. In consequence, however, of the powers vested in the trustees by the Perpetual Act, which came into operation in June 1830, they are now busily employed in converting the greater part of the present tide harbour into a second wet dock, named Earl Grey's dock, which will be finished early in the spring, and will afford a greater depth of water to the shipping than the one already constructed. The new improvements to the eastward of the present harbour embrace the whole extent of space between the present east protection wall and Carolina Port, a distance of nearly a mile. Two additional wet docks, a tide harbour with still deeper water, and greatly improved accommodation for ship-building, constitute the principal features of the new plan. The greater sea wall is already extended considerably to the eastward; and, under the talented and active superintendence of Mr. Leslie, the resident engineer, we have no doubt but the operations in that quarter will be pushed rapidly forward. Some years must elapse before the whole improvements can be completed; but when that period shall arrive, the harbour accommodation will, with the exception of London and Liverpool, be the most extensive and commodious of any port in Britain.

In considering the great extent of the improvements now in progress—improvements which will soon embrace ample accommodation for fleets from the East and West Indies, and other distant countries—we are naturally led to take a retrospective glance at the shipping interest.

In 1669, 37 vessels arrived in the port, eighteen of which were from the Firth with coals, and the remainder from Norway, Holland, France, &c. The first arrival from London, according to the records of the Seamen Fraternity, was during that year. In 1673 there were forty-nine arrivals; and in 1680, eighty-five; and in 1731, the whole shipping belonging to Dundee, Perth, St. Andrews, Ferry-port-on-Craig, and Broughty Ferry, amounted to 70 vessels, registering 2300 tons. About the year 1745, there was no voyaging after October, the vessels being regularly unrigged and laid up for the winter. The annual port-revenue did not then amount to £1200. In 1792 the number of vessels belonging to the town had increased to 116, measuring 8550 tons. At that period the annual amount of tonnage in the foreign trade, which cleared outwards and inwards, was 11,800 tons; and in the coasting trade, 61,000 tons. From the commencement of the present century the shipping experienced a gradual augmentation; and as the progressive extension of the harbour continued to afford additional accommodation, the trade and shipping of the port continued to increase in a corresponding degree. The following statement of shore-dues will sufficiently illustrate this.

It will be seen from the shipping-list that Dundee now possesses a first-rate mercantile fleet. No fewer than 284 vessels, amounting to 36,473 tons, belong to the port. The larger vessels are employed in the whale fishery; the next in size trade to the Baltic, North and South America, the West Indies, &c. and the others are engaged in the coasting trade. The Companies engaged in the latter branch require no particular notice, with the exception of the Dundee, Perth, and London Shipping Company, which commands all the carrying trade betwixt Dundee and London. In addition to the fine vessels already employed in the trade, this Company are about to introduce two magnificent steam-ships, which we must notice with some minuteness of detail, in consequence of the interest excited by so vast an improvement.

Dundee Steam-ships for the London trade. Of the various and unexpected applications of science for promoting the happiness of mankind, by far the most wonderful, and perhaps also the most beneficial in its results, is modern steam navigation. The fall of an apple is said to have suggested the existence of that general property of matter which gives order and regularity to the universe; and in the present age, the employing of steam to propel the float of an inland river boat, discovered a power, to the increase of which there is no assignable limit,—which is capable of braving and overcoming the fiercest elements of the most tempestuous ocean, and of transporting the inhabitants and produce of one part of the globe to any other part of it, with the utmost safety, comfort, and despatch. Dundee, though not the first town in Scotland to enjoy the invaluable advantage of a direct communication to London by steam, will be amply recompensed for the delay by the possession, in a few weeks, of two of the most powerful steam vessels in Europe. They form a most important and gratifying addition to the flourishing fleet of Dundee. But to avoid the suspicion of exaggeration, let us come to particulars. The ships are called the “Dundee” and the “Perth.” Being exactly of the same size and construction, and fitted up also in the same manner, the following description applies exactly to both vessels:—The length of the keel is 152 feet; the keel and fore-rake 164 feet. The breadth of the beam between the paddles is 28 feet 4 inches, and the depth of the hold 18 feet; the depth from under the side of the hatchway at the front of the poop to the top of the keelson being 20 feet. The depth of the after-hold, under the main cabin-sole, is 11 feet 9 inches; and it is 46 feet in length. The depth of the forehold, from the hatchway to the top of the keelson, is 17 feet, and its length from the engine bulk-head 30 feet. The height from the bottom of the keel to the taffrail is 29 feet, and the whole height of the ship, from the sole of the keel to the top of the paddle-boxes, 34 feet. The length of the poop-deck, 60 feet 6 inches, and it is raised 4 feet above the main deck. It is 38 feet broad at the front, and 26 feet broad at the after part. The main-deck is 40 feet in breadth; the fore-castle-deck 12 feet in length, and fitted up expressly for the accommodation of the ship's crew. The paddle-boxes are 25 feet in diameter, and 12 feet broad; there are 20 floats on each paddle-wheel, 9 feet 6 inches in length, and 2 feet 6 inches in breadth. The length of the ship on deck, from the inside of the stem-head to the inside of the taffrail, is 175 feet; over the stem-head and taffrail 180 feet; over taffrail and figure-head 192 feet; and over jib-boom-end and gaff-end 240 feet, or exactly two-thirds the length of the High Street. The extreme breadth of the ship, over paddle-boxes and wing-belts, is 50 feet 6 inches, or more than half the breadth of the High Street. The main saloon is 30 feet in length, and about 24 in breadth. The gentlemen's sleeping cabin is 17 feet 9 inches by 14 feet; and the ladies' sleeping cabin 15 feet 2 inches by 14 feet. There are also five other apartments in the main cabin, which may be secured for the accommodation of families or parties, and in each of which apartments there is room for four berths. In the fore cabin the ladies' and gentlemen's apartments are completely separated, and each possesses a different entrance from the deck. The houses on the deck abaft the paddle-wheels are 24 feet 4 inches in length, and contain 4 apartments on each side. Those on the starboard side consist of the captain's and engineer's rooms, cook's pantries, &c.; and those on the other side are occupied as second and third mate's rooms, steward's rooms, pantry, &c. The deck-houses forward are 15 feet in length,—the starboard side being converted into firemen's cabins, and a private stair case leading to the female apartments in the fore cabin; those on the opposite side into firemen's rooms, a store cabin, and a public stair to the fore cabin. Each of these ships will make up, altogether, 105 berths for passengers, and have stowage-room for 3,600 barrel-bulk of goods. Each of them is propelled by two engines, which together are of 280 horse-power, the diameter of the cylinders being about 58 inches, and the length of the piston-stroke 5 feet 6 inches. Some idea may be formed of the immense weight of the machinery from the fact that the boiler and funnel alone weigh 65 tons. The vessels will cost about £20,000 each.

This plain narrative of facts renders further explanation useless. It is proper to add, however, that the vessels were built by John Wood, Esq. of Port-Glasgow; and that in the opinion of competent judges, they are the finest models, and altogether the most splendid specimens of the like kind of naval architecture that have been produced. The machinery has been furnished by Robert Napier, Esq. of the Vulcan Foundry, Glasgow, a gentleman of the highest character; and as a marine-engineer deservedly at the very head of his profession.

Finally, the benefits of this great improvement will not be confined to Dundee—the inhabitants of which, if inclined, may, this season, take a trip to Paris in the same space of time they had formerly to sacrifice in visiting London—but will be communicated to a great range of the surrounding district of which Dundee is the emporium. The warmest thanks of all classes in town and country are, therefore, most justly due to the spirited Company which has done so much for their accommodation. The merit of it, however, belongs pre-eminently to George Duncan, Esq. Dean of Guild of Dundee, and managing director for carrying it into effect,—without whose efficient and unceasing exertions the violent opposition to the scheme by some partners of the Company, and the lukewarmness of others could neither have been overcome, nor could the measure have been set about or completed on a scale so magnificent.

Information regarding the Tay Ferries, which afford great facilities of communication between Forfarshire and Fifeshire, will be found in the proper place. The interests of this concern are in a declining state, and exertions are just now making to get improvements introduced in the management so as to save the affairs of the trust from ruin. Four miles below Dundee a passage-boat plys between Broughty-Ferry and Ferry-port-on-Craig five times a-day, at the low fare of 1d. for each passenger; while its rival on the Dundee passage charges 9d.

The Tay Steam-Packet Company keep a packet plying daily between Dundee and Perth; and in the summer season the trip is extended to Broughty Ferry and Ferry-port-on-Craig.

Dundee, besides the four churches, already noticed possesses St. David's Church, situated in North Tay Street, together with three chapels of ease,—St. Andrew's Church, situated on the north side of the Cowgate,—the Chapelshade Church, and the Gaelic Chapel, in the Overgate, in which most the services during half the day are conducted in Gaelic. All these churches and chapels, which are superintended by nine clergymen, are considered as within one parish, and their various ministers and elders form but one kirk-session. There are also two Scottish Episcopal chapels, and a Roman Catholic chapel. There are, besides, meeting-houses in the town belonging to Independents, Presbyterian Dissenters, Baptists, Methodists, Glassites, Bereans, Unitarians, and Quakers. One of the most handsome and commodious places of public worship in the town has been recently erected by the Independents for their talented preacher, the Rev. David Russell. It is situated on the west side of Constitution road, directly west from the Public Seminaries. It was designed by Mr. Brewster, architect, and is highly creditable to that gentleman's taste and talents. The east or principal front of the building is in the Gothic style of architecture. In the centre of the gable is a large pointed window, divided by stone mullions, diverging near the top, and filling the whole of the arch with rich flowing drapery. On each side there are two buttresses, finishing with ornamental pinnacles, between which rises a small pediment, terminating at the top with an ornamental final. The chief peculiarity of the façade consists in those coupled buttresses, the place of which, in compositions of a similar kind, is usually occupied by single buttresses, or by octagonal turrets. The entrance-doors to the chapel are on each side of the principal or centre part of the east front. The entire length of the body of the church is sixty-nine feet, and the width, including the aisles, fifty-six feet. The nave is separated from the aisles, on each side, by clusters of light pillars, supporting a series of flat-pointed arches. The roof is supported by transverse ribs springing from ornamental corbels, between the side arches, and these are crossed by smaller ribs, running longitudinally on the ceiling, which rises considerably above that of the aisles; thereby producing something of the interior arrangement and effect of the beautiful remains of ancient ecclesiastical architecture. The sides and east end are occupied by galleries, the pulpit being placed at the west end. The chapel is capable of containing twelve hundred sitters, and is rendered warm and comfortable by means of hot water, conveyed in cast-iron pipes under the pavement of the south aisle.—Dundee is also the seat of a Presbytery in the Synod of Angus and Mearns. Several ministers belonging to the town have been famed for their literary and theological acquirements; the most distinguished of whom are Dr. John Willison, Dr. Robert Small, and the Rev. James Smith. The late Rev. Dr. Davidson was also a man of masculine understanding, profound knowledge, and of great popularity as a preacher; but none of his writings have been given to the public. The name of Dr. Willison is widely known in Scotland from his many religious publications—the most popular of which are, the “Mother’s Catechism,” and the “Afflicted Man’s Companion.” Dr. Small was an excellent scholar, an eminent divine, and an interesting preacher, besides being versed in mathematics, natural philosophy, and astronomy. He was also the author of the excellent statistical account of the town and parish of Dundee; and many papers of his were published in the transactions of the Royal Society of Scotland. Mr. Smith was the author of several theological works, the most considerable of which is, "Esays, in two volumes 8vo, on the first Principles of Christianity; on the proper method of Establishing Sound Doctrine from the Sacred Oracles; and on the different Senses of Scriptural terms."—It may be further mentioned that Dundee claims the distinction of having produced and educated men who have held conspicuous places in the history of their country. So far back as 1290, the renowned Sir William Wallace received the first rudiments of his education in the town. He gave an early indication of his high spirit, ardent love of liberty, and abhorrence of oppression, by slaying young Selbie, the son of the English Governor, who had wantonly insulted him. Sir Nicol Campbell of Lochow, ancestor of the Argyle family, and John Blair, who celebrated the exploits of Wallace in a Latin poem, also received their education in Dundee at the same period. Hector Boethius, the celebrated historian and poet, who flourished about the end of the fifteenth century, was born in the parish of Barry, near Dundee, and received the elements of his education at that place. He afterwards, according to the custom of the period, went to Paris to complete his studies, where he was honoured with the friendship and commendation of Erasmus. In the sixteenth century, Dundee gave birth to Dr. Kinloch, physician to James VI., and Mr. Goldman, the Scots poet, both eminent scholars. In his early days, the Earl of Mar, who received many distinguished honours from the monarch just named, and who was the friend and fellow-labourer of Baron Napier, the inventor of logarithms, attended the seminaries of Dundee. Sir George Mackenzie, the first lawyer of his time, and a man of profound literature, was a native of Dundee: he lived in the 17th century. Dryden is said to have acknowledged that he learned from Sir George the soundest principles of versification. About the same period, John Marr, a shipmaster, who was born and educated in the town, produced an accurate chart of the North Sea and the River Tay, to which, even at this day, nothing very material has been added. During the last century, the Dundee Grammar School sent forth Robert Ferguson, the celebrated Scottish poet; and various other individuals remembered for their abilities.

In addition to the Royal Infirmary and the Lunatic Asylum, which we have already noticed, there are several other charitable institutions. The Orphan Institution, whose very name urges peculiar claims upon the public, has been of great benefit in rescuing friendless orphans from the chances of starvation and crime, and fitting them to be useful members of society. The Institution was a few years ago incorporated by royal charter. The management is vested in directors, freely chosen by the body of annual subscribers of 5s. and upwards; and the improved system has so operated on the benevolent portion of the community, that the number of helpless orphans provided with all the necessaries of life, and an education suitable to their prospects, is much greater than at any former period. Better than all, the signs of permanent prosperity are so encouraging, that there is every reason to believe the directors of the institution will be enabled to increase the number of boarders in some measure in proportion to the increasing number of claims for admission. The Guildry Incorporation, the Incorporated and United Trades, the Masonic Bodies, the Highland Societies, the Seamen Fraternity, and the Indigent Female Society, have all funds which they devote to charitable purposes. There is, moreover, the Hospital Fund for the support of decayed burgesses, and several small bursaries, at the public schools, under the patronage of the Town-council, Kirk-session, and private individuals. The funds of the Kirk-session, which arise partly from assessments, and partly from public contributions and collections, supply the wants of the poor within the parish.

We now proceed to notice the trade and commerce of Dundee. From its favourable situation, and the enterprising spirit of its inhabitants, it must have been a place of considerable trade at a very early period—indeed the capture of no fewer than sixty vessels, in the harbour, at the time the town was pillaged by General Monk, is of itself a sufficient confirmation of the fact. Originally the manufacture of coarse woollens seems to have been the staple trade. Great quantities of a description of that cloth called plaiding were manufactured and exported to the different European states for clothing their armies. The trade was carried on through the medium of Holland; from whence, in return, our merchants obtained supplies of wines and spirits; but the restrictions imposed upon it after the Union completely ruined the trade.

More recently, the manufacture of soap and glass, the brewing of ale, and the tanning of leather, were followed with success. The soap and glass trades have been abandoned. Dundee ale was long famous; and at no remote time persons, even of the better sort, were accustomed to breakfast principally upon it in the public-houses. The brewers carried on business principally in the Seagate, which in fact swarmed with them; but the trade has been greatly abridged since beer ceased to be the prevailing beverage. Some years ago there were two joint-stock companies for brewing porter and strong ale, but they have both relinquished the business. Two individuals, however, carry it on in separate establishments to some extent; and besides supplying a portion of the inhabitants export considerable quantities.

About fifty years ago much business was done in the trade of tanning and currying; and nearly all the leather was brought up in the place. There were then nine tannage works; but there are only two now. The value of boots and shoes annually exported, at that time, was about £7,000.

While the business of tanning continued in a prosperous state, an extensive trade was carried on in the manufacture of ploured threads. The quantity annually made has been calculated at 270,000 lbs., and valued at about £33,700. The business is now scarcely in existence.

The Bonnet Hill and Bucklemaker Wynd were once principally inhabited by bonnet-makers and bucklemakers. Both trades are now unknown here, although the former still holds a nominal place among the trades of the town. The corporation privileges were thrown open to the public about a year ago; but no attempt has been made to revive this ancient branch of local manufacture.

The spinning of cotton was once introduced, and flourished for a time; but although seven public companies engaged in the business, it finally declined, and is now altogether unknown in the town.

Ship-building has long been a considerable branch of trade at Dundee; and it is at present carried on to an extent commensurate with the importance of the place. There are at present six extensive building-yards in full employment. In consequence of this a very extensive business is carried on in the manufacture of cordage and other articles employed in the fitting-out of vessels for sea.

The immense impulse which has been given to the trade of flax-spinning, and other kinds of manufactures requiring the aid of steam has led to the establishment of three iron foundries, at which steam-engines and boilers are manufactured; and six manufactories supply all the smaller descriptions of machinery for the spinning trade. This branch of business has become of so much importance that an extended notice of it is required.

The trade existed to some extent at an early period of our annals; for an old Scottish historian observes, that "the people of Dundee travail painfully in the weaving and making of linen-cloth." But it was about the beginning of the last century till it assumed any importance. Scotland at that period possessed little home trade; the advantages of foreign commerce were almost unknown; the implements of her manufactures were of the rudest description—the distaff was the only machinery used in spinning yarns. The sale for manufactured goods, of which linen was the chief, was limited to the narrow wants of a country deriving no advantages from soil or climate, and whose industry had been depressed by religious and civil wars, brought on by a long course of bigoted and tyrannical misrule.

Under the more equitable sway of the family of Hanover, and participating in the advantages of the free constitution of England, this country began to shew symptoms of future prosperity. The industry, patience, and perseverance of the people had full scope for development during a long internal peace. The excellent public institutions for religion and education tended greatly to raise the character of the people. They became highly intelligent; and their energies were soon directed to the cultivation of land, and to the establishment of commerce and manufactures. So complete was their success, that the agriculture of Scotland soon became famed in the sister kingdom. The same powers of mind, exerted in commerce and manufactures, were conspicuous in the rise of new and the extension of old manufactures. The trade, however, for a considerable time made little progress; for, in the year 1745, only 74 tons of flax were imported, while the quantity of linen exported was about 1,000,000 of yards. There is no mention at that date of sail-cloth or bagging. In the course of fifty years subsequent to 1745, there was a considerable increase both in imports and exports. The importation of flax in 1791 amounted to 2,444 tons, and of hemp to 299 tons. The quantity of linen exported that year had increased to 7,842,000 yards, besides 280,000 yards of sail-cloth, and 65,000 yards of bagging. From this period the trade began gradually but not rapidly to extend itself; and the foundation was laid for that extraordinary increase in it which has taken place within the last fifteen years. Before the peace of 1814, the quantity of machinery employed in spinning was not great, being under eighty horse-power. About this time, however; and in consequence chiefly of improvements in the construction of the machinery, the trade altogether became more safe than during the war, when the supply of the raw material from the Baltic was liable to be cut off by the operations of the belligerent powers. The consequence has been, that, since the time referred to, the importation of flax at Dundee has increased from 3,000 to 15,000 tons, and the exportation of linen in an equal proportion. Nor is it possible to predict any probable limit to its farther increase. Numerous spinning-mills and manufactories continue to be erected; and since capital would not continue to be invested in a losing trade, it may safely be concluded that the investments prove beneficial to the parties immediately interested, and, as a necessary result, to the whole of the community.

The following abstract of imports and exports for the year ending May 1833, shews an increase of the trade almost wonderful. Flax imported 15,010 tons; hemp 3082 tons; linen exported, 356,817 pieces, measuring about 50 millions of yards; sailcloth, 85,522 pieces, measuring about $3\frac{1}{2}$ millions of yards; bagging 62,199 pieces, measuring about 4 millions of yards. Total $57\frac{1}{2}$ millions of yards.

This great increase has been owing to a variety of causes. Dundee is conveniently situated for communication with the Baltic, from whence the supply of raw material is most advantageously obtained; but this advantage is only shared in common with all the seaports on the east coast of Scotland. The bounty granted by Government on the exportation of linens was a more marked cause of the increase of the trade in general, but not of Dundee in particular. The fostering care of the board of trustees may have also contributed to the success of the trade in its infancy; but Dundee only experienced its share of the benefit. There must, therefore, have been something peculiar about the place which enabled it to draw such a large share of the trade to itself. Capital, perhaps, was more abundant than in the neighbouring towns,—the manufacturers being thereby enabled to extend their trade through the medium of the banks. Industry, economy, and a spirit of enterprise among our merchants, must also have aided in bringing about the increase—urging them on in the pursuit after new markets for their goods. But all these causes seem inadequate; and we may, therefore, with some shew of justice and propriety, attribute the distinction which Dundee has acquired as the head-quarters of the linen trade, to the circumstance of its being the shipping port of Forfarshire, Carse of Gowrie, and the adjacent districts of Fife. In these places a great proportion of the numerous population depend on Dundee for a supply of raw material, and for the sale of their manufactured linens.

Previous to the invention of machinery for spinning flax, the linen manufactures were limited in consequence of the difficulty of getting yarn spun in sufficient quantities. Not only were the women in this part of the country employed in that branch of the trade, but flax was sent all over the north of Scotland to be spun; and after all, the manufacturers were not sufficiently supplied with yarn. The introduction of machinery has completely obviated this difficulty—enabling a supply of yarns commensurate with the demand to be produced.

The most disadvantageous circumstance connected with our staple manufacture is our dependence on Russia for the raw material. A war of a few years' duration with that power would ruin a great proportion of our spinners and manufacturers,—as there is no other country from which an adequate supply of flax could be obtained. We are not so dependent on any one country for the consumption of our linens. The United States of America are our best customers ; but although they should go to war with us, we have the West Indies, Mexico, and all South America, to consume for us ; and it is very unlikely that our intercourse with all these countries could be interrupted at the same time. But, besides our foreign customers, we have now a considerable demand for linens for home consumption, which was not the case twenty or thirty years ago ; so that if we can always depend upon an abundant supply of flax, we need not entertain any fear regarding a demand for our manufactured articles.

The value of flax and hemp imported at Dundee last year may be stated in round numbers at £700,000, and the value of linens exported at £1,500,000.

Only a few houses in Dundee carry on the linen trade in all its branches. In general, those engaged in it confine their attention to one or two of them ; by which they obtain the advantages which are always derived from a division of labour,—especially by persons of limited capital. Those who have large capitals may carry on all the branches advantageously, because they can afford to employ assistants of skill to superintend the different departments.

The first branch of the trade is the importation of flax and hemp ; which is carried on partly by merchants and partly by spinners. When a merchant or spinner considers it a favourable time, he sends orders to his correspondents at the Russian or Prussian ports. The agent, on receiving his instructions, purchases the flax or hemp from the native dealer, and ships it,—charging the shipping expenses, and a commission for his trouble. He then sends off the invoice, and draws a bill for the amount of the purchase, at three months' date, on a banker in London, who is named by the Dundee merchant when he transmits the order. The agents in the Russian ports are chiefly British, there being very few of the Russians who engage in that business ; but the dealers who bring the flax from the interior of Russia are exclusively natives. Some of them are now of great wealth, and are able to keep their goods till the British agents are, in some cases, obliged to give them such a price as they may demand. The only way they can be kept in check is, by the merchants of this country limiting the price to be given by their agents. Flax and hemp are generally sold in Dundee at a credit of four to six months.

The second branch of the trade is spinning, which is altogether done by machinery, and requires considerable capital and skill to carry it on extensively and advantageously. Some of the spinners import the flax which they require,—others purchase it from the importers. Most of them sell the yarns to manufacturers; but some of them, who have abundance of capital, manufacture the yarns into linens; and either sell them in this market or export them to foreign countries.

The third branch is manufacturing the yarns into linens. There are some persons possessed of considerable capital engaged in this branch, but, for the most part, it is carried on by industrious men of small capital. As it is not necessary to lay out much money in the erection of premises, and as yarns are purchased at four months' credit, it is easy for an industrious, skilful man to prosecute an extensive trade in this branch, although he is not possessed of much capital. The profits, however, are in general very small, and there are few instances of much money being acquired in this department.

The fourth branch is the exportation of the linens. There are not many merchants exclusively in this branch. Some unite it with the importing department; and many of the manufacturers are now exporters, owing to the facilities afforded them by the merchants of Glasgow and Liverpool, through whom they receive advances. All the linens exported from Britain are sent on consignment to agents abroad; and as they are commonly sold at a credit of four or six months, it is frequently upwards of a year before returns are received from them.

From the preceding sketch it will be seen that a large amount of capital is engaged in the linen manufacture. Flax and hemp must be paid for within a few weeks after it is received: In some cases payment is made even before the arrival of the goods. The process of spinning and manufacturing may be said to require at least six months; then twelve months more are required to get returns—making at least eighteen months, after paying for the raw material, till our merchants are repaid for the money advanced. Supposing six months stock of flax to cost £400,000, and twelve months produce to have cost £1,500,000, and reckoning the amount of capital sunk in spinning-mills, manufactories, bleachfields, &c. to be £600,000, we have thus property to the amount of £2,500,000 embarked in the linen trade of the district of which Dundee is the shipping port.

It is only about forty years ago since the spinning of flax by machinery was first attempted in Dundee. About that period a work was erected for the purpose at the Lower Chapelshade by Messrs Fairweather and Marr; but this first undertaking did not succeed. The next effort was made at the Scouringburn, where the flour-mill now stands, but with no better success. Soon afterwards the late Mr. Wilkie of Auchlishie erected the East Mill, now the property of Messrs. James and William Brown. Still later James Brown, Esq. of Connon-syth, the father of these gentlemen, and whose intelligence and enterprise were far in advance of the time in which he lived, erected, on a large scale, the West or Ward Mill, which continues to be, amidst every improvement, a model of architectural contrivance and mechanical skill. But this great undertaking—great at least for that period—did not fulfil Mr. Brown's expectations; but he struggled nobly with adverse fortune. A man of the highest integrity and honour, he continued his course with undeviating perseverance; and although he did not live to witness the accomplishment of his hopes, these have been fully realised by his four sons, who stand in no need of any eulogium. Along with their father they have now been twenty-eight years in the trade, and have done more for the extension of it than any individuals in the place.

The steam-power employed in driving spinning-machinery was equal, in 1811, to that of sixty-three horses. From that date up to 1820, a period very inauspicious to trade generally, but in particular to flax-spinning, the increase was only eighteen horse-power. From that time, however, there was a gradual augmentation. The following statement exhibits the actual amount of steam-power in and around Dundee up to the present period.

One of the most extensive public undertakings about Dundee, of a recent date, is the establishment of the Dundee and Newtyle railway, which opens up a cheap and rapid communication with the extensive valley of Strathmore. In consequence, however, of the great outlay in the construction of this road, the shareholders, we believe, have not yet derived any return for the capital invested ; but as there is now some prospect of the line being extended in various directions beyond Newtyle, hopes may be entertained of its being ultimately beneficial to the original projectors. Two locomotive engines are employed on the railway.

Dundee is seen to much advantage from various situations in the neighbourhood. The view from the Hill of Balgay on the north-west, as well as from the high grounds to the north-east, are considered beautiful ; but the view from the middle of the river, or rather from the heights around Newport, on the opposite side of it, is by far the most magnificent and striking. There the picture, with its ample dimensions, lies directly before the eye,—exhibiting fully the noble body of the town itself, skirted on the south by its extensive docks and harbours ; the grounds to the east and north-east covered with masses of buildings, or studded with fine villas, partly ornamented with trees ; the ancient barony of the Hill-town, stretching itself in a bold, lengthy line to the northward, like a proud limb from the main body, and opening up a communication with the adjoining district ; the towering Law, with its line of railway over its eastern declivity, and its finely sloping foreground, looking proudly from the north upon the mass of busy thousands below ; while the romantic hill of Balgay, with its pine-clad summit ; the highly ornamental grounds of the ancient domain of Blackness ; and the elegant buildings covering the space between it and the river, combine to beautify the scene to the westward.

The Royalty of Dundee has, by the Burgh Commissioners, been divided into three Wards, each Ward electing a proportion of councillors. When a parliamentary election takes place, the village of Lochee is annexed to the Second Ward. The boundaries of the three Wards are as follows:—viz.

The First Ward contains that portion of the Burgh included within the following boundary, viz.—Beginning with the eastern boundary of the Royalty on the turnpike-road from Dundee to Arbroath; westward along the said turnpike-road, King-street, Cowgate, Murraygate, north side of Trades'-hall, High-street, and Overgate, as far as the Long-wynd; southward along the Long-wynd, crossing the Nethergate to Slate or Sea-wynd, and along Slate or Sea-wynd to the River Tay; from thence eastward along the river to the eastern boundary of the Royalty; and following the eastern boundary of the Royalty to its junction with the turnpike-road leading from Dundee to Arbroath, with which the description of the Ward began.

The Second Ward contains that portion of the Burgh included within the following boundary, viz.—Beginning on the river Tay at the bottom of Slate or Sea-wynd, and holding northward by Sea-wynd, and crossing the Nethergate to the Long-wynd; northward along the Long-wynd to the Overgate; eastward along the Overgate as far as Barrack-street; northward by Barrack-street, Barrack-road, and Constitution-brae, and the road or lane leading along the west side of Stirling's-park to the north-west corner of Stirling's-park, and from that point in a straight line to the north boundary of the Royalty at the point where a straight line drawn from the north-west corner of Stirling's-park to the King's-cross cuts the said boundary of the Royalty; from thence westward by the boundary of the Royalty, and following the boundary of the Royalty south to the river Tay, and along that river eastward to the point at the bottom of Slate or Sea-wynd, where the description of the Ward began.

The Third Ward contains that portion of the Burgh included in the following boundary, viz. Beginning with the eastern boundary of the Royalty on the turnpike-road between Dundee and Arbroath; westward along the said turnpike-road, and by King-street, Cow-gate, Murraygate, north side of Trades'-hall, High-street and Overgate, as far as Barrack-street; northward by Barrack-street, Barrack-road, Constitution-brae, and the road or lane leading along the west side of Stirling's-park to the north-west corner of Stirling's-park; and from that point in a straight line to the north boundary of the Royalty, at the point where a line drawn from the north-west corner of Stirling's-park to the King's-cross, cuts the said boundary of the Royalty; from thence eastward by the boundary of the Royalty, and following the same to the point of its junction with the turnpike-road from Dundee to Arbroath, where the description of the Ward began.

The postage to all other places, to which there is no regular conveyance by packet, is 1s. 11d.

Letters to all other places in the West Indies can only be forwarded by private ships, at ship letter rates.

Letters for any of the above places, if ordered to be sent by ship, via Liverpool, are taken at half the Packet rates, which must be paid when the letters are put in.

The returns of the Packets are calculated thus:—To Jamaica and back, 16 weeks; America, 15 weeks; Leeward Islands, 13 weeks; Malta, 14 weeks; Brazil, 20 weeks; Lisbon, 4 weeks.

From July to December inclusive, the Packet touches at Pernambuco and Bahia, on her outward passage to Rio Janeiro; the other six months on her homeward passage.

In November, December, January, and February, the Packets touching at Bermuda go to New York direct: during the other eight months they go and return by Halifax.

Letters for places abroad, to which there are no Packets—as China, New South Wales, Sierra Leone, Cape Coast Castle, Goree, Senegal, St. Helena, and many parts of South America—are forwarded in sealed ship letter-bags, by vessels sailing from London or the out ports. Postage from Dundee, 1s. 11d.

CARTERS AND PORTERS.

There are 184 licensed Carters and 100 Porters employed about the Harbour and other parts of the town. They are appointed by the Magistrates, and placed in a great measure under the controul of the Superintendent of Police; and any violation of their regulations, (which they are bound to exhibit to their employers when required) is punished by fine at the Police Court. Carters and porters may engage to perform work out of their regular turns, if at a fifth less than the usual rates. A great number of unlicensed carters and porters also pursue their employments at the Harbour; but they are prohibited from engaging in the principal kinds of work.

VESSELS IN THE LONDON TRADE.

Steam-Ships.

Dundee, 280 horse-power; John Wishart, commander; Thomas Ewing, sailing-master
 Perth, 280 horse-power; John Spink, commander; James Kidd, sailing-master

These two splendid steam-ships are the largest in the kingdom; and will commence plying betwixt Dundee and London early in the ensuing spring. They have very roomy holds for goods; capacious, airy, and elegant cabins; and are fitted up very conveniently for the conveyance of horses, carriages, live-stock, &c.—Dundee and the surrounding district will thus possess facilities of communication with the metropolis equal if not superior to any place in Britain.—(For a detailed description of these vessels see Introduction.)

| Sir William Wallace, steam-tug—34 horse-power | | |

The lighters, towed by the Sir William Wallace, keep up a communication betwixt Dundee and Perth several times a-week. They carry goods to and from the Company's regular London, Glasgow, and Leith traders, generally within a few hours of their time of sailing and arrival; and thus afford to Perth a facility of intercourse with these places which could not be attained by a direct trade with sail-vessels—the river navigation being, without the aid of steam, very uncertain, and generally tedious.

One of these packets plys daily between Dundee and Perth, leaving Dundee about three hours before high water, and Perth a little before the time of high water there, which is fully an hour after high water at Dundee. By referring to the tide-table, therefore, the hours of sailing from the respective places may be easily ascertained.

ADAMSON'S REPAIRING SLIP.—SEAGATE.

This slip is on the same principle as Morton's patent slip, the purchase being attached to the cradle on which the vessels rest; and it is the only one in Scotland which has the benefit of a steam-engine. Vessels requiring repair are drawn from the water by means of the engine, which is of five horse power, in the most expeditious manner—little more than an hour being required for the purpose.

The tonnage-dues are chargeable on the voyage inwards or outwards, in the option of the Trustees. If the tonnage-dues on the voyage inwards have been paid, these must be deducted if the tonnage-dues on the voyage outwards be demanded.

It shall be in the option of the Trustees to charge either the tonnage-dues on the voyage inwards or on the voyage outwards, at the rates specified in the above Schedule, according to the distance; and if the charge be made on the voyage outward there shall be deducted from it the amount of the dues that may have been previously paid on the voyage inwards; but if such vessels sail in ballast, they shall be charged with dues on the inward voyage only.

All vessels not registered at the port of Dundee, or although registered at the port of Dundee if navigated by masters who are not Burgesses of Dundee, shall, in addition to the dues specified in the above Schedule, be chargeable with farther dues equal to the difference which before the passing of the first recited act existed between the dues then chargeable at the said Harbour, in virtue of the charters of the borough, upon vessels navigated by freemen and unfreemen respectively.

Vessels registered at the port of Dundee, if navigated by masters domiciled in Dundee, and free by service in his Majesty's Navy or Army, to pay the same dues as if navigated by Burgesses of Dundee.

All vessels leaving the Harbour of Dundee, or precincts thereof, having paid tonnage-dues on the voyage inwards, and taking on board goods at any other port or place in the River Tay, and returning to the Harbour of Dundee, or precincts thereof, to complete their cargoes, shall not be liable in tonnage-dues on such returns.

All vessels launched at the port of Dundee to pay half tonnage-dues on the voyage outwards, according to the distance of the port to which such vessels sail, provided they take goods on board; but if they sail in ballast, no dues shall be charged.

All vessels with cargoes to be permitted to enter the Harbour of Dundee, for safety or convenience, by payment of one half of the tonnage-dues; but if they shall take goods on board (stores for their own use excepted) or break bulk, they shall be liable in the full tonnage-dues.

All vessels remaining in Harbour six months, to pay one third more than the above dues, excepting vessels belonging to Dundee employed in the whale-fishery.

All vessels remaining in Harbour for one year, to pay double the above dues.

All vessels remaining in Harbour for a longer period than one year, to pay in proportion to the length of time they shall so remain.

Each vessel entering the Harbour, and loading or unloading goods or ballast within the same, or performing both operations before leaving the Harbour, to pay, in name of plank-money (whether a plank be used or not), as follows:

All vessels loading or unloading goods in the precincts of the Harbour of Dundee, shall be exempted from payment of plank-money.

All steam-vessels employed in the River Tay, in carrying passengers and their luggage exclusively, shall pay 1s. for each voyage, as tonnage-dues; but it shall be in the power of the Trustees to compound and agree with the proprietors of steam-vessels for the tonnage-dues by the month or year.

It shall be in the power of the Trustees to compound and agree with the owners of vessels trading in the River Tay for tonnage-dues, by the month or year.

All vessels leaving the Harbour, for the purpose of taking on board ballast, in any part of the River Tay, and returning to the said Harbour or precincts thereof with ballast, shall not be liable in shore-dues for such return.

All vessels sailing from the port of Dundee, and put back by stress of weather, or any other cause, without having accomplished their voyage, shall not be liable in additional shore-dues for such return.

All vessels from any part of the River Tay, with stones, and having no other goods on board, and delivering their cargoes in the precincts of the said Harbour, to pay 2s. each voyage, in name of tonnage-dues.

All vessels arriving in ballast, for the purpose of being repaired in the graving-dock, and departing in ballast, shall be exempted from shore-dues.

All vessels, and their cargoes of stones, wood, and other materials whatsoever, brought into the Harbour, or precincts thereof, for the use of the Harbour works, Ferry Harbour works, or any of the public works of the town of Dundee, shall be exempted from shore-dues, and ferry-boats from tonnage, anchorage, and beacon-dues.

Coaches and other four-wheeled carriages, gigs, and taxed carts, with the horses employed in drawing them, are, for one year from the 17th day of November last, allowed to pass and re-pass the ferry, on the same day, for payment of one fare, provided they return with the same company or empty.

When a boat, pinnace, or yawl, is freighted for the purpose of conveying the passengers by any of the stage-coaches betwixt the stated hours of sailing fixed by the Regulations, the freight of such boat, pinnace, or yawl, shall be paid by the coach proprietors, besides the ordinary fare for each passenger.

The Trustees will license vessels to convey stones, lime, and manure, within the boundaries of their right of ferry (excluding pavement to and from the ferry piers). Application may be made on this subject to the superintendent, who will explain the terms of this arrangement, and will issue the requisite licences.

The freights above mentioned are, for boats or pinnaces, &c., from six in the morning to ten o'clock at night, from the 22d day of March to the 22d day of September inclusive, and from seven in the morning to nine o'clock at night, from the 22d of September to 22d March inclusive. The freights of boats and pinnaces, &c., at other hours, to be one half more than the freights above mentioned.

In cases where the rates are chargeable by weight or measure, it shall be in the option of the collector to charge either by the weight or barrel-bulk.

A person engaging a boat or pinnace, &c., to sail a particular hour, must deposit the freight when he makes the engagement.

The fares for his Majesty's troops to be in terms of the mutiny act.

The same rates and duties as are specified in the foregoing table, to be levied for all persons, beasts, and goods, or other articles, in boats, yawls, pinnaces, or other vessels arriving at the ferry-harbours at Dundee and Newport from the ferries of Ferry-Port-on-Craig, Balmerino, and Broughty Castle, or sailing to any of these ferries last mentioned from the ferry-harbours of Dundee and Newport; and the collector to levy a sixth part of the said rates and duties for and in consideration of the accommodation which the boats, yawls, pinnaces, or other vessels from Ferry-Port-on-Craig, Broughty Castle, or Balmerino, shall receive at the ferry-harbours belonging to the Trustees, situate within the right of ferry.

The Astronomer at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, forwards Monthly to the Depot, an account of the Rate of the several Chronometers on trial, and those that have been withdrawn, with a list of the Depositors and their residences, with other useful information.

ALEXANDER CAMERON, from these advantages, and from being himself a practical workman, is enabled at all times to select his Stock of Chronometers from makers who have made the latest improvements on time-keepers.

An excellent assortment of Marine Chronometers, with certified rates, are always ready for sea at the Depot. A Transit Instrument and Siderial Clock, with other instruments, are fitted up necessary to determine problems in time.

Insurances are effected by the PHENIX COMPANY upon every species of property on the most favourable terms; and the Agent thinks it proper to apprise his friends, that persons insured by the PHENIX COMPANY, are not liable to calls to make good the losses of others, as is the case in some Offices; and that by a reduction of the premiums recently made by this Company, persons insured with it derive an immediate advantage, equivalent, in most cases, to Twenty-five per cent.

THOS. WALKER, Writer, Agent for Dundee.

INSURANCE COMPANY OF SCOTLAND.

THE Subscriber has to return his most sincere thanks to the friends of the late Dundee Assurance Company, and the Public in general, for the liberal support he has received since his appointment as Agent in Dundee for the INSURANCE COMPANY OF SCOTLAND.

TAKES the present opportunity of offering his grateful thanks for the flattering encouragement he has received since he commenced business in the above premises; and he trusts that the qualities of his TEAS, WINES, and SPIRITS, as well as MALT LIQUORS, will continue to merit the decided preference which has already been shewn to his establishment.

Dundee, 18th January, 1834.

ENGLISH BOOT AND SHOE WAREHOUSE,

17, Union Street.

A• AIRD, agent for the above Establishment, offers his grateful thanks to the Gentry and Inhabitants of Dundee and its Vicinity, for the very valuable support he has hitherto received from them; and begs again to remind them that his goods are all made for a regular trade, and are equal both in Materials and Workmanship to any which are manufactured in the most fashionable be-spoke shops; while, from his system of dealing solely for Ready Money, he is enabled to offer them fully 20 per cent. lower than they can be bought for from those who are in the habit of giving credit, and making the good customer pay for the bad; so to those who purchase for ready money this will be found a very material saving, while they may rely on having their boots and shoes of the first quality.

Weekly supplies received from England of the most fashionable makes; and those visiting 17 Union Street will generally find an excellent assortment.

 The lowest price asked, from which no abatement is made.

Dundee, January, 1834.

R. WURNUM,

MANUFACTURER OF PATENT DOUBLE-ACTION PICCOLO, AND GRAND PIANOFORTE,

Music-Hall, Bedford-Square, London,

HAS now forwarded to 4 High Street, Dundee, an assortment of Piccolo and Piccolo Grand PIANOFORTES.

The Royal Patent equal tension Piccolo Pianoforte is a superior specimen of accurate mechanism. Its simplicity is admirable, perhaps the utmost possible. It is highly recommended by the most eminent professional gentlemen in London, and was the favourite instrument of the celebrated composer Bochsa. It has two pedals; stands extremely well in tune; may be placed in any part of a room, with equal advantage, being highly finished on all sides, and French polished. It possesses all the harmony and richness of tone of the Grand. The strings are all of the new Improved Steel, and equal in their tension,—by which arrangement each string has a similar power of resistance against the influence of the atmosphere.

With respect to the Double Action, it is an invention of the first importance to upright Pianofortes. It gives a firmness and certainty of touch hitherto unknown; possesses great excellence in rapid execution, and in no single property regarding touch is it surpassed by other keyed instruments.

The above Patent Pianofortes will be sold in Dundee, at the manufacturer's printed list of prices, by Mr. ALEXANDER CAMERON, Agent for the Patentee.

PRINTING ESTABLISHMENT.

IN consequence of the liberal share of employment with which GEORGE and ROBERT MILN have been favoured, they beg to intimate that they have removed their Printing Establishment to larger and more commodious premises, on the east side of the New Inn Entry, adjoining the Post Office. Their Foundry of Types (which are all new and of the best kinds) have been considerably enlarged; and they have made an addition to their Printing Presses. They trust, therefore, that, in the Printing of Books, Pamphlets, and every description of Mercantile Work, their Employers may rely on beauty of typography, accuracy and despatch.

G. and R. MILN are making arrangements for LITHOGRAPHY PRINTING,—which they expect will be completed in three or four weeks hence.

January 20, 1834.
