NATIONAL LIBRARY

P R E F A C E .

IN presenting the present volume to the Subscribers and the Public, some apology is due for the delay which has unavoidably occurred in its publication. When it was announced, in the beginning of March, so much of the work had been prepared that it was calculated that the whole might be completed and printed shortly after Whitsunday—probably by the first of June. As the work progressed, however, difficulties were encountered which had not been anticipated. A large portion of the Brief Historical Sketch now given had to be re-written; and the correction of the multifarious details connected with the numerous local lists, turned out a work much more formidable than had been contemplated. As accuracy in these was as much a desideratum as in the other departments, there was no alternative but taking the necessary time for having the work done in a satisfactory manner. Again, the taking of the names and addresses of the citizens had to be postponed beyond the time originally fixed for its commencement: It was found that so many removals were intended where the new places of business or residences had not been decided upon, that to have commenced recording them by anticipation before the term day, would either have rendered that important department very imperfect at its very issue, or caused a re-survey of the whole town to correct the subsequent changes. In these circumstances it was deemed advisable to postpone the commencement of this portion till the first of June, the time at which the work was promised to the public. Since then the whole has proceeded with considerable regularity and dispatch; and it is believed that the subscribers and the public will reap the advantages of the delay which has thus taken place.

Of the work, as now presented, nothing farther is necessary to be said, than that no pains or care have been spared to secure the largest amount of usefulness and accuracy compatible with the transitory nature of such a production. The whole lists have each been separately corrected or revised by the gentlemen conducting the various departments of the public service, and the different local institutions—involving considerable labour to them as well as to the compiler. The names and addresses have all been taken anew by a personal survey of the entire town and vicinity, including Lochee, Broughty Ferry, Tayport, and Newport; each address having been obtained in a printed form left and called for, filled up either by the parties themselves or under their immediate direction. Thus the work has been most arduous; but the plan better fitted to secure completeness and accuracy than any other that could have been adopted. In general these forms were pretty well attended to; but in not a few cases, where the reverse might have been expected, considerable difficulty was experienced in getting them returned. Considering the importance of accuracy to the parties themselves, and the little trouble caused to each, we trust this will not be experienced in future.

In reference to the Historical Sketch, the writer has to acknowledge his obligations for much information to the "Gazetteer of Scotland," by John P. Lawson; Dr Small's "History of Dundee;" the "Pictorial History of Scotland," edited by Rev. James Taylor, D.D., Glasgow; and the excellent "History of Dundee," by James Thomson. A large portion of this Sketch having been written before the latter work fell into the writer's hands, some of the information it contained was so valuable that, in order to embrace it, that portion was re-written. To those gentlemen who so courteously afforded him information on literary, manufacturing, and commercial topics he is laid under deep obligations, and begs to return them his grateful thanks.

The proprietors gladly avail themselves of this opportunity of returning their sincere thanks to their advertising friends for the liberal patronage they have afforded; as also to the numerous subscribers who have already ordered copies of the work. They feel gratified in being able to say that, in both departments, the support received has fully realized their highest anticipations; for which they beg to express their unfeigned gratitude.

It is necessary here to notice, that, in the prospectus, a view of the New Royal Infirmary and a Vignette Title was promised. At the suggestion of several subscribers the proprietors have been induced, at additional expense, to substitute a Plan of the Town, which they trust will be found useful as a street guide as far as its necessarily limited scale would admit of particulars being given.

BRIEF SKETCH OF THE HISTORY OF DUNDEE.

It is not designed in the present sketch to furnish anything like a complete history of the town, or explore the regions of antiquarian lore for minute relation of its ancient origin, title, or importance. It will suffice, in the limited space at our disposal, that we present an outline of such generally acknowledged historical facts and incidents as will afford a pretty accurate idea of its ancient greatness and importance, as a fortified town in the times of chivalry and feudalism, and of its recent rapid rise into a large manufacturing town and flourishing seaport.

ORIGIN.

Early Scottish history is involved in much obscurity ; the tyrannical Edward I. of England, of cruel memory, in his ferocious attempts to reduce the people of Scotland to a condition of serfdom, and their country to an English province, having done all in his power to destroy its ancient records, in the vain hope that he would thereby for ever obliterate its nationality and independence. In this national calamity Dundee was also a sufferer ; that monarch having three times laid waste the town, and destroyed every vestige of writing he could lay his hands upon. There is enough, however, of general and local history extant to show that Dundee is one of the most ancient towns of Scotland, and that it has occupied a prominent position in the annals of our country from the earliest times. Some ancient historians, more conspicuous for indulgence in fiction than their regard for facts, tell us, that the town was a place of importance and strength at the period (the first century) when Agricola brought the Roman eagles into our country. We are disposed, however, to regard this as purely fanciful ; at least there is no evidence to show that the Roman consul and general ever crossed the Forth and Clyde, between which he built his famous wall, far less the Tay. They also speak of the Castle of Dundee being a stronghold and residence of Donald I, but with not much more probability. It seems pretty evident, however, that it is the place referred to by Henry Maule of Melgund, in his

"History of the Picts," as the town of Alectum; in the vicinity of which a battle was fought between the Scots and the Picts in the year 834; in which the former were defeated, and Alpin their king taken prisoner and beheaded. On that occasion the Picts, under General Brudas, were encamped on the Tothil Brow, in the parish of Strathmartine, and the Scots occupied the Law. The battle took place at Pitalpey or Pitalpin (grave of Alpin), where, in their fight, the Scots left the remains of their king; a small mount, designated King's Cross, marking the place where their standard was fixed. Pitalpey is close by the road from this to Coupar Angus, about three miles from that place. On the summit of the Law are the remains of a fortified post—the ditch and fosses being still visible. At this early period the town must have been a place of considerable extent, as it was capable of accommodating twenty thousand men. Whatever, then, be the precise date of its origin, which is not of paramount importance, it must have had some time to grow prior to the beginning of the ninth century. The town is next mentioned as the place where Malcolm II. refreshed his troops, previous to the battle of Barrie, near Carnoustie, in the year 1010, when Sweyn, king of Denmark, having reduced England to his sway, made his second attempt to reduce Scotland also. The town was erected into a royal burgh in 1165, having received its first charter from William I. (the Lion), though it enjoyed many privileges before this. William afterwards gave it as a patrimony, along with other titles, to his brother David, Earl of Huntingdon. Its privileges were subsequently enlarged by Alexander III, confirmed by Robert I. (the Bruce), and extended by David II, who made the town and liberties an independent Sherifffdom, subject only to the Chamberlain of the Kingdom. Since these periods, like other places, it has undergone a great variety of changes, favourable and the contrary, before reaching its present condition.

N A M E.

The ancient name of the town, as we have already noticed, seems to have been Alectum, "beautiful;" and from time immemorial it has been termed Aillach, or Aillag by the Gael, which, in their tongue, signifies "pleasant" or "beautiful." And, certainly, as viewed from the Fife side of the Tay, the town presents, on a clear day, a very beautiful and picturesque appearance. Lying in the bosom of a delightful bay, with its harbour and shipping in the foreground, its massive tower and numerous steeples, and its houses rising behind in terrace-like order, and stretching to a considerable distance on either hand, with the Law rising rapidly in the centre, to the height of 525 feet above the level of the sea, green to the summit—resembling very much the far-famed bay, harbour, and town of Naples—it may well deserve the appellation of “Bonnie Dundee” accorded to it in modern song. We fear, however, that much of this beauty will disappear, and a feeling of disappointment seize the visitor, when he crosses the river and enters the town. Although, in recent years, considerable improvement has been effected in the streets and buildings, many of which are now uniform and elegant; still the long neglect of order in the buildings, and the width of the streets, which seem to have sprung up, as if by accident, along the old narrow path-ways; as also the great want of proper sewerage, render a large portion of the town neither pleasant to the eye, nor fitted to convey to the visitor an elevated conception of its sanatory properties. Respecting the origin or derivation of the present name there exists amongst antiquarians and philologists some diversity of opinion. It seems, however, to have taken the place of the ancient Pictish or Roman name at a very early period. The most commonly received, and we think the best supported, is, Donum Dei (gift of God) corrupted to Don Dei, hence, after various changes, Dundee. This name originated in the following circumstance:—David, Earl of Huntingdon, brother of William III., joined Richard I. of England in the third crusade against the Saracens for the possession of the Holy Land, and the expedition proving unsuccessful, the prince, after undergoing a variety of trials and vicissitudes in the east, was nearly shipwrecked on the coast of Norway on his voyage homewards. During the storm, as was common in that superstitious age, he vowed that, if preserved, he would build a church to the “holy virgin.” It is recorded, that entering the Tay for refuge, the first land he saw was the Law; and in commemoration of, and gratitude for, his deliverance and safe landing, he proceeded, about 1190, in fulfilment of his vow, to build a magnificent church and tower (the Old Steeple), which he dedicated to St Mary. King William, on learning of the safe arrival of his brother, for whom he had a great affection, hastened to the place and gave him a grant of the town, then of considerable size and importance; as also other honours and immunities, including the Earldoms of Garioch and Lennox, the Lordship of Strathbogie, with the lands of Inverbervie, Lindores, Longforgan, and Inchmartine. Religious processions also took place in celebration of the event. Whether the name of the town was formally changed in commemoration of the event, or wore in gradually, must remain a matter of conjecture. But that this was the origin of the name seems highly probable. The supposition of Buchanan, for which he assigns no reason, that it was Duntaw (explained by some to mean Dun, rocky hill, and Taw for Tay), is more ingenious than well supported. The titles Dondè, Dundy, and Dondie, and others, appearing in various documents, the latter, up till near the beginning of the last century, are easily accounted for in the different modes of spelling in use in the various periods. We may mention, that the derivation given is that supported by the learned Boece, a native of the town, who lived in the end of the fifteenth century.

CASTLE.

Of the ancient town, with its fortress and palace or regal residence, very little now remains, except the Old Tower or Steeple and some fragments of ruins, in different parts of the town, as monuments of its former strength and greatness. The Castle, now completely demolished, stood on a rocky prominence called Castlehill, near the head of the present Castle Street, and in its glory it overshadowed the river, which lay at its feet, prior to the erection of any of the present harbour works. A portion of the ruins and of the vast rock on which stood the Castle were cleared away for the erection of Castle Street, which now forms a spacious and direct communication with the harbours. On another part of the Castlehill near the head of Castle Street, east side, and facing the head of Seagate, is being erected a handsome place of worship for St Paul's Episcopal Congregation, now worshipping in Castle Street, above the Dundee Bank. When completed, with its elegant and massive spire, it will be a great ornament to this part of the town, as it stands on a rising ground, and though nearly surrounded with houses, will command observation from several points. In the erection of this chapel on the site of the old castle, we have a pleasing illustration of the peaceful days in which we live, and, we trust, an indication of the approach of the still happier period when it shall be said of this, as of all other nations—

“ They hang the trumpet in the hall,
And study war no more,”

With regard to the Castle, however, we may remark, that it would appear from references to it in history, to have been a strong fortification in its day, and to have had its full share of the hot work of former troublesome times in defending its citizens and our country from the intrusions of foreign invaders, and securing for us that independence which has long been our national glory; and those rights and liberties under which we now enjoy the inestimable blessings of peace and prosperity. Here did our heroic countrymen, Sir William Wallace and King Robert Bruce, nobly defend their country's cause and liberties against the overpowering hosts and treacheries of the ambitious and savage Edward and his servile minions; and thus were not only successful in maintaining the independence and liberties of their own country, but in extending to England herself, and her nobles and people, many rights and privileges they would not, at least for a long time, have enjoyed, had their ambitious sovereign succeeded in conquering Scotland and placing the whole island under his sway.

PALACES, HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT, ETC.

The ancient palace, which must have been a building, or, with the Houses of Parliament, &c., a series of buildings, of considerable extent, occupied the area betwixt Crichton Street and Union Street; several remains and names in that locality still point out its site. This ancient pile must also, like the Castle, have stood on the very margin of the Tay, and was beautifully situated in the bosom of the bay, at a convenient distance from, and probably in direct communication with, the fortress. Whitehall, a low dirty court in this vicinity, hands down the name of at least a portion of the old regal residences, and in this close, as well as in St Margaret's Close, north side of Fish Street, &c., there are many portions of the remains of the ancient edifice. Here Parliaments, Convocations, and General Assemblies were frequently held, and several of the Scottish sovereigns and nobles resided at different periods. In the court called Whitehall there existed till recently the remains of a strong vaulted building in which Queen Mary, James VI, and Charles II, his grandson, have resided. On the lintel of a door here there is inscribed, "TENDIT . ACERRIMA . VERTOS;" and above the lintel of a door, nearer the top of the court, are placed the royal achievement of Scotland, along with an escutcheon uncharged, parted by a cross, dated 1588, with the inscription, "OBAY . ZE . KING . KING . IAMIS . 6 . IN DE—— the remainder of the word being broken off; also in the front of a house at the top of the court. were the coat-armour of Charles II., Scotland, England, France, and Ireland, quarterly, with "GOD SAVE THE KING, O.R. 1660." In a wall recently rebuilt at the head of the same close, is a piece of ancient sculpture exhibiting emblems of the tree of life, surmounted by an angel, its trunk being entwined by a serpent, with our progenitors, Adam and Eve on either side, the latter having an apple in her hand. Here also met the Convention of Royal Burghs in 1692; and it is said that Charles lodged in this house previous to the battle of Worcester. Prior to the formation of Union Street, above twenty-five years ago, there stood, on what is now the head of it, a large house which once belonged to the Earls of Crawford, in which Archibald, Earl of Argus, better known by the soubriquet of "Bell-the-cat," was married to Lady Marie Crawford, with great pomp and splendour. On the west side of the Greenmarket, and filling the space between Butcher Row and Fish Street, is a large massive old-fashioned building with circular towers at three of its corners, and the ground floor sunk some feet below the level of the street. It seems very ancient in its dimensions and style, but there is no clue that we know of to its early history. It is said that in 1808, a mason, whilst engaged in repairing some of its chimney tops, was fortunate enough to fall upon a treasure—consisting of nearly two hundred pieces of silver coin embedded among the mortar. The coins were chiefly of the reigns of James II. and Charles I., and were probably concealed there by some frugal burgess, before the siege of the town in 1651; during which he may have been killed, and his treasure left buried for ages. Until little more than half a century ago this old building was used as the Custom-House of the town, and in it was born Admiral Charles, first Lord Burnham, in 1730; his father, Robert Middleton, being then, and for some time after, Collector of Customs for the Lords of the Treasury. To the north of the Palace was a regal residence of Margaret, Queen of Malcolm III, which also occupied a considerable area of ground; and which was subsequently granted by the crown to an ancestor of the Dukes of Argyll, but more recently to the Earls of Angus. Connected with this house was a mint, at which coins were struck in the reign of Robert III. When the old buildings were cleared away and the rocks excavated in 1831, for the formation of Reform Street, the remains of this ancient mint, with its crucible and apparatus, were discovered and removed. The only remnant left us of this accompaniment of royalty, is the name handed down to us of the "Mint Close," west of said new street. A short distance to the north-west of this, near to what is now Barrack Street, originally Friar's Vennel, afterwards Burial Wynd, stood a Convent of Grey Franciscan Friars, erected about the year 1260 by Dovergilla, daughter of Allan, Earl of Galloway, grand-daughter of David, Earl of Huntingdon, and mother of John Baliol. Near to it was a Nunnery of Grey Sisters or Nuns of St Clair, a large building which still remains being the only remnant of these religious houses extant. It is situated at the head of Methodist Close, the Wesleyans having used the chapelry of it as a place of worship on their first establishment in the town. It now belongs to the Hammermen Incorporation, and is still used as a place of worship on Sabbath by a small body, and a school-room and hall for meetings during the week. There are other vaulted and arched ruins remaining; which show that the buildings had been extensive and substantial. These monastic establishments shared the fate which overtook all similar institutions at the reformation, in which the town took a prominent part, and were almost entirely demolished—all, indeed, except the chapel of the Nunnery. The beautiful and accomplished, though unfortunate Mary, Queen of Scots, subsequently bestowed the site upon the community, with the garden and orchard attached, which were designated the “Queen’s Donation.” Mary was a considerable benefactress of the town, which she visited with her consort, Henry Darnley, in 1565. The grounds thus bestowed were immediately laid out and used as a burying-ground, a great desideratum at the time; the existing one—on the site of the present Town Buildings in High Street—being very confined and over-crowded. Though used as a peaceful resting-place for the dead, the grounds seem to have served also as a resort of the living for the purposes of recreation and gossip; as appears from the name of “the Houff” or place of resort, by which it was long known, and by which it was designated in an act of the Head Court, entitled an “Act anent the Houff Dykes.” It is now known as the Old Burying-Ground at Meadowside, extending from the head of Reform Street to the head of Barrack Street. It is still resorted to by many, especially on Sabbath, who pass the hours of interval in “meditations among the tombs,” and poring over the numerous ancient memorials of departed citizens with which it abounds.

OLD TOWER OR STEEPLE.

The venerable tower or steeple in Nethergate, whose origin and erection have already been noticed, is the only entire edifice extant, connecting our ancient with our modern town, and is amongst the most ancient piles in our country; having withstood the wasting energies of time during the long period of seven hundred years. It is a plain but massive structure, 156 feet in height, and yet comparatively in a good state of preservation. The church of St Mary’s, built at the same time, was in little more than a century (1295) buried to the ground by Edward I. under circumstances of great atrocity. John Baliol, whose pretensions to the Scottish crown he preferred to those of Robert Bruce, the third in descent from the Earl of Huntingdon, having offended that monarch, he entered Scotland in the most savage manner, destroying life and property with the most relentless fury. On his approach to this town the inhabitants fled with their most valuable property to the church, expecting an asylum within its sacred precincts. They had, however, miscalculated their host and their refuge. He ordered the building to be set on fire; and it was wholly consumed amid the frantic shrieks of the sufferers, the roaring of burning timber, and the wailing of the inhabitants without. Since that period the edifice has undergone various changes which may yet fall to be noticed—the Old Steeple or Tower being the only remnant of the original. At the west front is an old decayed column surmounted with a rude unicorn much defaced, with the inscription, “Dei Donum,” above and below the arms, bearing date 1386 or 1586; which, we presume, must commemorate some subsequent renewal of, or addition to, the building. We may be excused for here alluding to a most unseemly excrescence that is permitted to luxuriate on the top of the venerable and lofty tower, in the shape of a small house with slated roof, evidently a modern innovation, which frightfully destroys the whole symmetry and characteristic of the ancient structure. We trust the civic authorities will take early steps to have this plebian erection entirely removed and the stately edifice restored to its pristine grandeur. We would also take liberty to suggest the propriety of putting the lower interior of the edifice into a better condition than it is at present; occupied as it is as lumber-room for “table seats,” the “engine of death,” and other moveable civic property, and is infested by flocks of pigeons, which keep it in a very filthy state. Were another receptacle found for the property, the place cleaned, and the windows repaired, it might be put to a more honourable use; and, along with the view from its top, add to the few attractions our town possesses to the citizens and visitors.

FORTIFICATIONS.

Besides the Castle, the town had at one time its walls and gates for defence and protection; though these do not seem to have been of very ancient date. They appear to have been in a very imperfect condition until the year 1547, when the English invaded Scotland, instigated by their deceased monarch, Henry VIII., in consequence of the unfavourable termination of his negotiations with the Scottish Court, with a view to the marriage of his son Edward, Prince of Wales, with the infant

Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots. After the battle of Pinkie the English, elated with their victory, sent forward a strong detachment northward to Dundee. Having secured the Castle of Broughty, and built that of Balgillo on the adjacent hill, they sent a strong force into this town, which they easily reduced; the people having no other defence than the walls of their houses. During a few days occupation of the town they commenced the erection of new fortifications; but Henry of France, the ancient ally of the Scottish Crown, having previously sent over a large force of French and German auxiliaries, a detachment under M. d'Esse, marched to the succour of the inhabitants. At their approach, the English set the town on fire and retired to Broughty and Balgillo; from which they were soon after driven by the united strength of the citizens of Dundee and neighbouring gentlemen and the French allies; the latter of whom proceeded to complete the fortifications begun by the English. Of these walls and gates nothing now remains except the ruin now standing called the Cowgate Port. The names of the gates, however, are still preserved in the names of the streets by which they were approached—the Nethergate, anciently called the Fluckergate; the Overgate, formerly called the Argylegate; the Seagate, Cowgate, Wellgate, and Murraygate. It has been supposed that it was from the gate, the ruins of which still remain, that the amiable George Wishart preached during the epidemic or “plague” with which the town was visited in 1544. It has been ascertained, however, beyond doubt, that the gate from which the devoted martyr discoursed to the people stood west from this, near Sugar-house Wynd, the present port not having been built till two years after his death. Had this been in reality the veritable “Port” from which the noble martyr administered consolation to the sick and dying, and instruction to the ignorant, it might have afforded a strong reason for its preservation. As it has no more connection with Wishart than Luther or Calvin, we think its removal, as an unseemly obstruction to a public thoroughfare, could do no violence to our organs of veneration, or our respect for the benefactor of our town and country.

HISTORICAL INCIDENTS.

As one of the most ancient towns and garrisons of the country, and at some periods, second only, if not equal in size and importance to the Scottish capital, Dundee has occupied a prominent position in national affairs, besides the importance which often attached to its own local proceedings. Leaving out of view the legend of its Castle being a place of remarkable strength in the reign of Donald I., which, if there was such a king, is said to have taken place in the beginning of the third century, the town certainly did some service in the days of Alpine, King of the Scots, in the early part of the ninth century; and in the days of the Malcolms II. and III., between 1010 and 1098, often aided the country in providing assistance and refuge to the Scottish armies in their struggles against the repeated invasion of the Danes and the northern nations. It seems then to have been too strong for the invading forces to reduce, as, in all their movements between Montrose and Perth by the coast, they appear to have left it untouched. The Danish monarch having fitted out two fleets, the one in Norway and the other in England, placed both under the command of Canute, one of his ablest officers, who, after being repulsed from the Tay, effected a landing at Lunan Bay, burned to the ground the town and castle of Brechin, and then proceeding along the country towards Panbride, plundering and burning everywhere, he pitched his camp at Carnoustie; Malcolm taking up his position at Barrie. The battle fought was most sanguinary on the part of the Danes; but resulted in their overthrow, and the triumph of the Scottish army and Scottish independence, as also the safety of this town, into which the Norsemen never were able to penetrate. Subsequently, about the year 1070, Malcolm III, after having ascended the throne, usurped for a time by Macbeth, showed his gratitude to the town by building or improving its palace, and making it a royal residence, which it continued occasionally to be to the Scottish sovereigns up till the time of James VI. The marriage of Malcolm to the English princess Margaret, sister of Edgar, Earl of Oxford, about 1070, was the occasion of a palace or royal residence being erected here; although there is reason for concluding that there was one even prior to this date. It was, however, after the disputes between John Baliol and the elder Robert Bruce, regarding the succession to the Scottish crown, that it became conspicuous in history. In the great struggles for national liberty and independence in which our country was engaged under Wallace and Bruce against the Edwards of England, it had a prominent part, which its strong fortress both fitted it for and exposed it to. It is stated by some historians that Wallace resided in this town in early life, which probably was the case. When a youth, he was placed under the guardianship of his uncle, a wealthy ecclesiastic at Dunipace in Stirlingshire, who instilled into his youthful mind those sentiments of heroism and love of liberty which influenced his conduct, and impelled him to those deeds of magnanimity and courage which marked his whole life. It is said that he was removed from Dunipace to the Public Seminaries of Dundee, where he contracted a friendship with John Blair, who afterwards became his chaplain, and who, being an eye-witness of most of his actions, wrote an account of them in Latin; which, however, has not come down to us; though Blind Harry makes a liberal use of it in his celebrated metrical history of the hero. The blind historian relates a story of an encounter which Wallace had at this early period of his life with a youthful son of Selby the English Governor of the Castle, who had insulted him about his country. In the words of the chronicler:—

“ Fast by the collar Wallace couth hym ta;
 Under hys hand ye knyff he bradit out,
 For all hys men yat semblyt hym about;
 Bot help himself, he wist of no remede,
 Without reskew he stykyt hym to dede.
 Ye squier fell—of him yar was na mair.”

For his temerity the victor had to fly to the fastnesses of his country and was outlawed, which animated him with an unconquerable enmity to the English ever after, and led him to seek the deliverance of his country from their grasp. Be that as it may, this alleged exploit rests entirely upon the authority of Henry; and Bower, the continuator of Fordun, an excellent authority, asserts that the hostility of Wallace to the English arose from his despair at seeing his relations and countrymen in misery and servitude under their oppression. Of course the tradition respecting a stone in the possession of a family in the village of Longforan, on which the young hero is said to have rested in his flight to the Castle of Kilspindie in the Carse, founded on the story, may only be a piece of pretty romance. Certainly the first incident properly authenticated which gave shape and character to his subsequent career happened at Lanark in 1297. When residing there with his wife, to whom he was devotedly attached, in one of his strolls he met some Englishmen who insultingly reproached him for the gaudiness of his dress, contrasted with the forlorn condition of his country. This roused him to an attack which resulted in bloodshed, and he fled to his house pursued by his assailants. Assisted by his wife he escaped to the Cartlane Craggs at the Falls of Clyde. Hislop or Hazlerigg, the English Sheriff, enraged at the violence done to his countrymen, dispatched an armed party, who burned his house, and put his wife and servants to death. Receiving notice of this brutality he collected a small body of his friends, and, returning to Lanark the same night, avenged the death of his wife by the complete slaughter of her murderers. Thus bereft of his home and its endearments, and driven to extremities, he resolved to devote himself to the arduous task of delivering his country from the yoke of her oppressors, became the leader of his countrymen, and soon a most formidable opponent of the English invader and his minions. Marching on the Castle of Scone he surprised Ormsby, the English Justiciary, killed many of his followers, and obtained considerable booty. Having broken in upon the west, he next marched to the north and reduced the Castles of Dunnottar, Forfar, Brechin, and Montrose; Aberdeen being deserted and set on fire, fell into his hands. The Castle of Dundee was now surrounded and assailed, with every prospect of success, when tidings of the approach on Stirling of the Earl of Surrey, and Cressingham, the English treasurer, with a large force, compelled him to desist and haste to meet the enemy. The townsmen, however, were ordered in pain of his vengeance to prosecute the siege with unabated vigour—an order doubtless with which they felt every disposition to comply; as after the battle of Stirling, on 14th September 1297, in which the English were defeated with great havoc, the detested Cressingham being killed, the Castle was conditionally surrendered to the victorious leader, and the garrison departed for England. Whilst Wallace was absent on a foraging expedition to the south, Morton, an English captain, took and garrisoned the Castle. On his return he reduced the enemy and prosecuted the siege with the utmost vigour. Morton offered to surrender on terms which were disdainfully rejected. Meanwhile Edward, having entered Scotland with a large army, determined on the complete subjugation of the kingdom. Wallace withdrew with a number of his forces to oppose him; leaving the remainder with Alexander Scrymseure to reduce the Castle, who prosecuted the siege with great ardour, and succeeded in overcoming the obstinacy of the besieged, who surrendered at discretion. Scrymseure led Morton to Perth, where Wallace sentenced him to be hanged. Having constituted Scrymseure Constable of Dundee, he ordered the Castle to be demolished, that it might no longer prove a grievance to the inhabitants, and a shelter for English tyranny and usurpation. The unhappy reverses which subsequently overtook the Scottish Champion again subjected Scotland to the relentless ravages of the tyrant, who in 1303 laid the country waste in every direction, razing its fortresses, and burning and plundering its towns—Dundee sharing in the general destruction—the Castle of Brechin, commanded by the courageous Sir Thomas Maule, being the only stronghold which resisted the impetuous invader. On his way from the north, Edward lodged one night—20th

October—in Dundee. The betrayal of Wallace by Monteith, and his cruel death, 23rd August 1305, served only to rouse the latent energies of the Scots and whet their desire for freedom; and in less than six months after this crowning act of cruelty of Edward, the whole system which his craft and violence had reared, at a vast expense of English blood and treasure, was entirely overthrown. The younger Robert Bruce now arose as the deliverer of his country, and was crowned at Scone on the 27th March 1306. After the death of Edward I. and the accession of his son, Edward II., the estates of Scotland assembled in the church of the Minorite Friars at Dundee, on the 24th February 1309, and solemnly declared Robert Bruce of Annandale now reigning, as their lawful sovereign, and engaged to defend his rights and liberties. In 1312, the Castle, again in the hands of the enemy, was strongly besieged by the Scots, and the garrison under William de Montfitchet, agreed to surrender unless relieved within a stipulated time; but Edward, receiving intelligence of the agreement, meanly and dishonourably ordered him, under the penalty of death and confiscation of his estates, to retain possession. In the same year, Sir David de Brechin, nephew of the Scottish King, was appointed Governor of Dundee in the English interest, and eight years after was convicted of conspiracy, and put to death. Prince Edward Bruce, brother of the king, made himself master of the Castle in 1313. The celebrated battle of Bannockburn in the following year, one of the greatest military achievements on record, gave King Robert Bruce the undisputed sovereignty of all Scotland. He now devoted himself sedulously to the establishment of his throne and kingdom, and the correction of all those disorders, which an incessant state of warfare had superinduced. With this view he visited several parts of the country, and in the same year resided in this town, where he endeared himself by many acts of courtesy and kindness, the best prerogatives of royalty. While here, he bestowed the keeping of the forest of Stocket on the burgh of Aberdeen, the charter of which is dated at Dundee, 24th October 1314. Eight years after, whilst he was on a visit to the Abbey of Arbroath, the burgesses of Dundee, finding that every record of the privileges granted to them by former sovereigns had been destroyed by the English, applied to him to have them recognized and confirmed, whereupon he issued a commission, appointing his Chancellor, Bernard, Abbot of Arbroath, and Chamberlain Alexander Fraser, his lieutenants for these purposes. The two Commissioners having repaired to Dundee, and examined witnesses on oath, found full evidence that the town had enjoyed the same liberties of buying and selling by land or sea with those of the most distinguished towns in Scotland. On this recognition, the King granted an infeftment and charter, dated at Edinburgh, in the twenty-second year of his reign. He seems also to have resided here in 1326, as a commission appointing Thomas Randolph, Earl of Moray, Lord of Walls, Annan, and Man; Dr James Dun, Archdeacon of St Andrews; Dr Adam Murray; and Walter Tyntham, Canon of Glasgow, ambassadors, with Charles the Fair, the ancient league between Scotland and France, is dated at Dundee, 20th April in that year. The town had also the honour, along with Edinburgh, Perth, and Aberdeen, of being security for the performance of national treaties. In 1354, all these towns became surety for the payment of ninety thousand merks Sterling for the ransom of David II., son of King Robert Bruce, who had been taken within the English territory, with his forces, during war between the countries; for which the King evinced his gratitude to the citizens of Dundee by giving them a new charter, confirming all their former privileges, and conferring many others, including the erection of the town and royalty into a sherifffdom, independent of the authority of the Sheriff of Angus; which privilege was confirmed in 1642 by the great charter of Charles I. Whilst the profusion of privileges thus enjoyed by the town shows the estimation in which it was held at this early period by our ancient sovereigns, it furnished for some time a source of contention and discord between the burgesses and the hereditary Constables, the Scrymseoures of Craigie; which, however, were amicably arranged in 1389, by the provost, bailies, and burgesses, with Sir James Scrymseoure, who ceded certain rights claimed by the Constables in criminal matters which were obnoxious to the former.

Lindsay of Pitscottie, in his Chronicles, relates a curious incident which happened about this time (1440) of "ane braggant tane with his hail familie, quho hauntet ane place in Angus. This mischievous man had an execrable fashion to tak all young men, and children aither, and eat thame, and the younger they war esteemed them more tender and delicious. For the quhilk caus and dampnable abuse, he with his wayff and bairnis were all burnt, except ane young wench of ane year old, wha was saiffed, and brought to Dundie, quhair shoe was broucht up and fostered, and quhan shoe cam to anes vomane's yeires, shoe was condemned, and burnt quick for that cryme." She was burned at the market cross, before the old town-house, then in the Seagate, at the foot of Peter Street. It is stated, that on her way to execution she said to the multitude, "Quairfoir chyd yea me, so as if I had committed ane vnworthie act? Give me credence and trow me, if yea had experience of eating men and vomenis flesh, yea wold think it so delicious that yea would nevir forbeare it agane." We may here mention, that from this period the town, like others in the kingdom, was infested by those vagabonds called gipsies, until, in June 1541, proclamation was made at the market-cross, by the provost and bailies, commanding and charging them "to depart furth of this realme, with their wifis, barnis, and compancis, within xxx dayis after thai be chargit therto, vnder the pane of deid." The proclamation was by order of the Lords of Secret Council, dated 6th June.

The Scottish Reformation from Popery began to dawn in the early part of the sixteenth century, and its cause was early and warmly espoused by the people of Dundee. The illustrious George Wishart, brother of the Laird of Pitarrow, in the county of Mearns, having studied at Bennet College, Cambridge, and visited Germany, where he had embraced the doctrines of Luther, returned to his native country in 1544, and took up his residence at Montrose, where he had formerly taught a school, attracting considerable notice by his preaching and many excellent virtues. Soon after, he removed to this town, and commenced delivering public lectures on the Epistle to the Romans, which drew together large concourses of the people, at which the Romish priesthood were sorely galled, and greatly alarmed for the stability of the system of superstition and error they had so fondly cherished. His piety, his dauntless zeal, and persuasive eloquence, commanded attention wherever he appeared; and had it not been for the many influential friends who thronged around him, he would soon have become the victim of Popish rage and malevolence. They ultimately prevailed upon Robert Mill, one of the magistrates, who had formerly professed and suffered for the reform cause, to give him a charge to leave the town. The charge was given one day as Wishart descended from preaching, on which he replied, "God is my witness, that I never minded your trouble but your comfort; yea, your trouble is more grievous to me than it is unto yourselves; but sure I am, to reject the word of God, and drive away his messenger, is not the way to save you from trouble, but to bring you into it: When I am gone, God will send you messengers, who will not be afraid of either burning or banishment. I have, at the hazard of my life, remained among you preaching the word of salvation; and now, since you yourselves refuse me, I must leave my innocence to be declared by God. If it be long well with you I am not led by the Spirit of Truth ; and if unexpected trouble come upon you, remember this is the cause, and turn to God by repentance, for he is merciful." The Earl Mareschal and other noblemen, who were his hearers, pleaded with him to go with them to the North ; but he excused himself and departed for the West ; where he arrived, and preached with great acceptance, yet much opposition, in Ayr, Mauchline, and other places in the district of Kyle, in Ayrshire. He was thus engaged for about a month, when, on being informed that an epidemic, or the "plague," as it was then termed, had broken out in this town on the fourth day after he left, he returned in deep sorrow and anxiety, and immediately commenced ministering to the temporal and spiritual necessities of the people. In preaching, he usually resorted to the east gate, in the Cowgate, having the infected persons without and the healthy within. Here he preached the day after his arrival, choosing for his text, Psalm cvii, 20 : " He sent his word and healed them, and delivered them from their destruction," by which the people were greatly comforted. Meantime he was narrowly watched by his implacable enemy, Cardinal Beaton, who hired one of his priests, Sir John Wighton, to assassinate him. The wily ecclesiastic repaired for the purpose to the place where his intended victim preached, with a dagger concealed under his robe or gown, expecting to effect his design, and escape among the crowd. On descending, Wishart, looking stedfastly at the priest, charged him with his design, and seizing him by the hand drew the instrument from him. The priest acknowledged his guilt, and a tumult ensued. The infected rushed through the gate, and would have sacrificed the criminal to their indignation had not Wishart interposed, and, by throwing himself over his body, screened him from the thrusts that were levelled at him, exposing his own body to the injuries intended for the man who sought his life. The end, however, of the martyr was at hand. Apprehended at Ormiston by the treacherous Earl of Bothwell, he was carried to Edinburgh, thence to St Andrews, and given over to the power of the Cardinal. On the 28th February 1546, he was summoned before an illegal tribunal of bishops and superior clergy, the civil power having declined to interfere, and after a short mock trial he was condemned to death, and next day he was burned at the stake in the Castle-yard. The windows of the fore tower of the Castle, overlooking the place of execution, were overhung with tapestry for the occasion, and laid with rich cushions for the ease and comfort of the Cardinal and prelates, from which they feasted their eyes on the painful spectacle. Thus died this noble witness for the truth, who has left a savour of his name in this town and elsewhere, that will make it not soon forgotten. Another auxiliary of the reform cause, a native of this town, was James Wedderburne, brother of John, Vicar of Dundee, under the monks of Lindores, who wrote two dramas, in which he exposed with cutting severity the corruptions of Christianity by Popery, and the corrupt and fraudulent practices of the clergy. The one was a comedy, the subject of which was Dionysius the tyrant, the other a tragedy on the beheading of John the Baptist. Both were performed here about the year 1540, and contributed much to the alienation of the minds of the people from the established faith and hierarchy, and provoked the rage of the latter against the Reformers. Besides these dramas, the Wedderburnes, three brothers, who were all possessed of poetic gifts, wrote "Gude and godlie ballits," containing bitter satires on the clergy, which became popular among the people and of ready application. Rude as these compositions might seem to modern taste, they were not without merit, and were productive of the most powerful and salutary effects at the time,—fully justifying the sentiment, uttered by Fletcher of Saltoun in the succeeding century, "Give me the making of a people's songs, and I will give you the making of their laws." For the writing of these "Gude and godlie ballits," the Wedderburnes were subjected to much persecution. The second brother, abjuring the established faith, had to flee to Germany, and the third, John, relinquishing the vicarage of Dundee, went to Paris, where he remained in company with many of the most distinguished Reformers till the death of Cardinal Beaton, Calderwood says, "He turned the tunes and tenor of many profane ballads into godly songs and hymns, which were called the "Psalms of Dundee," whereby he stirred up the affections of many. About this time (the death of Beaton), the town being threatened with an assault by the English forces, under the Duke of Somerset, on the order of the Lords of Secret Council, three hundred infantry were raised for its defence, and equipped at the expense of the superior clergy and the inhabitants, at a cost of L.1200, with the addition of a hundred horsemen, furnished by the shires of Perth, Angus, and Mearns. In terms of the same order, a hundred men were raised in town to attend the Laird of Dun, who, with the townspeople, were appointed to keep watch and ward against the invaders. A detachment was also placed under the Provost, James Hallyburton, who united his force with the troops of Captain Learment for repressing the encroachments of the enemy. Notwithstanding this preparation, and that the town at this time is represented as "one of the most beautiful, rich, and populous of the kingdom (Scotland), and though it were easy to make it impregnable," yet so defenceless was its condition in respect to fortifications, that the English forces entered from Balgillo and Broughty without opposition. Their occupancy of the town, however, was of short duration. Whilst engaged in the erection of fortifications, they were surprised by the approach of M. D'Esse, at the head of the French and German auxiliaries, together with the Scottish forces, and, after rifling and setting fire to the town, they retired without loss. The French now completed the fortifications, and, supported by the citizens and the neighbouring gentlemen, placed the town in a state of safety. Meanwhile the principles of the Reformation were rapidly spreading in the community, and neither the death of Wishart, nor the commotions they had undergone, had damped the zeal and courage of its promoters. Paul Methven, a native of the town, now began fearlessly to preach the doctrines of the New Testament with great success, and became one of the most distinguished champions of the Reformation. The priesthood first tried to silence and destroy him, then summoned him before their tribunals, disregarding which, sentence of banishment was pronounced against him, and proclamation made forbidding any one to receive or encourage him under pains and penalties. These threats were equally disregarded, and the people continued to crowd to his sermons whenever he preached. Thus foiled and irritated, the priesthood prevailed upon the Queen Regent, Mary of Guise, to order his arrest; but Provost Hallyburton, to whom the order was forwarded, instead of acting upon it, gave Methven private notice of its peremptory nature, and, not being able to guarantee his safety, advised him to take measures for his own security, which he did by leaving the town. A decree of the Queen issued at this time, commanding the lieges to celebrate Easter according to the established form, having been disregarded, she assembled her forces to compel obedience, and sent a body of troops into Fife to assail the Reformers then assembled in St Andrews, hoping to secure them, and crush at once the new faith and its supporters. The Reformers, apprized of the Regent's intentions, removed to Cupar, where they were joined by a numerous body of the citizens of Dundee, accompanied by their zealous and active Provost, James Hallyburton. The Queen Regent, informed of the numbers and formidable position of her opponents, not wishing to hazard a trial of strength, though her well-disciplined army, including many French soldiers, was equal in numbers, proposed a truce of eight days, till commissioners should meet and settle grievances on both sides, which was agreed to. As no commissioners were appointed by her, and having no faith in her promises, the Reformers resolved to retain their arms, and prosecute the warfare into which they had been driven, to a final issue. They therefore marched toward Perth, for the purpose of relieving their brethren there from the oppression of John Charteris of Kinfauns, the Popish Provost, who had succeeded in depriving the Congregational Provost of the office. After a vigorous siege and attack, in which the detachment from this town bravely signalized themselves, the town was taken, and the popular Provost reinstated in his office and authority. The Dundee detachment, elated with their achievements, proceeded on the following day to Scone, when one of their number, in violation of express stipulations, was run through the body with a rapier, by a son of Patrick Hepburn, Bishop of Moray, and Superior of the Abbey. This so enraged them that they set fire to the Palace and Abbey, which were reduced to ashes, notwithstanding the efforts of Lord Ruthven and other leaders to save them, among whom was the distinguished John Knox, who frequently preached in Dundee after his return from Geneva. The death of the Queen Regent, on the 10th June 1560, brought a cessation of hostilities to the Reformers, and by the Act of Abolition, a confirmation of those rights and liberties for which they had so nobly struggled, and perilled their lives and all they possessed. A national thanksgiving was celebrated, and Reformed ministers were appointed in all the principal towns,—William Christison, who had been appointed minister of this town by the Lords of the Congregation, in 1558, being confirmed in his charge. So signally did this town acquit itself in the work of the Reformation, that it gained for itself the enviable distinction of being “the second Geneva.” In 1566, the year after Queen Mary’s visit to the town, fresh troubles were inflicted upon the Reformers, and Provost Hallyburton was proclaimed a rebel for having supported the cause,—a fine of two thousand merks being imposed the same year upon the town, for its having protected some of those whom the Popish party had compelled to resort to arms in their own defence.

One or two incidents connected with the history of the town about this time may be mentioned. When the Earl of Bothwell, Mary’s third husband, became buccaneer on the high seas, the Earl of Murray ordered a fleet to be fitted out and despatched in pursuit of him. This port sent three vessels, the James, the Primrose, and the Robert, which formed the principal part of the armament. The town a few years after, by timely preparation, narrowly escaped an unfriendly visit from Adam Gordon of Auchindown, commander-in-chief of the Earl of Huntly, in the famous contest of the two noble families of Gordon and Forbes. Shortly after, it was also noted for the shelter it gave to two conspicuous characters—the celebrated Andrew Melville, the successor of Knox, who had rendered himself obnoxious by signing the remonstrance of the Church, in the presence of James VI, at Perth; and the no less famous Earl of Gowrie, who also incurred the same royal displeasure for his participation in what was designated the “raid of Ruthven.” Both sought an asylum here till they found greater security elsewhere. In 1580, the General Assembly of the Church met in this town, at which a resolution was passed, declaring that “the office of Bishop, as it was then used and understood, had neither foundation nor warrant in the word of God;” and ordaining that “all persons, whether presented to that office, or that should be presented at any time hereafter, should be required to resign the same, as an office to which they are not called of God.” Eight years after, the town sustained the severe loss of its active Provost, James Hallyburton, and the cause of truth a sincere and devoted friend, who died in the seventieth year of his age, after having held the office of chief magistrate for thirty years. His character is summed up in the inscription on his tomb: “Provost of Dundee, defender of his country, protector of the orphan, and a son of the Church of Christ.” The General Assemblies of the Church were held here in May 1597, and March 1598, at both of which important business was transacted, especially what is understood to be the enactment of the regulated form of Presbyterian representation, still in force in the established Church. A somewhat curious story is told of the people of this town in connexion with what was termed the “Gowrie Conspiracy,” which occurred at Gowrie House, the seat of the Earl of Gowrie, the Provost of Perth, on the 5th August 1600. When the people of Dundee heard of the transaction, it is said, they set out in great numbers to assist the King (James VI.), or avenge his alleged murder. They were met, however, a few miles from the scene, by the people of Perth, assuring them that the King was perfectly safe, and prohibiting them from entering the town. The lieges of Dundee seem to have got but little credit for this display of their loyalty, their Perth neighbours having circulated the insinuation, that their anxiety about the King was a mere pretence, and that the true object of their visit was rapine and plunder.

The signing of the Solemn League and Covenant by the people of this town was the occasion of bringing again upon them the awful visitation of fire and sword. No one was more enthusiastic in supporting the Covenant than the great Earl of Montrose, as he was designated. He soon, however, from mortified pride, it is feared, at not being appointed its leader, became its most inveterate opponent, and espoused the Royal cause. Obtaining a commission and troops from his master, he went forth butchering, burning, and wasting all around. On the 5th of April 1645, he laid siege to this town, with a force of six hundred infantry and a hundred and fifty horsemen. The inhabitants defended themselves with distinguished bravery, but were at length overpowered; and Lord Gordon and Sir Allister Maccoll entered the town at the head of their troops, who plundered it right and left, set it on fire at three places on the east and north sides, and committed a series of the most brutal and sanguinary outrages. During these proceedings, Montrose occupied an eminence called Tinto Hill, near the Houff, which commanded a view of the centre of the town. To this place his scouts brought him intelligence that Baillie and Hurry were approaching with three thousand foot and eight hundred horsemen; and it was with great difficulty that he got his troops rallied and withdrawn, so flushed were they with the thoughts of their victory, and the fruits of their spoliation. Some years after, when Montrose was captured, he and his escort lodged one night in this town on their way to Edinburgh, when the inhabitants manifested great sympathy with him in his unfortunate condition. When executed and quartered at Edinburgh, one of his limbs was forwarded to the town to be placed on a pole. In 1651, the town was doomed to suffer its last and most destructive calamity. The intelligence of the execution of Charles I., at the instance of the Parliament, under Oliver Cromwell, produced quite a sensation in Scotland, and greatly altered the tone of public sentiment. They had been accustomed to exercise great freedom in disposing of their sovereigns; but the coolness with which the trial, condemnation, and execution of Charles had been accomplished, in violation of distinct stipulation, took them by surprise. Conceiving their principles of limited monarchy, and their Presbyterial Church government now in jeopardy, they were seized with an exuberance of loyalty that could not be controlled. Charles, Prince of Wales, was invited from Holland; and, arriving at Leith, proceeded to Scone, where he was crowned Charles II., on the 1st of January. In his progress through the country he visited Dundee, and, by his affable manners and princely demeanour, greatly captivated the hearts of the citizens. The magistrates advanced large sums for his use, raised a troop of horse for his service at their own expense, and presented him with a handsome camp equipage and six pieces of artillery; for all which the town was soon called upon to pay an exorbitant price in blood and treasure. The armies of the Protectorate advanced rapidly through Scotland, reducing almost every place to the sway of Parliament. In their victorious course, a division under the command of General Monk, Governor of Scotland under the Commonwealth, marched upon this town about the middle of July, and took up their position. After a siege of five or six weeks, the assault was commenced on the 26th August, and they maintained the struggle for six days,—the fortifications being of considerable strength, and the force inside equal to, if not greater than that without. The soldiers of Monk, however, were all trained veterans, and accustomed to hard warfare. Dr Gumble, chaplain of Monk, who accompanied the army, states that the General had good intelligence of the state of matters in the town by means of a boy, who was permitted by the sentinels to go over the ramparts to amuse himself with the children inside. Among other things, Monk was informed that at nine in the morning all the strangers and soldiers, with most of the inhabitants, were in the habit of breakfasting in the public-houses, and partaking of large potations of ale, so that they were pretty merry by noon,—a circumstance of which, Gumble says, Monk did not fail to avail himself, as he gave orders for the final attack one morning at the usual wassail hour, even before a detachment he had despatched to Alyth had returned. The besiegers rushed in with furious impetuosity, and the carnage that ensued was revolting in the extreme. Nearly one sixth of those found within, including the whole garrison and about two hundred women and children, making together about one thousand three hundred souls, were slaughtered without almost any resistance. A number of strangers who were present from Edinburgh, Leith, and other places, looking after their property, shared in the calamity; and many noblemen and gentlemen who had taken refuge here were carried off prisoners. On the 1st September, a few days before the battle of Worcester decided the fate of the King, the standard of the Parliament, dripping with the blood of the citizens, was waving over the town. Lumsden of Invergelly, the Governor, with a party of the garrison and inhabitants, retired from the fury of the soldiery to the Tower or Old Steeple, where they held out for three days, till their necessities compelled them to surrender at discretion, when they were all butchered in the churchyard, and the head of the Governor fixed by an iron rod on one of the abutments at the south-east corner of the Tower, where it long remained. It is stated that the iron rod referred to, which was three feet in length, was till recently in the possession of one of our citizens. Two battalions of Lord Duffus's regiment were also slaughtered in the churchyard, and another party of soldiers in the market-place. The massacre did not cease till the third day, when a child was found sucking the cold breast of its murdered mother, in the Thorter Row. The property plundered and destroyed on this memorable occasion was estimated at L.200,000, the accumulation of the successful enterprises of its merchants, and the wealth of the noblemen, gentlemen, and merchants from other places, who had placed it here for safety, as the strongest place in Scotland. All this treasure fell a prey to the rapacity of the soldiery. Whitelocke, one of the officers, writes—"Some of my men have gotten five hundred, others two hundred, and a hundred pounds a-piece; none of them but are well paid for their service;" and the whole was characterized as "the best plunder of any gotten in the wars throughout the three nations." Sixty vessels belonging to the port were loaded with the spoil to carry it to Leith; but, as Dr Gumble observes respecting it, "Ill got, soon lost," the vessels were wrecked off the bar of the Tay in sight of the town without any extraordinary storm, and the whole perished in the sea. The people of the town were greatly reflected upon for their headstrong folly in not at once coming to terms with Monk, which would have saved much treasure and human life. But the most serious charge against them is that brought by Sir James Balfour, who states that "the townsmen did no duty in their own defence, but were most of them drunk like beasts." This is also corroborated by Dr Gumble, who was an eye-witness, and is, alas! too consistent with the story of the little fellow who played upon the ramparts, and with too many of the incidents of the disgraceful affray. It is well known that it was the constant practice of the male portion of the population of all ranks to breakfast in the ale-houses down till late in the last century, notwithstanding the bitter experience of the above event. Indeed, the whole affair was characterized by the most hideous debauchery and brutality on both sides, and has left a lasting stigma on the military character of General Monk, as well as on the social habits and patriotism of our fellow-townsmen of that period. The army of Monk was soon withdrawn, leaving a garrison of English soldiers stationed in the town, who, under the rigid discipline of the Commonwealth, behaved themselves with great propriety, working at useful avocations, and many intermarriages took place between them and the daughters of the citizens, which, during a stay of eight years, aided considerably in repopulating the town after the loss it had sustained. At this time, also, the Parliament granted some measures of relief to the town, and a sum to repair the harbour, all which tended to heal the wounds inflicted by this military visit.

We have here to record another dismal coincidence in the annals of the town, connected with the witch mania, which disfigured our national escutcheon from the notable Act of James I. against "conjurat[i]on, witchcraft, and dealing with wicked spirits," to the beginning of the seventeenth century. The ignorance and superstition which was manifested in the legal murder of so many decrepid old women, was disgraceful even to the period in which it occurred, and was accompanied by no small amount of designing villany. The "pruver," or "brodder," in the district must have been a cunning scoundrel, and his knowledge of the witchmarks, three in number, a vulgar cheat for paltry gain. It appears that several of these hapless victims of superstition and cupidity had suffered here at different periods, and these sometimes in batches of severals at a time. Birrell informs us, "In my Lord Regentis (Moray) passing to the north, he causit burne certane witches at Sanctandrois; and in returning he causit burne ane uther companie of witches at Dundie." A place adjoining Guthrie Street was till lately known as the "Witch Knowe," probably where they at one time suffered. The last victim of whom anything is recorded was Grizzell Jaffray, whose trial and execution took place in the Sea-gate, about 1669. At first, the expense of prosecutions and executions under the absurd laws against witchcraft was borne by the Crown; but, becoming an excessive burden on the State, it was at last thrown upon the towns and parishes where convictions were obtained. The results of this change were most beneficial. The convictions became "fewer by degrees and beautifully less," until the laws fell into entire disuetude, and at length were removed from the statute-book by an act of George II., in 1736. Thomson, in his History of Dundee, states, that "in the course of twelve years—from 1650 to 1662—nine miserable victims suffered at the stake in the 'Playfield' of Forfar." Their trials, he says, are extant; and we give an extract from the confessions of one of the misguided creatures then accused, to shew the pitch of hallucination to which their own minds must have been driven, and as a specimen of the materials which went to make up a confession of witchcraft. One Helen Guthrie confessed, "that, at the first of these meetings (of witches), Andrew Watson, Marion Rinde, Elspat Alexander, Isobel Schyrie, and herself, went up to the kirk-wall, about the farthereast dore, and raised a young bairne unbaptised, and took several pieces thereof, at the feet and hands, part of the head, and part of the buttocks, and they made a pye thereof, that they might eate of it, that by this means they might never make a confession of their witchcraft." Respecting another meeting she confessed, that "it was at midnight when they danced together awhyle, and then went to Mary Rinde's house, and sat down together about the table, the devil being present at the head of it; and that some of them went to Jon Beinny's house, he being a brewer, and brought ale from hence, and uthers to Alex. Heigh's house, and brought acqueavitæ from hence, and thus made themselves merrie; and that the devil made much of them all, and especiallie of Marion Rinde." Of course, with abundance of "ale" and "acquavitæ," it was graceful in his Satanic Majesty to preside, and not at all unnatural that such ignorant persons, after liberal libations, should imagine themselves angel, demon, or witch, as their imaginations might suggest. But to proceed: The dark gloomy reigns and dire persecutions of Charles II., and James II. of England and VII. of Scotland, followed the military usurpation of Monk, as that had succeeded the Commonwealth. The only circumstance recorded of Dundee during this period refers to a visit of the notorious John Graham of Claverhouse, who obtained from James II. a grant of the estate of Dudhope, with the constablenesship of Dundee, and, two years after, was created Viscount of Dundee. In a dispute with the Provost and Magistrates about his jurisdictions as a judge, he determined on taking vengeance on the town; and, rallying his dependants and a body of Highland retainers, commenced his march into it. His design, however, was frustrated by Mrs Maxwell of Tealing, who, suspecting his intentions, sent forward a messenger to apprize the authorities of his approach. Enraged at this defeat, he desired his vassals to fire the Rottenrow or Hilltown, and instantly the whole suburb was in a blaze; the proprietors looking on without being able to avert the ruin that was spreading ; nor could any assistance be obtained from the town, which was also in jeopardy. The career of Claverhouse terminated with the battle of Killicrankie, on 28th June 1689. The town was next signalized in history by the zeal displayed by the Provost and Magistrates in favour of the Pretender, in 1715. On the 27th May, they issued a proclamation by tuck of drum, prohibiting the inhabitants from celebrating the anniversary of the birth-day of George I., under a penalty of forty pounds, which, however, the loyal citizens disregarded ; and these functionaries, on the following day, celebrated the anniversary of the restoration of Charles II., with the usual ceremonies. The Earl of Mar having proclaimed the Pretender King of Scotland, England, France, and Ireland, on the 6th September, Grahame of Duntrune, styling himself Lord Viscount Dundee, soon after renewed the proclamation here. Arriving at Peterhead from France, the Pretender passed through Aberdeen, and after having spent some time in meeting with his supporters in Strathmore and the Carse of Gowrie, he made a public entry into Dundee on horseback, supported right and left by the Earl of Mar, and the Earl of Marischall, with a train of about three hundred followers. On reaching High Street, he was greeted with reiterated acclamations by those who were friendly to his cause, including the Jacobite Magistrates. He lodged that night at the town residence of Stewart of Grandtully, at the head of the Seagate ; left next morning ; and on the 23rd was proclaimed at Scone, by which time his cause was regarded as quite hopeless even by his friends. On the 29th, intelligence reached his camp that the Duke of Argyll was about to march against them from Stirling. Leaving Perth, his troops proceeded to this town, thence to Arbroath, and finally to Montrose, where, on receiving intelligence of the approach of the Royal army, the Pretender embarked in a small French vessel then in the harbour, and bid adieu to Scotland for ever. When the Duke of Argyll was passing through this town in pursuit of the fugitive, he found the Provost, Magistrates, and a majority of the Council under hiding, and careful of the welfare of the burgh, and the interests of the state, issued a warrant appointing a magistracy pro tempore, till the proper time of election. Thus ended the first Stuart rebellion ; the second followed thirty years after, and was equally contemptible and unsuccessful. The adherents of the second Pretender, Charles Edward Stuart, numbering about seven hundred, commanded by Sir James Kinloch, took possession of the town on the 7th September 1745, and held it till the 14th January 1746. During this time an illumination was ordered, as a token of joy for the arrival of some aid from France, when all who did not comply had their windows broken. After the battle of Culloden, which ended the rebellion, the town returned again to obedience to the constituted authorities, under the reigning sovereign. The next event in the annals of the burgh we have to notice, is its disfranchisement in 1831, by an interlocutor of the Court of Session. The election of the Dean of Guild being contested, the votes for the two candidates were nearly equal; but Mr Alexander Kay, having a majority over his opponent, was declared duly elected, and invested with the chain of office. The Town Council, however, who had supported the other candidate, refused to accept Mr Kay, on the ground that he was only a life burgess, while his opponent was one for posterity; and they accordingly admitted the latter to the Council as Dean of Guild. An appeal was carried to the Court of Session, when their Lordships found the act of the Council illegal, and the whole election was declared null and void. On a representation, the Privy Council issued a warrant for the election of a new Council by the burgesses. An act of Parliament was soon after obtained, vesting the election of one-third of the Council annually in the burgesses. This, after it had been in operation for three years, was superseded by the Municipal Reform Act for Scotland, which came into operation in 1834. Mr Kay was returned to the Council by the burgesses, and subsequently was chosen Provost of the town.

The destruction of three of the town churches by fire, on the 3rd January 1841, was a serious calamity to the burgh, and caused considerable alarm among the citizens. The fire originated from a flue in the South Church, which spread with dreadful rapidity to the East and Cross Churches, involving the whole in one general conflagration, the Steeple Church and the Tower alone being preserved from the ravages of the devouring element. For an hour or two the scene was one of terrific grandeur, and seen at an immense distance. For some time the adjoining properties all around were in imminent danger. The loss of property was about £15,000. An insurance of £1000 on each church had been effected. The destruction of the venerable fabrics was subject of universal regret.

The last great event of public and national importance we have to record, is the auspicious visit, in September 1844, of our most gracious Sovereign, Queen Victoria, accompanied by her Royal Consort, Prince Albert, and the Princess Royal, then under four years of age. From the high satisfaction expressed by her Majesty on her first visit, two years before, to the

the highest expectations were raised that she would not be a stranger in her northern dominions; and the intelligence was received with joyous welcome that Blair Athol Castle had been selected for a short residence by the Court this year, at the close of the Session of Parliament. Much anxiety now prevailed as to the port which would be chosen for the royal landing. Among our townsmen, expectations were naturally high in favour of this port. Its claims to some distinction as an ancient royal residence, and honoured by Scottish Sovereigns, its contiguity to the royal route, and its ample facilities for a landing place, seemed all to point to it as the probable scene of the royal debarkation. The excitement, however, was speedily allayed by a communication from Sir James Grahame, Home Secretary, to the Provost (Alexander Lawson, Esq.), announcing “that her Majesty may be expected to arrive at Dundee on Tuesday night or Wednesday morning; and that her Majesty will probably land at Dundee on Wednesday morning.” All now was bustle and activity, and nothing were heard but the din of preparation for the royal reception. The civic and harbour authorities and corporate bodies were instantly on the qui vive, and arrangements on an extensive and gorgeous scale were entered upon, that the reception might be worthy of the exalted rank of the royal visitor, and creditable to the importance of the burgh and port, and the loyalty of its citizens. As all the incidents of the illustrious occasion must yet be fresh in the recollection of the inhabitants, for whom chiefly we write, we need only here record the leading features, selected from the luminous and glowing descriptions which were given at the time by our ably conducted local press: The middle quay, between King William and Earl Grey docks, was fixed upon for the royal landing. An elegant and beautiful triumphal archway was erected at its entrance, from designs by Mr Leslie, Harbour Engineer. It occupied the entire width of the quay—had a large central arch and two lesser on either side. On the centre was the royal arms, under which blazoned the word “WELCOME,” with “VICTORIA” in the dado of the parapet, and “ALBERT” in the archivolt of the centre arch; besides other appropriate insignia and decorations;—the whole surmounted with a tall flag-staff, from which floated the royal standard, made for the occasion, nearly a hundred feet high. The gates were of open work. A landing place was tastefully fitted up on the Queen’s quay: A large decked barge was covered with crimson cloth, with white hangings, connected with a flight of broad steps, also covered with crimson cloth, and, with a middle strip of velvet ascending to the quay, where the reception was to take place. Along the quay, from the archway to near this point, extensive galleries were erected, tastefully decorated, for the accommodation of the nobility, gentry, and authorities of the county, and the clergy and principal inhabitants of the town. In the town, especially along the line of intended procession, the decorations were on the most liberal scale and of the most appropriate description. The memorable morning of the eleventh was most auspiciously ushered in; the weather was charming, and every heart beat with emotions of grateful anticipation. On the preceding afternoon, the magnificent steam-ship Perth, which had been handsomely placed by her owners—the Dundee, Perth, and London Shipping Company—at the service of the Trinity House, for the purpose of piloting the Royal Yacht into the Tay, descended the river, having a large party on board, with flags and music, to meet the royal squadron. On entering St Andrew's Bay, the war steamer Stromboli, as a precursor, hove in sight; and shortly after dusk the party were elated, when half-way between the Isle of May and Bell Rock Lights, with the appearance in the distance of the triangular lights of the royal fleet, and the occasional display of dazzling blue lights and brilliant rockets, shooting meteor-like into the dark clouds. The fleet nearing, a pilot was sent on board the Victoria and Albert, and the Perth led the way into the Tay, which the royal squadron ascended, amidst the booming of cannon and the display of fireworks from every fort and eminence in its course, including the battery of Mr Hunter of Blackness, Carnoustie, Broughty Ferry, the Coast Guard stations, the fine ship Wellington, lying off Carolina Port, and finally, a royal salute of twenty-one guns was given by the Camperdown cannon, planted on the Dundee Law, and the many bells of the town rang a merry peal. The royal fleet, consisting of the following steamers, now lay at anchor on the calm bosom of the river off the harbour:—

Victoria and Albert ,	. . .	Captain Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence.
Black Eagle ,	Earl of Hardwicke.
Blazer ,	Captain Washington.
Stromboli ,	Hon. Captain Plunket.
Eclair ,	Captain Estcourt.
Volcano ,	Lieut. Miller.
Princess Alice ,	Captain Smethett.

Shortly after four o'clock the whole inhabitants were astir, and every avenue to the town was thronged with eager travellers, riding, driving, and a-foot, hastening to the scene of attraction, and "all went merry as a marriage bell." By six, the spectacle was gorgeous and imposing. The Provost, Magistrates, and Council, with the Corporate Bodies, lieutenancy of the county, &c., were all in their places waiting the reception; the galleries were crowded with ladies and gentlemen—presenting quite "a galaxy of beauty and fashion." Some of the finest vessels in port were moored along the landing quay, their yards being manned with gallant tars, neatly attired in blue and white; whilst every available space outside, in the windows, and on the tops of the houses, was occupied with happy smiling faces, beaming with life and joy. Along the Protection Wall and Marine Parade, too, fronting the river, the crowds were dense; yet the utmost quiet and decorum prevailed. The landing took place at half-past eight, when five barges, one of them bearing the royal standard, arrived at the landing place from the royal fleet, amid the most enthusiastic cheering and waving of hats and handkerchiefs by the assembled throng. Lord Charles Wellesley and Sir Edward Bowater, equerries in waiting, received her Majesty at the platform, when the Queen, leaning on the arm of Prince Albert, who led the young Princess in his left hand, ascended the staircase to the place of reception. The Prince, on seeing the Provost, Magistrates, and Member for the Burgh, said, "Good morning, gentlemen;" and her Majesty smiled and bowed. Mr Duncan then introduced the Provost of the Burgh, when the Queen said, "My Lord Provost, I have to thank you for the very kind welcome with which I have been received, and the admirable arrangements made to facilitate my landing." The Provost briefly replied; and after the presentation of numerous loyal and affectionate addresses, which were received by Lord Aberdeen, the royal party proceeded on foot along a rich carpeting to their carriages, amid renewed cheering, and bowing, and waving of handkerchiefs, which the Queen and Prince acknowledged in the most affable and gracious manner. The Magistrates having taken their seats in the civic carriages, and the procession being formed, it began to move off through the Victoria archway; on issuing from the portals of which the coup d'œil was grand and imposing. Looking at the archway and the scene beyond, Lord Aberdeen was heard to exclaim, "Well, this is really fine!" The royal cortege proceeded up Castle Street, along High Street and Nethergate, up Tay Street, by Dudhope Crescent, to Dudhope Church, on to the Coupar Angus road, amid the same enthusiastic demonstrations, where the royal party bowed adieu to the local authorities, and set off at a more rapid rate toward their destination at Blair Athol. The remainder of the day was spent as a holiday in town, and many festivities took place. After spending three weeks in the Highlands, the royal party returned by the same route; were met in procession near the place where they had been parted with; were accompanied to the place of embarkation, where similar ceremonies were observed, and expressions of satisfaction interchanged. Thus the royal reception passed off with the greatest eclat; and was highly creditable to the wisdom, spirit, and taste of the authorities, and to the good sense and loyalty of the people, who conducted themselves with great propriety.

EMINENT MEN.

Several eminent men have been natives of or residents in this town, who merit a passing notice here, though our space will not admit of particulars respecting them. The first we have to name is the distinguished hero of Scotland, already mentioned at page 18, whose early years were spent at our Public Seminary about 1285; where, doubtless, his youthful mind was impregnated with those sentiments of patriotism and love of freedom, which animated him to those deeds of magnanimity and bravery that paved the way for the ultimate achievement of his country's deliverance. The Scrymseoures of Craigie, and subsequently of Dudhope, next merit a place. The first, Alexander Scrymseoure, was contemporary of Wallace, by whom he was constituted hereditary Constable of Dundee, for his courageous services in wresting the Castle from the hands of Morton, as already noticed, and this office descended in the family for several centuries. Sir James Scrymseoure of Craigie was Constable in 1389, and about a century after, the family acquired the lands of Dudhope. Sir John Scrymseoure was raised to the peerage by the title of Viscount Dudhope in 1641. His son James, the second Viscount, was wounded at the battle of Marston, and died of fever induced by it, in 1644. His son was created Earl of Dundee in 1661; and dying without issue, seven years after, the peerage became extinct. This family is now represented by Mr Scrymgeour Wedderburn of Birkhill, Fifeshire. Hector Boece, the early Scottish historian, was born at Dundee about 1465. He was elected, in 1500, first principal of King's College, Aberdeen. In 1522, he published the Lives of the Bishops of Aberdeen, and two years after, his History of Scotland from the earliest times. He died in 1536. The Wedderburns, three brothers, already mentioned at page 22, distinguished themselves about this time as authors and poets of some merit, and early supporters of the reformation from Popery. James Halliburton, thirty-three years Provost of the town, was a person of some distinction. He was a warm supporter of the Reformation cause, protected its sufferers, defended it in the field, and was proclaimed a rebel by the Court of Queen Mary. He died in 1588, much esteemed and lamented; and the expense of his funeral was paid out of the public purse as a mark of respect. His character is thus recorded on his tomb-stone: "Provost of Dundee, defender of his country, protector of the orphan, and a son of the Church of Christ." John Grahame of Claverhouse, of persecuting notoriety, was connected with the town. He was a cadet of the family of the Duke of Montrose; in 1686, he became possessed of the lands of Dudhope and the constabulary of Dundee, and two years after, was created Viscount of Dundee by James II., and the year following was killed at Killicrankie. He was succeeded by his infant son, who died the same year. His second son became third Viscount—was outlawed for his adherence to the cause of the exiled Prince Charles, and died 1700, without issue. The representation of the family devolved on Grahame of Duntrune, whose son was attainted for engaging in the rebellion of 1715. James Grahame, calling himself Viscount of Dundee, was forfeited for his connection with the rising of 1745; and died at Dunkirk, an officer in Lord Ogilvy's regiment, in the French service; since which the peerage is extinct. Lord Douglas, as representative of the Earls of Angus, is designated Hereditary Constable of Dundee. Admiral Lord Duncan next distinguished himself in the service of his country as a naval hero. He was born in 1731 at Lundie, near this, and was educated at our Grammar School. He entered the navy at the early age of sixteen—served in the West Indies and other stations—and was rapidly promoted for eminent services till he obtained an Admiral's commission. As Commander-in-Chief of the North Sea, he conducted himself with great prudence during a daring mutiny in the fleet, and achieved a signal victory over the Dutch fleet, off Camperdown, for which he was created a peer of the realm, by the title of Viscount Duncan of Camperdown and Lundie, with a pension of £2000 a-year for himself and his two succeeding male heirs. He had also awarded to him the thanks of both Houses of Parliament; was presented with the freedom of the city of London and a sword of two hundred guineas value. He died in 1804. His son was created Earl of Camperdown by William IV., and is still living, much respected. George Dempster, Esq., of Dunnichen, a contemporary of Lord Duncan's, born four years after, was a man of some eminence. His grandfather was a merchant in this town, and he, too, was educated at our Grammar School. He represented the Forfar and Fife Burghs in Parliament, from 1762 to 1790, when he retired, and devoted a useful life to the interests of his native county and the country at large. He aided much in the establishment of the fisheries, which have been so valuable to the country. He ranked among his acquaintance, William Robertson, David Hume, Adam Ferguson, John Home, the author of "Douglas," and Alex. Carlyle, minister of Musselburgh. He died in 1818, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. John Willison, D.D., flourished also at this time; was an eminent minister of the Church of Scotland; the author of "The Afflicted Man's Companion" and several practical and catechetical works. In the same century appeared Robert Small, D.D., author of "A Statistical Account of Dundee," and an Explanation of the Astronomical Theories of Kepler. More recently have appeared David Russell, D.D., an eminent Congregationalist minister, who has left a volume of excellent letters and sermons. Robt. M'Cheyne of St Peter's, an excellent young minister and Christian poet, who has left a heavenly savour behind him, and several works of great merit; his "Mission to the Jews" having now gone through the thirty-fifth thousand, and his "Familiar Letters, Remains," &c., the fortieth thousand. William Gardner, the distinguished botanist, author of "Flora of Forfarshire," and two works on Mosses. Montague Stanley, an eminent artist, poet, and actor, who, on his mind undergoing a serious change, abandoned the stage, and has left a volume of excellent poetry; and Robert Nicoll, author of a volume of "Lyrics and Poems" of great merit, who some time resided here. To these must be added our living eminent men, of whom, for very obvious reasons, we must speak with greater caution. They are—James, Lord Ivory, a native, one of the Lords of Session, raised to the bar in 1816, and to the bench in 1840; John Campbell, D.D., the extensive writer, and editor of the British Banner, a well-known London paper, whose maternal parent is still living amongst us; our gifted George Gilfillan, the first critic of the age, and author of "Portrait Galleries" in two volumes, "The Bards of the Bible," and "Martyrs, Heroes, and Bards of the Scottish Covenants," yet in the vigour of life, with a rich and powerful mind; James R. M'Gavin, author of an excellent devotional work for seamen; William Wilson, editor of "D'Foe's History of the Church of Scotland" and of the "Free Church Pulpit;" our worthy Provost, Patrick H. Thoms, editor of Moses Stewart of Andover's "Letters on the Divinity of Christ," who executed his task so well that the author mistook him for a minister, and addressed him as the Rev. P. H. Thoms; Robert S. Rintoul, editor of the London Spectator, formerly of Dundee Advertiser; and lastly, James Thomson, author of a "History of Dundee" of considerable merit, and replete with valuable information.

THE MODERN TOWN.

Of the modern town little need here be said, intended, as this brief sketch is, for those chiefly who are familiar with it in all its interests. Described in a public document, as early as 1639, as "the biggest town in Scotland," it still retains a proud pre-eminence as an extensive and flourishing town and seaport. When General Monk stormed it in 1651, the population was estimated at 8000, including, of course, a large influx of strangers from Edinburgh and Leith, who had fled hither for the safety of their persons and property. The destruction of life which attended that disastrous event, and the return of the strangers, greatly reduced the number, which, even thirty years after (1680), did not exceed 6580. The depression consequent upon 1715 and 1745, made a farther reduction; so that, in 1746, the population was only about 5302. The following is the increase and decrease since that period:—

In 1755, it was	12,477.	In 1801,	26,000.	In 1841,	59,135.
1766, "	12,426.	1821,	34,000.	1851,	78,931.
1788, "	19,329.	1831,	30,575.	1853,	82,000.

The rapid increase in the population in recent years is mainly attributable to the introduction of the linen manufacture, which is now extensively cultivated; employing a large number of hands, and causing a large influx of workers, male and female, from all parts of the country—especially from Ireland. It has been affirmed that about 20,000 of the working population are natives of the sister kingdom and their families. As we have not learned the authority or the data for this computation, we cannot vouch for its accuracy, and would regard it as considerably over-estimated. We may just remark that, owing to the large working population, drawn together and brought up under so many circumstances and influences which tend to loosen salutary restraint, and favour the growth and indulgence of evil passions—the influx of strangers, the over-crowding of domiciles, and the facilities for drinking—we have the usual amount of immorality, disease, pauperism, and crime, incidental to large towns; that abodes of misery and squalor fearfully abound; and that some of our streets and closes are the scenes of debauchery and wickedness, and frequently of outrage and riot, especially on Saturday nights and Sabbath afternoons, forming a perfect disgrace to civilized life, apart from Christianity. Our poor-rates, which fifty years ago were only £400, are now nearly £11,000, with the prospect of increase. Our police and prison assessments, which a few years ago amounted to a mere trifle, now exceed £11,000. As a set off to this, we have this year 555 licenced public-houses, in which, at a moderate computation, about £180,000 are expended in drink; whilst our philanthropic and religious institutions are not in the most flourishing state. The Royal Infirmary has this year expended £1609, whilst its income has only been £1173; the City Mission has reduced its staff of missionaries nearly one-half; the Tract Society has gradually reduced its issues and distributions till it is nearly at a stand; other useful associations are depressed, whilst one or two, if "not formally dissolved," are "virtually defunct" for want of funds. We are not worse perhaps in these respects than other large towns, but surely such a state of things is neither very desirable nor very safe, and calls loudly for serious reflection and active effort to reform.

The trade of the town has recently made rapid progress, especially within the last half century. A century ago one cart and carter, "Robert Black in the Wellgate," did all the work of the town; fifty years ago there were 130; and now they number about 300. Prior to the beginning of the present century, all the linen yarns here were manufactured by the hand and the distaff, being the occupation of maidens and matrons of all classes in society; and the clothes were the production of the hand-loom. In 1790, the linen exported from the town amounted to 8 millions of yards. Since then, the extensive introduction of steam-power, both in spinning and weaving, has deprived a large number of good dames of their occupation; transferred female labour—which it has greatly increased—from the fireside to the mill and the factory; and vastly augmented the production—the exports amounting in 1850 to 85 millions of yards. In 1800, the extent of flax spinning here was about 2150 spindles, driven by five steam-engines of about 68 horse-power. In 1846, there were 39 mills, impelled by engines of about 1045 horse-power; and at present there are, at least, 45 spinning-mills at work, in town—besides those in the country around—with more than 60 engines of above 3100 aggregate horse-power. The number of persons employed in those mills is above 11,000, of whom nearly three-fourths are females. The materials employed in these manufactures are chiefly imported from Russia, Prussia, Holland, and Brabant.* The importation of flax in 1790 was 2700 tons; in 1850, it amounted to 55,000 tons.

The first railways in Scotland for locomotive engines were formed in connection with this town. The Act for the Newtyle line was passed in 1826, and in 1832 it was opened for traffic of all kinds. The Act for the Arbroath line was obtained in 1836, which, after being some time partially opened, was completed and opened for through traffic in 1840. If we remember rightly, the next piece of railway opened north of the Tweed, was ten miles of the Glasgow and South-western, from the Ayr terminus to Irvine, in August 1840, the whole line to Ayr not being completed till the year following. The railway communication of the town is equal, if not superior, to that of many others in Scotland. The local facilities are considerable, and we have direct communication with Edinburgh, Glasgow, and the south, and Aberdeen and the north, four or five times a-day, and with London twice a-day.

The improvement of the town has not lagged behind its rising importance. Immediately preceding 1800, three new streets were opened up. One of these, Castle Street, to use the language of a writer of that period, "was literally scooped out of a huge rock by force of gunpowder." One of the others was Tay Street; intended to communicate with the country and the turnpike. At this time the town did not extend much beyond the latter street to the west, and the citizens had their "country houses" at the West Port. Union Street was commenced soon after, and, though not lengthy, is a handsome uniform thoroughfare. Reform Street, commenced in 1830, will soon be built to the top, and when completed, with the Seminaries Buildings behind, forming a sort of a capital to the view, it will have a splendid appearance, especially when viewed from High Street. A handsome monument in front of the Seminaries would greatly enhance the prospect. Already it is a beautiful specimen of street architecture, excelled it may be in spaciousness, but not in elegance and uniqueness anywhere else. In its formation, a huge mass of rock and earth had to be excavated—a large mound or ridge having separated High Street from the area on which the academy is built, which was long known as "Andrew Barnis' Meadow," and the Little Meadow.

As we have spoken of a monument as an ornament to the top of this street, might not the site be obtained for the long-projected Kinloch Monument, about which so much has been said, and so little done? Were a trifle more money added to the sum already subscribed, and a handsome thing provided, it would be a decided ornament to the locality and the town. A few works of art of this description are a great desideratum in our city, and we are not without deserving men on whom to bestow such graceful tokens of our esteem and gratitude.

The public buildings of the town are not very numerous nor perhaps magnificent ; but some recently added, and others in progress, will be found not inferior to those of other places of similar importance. The most ancient and noble is the Old Tower or Steeple, already mentioned (page 11). We refer to it here only to express our gratification at the prospect of its soon undergoing a thorough renovation and repair. Since the preceding remarks were printed, the Magistrates and Council have memorialized the Commissioners of Woods and Forests on the subject ; and we have no doubt but the application will be successful. A considerable sum was sometime ago granted for extensive repairs and alterations on the Glasgow Cathedral ; and, considering the respective sums required, we think the claim in this case equally strong. The Castle of Dudhope, the ancient feudal residence of the Constables of Dundee, is also one of our few historical remains which have withstood the ruthless hand of Time, and come down to us entire as a relict of years gone by. Some time ago it was divested of its ancient glory and converted into a woollen manufactory, but is now used for a less utilitarian purpose as the infantry Barracks. The Town Buildings, erected in 1734, on the site of the Old St Clement's Church, with the Piazza in front, are neat and appropriate. The style is Roman-Ionic, from designs by Mr William Adam, well known as the elder Adam. From the inferior quality of the stone used, the whole structure, in little more than a century, has become quite defaced. The repairs, however, now in progress, will restore it to its original appearance, and give it greater durability. On the first floor are the Council Chamber, in which the Burgh Court is also held ; the Guild Hall, used besides by the Sheriff and Justice of Peace Courts ; and the Writing Chambers of the Town-Clerks, &c. In the Council Hall are portraits of Admiral Duncan, and George Dempster, Esq. of Dunnichen ; and a half-length of Dr James Johnston, a former Provost of the Burgh. The spire is 140 feet high, and the bells for chiming the hours are excellent. The Trades' Hall, built in 1770, now used as the Eastern Bank ; and the Literary Institute (the old Episcopal Chapel), are neat enough erections ; but each in its present site is an undesirable obstruction. The Old Royal Infirmary and the Royal Lunatic Asylum, erected in 1820, are plain and substantial buildings. The Theatre in Castle Street is a dingy building of 1808, and attracts little notice. The Public Seminaries is a fine structure, erected in 1833, from designs by Mr Angus of Edinburgh, in the Grecian-Doric style, six massive fluted columns supporting the portico, resembling those of Eratosthenes at Athens. It cost about £10,000, and contains three spacious halls, with extensive apartments, embracing the three divisions of the Academy, Grammar School, and Burgh Parochial School. The Exchange Coffee-house, built in 1829, is also a massive erection, costing £9000; the style Grecian, from designs by Mr George Scott of Edinburgh. The Reading-Room is spacious, and is adorned with a bust of the late Lord Panmure, by Steel. The Custom-House, erected in 1843, is large and handsome, in the Grecian-Ionic style, and cost £8000, for which a Parliamentary grant was obtained. It has ample accommodation for the Customs and Excise departments, besides the Harbour Trustees and other offices. The County Prison and Police Buildings, erected in 1836 and greatly extended in 1844, are extensive, and cost upwards of £26,000. The designs were by Mr Angus. The Police Court is held in the eastern section; the situation is good, and the whole admirably adapted for prison and police purposes. The Watt Institution is a handsome and substantial building, in the Grecian style, erected in 1838. The New Exchange, in course of erection in Panmure Street, will be a handsome edifice. The style is Flemish of the eleventh century, from designs by Mr David Bryce of Edinburgh. It will have a neat spire with clock, at the corner of Meadowside, a spacious reading-room, and extensive apartments for business transactions, and will cost £11,000. The New Royal Infirmary, also in progress, will be a magnificent building. The designs are by Messrs Coe and Goodwin of London. The style is Tudor, admirably adapted to the site, and the requirements of the institution. The length of frontage is 349 feet (or about 40 feet longer than Union Street), with two wings running back 100 feet, and a projection backward from the centre, in which will be the apartments of the resident officers, the Directors' hall, Secretary's office, &c., separate from the sick wards. The wards will be commodious and airy, affording accommodation for nearly three hundred patients. Spacious corridors will run the entire length of the building, and serve not only for passages, but promenades in wet or cold weather for convalescent patients. When the house is finished, the grounds will be laid off with walks, trees, and shrubbery, they command an extensive view, and the whole will have a very imposing appearance.

The Victoria Triumphal Archway, finished in 1851, as a memorial of her Majesty's visit in 1844, is a splendid edifice of its kind. The style is Saxon-Gothic; the designs are by Mr J. T. Roughead of Glasgow; the carving of the Royal Arms was executed by the late Mr

James B. McLachlan of the same city, It is nearly ninety feet in height ; from the top there is a fine view of the harbours, river, and opposite coast of Fife. It cost above £2200, of which £500 were contributed by the late Lord Panmure, and a like sum by the Harbour Trustees.

The ecclesiastical edifices in town are numerous, many are spacious, and not a few are elegant. In this respect we believe we are not behind any town in Scotland of equal status. The three Town Churches, already noticed, are imposing structures. The Old, adjoining the Tower, is the most ancient ; it was rebuilt in 1789, and fortunately escaped the conflagration of 1841 ; the East was rebuilt and re-opened in 1844 ; and the Cross or South in 1847. The style is Gothic, though not the finest specimen of the order ; the crucid form of the original erection being preserved. The nave, the choir, and the transept form each a separate place of worship ; and together constitute one of the most striking architectural features of the town. St Andrew's is a goodly edifice, with a spire of about 136 feet in height, and a clock, the dial of which, by the by, would be nothing the worse of a little touching up, for the sake of public utility, if not for embellishment. At present it is difficult to tell whether it has hands or not, or what hour they intend to indicate. St David's is large though plain ; and St John's, or the Old Gaelic Chapel, is a heavy building of more recent erection. The Free Church has a number of very handsome fabrics : St Peter's, Hawkhill, is neat, with a spire, the bell of which is rung by water-power. St David's, built in 1843, St John's and St Andrew's 1844, are of modest exteriors, but of commodious and elegant interiors ; St James's, built in the latter year, is altogether a handsome edifice. Dudhope Church is also a fine building, conspicuously situated on an eminence. St Paul's is a handsome structure, from designs by Mr Wilson of Glasgow, with a spire 155 feet high ; and Chalmers's Territorial Church, from designs by our townsman, Mr James Maclaren, is a chaste erection. The United Presbyterian body also supply several large and substantial fabrics : George's Chapel and Tay Square Church are plain but massive buildings ; as also Wishart Church, built in 1841, the only memento in town of the amiable martyr. Bell Street Church is one of the largest in town, and a fine substantial building. James' Church, though not so large, is also elegant. The Independents have also some good specimens of ecclesiastical architecture : The Chapels in Lindsay Street and Prince's Street are large and neat ; and Ward Chapel, built in 1833, a splendid erection in the Gothic style, is finely situated, and has an imposing appearance. The Episcopal Chapel in Castle Street—a fine building—has lately been purchased by the Prince's Street Congregation, who remove to it about Whitsunday next. The new Independent Chapel, about to be erected at the north-west corner of Panmure Street, will be another handsome contribution to our ecclesiastical architecture. The Roman Catholic Chapel in Nethergate is also a beautiful edifice in the Gothic style, finely situated, and has a rich and striking appearance. Two new Episcopalian Chapels are now in course of building; the one at the head of the Seagate, and the other in Blinshall Street. The first will be a beautiful and imposing structure. The style is Decorated-Gothic; the design by Mr G. G. Scott, London. It will have a tower and spire 220 feet high, which, from its elevated position on the Castle-hill, will be seen from all parts of the town. The interior will be spacious and superb. The bottom stage of the tower, and the whole of the inside of the chancel and apse, will be groined stone work; and the windows will be of brilliant stained glass. The other Chapel is of less dimensions, but the same style; from designs by Messrs Coe and Goodwin of London, with belfry in front, a small turret at the south-west corner, and elegant interior. To these might be added the Wallacetown Chapel, Willisen and Chapelshade Churches, the Glassite Octagon Meeting-house; the Baptist Chapel and Reformed Presbyterian Church, Meadowside; and the Christian Apostolic Chapel, Meadow Place; besides a variety of others, which, though neatly fitted up inside and devoted to public worship, are mostly in back courts, or have nothing externally to distinguish them.

One of the most valuable modern improvements in the town was the extension and reformation of the burying-grounds. In 1832, the era of so many useful reforms, the condition of the Houff, then the only burial-place, attracted the attention of the authorities and inhabitants; and Mr Dron, then Hospital Master, set vigorously to work to effect some improvement on it, whilst steps were being taken to obtain extended accommodation. A plan of the ground, with a register of the existing stones and graves, was made out; new walks were formed, and the surface covered with new soil to the depth of several feet; the monuments and headstones were replaced in regular lines, and the place planted with shrubs; and thus the place was transformed from one of horror and disgust into an agreeable public promenade. The Chapelshade gardens were next procured for the New Cemetery in Constitution Road, and were beautifully laid out with mounds, walks, trees, and shrubs, as they at present stand. The plan, suggested by Mr Findlater, Civil Engineer, was in imitation of the celebrated Pere la Chaise in Paris. The trees and shrubs are arranged according to the botanical arrangement of Jussieu, forming a complete Aborethum and Fruticetum of specimens of all the botanical specimens adapted for growing in the open air. The whole arrangement is picturesque and well adapted to the purposes of the grounds. A great diversity of appearance has been produced by raising the different sections into slight elevations with a central mound at the entrance ; the borders round the enclosing walls are set apart for catacombs, vaults, &c. ; so that the rich and poor "meet and rest together." Subsequently, the Western Cemetery, Perth Road, was laid out, and forms another elegant and picturesque receptacle for the mortal remains of the citizens. The town is thus most favourably situated as to its sepulchres.

Next to the Cemeteries may be noticed the New Meadows, the only other public ground appropriated to the inhabitants within easy access of the town. It was purchased some time ago by the Magistrates for a public common, instead of the Old or Little Meadow, on which the Seminaries now stand, and which was laid out for feuing purposes. This ground, though limited in extent, being only about an acre in oblong form, is a great boon as a public washing-green. The washing-house in the centre is rather ornamental than otherwise, with neat style, whited walls, and tall flag-staff. Internally it is commodious, and fitted up with all the recent improvements in washing apparatus, for the use of which a small charge is made, otherwise the grounds are free. The walks and borders are neatly laid off, and the seats at convenient distances, are useful for visitors. Though considerably elevated, the green is plentifully supplied with excellent water from a tank or reservoir, hewn out of the rocky subsoil, 85 feet long, 30 broad, and 35 feet deep, with frequently 20 feet of water, which is conveyed in pipes to the several washing places. The large mound in the centre of the upper portion of the ground is formed of the rubbish from this tank, covered and sown with grass. The top is tastefully paved with variegated stones indicating the four cardinal points of the compass. From its top there is a beautiful view of the New Cemetery, and the central portions of the town, with the river and the coast of Fife in the distance ; Balgay Hill on the right, Broughty Ferry, Tay-Port, and the mouth of the Tay on the left, and the Law rising majestically behind. For variety and richness it is altogether unequalled in this neighbourhood.

Of the Law, with its many interesting associations and the magnificent landscape its top commands, we need here say little. Its charms are familiar as its name ;—no one visits Dundee for half a day without climbing its easy ascent, perambulating its terraced summit, and feasting his eyes on the splendid panoramic view by which he is surrounded.

We must here express our sincere regret that, with all our advantages, we are still without the important pre-requisite of health and morality—a large public park, to which the pent-up citizens could resort in the summer evenings and holidays for innocent amusement and healthful recreation. Here all the attraction and excitement of harmless games and invigorating exercises might be indulged in without the temptations of the dram-shop, the labour of body and mind relaxed without the aid of dangerous stimulants, the whole system improved and fitted for the higher pursuits and enjoyments of human life. We trust that, should the magistrates not be able speedily to provide such a park, the citizens themselves will form an association to supply the desideratum, which might be made nearly self-supporting by a small charge for the use of the conveniences provided.

THE HARBOUR AND SHIPPING.

As a seaport, Dundee has from the earliest times kept pace with the other coast towns in Scotland. This is shown by the early services it often rendered to the country in aiding its fleets, and its expeditions, and in the commercial privileges it enjoyed in return from the sovereigns and the nation. Till comparatively a few years ago the shipping of North Britain was not remarkable either for the number or size of its vessels. In 1654, Tucker stated in his Report to the Government of Cromwell, that “The towne of Dundee was sometime a towne of riches and trade, but the many rencountres it hath met with, all in the times of domestick comotions, and her obstinacy and pride of late years, rendering her a prey to the soldier,” referring to General Monk’s visit, “have much shaken and abated her grandeur ; and, notwithstanding all, she remayns still, though not glorious yett not contemptible.” The shipping of the port was then 10 vessels varying from 25 to 120 tons, in all 615 tons. In 1691, there were 21 vessels, the largest 200, amounting to 1091 tons, valued at £2920. In 1717, the number of vessels were between 50 and 69. In 1792, the vessels belonging to the port were 116, navigated by 678 men, and measuring 8550 tons, of which 34 were employed in the foreign, 78 in the coasting trades, and 4 in the whale fishery. The harbour in former times does not seem to have been either very commodious or very safe. The piers or moles were composed of wood, with breakwaters of stone to form a harbour for safe moorage. The breast, or shore-head, extended from the West side of the Castlehill, through the present Greenmarket, along what is now Butcher Row, and thence to St Nicholas Craig, or Craig Pier. About the beginning of the present century, before the existing harbour works were commenced, a broad walk, or pavement, extended from the south end of the weigh-house, up the west side of the Greenmarket, nearly to Fish Street. Along a considerable portion of this walk was a beach for the accommodation of loiterers, and behind it was a row of fine plane trees, which shaded them in sultry or inclement weather. Thither retired skippers and sailors resorted to learn the news of the day, or to "fight their battles o'er again." But it would appear from the following extract from "Brice's Universal Dictionary of Geography," that, in 1759, it was used even for more important purposes:—"From the harbour to the town is a pleasant walk, paved with flag-stones and shaded with a row of trees on either side, which serves for an exchange to merchants and shipmasters; and on one side are large store-houses for goods and granaries for corn." In olden times, orders were frequently made for extra collections for harbour repairs; and in 1669 the demand seems to have been of an extraordinary nature, as a collection was ordered to be made at all the church doors in the kingdom for the purpose. About the end of last century, an addition was made to the piers of an extensive stone breakwater to the east of the harbour then existing—probably near where the Custom-House now stands—which was the last extension prior to the commencement of the present harbour works. In 1815, the spirit of enterprise which animated the whole country on the return of peace, operated favourably on the merchants of this town, and gave the first impulse to our manufactures and commerce in the extension and improvement of the harbour. Application was made to Parliament, and a bill speedily obtained, for separating the harbour business from the other trusts of the town, and for vesting the management of it in separate commissioners chosen from the Magistrates and other bodies, and with power to authorise extensive new works. Every care was taken to obtain the best plans and specifications, the preliminaries were skilfully arranged, and the work was commenced with the utmost vigour and spirit. So successfully was everything prosecuted that the works were all accomplished within the time specified in the contracts, and all in the most substantial and satisfactory manner. The plans of the entire new harbour consisted of the wet-dock of about six acres; a tide harbour of much greater extent;

a graving-dock, capable of accommodating three of the largest merchant vessels frequenting the port; extensive carpenters and other yards for shipbuilding; wide and spacious quays for berthing about thirty vessels to load or discharge at the same time. As soon as these measures were taken, the number and tonnage of the vessels belonging to the port were increased, and trade rapidly improved. The expenditure incurred by these works was £242,000 between 1815 and 1833. Yet the money was so judiciously expended and the revenue rose so rapidly with the increased accommodation, that not the slightest embarrassment was experienced in regard to funds. Indeed, the spirit and enterprise with which everything was done seemed to secure its own success and reward. When the extensive plan was adopted in 1815, it was believed that the accommodation provided would meet all demands for years to come; but it was not long till a new bill for farther powers had to be applied for—the tide-harbour extended, and a large portion of it formed into a wet-dock. Since these the shipping and commerce have steadily increased, and the general prosperity of the town has been augmented. The registered shipping of the port up to 1st January in the present year, amounts to 342 vessels, 59,290 tons, and about 3189 men. Thus our trade and manufactures have risen more rapidly than those of any similar town in the kingdom; and we have now the finest harbours north of the Tweed, with accommodation for every variety and description of trade. The shipbuilding facilities of the port are also extensive, and a considerable trade is carried on in that department. We have seven shipbuilding establishments, each doing a handsome business; and scarcely a week passes but one or more vessels are launched from the stocks upon our waters, varying from 200 to 1000 tons register. The building, fitting-up, and repairing of steamers of all sizes is also carried on to some extent; and to facilitate this business, the Harbour Trustees lately fitted up the ponderous crane at the south side of Earl Grey's Dock, with which eight men can lift thirty tons of machinery. Thus we have now commercial intercourse with almost every part of the world—the Continent, North and South America, the West Indies, an extensive trade with Australia, &c. The productions of our native industry find their way into every quarter of the globe, diffusing the comforts and blessings of life among the inhabitants of distant lands; and we in return receive the productions and luxuries of other climes for our own use, and for the benefit of the district, of which, by our favourable situation and enterprise, we are the natural emporium.

POSTAGE STAMPS may be used for printed votes and proceedings in Parliament, and on foreign, colonial, and ship letters, &c., outwards. If any letter, however, addressed to places beyond sea, bear an insufficient number of stamps, it will be sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be returned in all practical cases to the writer. Stamps are not permitted to be used on letters arriving in the United Kingdom from the Colonies or foreign countries. These regulations are applicable to newspapers in those cases where they are liable to postage. If the stamps affixed to letters have been mutilated or defaced, the letter will be liable to the unpaid rate.

RATES OF INLAND POSTAGE.—Not exceeding half an ounce weight, 4d.; not exceeding one ounce, 2d.—two rates being added for every ounce. Prepayment is optional, but if not adopted, the charge is double at delivery. Packages exceeding four ounces must be prepaid. Letters or packets must not exceed two feet in length, except Parliamentary petitions, addresses to her Majesty, printed votes or proceedings of Parliament.

Printed Parliamentary papers may be sent by post from place to place in the United Kingdom, or to the Colonies by the packets; and the proceedings of Colonial Legislatures sent by packet may be received at the following rates: If not exceeding four ounces, 1d.; under eight ounces, 2d.; and under twelve ounces, 3d., and so on; and if sent to the Colonies by private ship, they are charged double these rates. The privilege as to the Colonies does not embrace the Mediterranean packet conveyance to India. Papers must be without covers, or in covers open at the sides, and must have no enclosures or writing other than the address. In papers passing inland, prepayment is optional. Petitions and addresses to her Majesty pass free. Members of Parliament may receive petitions to either House if not exceeding thirty-two ounces, and sent without covers, or in covers open at the sides.

BOOKS FOR FOREIGN PARTS.—Printed books, magazines, reviews, pamphlets, and music, whether British, colonial, or foreign, may be transmitted by post through the United Kingdom at the following rates: Each packet not exceeding one pound, 6d.; not exceeding two pounds, 1s.; not exceeding three pounds, 1s. 6d., and so on—6d. being charged for every pound or part of a pound. The following conditions must be observed: Every packet must be sent without a cover, or in a cover open at the ends or sides, and not exceeding two feet in length. The name and address of the sender may be written or printed on any such book, &c., or on the cover thereof, in addition to the address; and any other wording may be on any leaf of any such book, &c., so sent, or on the binding thereof, provided that all such last mentioned writing be on one page only of the book or binding. The postage must be prepaid in full, by affixing outside the packet, or on its cover, the proper stamps. If any of these conditions be violated, the packet will be charged as a letter, and treated as such in all respects.

NEWSPAPERS.—Stamped British newspapers pass free from one place to any other place in Great Britain; but when addressed to a person residing within the delivery of the post town where it is posted, 1d. is charged on each paper. XVI.—BROUGHTY FERRY LISTS.

BRIEF HISTORICAL NOTICE.

THE great object of historical reminiscence and attraction in Broughty Ferry is the venerable ruin of the ancient Castle. Proudly situated on a projecting eminence overlooking the Tay, it has a picturesque appearance, and invests the scenery around with an air of antiquity and martial grandeur. In its palmy days, it doubtless was a place of some strength and importance, and its possession an object of serious contest. Even yet, dismantled and bereft of its former glory, it seems to look down with disdain on the lesser modern buildings within its view. At what period or by whom it was erected is uncertain. In the middle of the sixteenth century it fell into the hands of the English, when Henry VIII., thwarted in his design of uniting the two kingdoms under one crown by the marriage of his son, Edward Prince of Wales, with our infant Queen, Mary Stuart, sent an invading army to resent the refusal. Elated with the victory of Pinkie, on 5th September 1547, the English Commander (the Duke of Somerset) despatched Sir Andrew Dudley with a strong detachment to secure Dundee and the surrounding country. As a preliminary he took possession of Broughty, which, from its position, commanded the entrance of the Tay. Repeated attempts were made to dislodge the garrison by the Earl of Argyle and by the Regent, Earl of Arran, but which proved ineffectual. Dudley next year took possession of the Hill of Balgillo, on which he built a strong and beautiful fortress, at great labour and cost. With a force of sixteen to seventeen hundred lancers, infantry and cavalry, from both forts, he next marched on Dundee, which he entered unopposed. M. d'Esse having arrived in Scotland at the head of six thousand French and German auxiliaries, despatched two companies of the latter and one of the former to the aid of the town. The English on learning of their approach, after only eight days' occupancy, set the town on fire, and safely retired to their fortresses. They occupied themselves in plundering the whole district around, which they also extended across the Tay to Fife. M. d'Estauges, a French officer, appointed Governor of Dundee, having ventured with a reconnoitering party too near to Balgillo Castle, they were surrounded and taken prisoners. Meantime, vigorous preparations were made by raising forces at Dundee, aided by the county gentlemen; and M. Paul de Thermes, having assumed command of the foreign auxiliaries, a strong army invested the two fortresses ; and the advances were pressed with such vigour, that the garrison, neglected by their countrymen, were compelled to surrender on 20th February 1550. Broughty was at this time dismantled, and perhaps also terminated its military services. Balgillo was also dismantled, but only in 1816 completely demolished.

The modern village is quite of recent erection. Fifty years ago, it consisted of only a few houses and fishers' huts along the beach west from the Castle. Now it has four or five spacious streets running parallel to each other from east to west, besides as many more crossing north and south. The houses are mostly of some size, and on the rising ground to the very top of Forthill are numerous villas, and not a few splendid mansions. It is now quite a suburb of Dundee, only three miles distant, travelled by rail in ten minutes,—a large number of its merchants residing here, besides those who have their summer residences, and the other visitors who resort hither in the bathing season. During the summer months the place is full of visitors, and presents a gay and lively appearance. There are twelve trains to and from Dundee daily. There is little trade carried on except what is necessary for the wants of the population. The Arbroath Railway Company have an engineering establishment at their Station here, at which a number of men are employed. There is no proper police authority here, hence the sanitary condition is far from good ; and the streets, from the soft nature of the soil, are in a wretched state of repair, to remedy which, however, measures are now in progress. A spacious and commodious harbour was built a few years ago, at considerable cost, by the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee Railway Company, for the accommodation of their two steamers, which ply between this and Tayport in connection with their line,—one for passengers, a smart little craft, which crosses the river in five minutes, and another for goods traffic, a large powerful vessel, built by Robert Napier of Glasgow, with double rails on deck for taking on board the loaded trucks. The only other quay is a small wooden jetty, belonging to the Perth Steam-Packet Company. Coals and other merchandize, by sailing vessels, are landed by the primitive mode of beaching the craft at full tide, and running carts alongside when the water has ebbed. Fishing of all kinds is vigorously pursued. The population, by the census of March 1851, including West Ferry, Seafield, and environs, was 2800 ; it is now above 3000.

XVII.—LOCHEE LISTS.

BRIEF HISTORICAL NOTICE.

THERE are few reminiscences of historical interest connected with Lochee. A short distance north is "King's Cross," in the vicinity of which a battle was fought between the Picts and the Scots, in the year 834, when Alpine, King of the Scots, was taken prisoner and put to death. A stone is still seen in a plantation near the road, with a hole ten inches deep, in which it is alleged the Scottish standard was fixed during the contest. Balgay Hill, on the south side of Lochee, is also of note as a scene of warfare ; but these have little to do with the present village, which is quite of modern date. In the vicinity is Camperdown House, the seat of the Earl of Camperdown, son of Viscount Duncan, the hero of the victory of Camperdown, in 1796. Lochee is chiefly of importance as a manufacturing suburb of Dundee, with which it is connected under the General Police Act for Scotland.

Under this regime it is well lighted and watched, though its sanitary condition is yet in great need of improvement. Several descriptions of spinning and manufactures are prosecuted here with great spirit, employing a large number of hands, the principal of which is a power-loom factory, where linen fabrics and coloured floor-cloths are extensively manufactured. Hand-loom weaving is also prosecuted to a large extent. It is only two miles from Dundee, to and from which there is an omnibus five times daily. The population is nearly 6000.

XVIII.—NEWPORT LISTS.

BRIEF HISTORICAL SKETCH.

ALTHOUGH this village does not seem to figure by name in Scottish history, it is probable that, as the Fife station of the ferry between that county and Dundee, it has existed for many generations. The original station, however, was at Woodhaven, or Westwater, as it is sometimes called, where there is yet a substantial low-water pier, and a shipbuilding yard, from which vessels are occasionally launched. The present commodious pier was constructed about thirty years ago, under the powers of Parliament, when steam navigation, and the increased intercourse between Fife and Dundee, rendered the ferry of very great importance. Since then, Newport has progressed to its present dimensions. Like Broughty Ferry, it may be regarded as a suburb of Dundee, being the place of residence of many of the citizens, besides those who resort to it in the summer months. Recently, numerous beautiful villas and mansions have been rising up along the coast roads, and on the rising grounds, which give to the village quite an aristocratic appearance. Plans of feuing sites are also in progress for more on the rising grounds of the Tayfield estate. The delightful and salubrious situation of Newport will render it still more inviting and valuable as a residence, for which the cheap and easy communication of two steamers plying hourly from morning to night afford the most ample facilities. From this place Dundee is seen to the greatest advantage ; and the prospect from the mouth of the Tay, including Broughty Ferry, extending far up the river, presents a variety of marine and landscape scenery altogether charming. It is estimated that about 240,000 persons annually cross the ferry to and from Dundee. Population about 1000.

XIX.—FERRYPORT LISTS.

BRIEF HISTORICAL NOTICE.

FERRY-PORT-ON-CRAIG seems to have once ranked amongst the strongholds of our country. On an eminence overlooking the harbour are the ruins of the ancient Castle, which appears to have been unique and of some strength. At what period it was erected, or whether it ever saw active service, are uncertain. In its hey-day, however, along with Broughty Castle, it would completely command the entrance of the Tay. The village itself is very ancient; the seat of Parochial authority; and has from time immemorial been the South or Fife station of the Tay Ferry, of which Broughty is the northern. The right of the Ferry now belongs by purchase to the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee Railway Company, who work it in connection with their line by two steamers, noticed under the Broughty Ferry head. The Company have also rebuilt and greatly enlarged the harbour, which is now commodious and substantial, and to which vessels of large tonnage have free access for loading and discharging in connection with the Railway. From twenty to thirty thousand tons of coals are annually shipped from the Fife collieries. The village is finely situated on the acclivity of Scotsraig, and commands an extensive view of the opposite coast, the mouth of the Tay, and the bay and city of St Andrews. The houses are substantial, and many of them large and handsome, though the streets are mostly narrow and irregular. The baronial mansion of Scotsraig, erected in 1807, is elegant and commodious. The estate and old mansion were once the possession of Archbishop Sharp of St Andrews. A fragment of the latter, still extant in the garden wall, is pointed out as a portion of one of his rooms. There is also a tree in the policies called "the Bishop's tree," from the same personage. The extensive links adjoining abound with rabbits, and afford occasional pasturage for cattle and sheep. The annual fair in June, once of considerable importance is now dwindled down to insignificance. The population in 1851 was about 2300, including a number of men employed on the Railway works. It is now about 2000.

THE distinguishing principle of this Establishment for Insurance from Fire, is the distribution of Three-Fifths of its Profits among the Policy Holders, with an entire freedom from responsibility.

The last distribution of profits amounted to Twelve and a-half per cent. on all Premiums paid during the four preceding years, whereby a sum of L.42,000 was repaid to the Policy Holders.

These returns form a real saving to the parties receiving them, as the rates of Insurance are not higher than those charged by other Companies.

The extent of business done by this Office is such, that the sums insured amount to nearly Sixty Millions Sterling.

Policies may be effected with the Office on Warehouses, Factories, and other Buildings, and on Merchandize, Furniture, Farming Stock, and Ships in port, harbour, or dock, at the usual rates of 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. per cent. for common risks, hazardous risks, and risks doubly hazardous.

Losses are in all cases settled with liberality and expedition.

IN THE LIFE DEPARTMENT,

The system of this Company combines the principle of Mutual Assurance with the security of an ample Protecting Capital fully subscribed. No office, therefore, can give greater advantages to the Assured.

THE PROFITS are allocated on the Life Assurance principle, so that each one draws exactly the sum due to the Premium he has paid, at whatever age he enters, and has the full and fair advantage of his longevity to whatever age he may attain.

BONUSES vest immediately on being declared, and a Prospective Bonus is guaranteed to the Policies that happen to become claims before the succeeding investigation; thus the benefit of Annual Division of Profits is obtained without its disadvantages. The last Bonus (31st December 1851) averaged 40 per Cent. on the Premiums paid.

Bonuses may, at any time, be commuted for a payment in cash, or applied in reduction of future Premiums.

No extra charge for residence in British North America, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, and parts of the United States, and no license required except for the voyage.

Advances are made on Policies to the extent of their acquired value, and Loans to larger amounts are granted on personal or other securities.

No ENTRY MONEY or charge beyond the Policy Stamp.

The premiums are moderately rated at all ages, and may be so adjusted as to suit the objects and convenience of parties.

Parties effecting Insurance with the Company, may, on application, receive a Certificate declaring the Policy exempt from and after the expiry of five years from its date from the payment of extra Premium for travelling or residing beyond the limits of Europe, or for entering into MILITARY or NAVAL SERVICE, and from the necessity of applying for Licence so to travel or reside, or for entering after the expiry of the said FIVE YEARS into MILITARY or NAVAL SERVICE, provided it shall be shewn to the satisfaction of the Directors that they have at the time of the application no intention or prospect of going abroad, or of entering into Military or Naval service.

MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE.

THE SCOTTISH PROVIDENT INSTITUTION

Is the only Office which combines the advantage of participation in the Whole Profits, with moderate premiums. It is a Mutual Assurance Society, in which the Whole Profits belong to the Policy-holders.

The principle on which the profits are divided is at once safe, equitable, and favourable to good lives—the surplus being reserved for those members who alone can have made surplus payments; in other words, for those whose premiums, with accumulated interest, amount to the sums assured—to be thereafter divided according to the values of the several policies.

This principle, while it on the one hand avoids the anomaly of giving additions to those policies which become claims in their earlier years, secures on the other hand that there is no member who has not been, in a pecuniary sense, a gainer by the transaction, who does not receive a share of the profits.

The practical working of the system has been, that at the first Division of Surplus—15½ years after the commencement—Bonus Additions have been made to the Policies which have come within the Participating Class, Varying from 20 to 54 per cent. on their amount.

Annual Premium to Assure £100 at Death.

Age—25	30	35	40	45	50

It will be seen, on comparison, that the same premium which, at age 30, for example, is charged in the other Scottish Mutual Offices for Assurance of L.1000, will secure, in this Society, a policy for L.1230. And it is to be borne in mind that the higher immediate Assurance in this Office does not involve the sacrifice of the member's interest in the profits, or any portion of it.

Edinburgh Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1823.

INCORPORATED BY SPECIAL ACT OF PARLIAMENT.

THE PRINCIPLE of LIFE ASSURANCE, in which the Proprietary and Mutual Systems are duly combined, is the form in which the assured are enabled to participate in a larger proportion of the profits than can ever be safely divided by any simple Mutual Assurance Society, in which, at each periodical investigation, at least one-third of these profits must always be laid aside as a RESERVED FUND, to form a substitute for the security afforded by a subscribed capital.

THE EDINBURGH LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, under a combination of these two systems, gives nine-tenths of the whole profits to the Assured.

The Bonus Declarations of the Company in 1835, 1842, and 1849, exhibit the great benefits of Insuring on the Participation Plan; and the steady and uniform progress of the Company for nearly thirty years is the best guarantee for their continuance.

In several instances, the total Bonus already declared and paid have exceeded the sum originally insured. Thus, a Policy of £1500 was increased to £3205 17s; another of £100 to £245 4s.

The Non-participation Scale of Premiums will bear a favourable comparison with any well-established Office in the kingdom.

The Bonus of this Company may be applied either as an addition to the Policy, or in diminution of the Annual Premium, or the surrender value may be received.

Proposals for Assurance, and Prospectuses, showing Bonus and Rates, to be had at Goddard's Patent Portable Asbestos Gas Stove.

The advantages of this novel Stove over all other Gas Stoves are, that whilst a large amount of heat is radiated, a cheerful incandescent fire presents itself to the eye.—Its compactness, portability, and efficiency, will at once commend itself to all consumers of Gas; whilst the absence of smoke, dust, or odour, and the ease of its application, render it a most eligible and desirable appendage to the drawing-room, bed-room, or sick room. It is likewise particularly adapted for offices, &c.

May be seen in operation, any evening after dusk, at the premises in Reform Street.

LAMB'S NEW Temperance Hotel, Coffee and Dining Rooms, Reform Street, DUNDEE.

I Lamb begs to intimate that he has Completed and Furnished that extensive New Building, Top of Reform Street, for a First Class Temperance Hotel, Coffee, and Dining Rooms.

The Kitchen Arrangements are most efficient. The Hotel is situated in the best Street, and in the Centre of the Town.

Mr. Lamb's present Hotel is fitted up with all the conveniences and appliances considered requisite in the best arranged Houses. The furnishings are of a superior kind, and more what might be expected in a metropolitan than in a provincial house.

The whole is finished in a style of taste and elegance which reflects credit on Mr. Lamb, and the parties he has employed to carry out his plans. Dundee Courier, August 4th 1852.

We have only to add, in conclusion, our strong recommendation of Mr. Lamb's establishment to all who value comfort, elegance and economy. Northern Warder.

 The Dundee Coffee-House and Hotel, Murraygate, is conducted as formerly in all its departments.*
